FRANCE.

(WITH MAP IN SPECIAL EDITION.)

France—extends from the foot of the Eastern Pyrenees, lat. 42° 25′, in almost a perpendicular line to Dunkirk, in department Du Nord, 51° 5′ N.; and from long. 7° E. to 4° 55′ W. The circumference is 4700 kilomètres. The surface is now reduced to 529,000 square kilomètres, against 543,000 before the German war; or 129 million acres; of which two-thirds are cultivated, and one-half is arable. About 5 million acres are vineyards, and about as many are orchards and gardens. France could boast of an unbroken dynasty down to the close of the eighteenth century; at which period the social grievances endured by the people, produced that sanguinary convulsion, called the "French Revolution;" the effects of which are felt to this day. See the articles Metz, Paris, Sedan, Strasburg, &c., below, for the leading events of the Franco-German war of 1870-1; which ended with the transfer to Germany of Alsace, and E. Lorraine; and the payment of an indemnity of 200 millions sterling. M. Adolphe Thiers, author of the Consulate and the Empire, was elected President of the new French Republic, August 31st, 1871; and succeeded by Marshal MacMahon, 24th May, 1873, appointed for seven years. The National Assembly, elected 1871, consist of 738 members, including the representatives of Algeria and the Colonies.

Population—(Census of 1872.)—About 36½ millions, exclusive of 1½ million now transferred to Germany, and 3 millions in Algeria. Of these, 98 per cent. are Catholic, and French-born. The following towns have more than 100,000 pop. (1872); viz:—Paris, 1,857,792; Lyons, 323,417; Marseilles, 312,864; Bordeaux, 194,055; Lille, 158,117; Toulouse, 124,852; Nantes, 118,517; Rouen, 102,470.

Departments—Eighty-six, of which Corsica is one; besides three in Algeria. This number includes Alpes Maritimes (round Nice,) Savoie, and Haute Savoie, all ceded by Italy, 1860; Meurthe-et-Moselle, a union of the remnants of two, now annexed to Germany, 1871; and Haut Rhin, a remnant of another one annexed to Germany. The Departments ceded to Germany, 1871, on the Rhine frontier, in the old provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, are the whole of Bas Rhin (Strasburg, &c.;) the greater part of Haut Rhin (Colmar, Mulhouse, &c.;) a small part of Vosges; part of Meurthe (Château-Salins, Sarrebourg;) and great part of Moselle (Metz, &c.) making a total area of 5,800 square miles, with a population of 1,600,000, (census of 1866,) now lost to France. About 2-10ths of these are German-speaking, (mostly in Alsace,) and 1-6th are Protestant.

Expenditure—96½ millions sterling. In 1871 it was 110 millions, being an annual increase of 50 millions since 1851! Of this heavy increase, 23 millions were occasioned by the War Indemnity payable to Germany, under treaty. But the elasticity and resources of France are so great, that early in 1872, 80 millions sterling of this Indemnity were paid off, some time before the period agreed on by a Convention signed at Frankfort 12th October, 1871; the result of which operation was to hasten the departure of the German troops from several of the Departments.

Army—Fixed at 450,000, (with a reserve of 450,000) in 22 divisions, and 86 subdivisions (departmental;) exclusive of Algeria. The army of Versailles consists of 6 corps under Marshal MacMahon. There are now 6 Marshals of France, Count Vaillant (1851,) being the oldest; Bazaine (1864,) before his dismissal was the youngest.—Navy: About 450 vessels, of which 3-4ths are steamers, and about 60 are iron-clads. The home Stations are Cherbourg, Brest, Lorient, Rochefort, Toulon, and Algiers, under Maritime Prefects.

—Colonies—In Asia—Pondicherry (India); and Cochin China. In Africa—Sénégal, the Gold Coast, Madagascar, Réunion, and Mayotte, (Comoro Islands.) In America—Martinique, Guadeloupe, St. Pierre, Miquelon, and Guiana. In the Pacific—Marquesas, Tahiti, New Caledonia, and the Loyalty Islands. Total population about 2½ millions.

Produce and Manufactures—The Silk manufactures of France began in the luxury of the court of Francis I.; and in 1866 above 5,200,000 lbs. of raw silk were imported, against 136,800 in 1792. These large importations furnish the raw material for by far the largest silk manufacture in the world. In the reign of Louis XIV., under Colbert, new markets were thrown open for foreign commerce and productive industry bid fair to attain the highest pinnacle of success; but in 1685 these brilliant prospects were destroyed by the death of Colbert and the revocation of the edict of Nantes. The revolution of 1789 gave industry another strong impulse, which, since 1814, has been steady and sure, and to-day France as a manufacturing country stands second only to England in the amount of her productions and the value of her exports.

France has rapidly improved in her Agricultural System of late years; the beet-root crop produces annually 45,484 tons of raw sugar. In her cotton, the importation amounted in 1851 to 130,000,000 lbs., and in 1866, 134,000,000 lbs. of raw cotton, besides cotton yarn and wove cotton. The woollen and linen manufactures are carried on with great success; the importation of wool amounted in 1851 to 101,201,000 lbs., and in 1866 to above 120,000,000 lbs. In 1851, her importation of coal and coke reached to 2,841,900 tons, and in 1866 to 59,000,000 metrical quintals. She imported in 1866, 456,276,704 metrical quintals of iron ore alone. She possesses only one privileged Bank, that of France; it is under the direction of a governor, nominated by the Government, at a salary of £4,000 per annum.

Commerce —The commerce with England, measured by the value of the exports and imports is 74 millions sterling; which is 1-14th of the total with all countries, and is equal to the total of the three next in importance, viz: Belgium, Italy, and the Zollverein, (N. Germany.)—Exports, (valued at 154 million sterling in 1873,) are haberdashery, silk, woollen, silk and cotton goods, clothing, jewellery, raw silk, skins, wine, metal goods, fruit, spirits, &c.—Imports (valued at 160½ million sterling in 1873,) are raw cotton, silk, raw wool, timber, coal, coffee, grain, cattle, &c.

Churches.—The most striking are Reims, Amiens, Paris, Rouen, Chartres, Bourges, Coutances, St. Quentin, Laon, Caen, Auxerre, and Tours. There are about fifty other Cathedrals, besides several hundred Churches famous for beauty of style and elegance of proportion, and almost entitled to cathedral rank. The Church Establishment is under 18 archbishops and 67 bishops, in France and Algeria. NOTE.—The churches are with few exceptions open from 5 or 6 a.m. till dusk. In the South of France during summer they are sometimes closed from 12 to 3. Fee for visitors, 1fr., enough for a party.

French Hotels.—The Hotels in France, (those of Paris and several large towns excepted) scarcely merit a designation beyond that of Auberge, or Inn. They are often wanting in cleanliness, and the service is badly conducted. On the other hand, the beds are good and clean, the cooking is excellent, and the prices are moderate. In the chief towns of the Departments, the traveller is badly lodged, and well fed, at 6fr. 50c. to 7fr. per day, besides 1fr. for "Service," (or waiter) the usual charge everywhere. In the smaller towns the daily expenses will average 5fr. 50c. to 6fr., for which you have an ample déjeûner à la fourchette, dinner at table d'hôte, and bedroom. Throughout the centre and south of France, as well as in many other localities, the vin ordinaire and candles are rarely charged for. NOTE.—Breakfast (déjeûner à la fourchette,) and Dinner are the two principal meals. The Dinner hour throughout France is 5 o'clock (sometimes from half an hour to two hours later). The Breakfast hour or 1st Table d'Hôte is at 10 or 11; before which hour Frenchmen usually content themselves with an early cup of coffee. When ordering a private dinner in a small hotel, country town, or wayside inn, ask for a dinner at 3 francs a-head, including wine (unless in the North of France, where wine is one-half franc extra). When stopping at an hotel, lock your room when you go out, and leave the key on the key-board, or in charge of the concièrge, by which the landlord becomes responsible, but only then. See that your bill is on a stamped receipt (for which you pay—not the landlord), otherwise you are liable to a fine. Innkeepers in France often advertise that English is spoken; whereas it is generally the reverse. You are told you may dine "à la Carte," which Carte when produced has no prices marked.

Furnished Apartments.—Have a written agreement, together with an inventory of everything, however trifling; also a stipulation that the owner pays the furniture tax. Rent is payable in advance, quarterly.—Servants are engaged by the month, but they may be discharged, or they may leave at any time, if paid up to the day. See Introduction, page xlvi.

Money.—The currency is now in paper, there being a heavy premium on gold. Travellers are reminded of the occasional scarcity of silver and small change; they should therefore be careful to economise their resources in this respect. The denominations of money in which accounts are kept are as follows:—100 centimes, (1 franc = 9½d. English.) The gold coins are 100fr., 50fr., 25fr., 20fr., 10fr., and 5 fr. Silver coins are 5fr. 2fr., 1fr., 50 centimes, and 20c. Bronze coins are 10c., 5c., 2c., and 1c. The 20 franc pieces are called Napoleons. Prior to 1795 the denominations of money were livres, sous, and deniers (1 livre = 20 sous; 1 sou = 12 deniers). In conversation, the word livre is sometimes used as synonymous with franc; and livre sterling for £1 English Money; sou is continually said in Paris instead of 5 centimes, 2 sous for 10 centimes, and so on. When the word écu (crown) is used, it means 3 francs. The English Sovereign realises 25 francs, and a few centimes, according to the current rate of exchange. Travellers to Bordeaux, Bayonne, Pau, the Pyrenees, &c. should change their English money into French gold at Calais, Dieppe, Havre, or Boulogne; otherwise they will have to submit to a loss of from 25 to 50 c. in the £1, at the railway stations, hotels, &c.; no matter in what part of France; and the same applies to Spain or Italy. It is better to have Napoleons than English gold. N.B.—Take care at the railway stations, that your sovereigns (worth 25¼fr.) are not reckoned as Napoleons (worth only 20fr.) The Bank of France issues Notes for 1000 fr., 500 fr., 200 fr., 100 fr., and 50 fr.—See The Merchants' Handbook, (Stanford); and Introduction, p. lii.

the receiver and sender being reckoned. The telegraph is not, however, worked with the expedition that could be wished. There are 2,500 Telegraph Stations.

Railways (le Chemin de Fer).—France is now well supplied with Railway communication, the lines having been laid out on a most rational and comprehensive system. About 12,500 miles are open; all, except about 500 miles held by six great companies, 1st, the Northern, 2nd, Western, 3rd, Orleans, 4th, Eastern, 5th, Lyons and Mediterranean, and 6th, the South. They are conceded for a term; after which the State may take them up. About 400 to 500 miles are opened yearly. The 3rd class are far inferior to our own, and the fare higher; the 1st class fare is on the other hand hardly higher than the average 2nd class fare in England. All trains except the express are 3rd class; and return tickets are also issued to third class travellers. The fares per English mile since the imposition of the heavy railway war tax of October 15, 1871, are 1st class, 1·87d.; 2nd class, 1·4d.; and 3rd class, 1·03d. The best express trains only carry 1st class passengers. Return Tickets are called, Billets pour aller et rétour. Children (enfants) between 3 and 7 half price; and are allowed 20 kilos. (44 lbs.) of Luggage. See Introduction, pp. xliii—xliv.

Luggage (le Bagage).—30 kilogrammes, "kilos.' or 66 lbs., are allowed to all classes. Excess fare is strictly charged at the rate of one fourth of 3rd class fare. Always get a receipt for your luggage, whether excess or not. See Introduction, page xliii.

N.B.—Remember that neither horses nor carriages are taken by the 1st Class or Express Trains.

Railway Stations (la Gare).—There is a bad practice of keeping passengers outside the waiting-rooms, exposed to the weather; also, of cooping up passengers who have their tickets, in close waiting-rooms (salles d'attente). No one is allowed to enter the waiting-room without a ticket, which is rarely issued till within 15, and in some instances only 5 minutes before the departure of the train. Ladies are not allowed to take a kitten or a little puppy inside without paying its fare, nor sometimes if they offer to pay it. Moreover the time tables and detention on cross lines are trying; and all Trains having second class carriages are virtually slow trains (des trains omnibus).

Again, the privileges appertaining to ladies' waiting-rooms in England, are unfortunately overlooked in France, and most parts of the continent; and the retiring-places at each station, are generally placed at the extreme end of the platform, in the most exposed situations; a female stands at the door to wait on ladies; some stations are furnished with private cabinets for which there is a charge of 10 centimes. The Buffets (refreshment rooms) are generally well supplied with excellent refreshments; on most lines, the proprietors are obliged to keep a tariff of the prices of every article hung up in the refreshment room; nevertheless, the traveller will do well, in the bustle of the moment, to be on his guard and ask the price of fruit in particular before he helps himself to it. In many instances he will find the prices rather exorbitant Diligence or Coaches.—Fares about 8 centimes per kilomètre, or 1½d. a mile. Half-price for children from 3 to 10 years. See Introduction, pp. xliii—xliv.

ROUTES TO PARIS.—1. Calais Route.—LONDON TO PARIS DIRECT, via DOVER AND CALAIS, OR FOLKESTONE AND BOULOGNE:—By South Eastern Railway from Cannon Street, and Charing Cross, and Victoria, or Ludgate Hill Stations, for Dover or Folkestone, (See page 697.) Or by London and Chatham Railway, from Victoria Station (See page 700.) The railway station at Calais is close to the quay where the steam-packets land their passengers, and every facility is given them for proceeding onwards by first train. The Passport-office is at the Station, and there is a good refreshment room also. The steam-boats can enter and leave Calais except for about 1½ hour before and after low water. The mail-boats leave Dover at 9.35 a.m. and 10.40 p.m. There are also two departures from Calais for Dover every day. French and English Money exchanged on board the Boats. NOTE.—If you intend to stay at an hotel at any of the ports, call out the name on landing, and the Porter belonging to it will step forward and take charge of you. This will save you from the touter. 2. Boulogne Route.—London to Paris, direct, in about 10¾ hours, by the South Eastern Railway and their Packets from Folkestone. See page 697. 3. London to Paris, direct by London and Brighton Railway and Steamers from Newhaven to Dieppe, and from thence to Paris by Railway. 4. London and Calais.—By Steam direct from London Bridge Wharf, twice a week, by the General Steam Navigation Co.'s Packets. Voyage performed in about 8 hours—Fares 11s. and 8s.—See Alphabetical list. 5. London and Boulogne.—By Steam direct from London Bridge Wharf, by the General Steam Navigation Co.'s Packets. Voyages performed in about 8 hours.—Fare 11s. and 8s. See Alphabetical List. 6. By South Western Railway (via Southampton and Havre).—This route is very interesting. The average time crossing the Channel is about six and a-half hours, and about two hours additional in the river. (For hours of departure from Southampton and Havre, see Advt. p. 706.) By an arrangement entered into between the London and South Western, and Western of France Railway Companies, passengers may pay their passage-money throughout to Paris at the Waterloo Station.—First class, 31s.; Second class Railway and 2nd class Cabin, 23s. There is a steam-boat connection with Honfleur and Caen. 7. London and Dunkirk.—By the General Screw Steam Shipping Co.'s Steamers from Fenning's Wharf, London Bridge, about twice a week. See alphabetical list. Fares, 16s. and 7s.

Passports and Certificates of Identity.—No prudent traveller should be without a Passport, see Introduction, pp. xlviii—li. For Couriers, apply to Messrs. Adams and Sons, 59, Fleet Street.

Custom House (la Douane).—Only a bag is allowed to remain with the traveller; the rest of his luggage is taken to be examined. Be sure to name before-hand anything liable to duty. Silks, lace, wearing apparel, not having been worn, may be stopped. A sporting gun or rifle, revolver or pistol, may be carried, if declared as private property. You can go with your luggage to pass it through the Custom House if you like; or you may have it done by a porter (commissionaire) from your hotel, recommended by the Landlord: he will also get the visée to your passport. Luggage may be registered through to Paris, by paying a small fee, which is returnable after the examination. See Introduction, page xliii.

Language.—See Vocabulary of common French words, at the end of the SPECIAL EDITION. About 18 millions speak the Basque, Catalan, Italian, and Provençal dialects (the last spoken by 10½ millions), all in the South of France; and the Burgundian dialect, in the East of France. The Breton and some others are also noticeable.

Books.—Visitors or Travellers in France desirous of more ample and detailed information of all the chief places of interest and resort, the Scenery, Cities, Cathedrals, Public Buildings, Customs, Manners, and Historical Reminiscences, &c. &c., are referred to BRADSHAW'S ILLUSTRATED HANDBOOK FOR FRANCE, containing Maps of the Country, Plans of the Cities and Towns, &c.—PRICE 5s. Those who travel or Health are referred to BRADSHAW'S INVALIDS COMPANION TO THE CONTINENT with remarks on climate and the influence of travelling, by DR. LEE, author of works on the French and German Baths, the South of France, Nice, Spain, &c. Price 10s. BRADSHAW'S ANGLO-FRENCH PHRASE BOOK.—For Travellers and Students will be found very useful. Pocket Edition One Shilling. BRADSHAW'S DIARY AND TRAVELLERS' COMPANION.—Price 2s. 6d. See Introduction.

DESCRIPTIONS OF TOWNS, WATERING PLACES, &c.

Abbeville.—Stat.—Pop. 20,058.—HOTELS:—TÊTE DE BŒUF; ST. JACQUES; DE FRANCE; DU LION NOIR; DU COMMERCE.

A fortified town and seaport on the Somme, 12 miles from the bathing-place of St. Valery-sur-Somme, from whence William the Conqueror sailed to England 1066. The fine gothic Church of St. Vulfran is a historical monument of the 15th and 17th centuries, with façade and portals richly sculptured; interesting details in the interior. La Chapelle, tower of 1620. Hotel de Ville, belfry of the 13th century. Hospice des Enfans Trouvés, a handsome modern building. House of Francis I.; staircase carved. Public library of 16,000 vols., Museum. At the hotel of M. Boucher de Perthes, is a fine collection of curiosities of the Age of Stone, and other objects discovered in the valley of the Somme. It was occupied by the Germans 1870-1.

A fine manufactory of cloth was established here in 1669, by a Dutchman, under the auspices of Colbert. There are also manufactories of cordage, packthread, sail-cloth, carpets, and carriages, the latter of which are much esteemed. A branch railway communicates with the port, and vessels of from 200 to 300 tons come up to the town.

The alluvia at St. Achuel, on the banks of the Somme, have produced not only remains of primeval animals, but abundant evidences of early art and industry, especially flint hatchets of a great antiquity. Similar ones have been found at Hoxne, &c., in England.

Six miles distant is the old town of St. Ricquier, possessing a fine and much admired Cathedral.

Public carriages corresponding with the trains convey passengers to Tréport, Ancey-le-Château, Hesdin, and Crecy. The last is 10 miles from Abbeville; a cross indicates where on the 26th August, 1346, Edward III. gained a victory over Philippe de Valois. Agincourt, where Henry V. obtained another victory 1415, is 16 m. from Crecy. CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 18.

Agen.—Stat.—Pop. 17,300.—HOTELS:—BARON; DE FRANCE; ST JEAN; BUFFET at the station.

The Roman Aginnum, on the Garonne, about 85 miles above Bordeaux, on the road from Toulouse; with three bridges, and a statue of Jasmin the poet on the GRAVIOR promenade. Noted for its plums. View of the river from L'Ermitage rock, very fine.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 40, 43, and 46.

Aix.—Stat.—Pop. 27,700.—HOTELS:—

DES PRINCES; DU LOUVRE; DE LA MULE NOIRE NEGREOOSTE.

An ancient city, formerly the capital of Provence, but now in the department of the Bouches du Rhône; 530 English miles from Paris, and 18 from Marseilles. It is a well-built town, and the streets are in general well paved, as well as wide and clean. The monastery of Jacobins, or Dominicans, would be one of the finest structures in Provence were it completed. The mineral springs were accidentally re-discovered in 1704, when the medals, inscriptions, &c., which were dug up, confirmed the opinions of antiquaries as to their being the springs known to the Romans, as Aquæ Sextiæ. Cathedral and curious cloisters; Museum and Library. Ecole de Droit. St. John of Malta. Corn market with design by Puget.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 50 and 63.

Aix-les-Bains—Stat—Pop. 4,250—HOTELS:

GRAND HOTEL D'AIX; first-rate establishment, situated near the Casino; highly recommended.

GRAND HOTEL DE L'EUROPE ET DU GLOBE; Mr. Bernascon, director. First class hotel; very elegant and comfortable.

GRAND HOTEL DE L'UNIVERS ET DES AMBASSADEURS. Kept by Mr. Renaud. Beautiful garden.

GRAND HOTEL DE LA POSTE, kept by Mr. Heime Guillaud, well situated near the Bath establishment and the Casino.

HOTELS, DARDEL; VENAT.

A much frequented watering-place in French

Savoy, on Lake Bourget, 8 miles from Chambéry; containing hot sulphur springs, called by the Romans, Aquæ Gratianæ; Casino and Baths; a Roman arch, temple, and other remains of antiquity; and an English Church, opened May, 1869.

The Railway from Aix through Chambéry to St. Michel traverses a most lovely and fertile valley; and is continued from St. Jean de Maurienne by the great Mont Cenis Tunnel, to join the Susa and Turin Railway. Excursions to the source of the Marlioz, steamer 20 minutes; also, to the Abbey de Haute Combe, with tombs of the House of Savoy (7½ miles), and church restored in the florid Gothic style by King Charles Felix, buried there in 1831. 2. The Nivolet, 1200 mètres, fine view. The Lavazet fish from Lake Bourget is a great delicacy. Montmelian wine is good. 3. The Mollard Garden, 10 minutes; to the Cascade of Gresy, and to the other side of the lake. 4. By rail or diligence for Annecy, through a fine mountain valley; past Lechaux, whence an ascent may be made to the Semnoz Alp, a fine point of view; and Lovagny, the nearest station for the romantic Gorge de Fier.

English Service held in the New Church at 11.30 a.m. and 3.30 p.m. Chaplain supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Physician.—Dr. Charles Macé, Physician to the Baths, speaks English.

Branch rail to Annecy, through the Gorge de Fier, past the Semnoz Alp, which has a large hotel on the top, 4,500 feet above sea, a fine point of view.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages, 53 and 54.

Ajaccio.—Corsica, see p. 551.

Alais—Stat.—Pop. 20,300.—Hotels:—Du Commerce and Lion d'Or.

Is situated in Lower Languedoc, on the Gardon; 31 miles north of Nismes. Trade in grain, olives, oil, wine, and silk; and there are Mineral springs, and mines of iron and coal in the vicinity.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 57 and 60.

Albi.—Stat.—Population, 15,500.—Hotels:—Des Prats; des Ambassadeurs; de l'Europe.

An ancient city, in the plain of Languedoc at the centre of one of the best corn districts in France; and the chief town of department of Tarn. It was a stronghold of the Protestant Albigenses in the 12th century.

The Cathedral of St. Cecile is a fine Gothic building of brick, abounding with splendid frescoes. The tower is 290 feet high, and of curious design. The Gothic tracery of the choir is remarkably beautiful. The only other buildings of any interest are the Préfecture, formerly an Episcopal Palace, and the Church of St. Salvi. Fine bridge. La Pérouse the navigator was born here.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 39 and 44.

Alençon.—Stat.—Pop. 16,110.—Hotels:—Grand Cerf, good; de la Normandie; de la Poste; de la Gare.

A prosperous town, situated on the Sarthe, and chief town of the department de l'Orne. Celebrated for its lace, called "Point d'Alençon," and for crystals, called "Alençon Diamonds." The Cathedral is the only building worthy of notice. Public conveyances to Blire, Chatean Renaud, Montrichard, Loches, and Chenonceaux.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 27 and 28.

Algiers.—See Special Edition.

Allevard, 26 miles from Grenoble.—Hotels: Du Louvre; Planta; du Rhin; des Bains; du Nord; des Alpes.

Guides, 2 to 3 fr.; long excursions, 5 to 6 fr. 3180 inhabitants. Height, 475 mètres, on the Breda, in a fine valley. Sulphurous Iodine, gaseous water. Bath Establishment, Douches. Whey cure, &c.

Pont du Diable, 666 mètres above sea, 30 mètres above the river. Eleven or twelve hours to the Sept Laux or Sept Lacs. Glacier de Gleyzin, 2886 mètres above the river. Cascade du Plasen or du Fond, 3 hours 20 minutes.

Amboise-sur-Loire.—Stat.—Pop. 4,600.

Hotels:—Lion d'Or; Cygne; Faisan.

Charming old town with noble old Castle, formerly the residence of the Kings of France; now used as barracks, and commands a fine view. Near the castle are the curious caverns, Greniers de César. Excursion to castle of Chenonceaux, 12 miles; and Loches, 30 miles. Steel goods and fire-arms made.

Conveyances.—Railway, see page 34.

Amelie-les-Bains, in dep. Pyrénées Orientales; 17½ miles from Perpignan, a drive of 3 to 4 hours.

A warm sulphur spring, in a fine spot under Mont Canigou; the only one open during winter, with a climate extremely favourable to invalids at that season. The baths are in a large vaulted building, supposed to have been a Temple of Diana.

English Physician.—C. M. Gibson, Esq., F.R.C.S. Eng.

There is a fine church at Arles-sur-Tech, with other attractions in the neighbourhood.

Amiens.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 63,747.—Hotels: Hotel de France et d'Angleterre.—Highly recommended. Omnibuses at the Station convey passengers to the Hotel.

Hotel du Rhin, Place St. Denis, near the Railway, one of the finest in the town, and highly recommended for cleanliness and moderate charges. carriages for the use of travellers.

English Church Service.—Rev. C. Faulkner, of Roubaix.

81½ miles N. of Paris. An ancient city, on the Somme, capital of dep. Somme, having several fine streets, containing some splendid shops. It is divided into the high town, or aristocratic quarter, the central, or commercial quarter, the lower town, or manufacturing quarter. The manufactures consist chiefly of cotton, and Utrecht velvets; cashmeres, merinoes, linen and cottou, moquettes, carpets, sugar, chemical products, &. From the central position of Amiens, between Boulogne, Calais, Brussels, and Paris, it is a most desirable place for travellers to sleep at.

built by Henry IV.; Corn Market; the Seminary of St. Acheul. There is also a good public library, 59,000 vols., 572 MSS., &c. The Musée Napoleon built 1854 to 1864. La Belle Gabrielle d'Estrées, the popular favourite of Henry IV, was born here.

This town is celebrated for the short-lived Treaty of 1802 between France and England. M. Gambetta descended here in the balloon in which he escaped from Paris, 7th October, 1870. It was occupied by the Germans on 28th Nov., after the defeat of the army of the North.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 12, 14, 18, 21, 22, 23, 33, and 84.

Amphion (Baths of)—see page 488, Switzerland.

Angers.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 48,464. HOTELS: CHEVAL BLANC; LE ROY; D'ANJOU.

214 English miles south west of Paris, on the river Maine, in the department of the Maine et Loire. Angers is one of the most ancient and most interesting cities in France, and will especially delight the antiquarian or lover of the picturesque. The modern part is very well built. It contains a public library, 40,000 vols., good Cathedral, museum of paintings, cabinet of natural history and medicine, botanical gardens, public baths, and a large gloomy old Castle, with some fine old houses and boulevards. The church of St. Trinité is perhaps the finest; and that of St. Serge is remarkable for the beauty of its Gothic mouldings. The modern Gothic churches of St. Joseph and St. Therese are well worth a visit. The former is noticeable for its massive construction, good detail, and rich decorations; the latter contains some superb Gothic furniture. The Museum of Paintings and Antiquities has a complete collection of all the casts made by David d'Angers. There is a rich antiquarian collection. The Hotel de Ville is itself most interesting. The ruins of the abbey of Pons Saints should be visited; also the house of our English Henry III.; the tower of St. Aubin, built by Clovis; and the dungeons and ramparts of the castle. There was a military college here where Chatham and Wellington studied. Principal articles of manufacture are linen, bells, sugar, oil, honey, wax, wine, spirits, vinegar, lime, marble, slate, and silk handkerchiefs.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 28 and 30. Steamers leave quay Ligny every day for Nantes.

Angouleme.—Stat.—Pop. 25,000.—HOTELS: GRAND HOTEL DES POSTES.—Rue du Palais.

On the Charente, 280 miles from Paris, 83 from Bordeaux. It is a very old town, built on a hill bristling with rocks, and surrounded by an extensive and beautiful terraced promenade which commands fine views. The air though pure and bracing does not agree with delicate constitutions.

Angoulême has a Cathedral, a massive and imposing Gothic edifice, a theatre, a cabinet of natural and physical history, and a library containing 14,000 vols. In the environs are some excellent paper-mills. St. André and St. Pierre are octagonal churches worth visiting; also the church of the village of St. Michel d'Entraignes, about two miles off. The old Castle, now the Hotel de Ville, should be seen. Trade in corn, wine, ardent spirits, hemp, flax, chestnuts saffron, cork, and paper. Balzac and Montalembert were born here.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 35, 45, & 47.

Annecy.—Stat.—Pop. 10,160. HOTELS:—HOTEL VERDUN; HOTEL DE GENEVA, has w.c.; HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE.

Service at the new French Church. Curious old place in French Savoy, beautifully situated, 450 mètres above the sea, at the north end of Lake Annecy, 22 miles from Geneva. A fine drive (3 fr.) to the romantic Gorge de Fier, near Lovagny Station, a pass 430 yards long; charge, 1 fr.

OBJECTS OF INTEREST:—Church of St. Dominic, fine high altar in sculptured wood; church of the Convent of the Visitation with the tombs of Saint François de Sales, and Saint Jeanne de Chantal. House of J. J. Rousseau in the Grand Seminaire. Museum contains 3000 Roman medals; fine old Castle, now a barrack. At Albigny and Annecy le Vieux, numerous Roman remains. Lake of Annecy 8½ miles long, ½ to 1½ broad, 30 mètres deep. Finest mountain near, is La Tourmette; height, 7760 feet. Steamers twice a day up and down the lake. Good boating and fishing.

CONVEYANCES.—Rail, see page 53. Diligence to Geneva direct, 4 hours; to Chamouny, 11 hours.

Arcachon.—Stat.—Pop, 3000.—HOTELS:—GRAND HOTEL, first-rate Establishment. Casino open all the year.

DES EMPEREURS DE FRANCE; LE GALLAIS, on the beach.

Situated on the borders of the Bassin d'Arcachon, on the south-west coast of France, about 35 miles from Bordeaux; and whilst enjoying the sea-breezes, is sheltered by the hills on the opposite side from strong winds. On the west it is protected by an extensive pine forest, the resinous odour of which is so efficacious in diseases of the chest. The walks in the forest are completely sheltered, and the invalid can there enjoy a balmy atmosphere during the coldest day in winter. These forests between the mouth of the rivers Gironde and the Adour are full of game, and the fox-hunt is a great diversion in the locality. Arcachon is chiefly resorted to in summer for sea-bathing, but it is well adapted for a winter residence. Houses like Swiss chalets, to be let on moderate terms, and Villas are being constructed in the forest for the accommodation of invalids. Villa Pereire and the Casino are noted places of resort. The town contains a modern ogival Church with a fine peal of bells. The chapel of Nôtre Dame d'Arcachon is a favourite pilgrimage.

For details, see Dr. Lee's "South of France."

CHURCH SERVICE at the French Protestant Church every Sunday; Rev. S. Radcliff, Chaplain.

ENGLISH RESIDENT PHYSICIAN.—Dr. J. H. Pickering.

Dr. Hameau, Physician.

Robert Modlin, Surgeon, Villa Faust.

ENGLISH CONSULAR AGENT.—A. de Lobel, Esq.

THE ESTATE OF ARCACHON Agency for the hire and letting of furnished villas; moderate prices. Director, Mr. Gaussens, Villa Antonina, who will furnish every information gratuitously.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 44.

Arles.—Stat.—Pop. 25,600.—HOTELS:—DU NORD, good and moderate; HOTEL DU FORUM.

An irregularly-built town, on one of the embouchures of the Rhone; celebrated for the beauty of the women, which is heightened by their picturesque costume; and also for its Roman remains, of which the principal is an Amphitheatre in a tolerable state of preservation.

Places worth visiting are—

The remains of the Roman Theatre; the Museum, where many Christian tombstones, statues, &c., are preserved; and Les Champs Elysées, converted by the early Christians into a burial-ground, where numbers of their tombs still remain, and where is a chapel dedicated to St. Honoratius. The Cathedral, a building of the 7th century, by B. Vigilius, has a splendidly ornamented doorway, and ancient cloisters. Nôtre Dame la Majeure, in the Roman style. The Abbey of St. Cesarius, date 513. The Hotel de Ville with the Tour de l'Horloge and a statue of Mars; the Public Library; a rich cabinet of Natural History, &c.

An excursion should be made to St. Gilles, 11 miles by rail, on the new line to Lunel, which crosses the Rhone by a fine bridge. This church, dating from 1118, has a splendid west front and interesting cloisters. The house of Pope Clement IV. deserves a visit. It is an easy drive (2 miles) from Arles to the abbey of Mont Majeure (11th to 12th century) and the chapel of St. Cesarius; thence to Les Baux, 7 miles, a town hewn out of the rock, with many curious limestone caverns all around it. Thence to St. Remy, 18 miles, remarkable for its Roman Triumphal Arch, and funeral Monument; and so back to Arles. A good carriage and driver may be had at the Hôtel du Nord, where many English stay.

Arles has a locomotive factory of the Lyons Railway Company. Near it is the great plain of Carmargue (73,000 hectares), formed by the alluvial earth of the Rhone; one-fifth is cultivated; the rest is a stony desert, sometimes called the Crau. The canal of St. Louis, 2½ miles long, avoids the bar at the mouth of the Rhone. The rail crosses it, by a viaduct of 769 Metres in length, on 31 arches.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 50 and 57.

Armentières, see Lille.

Arras.—Stat.—Pop. 26,000.—HOTELS:—HOTEL DU GRIFFON; L'EUROPE; ST. POL; COMMERCE; DU PETIT PARIS.

134 miles N. of Paris. A place of considerable trade, on the Scarpe, which divides it, and is here joined by the Crinchon. It is built partly on an eminence, and partly on the plain, and consists of four distinct divisions—the City, the Upper Town, the Lower Town, and the CITADEL, besides several suburbs. The Grand Place, in the centre, is a fine promenade. The city is on the site of Nemetocenna, the capital of the Atrebates, which Cæsar took about 50 B.C. This part of Arras is very beautiful, formed of houses of hewn stone. The public squares are surrounded by buildings in the Gothic style. The Cathedral, dedicated to Our Lady, is a large Grecian building, finished in 1832, the ancient one having been destroyed in the great Revolution. Other buildings—Abbey of St. Vaast; fine cloisters and peristyle. Chapel of the Saint Sacrement and of the Ursulines. Hotel de Ville, a fine building of the 16th century. House of Robespierre, who was born here.

Industry.—Lace, foundries, chicory, colza and beetroot, sugar manufactures. One of the largest corn markets in France.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 12, 14, and 84. Diligence to Cambrai, 22 miles; Béthune, 18 miles; St. Pol, 20½ miles.

Asnières.—Stat.—Pop. 6000.

On the left bank of the Seine, about five miles from Paris. The Park, a favourite resort of the Parisians; theatres, concerts, balls, fireworks, &c., on Sundays and fête days. Residents very mixed. It suffered in the Franco-German war.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 18 and 32.

Auch.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000.—HOTEL: DE FRANCE.

The town, 43 miles from Agen, is built in the form of an amphitheatre on the top of a hill, watered by the river Gers; the streets are narrow and ill-built, with the exception of some in the upper quarter. The traveller will not fail to notice the Church of Nôtre Dame, built in the reign of Clovis, with its superb portals, surmounted by two square towers; also the archbishop's palace, the statue of D'Estigny in the Place Royale, and the promenade at the extremity of the place, with its splendid view of the Pyrenees. It was the chief town of the Ausci.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 40, and 46.

Ault (Bourg d').—A small watering-place in the department of Somme; two hours by diligence from St. Valery (fare 3 frs.) Picturesquely situated; the sands are good, and walks beautiful. Population 1,600

Auteuil.—Stat —Pop. 6,363.

About three miles from the centre of Paris, near the Bois de Boulogne, St. Cloud, &c. Being within the fortifications, it forms part of the city; and was much cut up in the fight against the Commune, May, 1871. It was the favourite residence of Boileau, Molière, Racine, La Fontaine, Franklin, Helvetius, Count Rumford, and Cabanis. Boileau's house is still shewn.

Autun.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000.—HOTELS:—LA POSTE; DE LA CLOCHE.

An ancient town, 26 miles N.W. of Chalons-sur-Saône, and once strongly fortified by the Romans under the name of Augustodunum. Portions of the old wall are still standing, and two of the gates are in a pretty good state of preservation. Other Roman remains are: Temple of Janus, ruins of a Roman Theatre and Amphitheatre, pieces of aqueducts from Monjeu (Mons Jovis), &c. Christian Antiquities.—Sainte Chapelle, Episcopal Palace, 12th century, in which Talleyrand lived when bishop. Fountain St. Lazare, ½ mile. from Autun; Porte d' Arroux; Porte St. André; Pierre de Couhard, the only ancient pyramid in France, 24 mètres (90 feet) high. There is a fine Cathedral, with a Museum. The neighbourhood is picturesque with Roman remains. Fine promenade. Chablis wine can be procured good here.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 53. Diligences daily to Beaune, and other towns.

Auvergne, and its Volcanoes.—See CLERMONT-FERRAND.

Auxerre.—Stat.—Pop. 15,120.—HOTELS:—HOTEL LEOPARD, on the quay; LA FONTAINE. Omnibuses from the stations to the hotels, diligences to Avallon.

Capital of the department of the Yonne, and an ancient town, on a healthy slope in the Burgundy wine country. The Yonne forms a port for the conveyance of produce. The streets are generally narrow; there are many old houses. Some fine views from the Boulevards. The Cathedral is much admired for its regularity, portals, ornaments, columns, figures, &c., but particularly for its richly stained windows. The altar is simple but grand, and has near it statues of the patron saint, Bishop Amyot, the translator of Plutarch, and Bishop Colbert. It was founded 415, rebuilt 1060. The other churches (particularly that of St. Germain) are of great size, and for architectural beauty and elaborate details almost vie with the majestic cathedral. Under St. Germain are crypts of the 9th century. The Préfecture has a fine Roman gallery. The Library contains 50,000 volumes, 200 MSS., and Baron Denon's collection of medals. There are also a large foundry, hospital, college, theatre, baths, and botanical gardens. Musical strings are made.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 56.

Avignon.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 38,196.

HOTELS:—HOTEL DE L'EUROPE.

HOTEL DU LOUVRE; HOTEL DU LUXEMBOURG. Refreshment room at station; good dinners.

The chief city of the department of the Vaucluse, on the Rhône, 75 miles north of Marseilles. It was the residence of the Popes from 1309 to 1378; and contains numerous interesting buildings, including the picturesque ruined Bridge on the Rhône (1177-1188) built by Saint Benezet. The Cathedral of Nôtre Dame des Doms is of the 11th century, with tombs of Popes John XXII and Benedict XII, a Virgin by Pradier, an ancient marble altar, a papal chair in marble, and a fresco of Simon Memmi. The immense papal Palace (1336-1370) has been used as a barrack and prison since 1815. Saint Agricola (1325 to 1520) has a Virgin in wood by Coyseox, and paintings as well as tomb of Pellignard. Saint Didier was built by King Rèné. Several Roman arcades are seen in houses of the Rue de la petite Fusterie. The Musée Calvet has 70,000 volumes, valuable MSS., (2000 medals), most important archæological collections, with one of the finest collections of ancient glass in Europe. The Musée Requien has good collections of different branches of natural history (one of the richest collections of grasses in France). Finest walks are Jardin des Plantes, Doms d'Eté, d'Hiver, &c. Many public fountains. The industry of the place consists in silk stuffs, woollen and cotton factories, a cannon foundry, type foundries, and tanneries. Much madder is grown in the neighbouring country. The Fountain of Vaucluse is about 18 miles distant from Avignon, and may be reached by rail to L'Isle-sur-Sorgues, four miles from the Fountain de Vaucluse. Besides the Fountain itself, an object of greater curiosity, the house where Petrarch resided, is shown.

The Pont du Gard may be visited very easily from Avignon.

Every one should visit Villeneuve-des-Popes, on the opposite side of the Rhone. In the chapel of the Hospital is a splendid tomb of one of Napoleon's prisoners, Pope Innocent VI. The castle and ramparts of St. André; and the tower of Philip the Bel, and the ruins of the Chartreuse, are worth seeing.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Lyons, Arles, and Marseilles, pages 50, 59. Rail to L'Isle, whence four miles to Vaucluse, where Omnibus for four can be hired, from 4 to 5 hours, to Vaucluse, and back. The new road from Avignon to Geneva, by the beautiful plains of the Bresse, is now open. Diligence to Pont du Gard, from whence there is another diligence to Nismes.

Avranches.—Pop. 8,600.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL COMMERCE; ST. ETIENNE; DES BAINS; DU MIDI; DU GRAND-D'ESPAGNE; DE PROVIDENCE. Omnibuses from the station to the town, 25 centimes; 25 centimes for each package.

A fortified, well-built, and commercial town of France, in Gascony, department of Lower Pyrenees, situated at the confluence of the Nive and Adour, now the Spanish border, 486½ English miles from Paris. These rivers here form a commodious harbour, two miles from the Bay of Biscay, and divide the city into three parts. A citadel, constructed by Vauban on an eminence in the suburb, commands both the harbour and the town, which are farther defended by small redoubts. The Cathedral is a venerable structure, and the quay is a much-frequented promenade; but the most beautiful part of the city is the Place de Grammont. The modern Gothic church is an immense edifice of some beauty. A considerable commerce is carried on at Bayonne with Spain, French and foreign goods being exchanged for wood, iron, fruit, gold, and silver. The hams of Bayonne have long been famous, and its wines and chocolate are exported in great quantities to the north of Europe. The military weapon called the bayonet takes its name from this city, where it was first made in the seventeenth century. A pleasant excursion may be made to Biarritz, distant only 5 miles, see below. Also to San Sebastian in Spain 3 hours.

The district between Bayonne and the frontier is full of interest, as the scene of the memorable struggle between Soult and Wellington in 1813.

In Côte d'Or, among the hills; and the principal of the wine trade of Burgundy, nearly 90 mercantile houses being engaged in it. Chief objects of interest are Chancellor Rollin's Hospital, in the Gothic style, founded 1443; the Library, containing 25,000 volumes, and Museum; two old Churches, a belfry of the 14th century, the corn market, the fountain of Aigue, and the public gardens and baths. The Cathedral is very interesting. Monge the mathematician was born here, and has a statue. Observe a triumphal arch, and two old round towers, part of the old wall. Omnibuses at the Station.

Beauvais.—Stat.—Pop. 14,860.—HOTELS:—DU CYGNE, good; and D'ANGLETERRE.

Chief town of department de l'Oise, 65 English miles north of Paris, celebrated for tapestry. Its principal object of attraction is the Cathedral, one of the first in France. The roof rests on three rows of flying buttresses, topped by double ranges of pinnacles. It was commenced in 1225, and was intended to have been one of the largest and most magnificent Gothic churches in France, but only the choir and transepts were built. The choir is 153 ft. high.

The church of St. Etienne is of great size and should be seen; the nave is Norman, the lofty choir is in the flamboyant style. The towers of the Hotel de Ville are picturesque. Statue of Jeanne Hachette, a female leader against the English in 1472.

Behobia.—The frontier village between France and Spain, on the Bidassoa, on the high road to San Sebastian. Passports and baggage are examined at the respective Custom-houses on each side of the Bridge. Luggage should be here plombé, 10c. for each package. Irun and Hendaya are the stations where RAILWAY baggage is examined.

Belfort.—Stat.—Pop. 7,510.—HOTELS:—L'ANCIENNE POSTE; MESSAGERIES; TONNEAU D'OR.

A thriving town between the Vosges and Jura Mountains; having a fine quay, a curious bridge, and important fortifications; by Vauban, with a vast entrenched camp capable of containing 20,000 men. On the rock above is the Castle (Bel-fort), built 1226, and held by the Austrians until given up to France by the treaty of Munster. It commands the entrance into France from Switzerland. It was taken by the Germans in the war of 1870-1, but restored under the treaty of 1871. Here Von Werder defeated Bourbaki in his attempts to raise the siege, and drove him over the Swiss border. Coming from Switzerland, baggage is searched at Petit Croix.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 52, 57, 68, and 74.

Besançon.—Stat.—Pop. (1876) 49,461.
HOTELS:—DE PARIS; DU NORD; DE L'EUROPE; NATIONAL.

Is 251½ E. miles S. E. of Paris, and 60 miles from Dijon. The Roman Vesontio and a large, ancient, and well-built city, on the river Doubs, which nearly surrounds it dividing it into two parts, joined together by a bridge. It has six gates, and is strong both by nature and art, having been fortified by Louis XIV. and being, besides, protected by a Citadel standing on a lofty rock, by Vauban, on the site of Celtic fortress. Height of the Citadel, 360 mètres, or 1176 feet above the sea. Porte Noire is a Roman construction, restored 1820. Watchmaking the staple manufacture, employs 4500 hands, turning out yearly 300,000 watches. Carpets, jewellery and porcelain also made. Besançon beer noted throughout France. It has an interesting Cathedral of peculiar architecture. The library contains some rare manuscripts, a valuable collection of coins, medals, &c., 100,000 vols. and a picture gallery. The house of Cardinal Granvelle, of the time of Charles the Fifth's time, is worth visiting; both

BOULOGNE.—Stat.—Pop (1872) 31,408.—HOTEL:—DU NORD; PAUL RIQUET; DES BALANCES; DU COMMERCE.

A finely situated town on a rock 200 to 260 feet above the Orb and the Canal du Midi, in a beautiful country; and one of the most thriving seats of the brandy trade. It was a chief town of the Albigenses when Innocent III. proclaimed a crusade against them in the thirteenth century, headed by Simon de Montfort, and 60,000 were slaughtered here. The old castle-like Cathedral with its great tower and turrets, has a good nave and choir, and several stained glass windows. The Madeleine and Aphrodise Churches are worth notice. Statue of Riquet, engineer of Canal du Midi. Silk stockings, gloves, eau-de-vie, liqueurs, confitures, glass, soap, &c., are manufactured here, and there is a trade in white, red, and Muscatel wines.

Cafés—the Casino and others. Villa Eugenie was the Imperial residence. The favourite Bathing places are the Port Vieux, a rocky cove near Café Atalaya and the Côte du Moulin, a fine sandy strand

Is situated about five miles from Bayonne. The beauty of the scenery, the genial nature of the climate, its suitableness for sea-bathing, together with its seclusion, has rendered it a favourite watering place, much resorted to by Spaniards as well as by French. It was the favourite resort of the Emperor of the French from the bustle of the French capital.

From the cliffs, one can enjoy a splendid view of the Bay of Biscay, which, at all times restless, is rendered turbulent upon the least increase of the wind. The several bays, with their fine sandy bottoms, present admirable convenience to the sea bathers.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, morning and afternoon; Chaplain, Rev. A. B. Cross, M.A., appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society. He also performs service at Bagnères de Luchon.

BLOIS.—Stat.—Pop. 20,330.—HOTELS:—

D'ANGLETERRE; DE BLOIS; CHATEAU TERS NOIRE.

A good Buffet at the Station, close to the town. Blois is a picturesque place, 113 E. miles south of Paris, on the Bordeaux Railway, in the Orleannois department of the Loir and Cher, on the Loire, here crossed by an elegant stone bridge of 11 arches, date 1717. The streets are narrow, and many of the houses low. The Castle stands on a rock overhanging the river. The principal public buildings are the Cathedral, the Jesuits' college, (now a provincial school,) and the Episcopal palace, the terrace of which affords a very pleasing walk. St. Nicholas is the best church. Manufactures of serge, stamin, and other cloths, as well as of hardware and glass. Blois has a superb Aqueduct, ascribed to the Romans, cut in the rock, in excellent preservation, conveying water to the town fountains; length, half a mile. It was occupied by the German forces, 13th Dec., 1870. EXCURSIONS in a carriage to the castle of Chambord, 12 miles; and to the castle of Chaumont, 12 miles by rail to Onzain station.

Buffet with every accommodation at the Station. One of the chief ports of France, in the Channel, 29 miles from Folkestone, 112 miles distant from London, and 170 by rail from Paris. As a watering-place it is much resorted to, chiefly from England. It is situated at the mouth of the Liane, in department Pas de Calais, in view of the English cliffs, two hours distant. Boulogne is divided into Upper and Lower town, connected by a steep street called La Grande Rue. Lower Town is modern and regularly built, extending to the glacis of the Citadel, erected under Louis XIV. by the celebrated Vauban. The Tintelleries, stands at the top of the ascent. The railway station is on the opposite side of the river, near Place Bellevue distant from the landing place of steamers, half a mile. Omnibuses attend the arrival of packets and trains, to convey passengers to and from the pier and station; fares 50 centimes each; those holding through tickets are conveyed free.

The Museum in Grande Rue is well worth visiting, and contains some paintings deserving of notice, besides many curiosities. The Baths is a splendid establishment. There are also a public library and a theatre. The Beffry, behind the Hotel de Ville, is one of the most ancient buildings in Boulogne; the tower, 140 feet high, should be ascended, as from it a magnificent view of the town and its beautiful environs may be obtained. One chief architectural attraction of Boulogne, however, is the Monument, an exceedingly handsome structure, intended to commemorate the invasion of England by Napoleon. His colossal bronze statue is at the top.

The Jetty is the favourite walk, extending about 2000 feet from the end of the quay and commanding a fine view of the harbour and coast; and presents, on a fine summer evening, with its numerous visitors, a very gay and lively appearance. The most remarkable building in Boulogne is the superb modern Cathedral of Nôtre Dame, in the Greco-Roman style, built by the enduring energy of one man, Mons. Haffringue. It has two towers, with a dome and cupola; in the interior, paintings and statues, a very ornate shrine and lady chapel, the resort of many pilgrims, and a splendid high altar, the gift of Prince Torlonia, of Rome.

Length of Boulogne Quay, along the wooden piers enclosing the harbour, 5015 feet. Depth of water in harbour, 16 feet 9 inches; at springs, 29 feet. Number of fishing boats employed, 184; produce of the herring fishery (1871-2), 16,951,022 kilos.; total amount of fish (1869), 1411 tons fresh; 549 tons salted. Boulogne has several factories, iron foundries, sail-cloth works, and a steel pen manufactory.

Bourbon L'Archambault.—A celebrated mineral watering-place, 9 miles west of Moulins. It is a small town, 3300 inhabitants. The Waters which are saline, are supplied by a hot and cold spring, called the Source de Jenas; and in the middle of the town there are Baths for the accommodation of persons desirous of bathing. The picturesque remains of the ruined Castle will attract attention; as also the apex of the chapel. In summer the place is thronged; and diligences run daily from Moulins, passing through Souvigny, a little village five miles from Moulins, containing a Gothic church, will repay a visit, it being the most remarkable in the entire province.

Bourges.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 31,312.—HOTELS: DE FRANCE; DE LA POSTE; DU BŒUF; COURONNE; DE LA BOULE D'OR.

A large town, 146¼ English miles south of Paris, in department Cher, on a rising ground between the rivers Evre and Auron, which here unite their streams. It is a very old place, formerly the capital of Berri, and is the site of Avaricum, which was taken by Cæsar in his Gallic wars, and the inhabitants killed. Louis XI. was born here, and founded a University. Public buildings of note are the fine gothic Cathedral, which has two towers, one 206 feet high, and 5 aisles, with some good stained glass and a crypt. The Bishop's Palace was burnt 1871, Churches of St. Pierre, and Nôtre Dame, the Hotel de Ville, formerly the house of Jacques Cœur, a magnificent private house built by a rich merchant, who was minister of finance to Charles VII., and was disgraced and banished by him for no reason that ever was discovered. It was begun in 1443, and is one of the most curious buildings of the kind in France, worthy of examination in every part. The Gendarmerie, and the Museum of Antiquities. Manufactures of silk, woollen, and cotton stuffs, as well as of stockings, caps, and other articles of clothing. The Military School of Metz is transferred here; and a Central arsenal and strong fortifications are in progress.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 40 and 42.

Brest.—Stat.—Pop. 66,272 in 1872.—HOTELS: HOTEL DES VOYAGEURS; LAMARQUE, 21, Rue d'Aguillon; GRAND MONARQUE; DE PROVENCE; DE LA TOUR D'ARGENT; DE NANTES. Conveyances from the station to the town (five minutes).

One of the principal seaports and arsenals of France, with two ports, the outer and the inner. The inner, formed by the Penfeld, and lined with quays, landlocked, receiving 50 frigates, &c., is protected by powerful batteries. The outer Harbour is one of the best in the world, can hold the largest fleets, and has deep water throughout. The Goulet or channel uniting it with the Atlantic, has only a width of 1805 feet, and is strengthened by batteries. The great buildings are connected with the Marine, including the Bagne or Convict Prison, a noble arsenal, excellent docks, ship yards, magazines, naval, hydrographical and medical schools, observatory and botanical gardens. Howe's victory of the glorious 1st of June was gained off Brest. All the trade consists in imports, chiefly for the supply of the navy.

139½ English miles west of Paris. A large, and well-built town, 9 miles from the Channel, in department Calvador. Caen, formerly the capital of Normandy. It contains 12 parish churches, several hospitals, a public library containing 25,000 volumes, public garden, cabinet of natural history, &c. It has a University, founded by Henry VI, when Caen was held by the English, 1417-50. Caen is rich in ancient gothic architecture, the most remarkable specimens of which are the Churches of St. Pierre and the Holy Trinity. In the Castle is the ancient Exchequer of Normandy, a building perfectly unique. In the grand old Cathedral of St. Stephen, a magnificent specimen of Norman and early English, rest the remains of William the Conqueror. His queen, Matilda, is buried in the church of the Holy Trinity, which has an interesting crypt. Several private houses deserve to be visited, such as the Hotel des Quatrains, the Hotel de Valois, the houses of Malherbe and Charlotte Corday. Caen has a Faculty of Law and Medicine, several preparatory schools, statues of Malherbe, La Place, &c., and a Picture Gallery in the Hotel de Ville, open Sundays and Thursdays, with 4000 paintings, including the Marriage of the Virgin by Perugino, Judith, the Flight into Egypt, &c., by Paolo Veronese, paintings of Andrea del Sarto, Poussin, Rubens, and some sculptures. No. 82 is the portrait of James I. of England. Among the walks, are Jardin des Plantes, and the Cours. Many interesting remains surround Caen. The air is very salubrious, and living cheap, two circumstances which attracted a large number of English residents, till the Franco-German war drove them away. It is situated at the influx of the small river Odon into the larger stream of the Orne. An active trade is carried on in gloves, lace, stockings, caps, cider, dye-stuffs, skins, &c.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pp. 23, 26, 27, and 28. Steamers to Havre and Southampton, see Alphabetical List. As the boat to Havre often sails in the morning, passengers will do well to pass the night at Caen.

Diligence to Coutances, Granville, Avranches, Vire, and St. Malo from St. Lo.

Calais.—Stat.—Pop. 14,000 in 1866.—Hotels: Hôtel Dessein. First class good Hotel.

Hôtel Meurice, Rue de Guise, open for night trains and boats; moderate charges.

Paris Hotel.—Kept by A. Louis. The nearest hotel to the steam packets and railway station.

De Flandre; Du Sauvage; De Londres; Quillacy; Marine. At the Buffet Hotel at the station, there are a few clean bed-rooms with good cookery; which may be useful to persons in a hurry, and save going to the town.

Calais is in the department Pas de Calais, 23 miles from Dover. It is surrounded by a moat and wall, and defended by a large Citadel. The streets are wide and regular. Its form is that of an oblong square, with the longer side parallel to the sea; and it has two gates, one toward the sea the other towards the land. Most of the houses are built of brick. The Grand Place or Market Square is extremely picturesque. Principal buildings: Nôtre Lame, 11th century, with fine stained glass windows, paintings of Rubens and Vandyck. The Church du St. Sepulchre, fine spire. Arsenal, one of the finest in France. In 1565 there were 9000 operatives producing cotton and silk lace, valued at £1,080,000. There are ten manufactories of engines. About 50 million eggs are annually exported; the people are engaged in the herring and cod fishery, and carry on a trade in Dutch spirits. About a quarter of a million tourists, &c. pass through the town. It enjoys a well-deserved reputation for salubrity, partly attributable to the light, dry soil, and partly to the surrounding country being flat—thus allowing a free current of air to pass through the town. The harbour is defended by several small forts, and consists of a large quay, terminated by two long wooden piers, which stretch into the sea. Calais was taken by Edward III., 1347, and re-taken 1558, in Q. Mary's time, by the Duke of Guise.

H. B. M.'s Consul.—Captain Hotham, Rue Courten Vent; American Consular Agent—J. Vandroux, Esq.

English Service.—In the town there is an English church, St. George's, Rue des Prêtres, built by the English some years since. Service every Sunday at 11 and 3 by the British Consular Chaplain, Rev. T. St. Hill, M.A. A handsome gothic church dedicated to the Holy Trinity, has been opened in Rue du Gaz, in the adjoining suburb of St. Pierre les Calais, or Basse Ville, as it is called; where there are 2000 English factory hands. (the population exceeds that of Calais itself). Chaplain, Rev. H. Shackell, appointed by the Col. & Cont. Church Soc. Wesleyan Chapel, Rue du Temple, St. Pierre; Minister, Rev. ——— French Protestant Chapel, Rue Pont Lottin, St. Pierre; Rev. C. H. Nimmin. Hours of Service, at all (except the first), at 11 and 6.

English Bookseller.—Mr. Collier, 44, Grand Rue, St. Pierre.

Travellers proceeding to Belgium or Germany will avoid much trouble by informing the authorities of their place of destination and by what train they intend to proceed; their luggage will then be duly marked for transit, and they will avoid the annoyance of a Custom-house search in France. Passengers proceeding direct to Brussels must have their luggage visited at Blandain (frontiers of France) and those to Paris can have their luggage registered by paying from 7 to 10 sous each package, exclusive of the landing charges.

Conveyances.—Railway to Lille, and from thence to Paris, Brussels, and all parts of Belgium. See Cambrai.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 18,510 HOTELS: HOTEL DE FRANCE, good.

An industrious and flourishing town on the Scheldt or Escaut, in the old province of Flanders; and the seat of a bishopric. It was the episcopal see of Fenelon, whose monument, by David, was with difficulty preserved when the cathedral was a second time destroyed by fire in 1859. Principal objects of interest are the Hôtel de Ville, opposite the Place d'Armes, which is of considerable extent, as also the Esplanade; the Military Hospital; the College, and the public Library, which contains 30,000 volumes.

Here the League against Venice was formed 1508. Trade in fine linen, lace, thread, and cambric, which takes its name from this place.

About 21 miles south-west of Nice, beautifully situated on a bay of the same name, in the Mediterranean, on an undercliff between the sea and the hills, which shelter it on the north. The climate is pure, mild, and uniform, with a temperature of 55° to 60° in the coldest months. Sunny days are the rule; there is no fog. The old town is at Mont Chevalier, a good point of view. The present Lord Brougham has a chateau, and several English residents have villas, at Cannes The number of visitors has greatly increased within the last few years, and many new edifices have been constructed. Here are gardens of heliotropes and other sweet plants, with orange and lemon groves at Croisette, &c. Neroly and other essences used in eau de Cologne are made here. In front of it are the Isles de Lerins, viz.,—St. Marguerite, noted for the Masque de Fer, and for the escape of ex-Marshal Bazaine, and Saint Honorat, having a very old monastery, and a church of the 7th century. The environs abound with delightful Excursions, especially to the Esterel hills behind, 1800 feet to 4000 feet high, where every variety of prospect is found. Napoleon landed near this, from Elba, 1815; at a spot marked by a pillar, half-way to ANTIBES, where there is an excellent Hotel.

Carcassonne.—Stat.—Pop. 20,700. HOTELS ST. JEAN BAPTISTE; BERNARD; BONNET.

Chief town of dep. Aude and seat of a diocese, college, tribunal, &c., situated in a fertile spot, near the Canal du Midi, on the Aude. The modern part is well built and watered by streams and fountains; one, of Neptune and his horses, in the Grande Place is very fine. Among the buildings worth notice are the ancient Cathedral; the Hôtel de Ville; the Préfecture with its large gardens; the Library of 6,000 volumes, and the Museum; the 19-arch bridge, whence there is a view of the Pyrenees; the Barracks, Theatre, Hospitals, Fountains, &c.; the fortifications of the Upper Town; the Porte de Narbonne, the church, and ruins of the Castle; and St. Nazaire, containing the grave of Simon de Montfort. The Upper Town, or Cité, is one of the most interesting places in France, being an old mediæval fortified town on the top of a hill, with its ramparts, towers, and gates in a state of preservation rarely to be met with.

There are some large woollen factories, and from 5000 to 7000 hands are engaged in the manufacture of cloth, which is celebrated for its brilliant colours. Within an easy drive or walk of Carcassonne is the little town of Cosques, with a superb gothic Church, renowned for its antiquity and elegant proportions; no architect should pass it by.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 42.

Carnac, or Karnak, in dep. Morbihan, Brittany.—The most remarkable Druid, or stone, monument in France. Best reached from Auray, or Vannes, on the Western line. (See Bradshaw's Hand Book to France.

Hotel de la Cloche d'Or.—Very good hotel, kept by E. Jannaux, proprietor.

Hotel De la Haute Mere Dieu.

107½ English miles from Paris, and 25 from Rheims, on the Paris and Strasburg line of Railway. A town in Champagne, on the Marne, which divides it into three parts, and is crossed by several bridges, one of which, erected in 1787 is admired for its boldness and elegance. There are a handsome town-house, a small gothic Cathedral, built in the thirteenth century, eleven parish churches, three secularized abbeys, several convents, and a fine public walk. The church of Nôtre Dame has been splendidly restored and adorned with stained glass. Visit the beautiful Abbey Church of L'Epine five miles distant, built by the English in the 13th century, and well worth seeing. Jacqueson's wonderful wine cellars are here. The Camp of Chalons was permanently established in 1857, and occupies a large extent of country to the South and East of Petit Mourmelon and Grand Mourmelon, two small villages 16 miles from Chalons. It is the site of two historical Battles in A.D. 272, and 451, when Tetricus and Attila were defeated. For an extensive camp the situation could not be finer. There are permanent barracks for a large number of troops.

Omnibuses from the railway station at Mourmelon to the hotels, for the camp. On 20th August, 1870, Marshal MacMahon broke up his camp here, and began his march towards the N.E., with a view of relieving Bazaine at Metz; a movement ending with his defeat & surrender at Sedan.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 62, 64, 67, and 70.

Chalons-sur-Saone.—Stat.—Pop. 20,000—

Hotel des Trois Faisans.

A neat town, 239 English miles south-east of Paris, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Saône, with a broad quay, which is used as a promenade. Principal church, St Etienne, 1386. The banks of the river are, for the most part flat, but well cultivated. Beyond Mâcon, celebrated for its wine, the scenery is extremely pleasing, and increases in interest on approaching Lyons. The road, which runs a great part parallel with the river, passes over Mont d'Or, so called from the rich colour of its vineyards in autumn, and from the summit of which a charming and extensive prospect may be enjoyed of the rich plains of Burgundy on the one side, of the Lyonnois on the other, and of the snow-clad Alps of Dauphiné in the distance. The descent to Lyons is through a succession of meadow-lands, orchards, and vineyards. At about 25 English miles from the town (by railway), are the extensive iron works, called Le Creusot, the glass bottle works of Blanzy and of Epinac, Collieries, &c. The town has large beet-root-sugar factories, breweries, flour and seed-crushing mills, iron steam-ship building-yards, &c.

Châteaudun.—Stat.—HOTELS:—GRAND MONARQUE; HOTEL PLACE IMPERIAL.

A dull town on the new railway connecting Paris and Tours (page 37). The Castle is a magnificent pile, and is certainly one of the finest in Europe. It was taken by the German army, 18th Oct., 1870. Pop. 6,720.

Châtellerault.—Stat.—Pop. 14,210. HOTELS:—DE L'ESPERANCE; DE LA TETE NOIRE.

A sous-préfecture in the department of Vienne, and one of the principal seats of the cutlery and sword trade in France; situated on the Vienne, which is crossed by a good Bridge with an old four-turreted gate at one end. It stands among pleasant hills and gardens, and has the Gothic churches of St. Jean and St. Jaques, a salle-de-spectacle, &c. The duchy of Châtellerault was given to the Earl of Arran in 1548 by Henry II., as a bribe to induce him to consent to the marriage of his ward, the infant Queen of Scotland, with the Dauphin. The title is still held by his descendant the Duke of Hamilton.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 35.

Steamers in summer to Tours, Saumur, Angers, and Nantes.

Cherbourg.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 35,580.—HOTELS:—

GRAND HOTEL DES BAINS; HOTEL DE L'UNIVERS; HOTEL DE L'AIGLE; HOTEL DE L'AMIRAUTE, on the Quay, with a view of the Breakwater.

A strong naval station and fortress, and chief town of a maritime préfecture, situated in the department of the Manche, at the mouth of the Divette, which spreads out into a wide road or bay with the great breakwater or Digue in front. The breakwater was completed under many difficulties, and, after repeated failures, at a cost of nearly £2,000,000; it is two and-a-half times the length, two and-a-half times the width, and twice the depth of Plymouth breakwater. Cherbourg itself is insignificant, having nothing of interest apart from its naval works, except the Hôtel de Ville and its Picture Gallery. A bronze statue of Napoleon I, faces the sea.

There are two entrances to Cherbourg, one at the east and the other at the west end of the strongly fortified Digue. The channel is narrowed at the eastern end by the island of Pelée, upon which is erected a large fort, called Fort Impérial, which with the corresponding fort at the eastern side of the mole, completely commands the passage. The western channel is protected by an immense fort called Fort de Querqueville, on the mainland. At the entrance of the Napoleon Dock there is a gigantic fort called Fort des Flamands, which is constructed on a rock dry at low water, and is supported by a redoubt called Tour la Ville. There are in all twenty-four regular forts and redoubts in addition to the six batteries on the mole.

The Docks are formed of a large basin communicating with one to the north, and there are also three other docks at the southern part of the excavation, into which an entrance is obtained through the central opening and basin. There are nine basins in all, besides arsenals, magazines, and naval stores. In the neighbourhood are several fine points of view.

H. B. M's. Consul.—H. Hamond, Esq. American Consular Agent, R. Le Jolis, Esq.

Clermont-Ferrand.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 37,357. Hotels:—

De la Paix; De l'Europe

Capital town of dep. Puyde Dôme, in the volcanic district of Auvergne. The only buildings of any interest are the very fine though unfinished Cathedral, (in which Pope Urban, and Peter the Hermit preached the first Crusade, 1095,) and the old Byzantine church of Nôtre Dame du Port. The newly completed Gothic church of St. Cœur-de-Marie is well worth seeing. Here are also a cabinet of natural history, a public library, museum of antiquities, a botanic garden, a neat theatre, and several hospitals. There are four public squares. In one of them is a statue erected by the town to the memory of General Desaix, said to have been a Savoyard by birth. It is 78 miles west of Lyons. The geologist, or the admirer of mountain scenery, will be amply repaid the trouble of ascending the mountain called the Puy de Dôme, 4800 ft. above the sea. There is a curious petrifying spring in the outskirts of the town, at St. Alyre, Rue du Chat, 42, (with a natural bridge): and at Peron, not far from the Post. Warm baths of Royat, 1½ mile. The neighbourhood is most remarkable, from the number of extinct Volcanoes of unknown date, a long chain of which, comprising a multitude of craters and lava streams, extends for many miles in a N. and S. direction a little W. of the town. The celebrated French watering-place of Mont-Dore, (Grand Hotel) in the midst of extraordinary volcanic scenery, is approached from Clermont, and there are regular public conveyances during the summer. Excursions to Puy de Dôme, Gergovia, Mont Rognon.

Conveyance.—Railway, see pages 51 and 66.

Cognac.—Stat.—Pop. 8200.—Hotels:—

D'Orleans; de France; Grand Hotel de Londres, a new house.

The entrepôt of the Cognac brandy trade, on Chemin de fer de Charentes, in dep. Charente, on the river Charente, 32 miles from Angoulême. It stands on the site of the Constacum, and has an old Castle, with many distilleries and brandy stores.

H. M's. Consul.—Hon. H. Vereker.

American Consular Agent.—E. Dodart, Esq.

Conveyances.—Railway, see page 47.

Compiegne.—Stat.—Pop. 12,140.—Hotels:—

De la Cloche; de France; du Soleil d'Or.

A quiet town, with narrow ill-built streets, situated on the Oise. It has for ages been a favourite residence of French monarchs in order to enjoy the sport of hunting in the Forest adjacent, which is 29,600 acres in extent. The Château, as rebuilt by Louis XV. and enlarged by Napoleon, has a magnificent façade next the forest, 624 feet wide; and contains a Museum of antiquities in the great hall. One of the best buildings is the picturesque gothic Hôtel de Ville. There is a public library of 6000 volumes, with a fine gothic Church of great antiquity.

Compiègne is historically remarkable as being the spot where Joan of Arc, the maid of Orleans, was taken prisoner, and delivered up to a cruel death in 1430. The exact spot on which she was captured was close to the old gateway of Vieux Pont. Compiègne was the head-quarters of the German army of occupation, under General Manteuffel, till their removal to Nancy.

St. Andrew's Church in the Boulevard des Avenues; Rev. W. L. Mason, M.A. (Chaplain retired list), Chaplain.

Conveyances.—Railway, see page 16. Coaches to Soissons and Pierrefonds; Steamer daily to Soissons.

Contrexéville.—Pop. —— Hotels:—

De l'Etablissement, De Providence.

A watering place, in Dep. Vosges, in the valley of the Naire, much frequented (especially by Americans) for its waters, which resemble those of Vichy and are good for gout and liver complaints. There are two springs; one, the Pavillon, for drinking; the other, for bathing. Season, June to Sept. It is approached from the W. and E. by way of Neufchâteau, (16 miles. in 3 hrs', Charmes (29½ miles.); between which two a rail is in contemplation. The environs are picturesque.

Diligences.—From Neufchâteau at 7 and 10 a.m., in 3 hours; return at 5.0, 2.30, and 8. From Charmes at 7.0 and 11.0, in 5 hours; return at 9.0 and 12.30, in 5½ hours.

Neufchateau, the most convenient starting point, has two Hotels—De Paris and De Providence, and is within 7½ miles. of Domrémy, the birthplace of Joan of Arc, (see p. 366). Carriage with with 2 horses to Contrexéville, 35 fr.

Corps—40 miles from Grenoble.

Hotel de la Paix and du Palais.

Height 900 mètres. Population 1385. Near a miserable district called Devolny, 2 hours 40 minutes from Corps is La Salette a noted place of Pilgrimage, 1804 mètres high. The Church is in the wildest and most solitary position.

Coutances.—Pop. 8,960. Hotels:—

De France; D'Angleterre.

A town in Normandy very beautifully situated on an eminence whence a fine view is to be had of the surrounding country, 3 miles from the sea. The Cathedral is one of the finest in France. Distance to St. Lo 17 miles, to Granville 18 miles. Diligences to St. Lo and Carentan, and to Granville, Avranches, &c.

Croix.—See Roubaix.

Deauville.—See Trouville.

Dieppe.—Stat.—Pop. 20,200.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL ROYAL, facing the sea, is a first-rate hotel, in an admirable situation.

GRAND HOTEL DES BAINS, exceedingly good in every respect.

HOTEL DE LA PLAGE, facing the sea, and close to the Baths.

HOTEL DES ETRANGERS, kept by Javault Tailleux.

HOTEL DE LA PAIX.

A watering-place of France, easy of access from London, Brighton, and Paris, at the mouth of the Arques. Has two suburbs, Pollet and de la Barre. Church of St. Jacques has two rich chapels of the Holy Sepulchre and the Virgin (13th to 14th century,) gateway remarkable.

Port very safe but difficult to make; it has 9 fathoms water at spring tides; with two basins receiving ships of 1200 tons. Imports principally grain, iron, coal, timber, from Norway, &c. Exports silk, cotton, woollen goods, porcelain, &c., and oysters. The oyster fishery is a most important industry. Oyster pares now established can store 250,000 cwt. per annum. Paris alone consumes 100,000,000 per annum. The handsome Bathing Establishment founded 1822 renewed 1857, in the Crystal Palace style. Ivory articles made in great perfection. Dieppe has a theatre, a school of navigation, an aqueduct excavated in the rock for 3 miles, to carry water to the town. The baths here, as at the other sea and mineral bathing-places in France, are under the superintendence of a physician inspector. This is the nearest seabathing establishment to Paris—distant about 125 miles. It was temporarily occupied by the Germans, who first entered it 9th Dec., 1870.

POST-OFFICE in Place des Ducs de Bourgogne.

FRENCH PROTESTANT CHURCH.—Service at 10 a.m. on Sunday, by M. le Pasteur Vesson, in the ancient Chapel of the Dukes of Burgundy, which has some good sculpture.

196 E. miles S. of Paris. An ancient and well-built city, the chief town of Côte d'Or, and formerly the capital of Burgundy; between the rivers Ouche and Suzon and on the canal of Bourgogne. The principal square, called Place d'Armes, or Place Royale, is in the form of a horse shoe, and in front of the ancient palace of the Dukes of Burgundy, once used as the house of the parliament of Burgundy. It has four churches, remarkable for the richness of their architectural decorations, and also a celebrated university. At the gates of the town is the old Chartreuse, where some of the members of the ducal family are interred. It is now converted into a lunatic asylum for the Department. Notice the Puits de Moïse (Well of Moses), with its fine specimen of Mediæval carving. Dijon was captured by the Germans, 30th October, 1870, after one day's bombardment. Near this, on 21st January, 1871, Garibaldi's son, Menotti, surprised a German post in a fog, and captured a regimental flag—the only flag lost by the Germans all through the war.

The Museum in the ducal palace, should not be omitted to be visited. It contains two splendid marble tombs of Philippe le Hardi, and Jean his son, Duke of Burgundy, which are reckoned quite chefs d'œuvres; also a gallery of paintings, and especially a variety of curious and beautiful ecclesiastical relics. The Cathedral, which has a wooden spire, is also worth a visit. Observe, also, the statue of St. Bernard born at Fontaine, (1½ mile from this); and the house where Bossuet was born. Other natives are Charles the Bold, Crébillon, Piron, Vauban, and the Duc de Bassano.

The town has a botanic garden, a fine theatre, and a public park designed by Le Nôtre, under Louis XIV. The renowned wines of Chambertin, Vougeot, Romanée, and Beaune, are grown in the immediate neighbourhood.

PRINCIPAL BANKERS.—Messrs. Dunoyer and Co.; Marion & Co.

Dinan.—Pop. 8,100.—HOTELS:—DE LA POSTE; DU COMMERCE, in Place Duguesclin, with an obliging landlord, attentive to the English, (Omnibus to the River, 50 c.)

Hobb's English Boarding House.

A fine old town of Brittany most picturesquely seated on a steep granite rock, 126 feet above the River Rance which is crossed by a good viaduct. The old parts of the town are rich in picturesque domestic architecture, overhanging gables, old arcades, &c. The Cathedral of St. Sauveur contains some bas-reliefs of the Loves of Psyche, and monument to Du Guesclin. The neighbourhood is delightful, and abounds in charming walks and views. Living is still very cheap, though prices have risen during the last year or two.

There are a great number of English residents here. ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE is performed daily; with a weekly Communion. Chaplain—Rev. J. G. Orger. The pretty English Church is particularly recommended to the notice of visitors, who may wish to contribute a mite towards extricating it from considerable debt.

Dinard.—Situated at the mouth of the Rance, in the department of Ille et Vilain, opposite to the towns of St. Malo, and St. Servan.

HOTELS:—HOTEL DE DINARD; HOTEL DES BAINS; HOTEL DE FRANCE; HOTEL FRANKLIN.

A beautiful sea-bathing place, much resorted to during the summer months. There is a communication hourly by Steam-boat, with the opposite towns. The Duke Audiffret-Pasquier, and other French noblemen, with several American gentlemen, have built houses at the place, which owes its prosperity to Mr. Coppinger.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, at the Church on Sundays and Saints days throughout the year. Chaplain—Rev. W. Snook.

Dol.—Stat.—HOTELS—NOTRE DAME, good, DE FRANCE, comfortable.

A small town of Brittany, 14 miles from St. Malo. The admirer of architecture will be delighted with the Cathedral, a most beautiful gothic edifice. About a mile from the town on the road to Rennes are some Druidical remains.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 30.

Carriage to Mont St. Michel, 15 fr. a day.

Dôle (Jura).—Stat.—Pop. 16,610.—HOTEL DE GENEVE, kept by M. Flutsch, well situated, comfortable and clean. Remains of a Roman amphitheatre and aqueduct. Coal and iron works.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 52 and 61.

Domremy la Pucelle.—25 miles from Commercy, on the Strasburg railway, interesting as the birth-place of Jeanne d'Arc, 1412. The village contains a statue of the heroine by the Princess Marie d'Orleans, and a museum of relics at the house in which she was born, close to an orphanage founded by Louis XVIII.

Douai.—Stat.—Pop. 24,500.—HOTELS:—HOTEL DE FLANDRE and DU COMMERCE.

Of very remote origin; conveniently situated for its extensive trade on the river Scarpe, which communicates with the canal of Sensée. An Arsenal and picturesque Beffroi. Conveyance hence to Cambrai, Bouchon, and Hénin-Liétaud. The Northern railway, at this point, divides into two branches, the one proceeding to join the Belgian railways by Lille and Mouscron, the other by Valenciennes and Quievrain to Brussels and Cologne.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 14 and 84.

Dunkirk or DUNKERQUE.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 34,350.—HOTELS:—

CHAPEAU ROUGE; FLANDRE; DES BAINS; all fair, about 10s. a day.

OMNIBUSES attend the arrival of the trains.

A seaport in French Flanders, 25 miles N. E. from Calais, accessible in all weathers to vessels drawing from 15 to 16 feet of water; and has a long pier. At the bottom of the entrance canal is a sluice 164 feet in length, with two wet Docks, communicating with one another. This old town is clean and has been a favourite residence for English families. Lodgings are cheap; but living is dear; meat, poultry, bread, butter, etc. are as dear as in England. Good Flemish servants. Sea bathing is full 2 miles from the town, but omnibuses run at low fares. A new Hotel is building close to the bathing place. Here are a fine cathedral, a Gothic Beffroi; with a statue of Jean Bart, the French naval hero, in the Grande Place. After being held by the English, Charles II. sold it to France in 1664.

The Isère divides it into two parts, and near it are the new promenades of L'Ile Verte, and the Cours Random, the gardens of the Hotel Lesdiguières, and the esplanade. It is strongly fortified, and the view from the citadel, called the Bastille, is very fine. A permission must be obtained from the Capitaine-de-Place. The Cathedral has a Roman tower, and an elegant "ciborium." The church of St. André, the tomb of Bayard, and his statue, is in the adjoining square. The crypt of St. Laurent is of the fifth century. There are interesting rooms in the gothic Palace of Justice, on the Place St. André. The new prefecture, telegraph office, library, and museum, with a bronze statue of Napoleon I. on horseback, are on the Place d'Armes, near the Zoological Garden. It was the first large place which received Napoleon on his return from Elba in 1815. In the Botanical Garden is the museum of Natural History, especially rich in fossils. The library contains 80,000 volumes, many early editions, and 1200 manuscripts. There is also a picture gallery and a cabinet of antiquities in the same building. Grenoble has a University, and a school of artillery. Manufactures are gloves, cotton articles, and liqueurs. Post-Office, on the Place St. Claire.

Excursions.—To Bourg d'Oisans, the Grande Chartreuse, Le Pont de Claix, St. Macellin, Pont-en-Royans, and the Grands Goulets, Romans. Also—1. The Grand Aiguille (1095 mètres), and the Convent of Chalais (940 mètres), one day. Splendid panorama. 2. Moncherotte (1906 mètres), a fine mountain, rising above Val Gratsivaudan. 10 to 12 hours' walking. 3. St. Eynard, 7 to 8 hours; or to la Galerie (1200 mètres), fine view. 4. Mont Rachais, 5 to 6 hours on foot, fine view.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pp. 51, 53, 59.

Ham.—Stat.—Pop. 2900.—Hotels:—

Hotel de France; Cornet d'Or.

A town situated on the Somme, and having a Citadel, which is used as a State prison. It was erected in 1470, by the Comte de St Pol, who was afterwards put to death by Louis XI. Its donjon keep is 100 feet high and 100 feet wide, and its walls are thirty-six feet thick. Here Napoleon III. was confined, after his attempt on Boulogne. He remained a prisoner six years, and only escaped in 1846, in the disguise of a labourer.

The church has carvings of Scriptural subjects.

Conveyances:—Railway, see page 21.

Havre, or Havre-de-Grace.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 86,825.—Hotels:—

nd consists of two unequal parts, divided by its outer Port and Basins. Besides the outer harbour, the eight docks of the port are capable of accommodating nearly 2000 vessels. The largest of these docks, the Bassin de l'Eure (built 1845-56) covers 50 acres. Contiguous to it are the immense warehouses of the Bassin Dock. Very large works are in progress for improving the entrance of the Harbour, and increasing the dock and quay accomodation. Two Lighthouses, 50 feet high, with electric lights which can be seen at a distance of 20 miles, stand on Cap de la Hève, two miles from Havre. There are two roadsteads, separated by the sandbank l'Eclat. It has more trade than any other French port, except Marseilles. It receives seven-tenths of the cotton imported into France. In 1871, 2,571 vessels (exclusive of the coasting trade) of 1,193,050 register tons, entered the Port, of which 1,050, of 458,637 tons, were British vessels.

This large, important, thriving commercial city contains two theatres, an Exchange, Chamber of Commerce, and these Clubs—viz., Cercle du Commerce, Cercle de l'Harmonie, and Cercle de l'Union, where strangers are admitted for 1 month, on presentation by a member. The new Hotel de Ville, centrally situated in Place Hotel de Ville, the spacious gardens of which are beautifully arranged, is a large and handsome edifice, resembling the Tuileries in its style of architecture. Notice, also, the new Palais de Justice, the large Aquarium on the Boulevard de Strasbourg; the Museum, with its extensive library; fruit, fish, flower, and meat markets; Government tobacco factory; docks; a fine barrack; and the splendid view from the Côte at the back of the town, which is studded with handsome villas.

The charming commune of STE. ADRESSE, joins Havre, where many of the English residents, and numbers of summer visitors live. The Dowager ex-Queen of Spain has a large villa on the seashore. (HOTEL—Des Phares; small, but comfortable.) Excursions to Honfleur, Montivilliers, and the Roman Amphitheatre at Lillebonne.

H. B. M.'s. CONSUL: Fred. Bernal, Esq.—AMERICAN CONSUL: Col. Bridgland.

ENGLISH PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Tarral.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE.—In the handsome new Church of Holy Trinity, opened 1875, in Rue Mexico, near the Palais de Justice; Licensed Chaplain, Rev. G. Washington, M.A.; 14 Rue des Neiges. Service, on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m. (or 4 0 in Winter); and 8 a.m. on Fridays and Saints' days; Holy Communion, 1st and 3rd Sundays.

Honfleur.—Stat.—Pop. 9,060.—HOTELS:—CHEVAL BLANC; DES ARMES DE FRANCE; PAIX. A seaport town, on the Channel at the mouth of the Seine. The river is seven miles wide; steam-boats keep up a daily communication with the opposite coast, including Havre; thence to Southampton. Port has two piers and three basins; principal Church, Sainte Catherine. Great trade in eggs and poultry to England. La Côte de Grace, abounds with beautiful picturesque walks all along its wooded heights, and commands a fine view of the sea, is much frequented on Sundays and fete days

ENGLISH CONSUL and AMERICAN C. AGENT.—J. Wagner, Esq.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE twice every Sunday at the English Church; Chaplain, appointed by Colonial and Continental Church Society.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 27.

Hyères.—(Dep. Var).—Stat.—Pop. 5,430.

GRAND HOTEL D'ORIENT.—First class establishment, beautifully situated. The proprietor, Mr. Cauvin, has resided in England.

HESPERIDES HOTEL AND PENSION; very good English house. W. Martin, Proprietor.

HOTEL DES ILES D'OR; DU PARC; HOTEL AND PENSION DES ETRANGERS; DES AMBASSADEURS; D'EUROPE; DES ILES D'HYERES; MARITIMES. Many furnished apartments.

Hyères is the most accessible, as well as the warmest, and most sheltered of the winter stations, in the south of France; being only 36 hours from London, par rail viâ Marseilles.

It is not situated on an island, as many suppose, but on the mainland, 10 miles from Toulon, and 3 miles from the Mediterranean. There is, however, an excellent carriage road leading to the shore, and the view over the sea and islands from the town—which is beautifully situated on south slope of a hill, 650 feet high—is very extensive and charming. The east end is perfectly sheltered from the mistral. The upper town is badly built. The Faubourg is preferred by strangers. Every accommodation required by invalids during the winter months is now to be found here: excellent hotels and boarding houses, apartments, and detached villas, furnished with elegance and comfort; mostly surrounded by pleasant gardens planted with orange, olive, vine, and palm trees. Carriages and saddle horses by the day or single drive. Capital donkeys hired at 2*f.* per day. The Circulating Library and Reading-room contains a gentleman's club, news-room, splendid salons for re-unions, balls, &c. There are also shops for the sale of English comforts. Provisions and living are in general cheap and abundant.

Principal buildings: Church of St. Louis, Hotel de Ville. Principal squares: Place des Palmiers, with a fine view, Place Royal. Public garden, Boulevard des Isles d'Or, and terraces with laurels and palms, &c. Climate protected and warm, but subject to great oscillations, so that invalids must take more precautions than at Cannes and Nice. Nevertheless, being less exciting, the climate of Hyères is preferred by many to Mentone and other places on the coast, including Cannes.

Digitized by Google

WALKS.—Ruins of the Roman city Pomponia, Roman fountains of San Salvador, Mountain des Oiseaux (299 metres), fine view.

Roadstead and Islands of Hyères deserve a visit. L'Ile de Titan, with lighthouse, the largest; L'Ile de Porteros, 2½ miles long, is the most hilly. They are the ancient Stœchades.

The vast forests of pine which surround Hyères rival those of Arcachon, and have lately drawn great attention to this place. Numbers of beautiful villas have been built among these pine forests at Costabelle and Sylvabelle for the use of invalids. Some of the palms reach a height of 100 feet.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, at Christ Church; with a resident winter chaplain, Rev. P. Singer.

RESIDENT ENGLISH PHYSICIANS.—Dr. Griffiths and Dr. W. D. Adams. A medical council of celebrated French Physicians may also be consulted gratuitously.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 55, OMNIBUSES to the town, a distance of 5 miles. A branch rail is in progress.

Issoire.—Stat.—Pop. 6,160.—HOTEL DE LA POSTE. A small town of Auvergne, possessing a fine Byzantine church; with richly sculptured capitals (perhaps unequalled), massive towers, apsed chapels, and ancient crypt.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 60.

Langres.—Stat.—Pop. 7,940.—HOTELS:—DE L'EUROPE; DE PARIS; DE LA POSTE.

An ancient town, sous-préfecture, bishopric, and fortress, on the side of a hill at the foot of which flows the Marne. Height above the sea, 437 metres. Langres, as the principal seat of the fine cutlery trade, may be called the Sheffield of France. Objects of interest are the Cathedral of the 12th cent.; the Hotel de Ville, containing a library of 30,000 volumes; and the Museum.

Laon.—Stat.—Pop. 10,090.—HOTELS:—LA HURE; DE L'ECU; DE LA BANNIERE.

A fortified town on a lofty hill in the midst of a fertile wine country. The old walls and ramparts command a series of views on all sides. The Cathedral of Nôtre Dame, rising above the town, is an excellent and interesting specimen of the early pointed style. It has five towers, deep portals, and several ornamental side chapels. The church of St. Martin has two fine towers. Laon has a very rich Art Museum and collection of antiquities, Napoleon was defeated under the walls by Blucher and the Prussians, in 1814. On 9th Sept., 1870, it capitulated to the Germans. After they had entered the citadel, the powder magazine exploded killing 300 French troops, and 50 Germans.

Stockings, hats, &c., are manufactured here.

CONVEYANCES—Railway, see pages 12, 15, & 66.

La Rochelle.—Stat.—Pop. 19,000 HOTELS: DE FRANCE; DU COMMERCE.

Capital of dep. Charente Inférieure, bishop's see and port, situated on an inlet of the Bay of Biscay. Vessels of 500 tons can enter the harbour, which consists of two docks surrounded by houses and quays, planted with trees. The fortifications were planned by Vauban. The streets are well built, and most of the houses have covered porticos. The only buildings worthy of notice are the Hotel de Ville, a fine building in the renaissance style; the cathedral; the bishop's palace; the tower of the Church of St. Sauveur; the library, which contains 20,000 volumes; and gothic Porte de l'Horloge. Trade in wine, salt, cheese, fish, &c., but the principal article of commerce is brandy.

HER MAJESTY'S CONSUL.—Major Sadler.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—T. P. Smith, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 38 and 47.

Laval.—Stat.—Pop. 28,150—HOTELS:—DE PARIS; DE LA TETE NOIRE; DE LA COUR ROYAL; DE FRANCE; DE L'OUEST.

A very fine town in dep. Mayenne, in Brittany. It has several public buildings, including the churches, Nôtre Dame des Cordeliers and de la Trinité, and a Museum of Celtic and Roman antiquities. The old Castle is worth seeing. Seven miles distant is the Port du Salut, and the convent of the Trappistes. The Mayenne is crossed by a viaduct 178 mètres long, having nine arches.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 23 and 28.

Le Mans.—Stat.—Pop. 37,220—HOTELS:—LE DAUPHIN; DE LA BOULE D'OR; DE L'EUROPE; DE L'OUEST; DU MAINE.

There is a buffet at the station, a short distance from the town.

A very fine town in the Department of the Sarthe, and well worthy of a visit. The most important buildings are the Cathedral, containing the tomb of Cœur de Lion's queen; Nôtre Dame de la Couture; Nôtre Dame du Pré, and Saint Pavin, all of the 11th century. The Museum contains various historical monuments. In the town may be seen the house of Scarron, the satirist. At Alonne, 2½ miles, are the ruins of Cenomania.

CONVEYANCES.-Railway, see pages 25, 30, 38, & 62.

Libourne.—HOTEL DE FRANCE, DES PRINCES.

A town on the right bank of the Dordogne, with a population of 13,600. The town is pretty and well built, and is one of the free towns founded by Edward I.

An interesting excursion can be made to St. Emilion, up the valley of the Dordogne—noted for its claret, and one of the oldest towns in France. Rail open from Libourne to St. Emilion. Castillon lies twelve miles S.E. of St. Emilion; and three miles from the former place is the Château of Michel de Montaigne, the birthplace of Montaigne, the essayist and philosopher. His house still exists there; and the room in which his library was is yet preserved, and has inscribed upon the roof several Greek and Latin sentences.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 35, 37, 47.

Lille.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 158,117.—HOTELS:—HOTEL DE L'EUROPE—the best in the town.

PARIS; NOUVEAU MONDE; FLANDRE; FRANCE; CHEMIN DE FER DU NORD; HOTEL DE LA GARE.

NOTICE.—Passengers are particularly recommended to see that their luggage accompanies them from this and the station at Mouscron, as mistakes are of frequent occurrence. In all cases of doubt and uncertainty at Lille, Mr. Noblée, the interpreter, may be appealed to with confidence; he is well informed, civil, and obliging.

Capital of dep. Nord, and one of the most considerable commercial towns in France. It communicates by canal with the sea; and the river Deûle, which runs through it, is navigable. The fortifications, which are reckoned Vauban's chef d'œuvre, were captured by Marlborough 1708. Part were pulled down, the town enlarged, a new quarter built, and the fortifications completed again. The streets are wide, and well formed; the houses mostly in the modern taste and well built, except in the quarter of the cotton-spinners, of whom there are 7000 to 8000. Annual produce of the mills, £1,000,000; other manufactures, tobacco, beet-root sugar, oil, lace, linen, &c.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Bourse, the Theatre, the Palace of Richebourg, built in 1430, now the Hotel de Ville, the church of St. Maurice, the Hospital, founded in 1739, the Museum, the Bridge, the Concert Hall, the Gaol, the Botanical Garden, the Triumphal Arch, erected in 1782 in honour of Louis XIV., and the Column raised in memory of the siege sustained by the city in 1792.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, every Sunday, at Christ Church; Rev. C. P. Incledon, M.A., Chaplain; for this Church and Armentières

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—W. Wilson, Esq.

AMERICAN C. AGENT.—C. Grégoire, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Rail. see pp. 13, 14, 17, 78, 80, 100.

Limoges.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 55,734.—HOTELS: DE LA BOULE D'OR; RICHELIEU; DU PERIGORD; AIGLE D'ARGENT; CITE.

An old town on site of a Celtic and Roman city, almost burnt down in 1864. Limoges furnishes most porcelain earth used in France. It is 256 miles from Paris, and 66 from Poitiers, by rail; situated on the Vienne, in the department of Upper Vienne, of which it is the capital. Here are several fine squares and fountains, also a cathedral, said to have been built by the English. Museum of antiquities and natural history. Statue of Marshal Jourdain, St. Pierre, St. Michel. New public garden. The town carries on a brisk trade.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 40.

Lisieux.—Stat.—Pop. 12,903.—HOTELS:—DE FRANCE; D'ESPAGNE.

A town in Normandy, very prettily situated between Bernay and Caen. Distance to Pont Audemer, 23 miles; to Cormeilles, 12 miles. The walk is very charming all the way to Pont Audemer. Lisieux possesses two magnificent churches, the most remarkable of which is the Cathedral, a Gothic edifice of great beauty, famous for its noble façade and elegant proportions. St. Jacques is the other church. 3 miles off is the chateau of Mesnil Guillaume, a quaint edifice of the 16th century.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 26.

Louviers.—Stat.—Pop. 11,000.—H. DU MOTON.

A large, interesting, and prettily situated town, at a short distance from Rouen. The Cathedral is one of the richest specimens of the flamboyant style, and is well worth seeing. Woollens are made. It was taken by Ed. III and Hen. V.

Luz.—HOTELS:—DE LONDRES; DES PYRENEES; DU MIDI; DE L'UNIVERS. Pop. 1640.

In the valley of the Gave de Pau, at the mouth of the valleys of Bastan and of the Lize, about 11 miles from Cauterets, and half a mile from the baths of St. Sauveur. The museum contains Pyrenean curiosities; fee, 5c. Luz is a pretty village in Hautes Pyrenees, with a curious Church, which served also as a fortress in the hands of the Knights Templars, and where may be seen a "Porte des Cagots," one of the relics of that most interesting race, whose degradation was such that they were obliged to enter the church by a separate door, and to occupy distinct seats during service. The excursion to the Grande Chaos and Gavarnie on horseback, ten hours, should on no account be omitted, being unattended with danger, and embracing the finest scenery in France. Crêpe de Barège manufactured here.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE. Chaplain appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Lyons, the chief manufacturing city of France, is well situated at the junction of the two great rivers the Saône and the Rhône, 326 miles S.E. of Paris, and 224 N.W. of Marseilles. The Rhône is crossed by 8 bridges, and the Saône by 9. Lyons contains many public squares, among which is that of Louis le Grand, or Bellecour, one of the most magnificent in France, adorned with beautiful lime-trees and an equestrian statue of Louis XIV. The fine library consists of nearly 150,000 volumes [obtain from 10 to 2), and 2400 manuscripts. Scientific and benevolent institutions are numerous, especially the school of St. Pierre, where instruction in different branches of art is given gratis to 200 students. The "cours" lasts five years. The students must be natives of France. Lyons gives 20,000 fr., and the government 20,000. A botanical garden, museum, hall of sculpture, &c., are attached. Within the walls are upwards of 10,000 establishments for the manufacture of silk, employing nearly 70,000 looms, supporting 140,000 persons, and producing goods valued at 300,000,000 fr. Considerably more than one-half of the silk exports of France are manufactured in the district of Lyons. Its factories consume yearly 2,000,000 lbs. weight of raw silk. No traveller should omit ascending the height of Fourvières, on account of the view to be obtained from the Observatory. For climate, &c., see Bradshaw's Companion to the Continent, price 10s.

OTHER OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Cathedral; the Church of St. Jean (12th century), with ancient stained glass, a bell weighing 20,000 lbs., and an astronomical clock of 1598; the Church d'Ainay, in the Byzantine style, has old granite pilasters and fine paintings of Flandrin; the Hotel de Ville; the Museum, one of the richest in France, containing a magnificent collection of paintings, including Perugino, Guercino, Carracci, Andrea del Sarto, Ruysdael, Teniers, &c. This collection is in the Palace des Beaux Arts, which contains archæological and other collections. Church of St Irenée, with its crypt, and bones of the martyrs; St. Nizier; statues of Suchet and S. Bonaventure; Parc de la Tête d'Or, with Zoological garden.

The descent of the Saône from Chalons to Lyons, and of the Rhône from the latter town, in many respects resemble that of the Rhine. The cities on the Rhône are, generally speaking, of very remote antiquity, much more so than those on the Rhine. The steamer on the Rhône leaves Lyons for Avignon on Saturdays, at 6 a.m.; fares, 1st class, 12 francs; 2nd class, 8 francs. From Lyons to Avignon the voyage takes 12 hours, but on going from Avignon to Lyons it takes 2 days, as the boat remains all night at Valence, which is half way. The boat returns from Avignon to Lyons at 5 a.m. on Sundays. From Lyons there is a steamer at 8½ a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, but it goes no farther than Valence, returning for Lyons on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at 5 a.m.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 48, 50, 53, 58, 58, and 59.

There is a good buffet at the Station.

Chief port of the Mediterranean, and Steam Packet Station for Italy, Spain, and the East, with a wonderful natural and artificial harbour, which affords accommodation to nearly 2,000 vessels of all classes. The city was founded 600 years before the Christian era, by a colony of Phocæans. Marseilles is considered by many as the finest city of France, and the various approaches to it are lined with trees and well-built houses. The city itself is composed of the old and new towns—the old town on the site of the Greek city, on rising ground north of the harbour, with narrow ill-ventilated streets; the new town, with handsome houses and regular streets, south and east of the port and separated from the old town by a magnificent street, which extends from the Porte d'Aix to the Porte de Rome. Favourite promenade is the Rue Cannebière, at right angles to the former. Many of the narrow streets in the centre of the town have been pulled down, and wide thoroughfares are now opening in all directions, parallel to, and of the same breadth as the Cannebière. A new street, Rue Impériale, intersects the oldest parts of the city, and sweeps away its worst and most insalubrious sections. The cost was 18 millions, towards which Napoleon III.'s government contributed six millions.

One of the most splendid range of warehouses is that situated east of the Bassin du Lazaret, equal in extent to the Temple of Luxor, they are built of iron and stone, cost £500,000, and can easily store 50,000 tons of goods at once.

The great Breakwater has been finished to the length of 2400 mètres. Another is being constructed to the north, to enclose a new port, with a vast graving dock. It should be added that all these changes have naturally led to a very high rate of living, and rents almost rival those of Paris.

Marseilles has also been embellished by the construction of several public buildings. The new Exchange is allowed to be a very large and handsome edifice. The new Cathedral, a magnificent structure, is rapidly progressing towards completion. The Palace, which the municipality built for Napoleon III. in 1864, on an eminence overlooking the old harbour, commands a most beautiful prospect. The new Zoological Gardens, and the Museum at the Château Borelly, are recent improvements, and well worthy of the traveller's notice. Open Sunday and Thursday. Public Library, Picture Gallery, large Theatre, Theatre du Gymnase. An abundant supply of water from the river Durance, which is brought from a distance of sixty miles to Marseilles, adds to the fertility of the surrounding country, and the salubrity of the city. Worthy of notice are the Square and Fountain of the Obelisk, the Prado, which is three miles long, and one or two Churches—also the remarkable Chateau d' If, at the entrance of the Port; boats there, 2 to 3 francs the hour. There are 52 soap manufactories at Marseilles, 28 oil mills, turning out 60,000 tons of soap and 40,000 tons of oil a year; also large engineering works, employing 7000 men, for the construction and repair of steam-engines. Caps (Fez fashion), to about 48,000 or 60,000 are made here every year, 6000 tons of lead are smelted, and there are a good many sugar refineries. Marseilles is surrounded by a number of brand new staring villas, along burning, dusty roads.

London by way of Paris may be reached in 34 hours. The journey from Marseilles to Nice occupies about 6 to 9 hours. Omnibuses and cabs attend the Station, and convey passengers to the hotels; 50 c. each person the former, and and 75 c. the latter. Neither omnibus nor cabs are allowed to remain at the door of the Station; they are kept at a distance under the supervision of a waterman until the baggage is cleared at the passengers' luggage office.

Meaux.—Stat.—Pop. 10,800.—Hotels:—Geneves. A well-built town, sous-préfecture, and episcopric, situated in the midst of a beautiful country on the canal de l'Ourcq, and the Marne, which divides it into two, the part to the south being called the Marché, and connected with the other part by a bridge. The buildings worthy of notice are the Cathedral of St. Etienne, which is a splendid gothic structure, 332 feet long, with a high tower from which there is a most extensive view; the Hotel de Ville; St. Nicholas Church; and a fine general Hospital. The cathedral contains a monument to Bossuet, the "Eagle of Meaux." The famous Fromage de Brie is made here.

Montpellier.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 57,727.—HOTELS:—NEVET; DU MIDI.

Post Office—Boulevard, St. Guillem; Telegraph Office—Boulev. du Jeude Paume and Rue Castillon.

A very ancient city, the capital of the department of the Herault, 520 miles distant from Paris, and 115 miles west of Marseilles by rail. It is highly celebrated for the salubrity of its air, and for its prospects, which embrace the Pyrenees, and the Alps, and was once much visited by invalids from foreign countries, though the north east wind (Bise) in the spring is very trying to delicate lungs. Montpellier is the seat of a celebrated University, famous for its school of medicine; the anatomical theatre alone is capable of accommodating about 2000 persons. The Musée Fabre contains a good collection of paintings. In the Faculté des Sciences are some fine collections. A magnificent aqueduct brings the water of the fountain Saint Clement to Montpellier.

Moulins-sur-Allier—Stat.—Pop. 17,600. HOTELS DE PARIS and LION D'OR.

A cheerful town—chief place of dep. d'Allier.

The Cathedral of Nôtre Dame is a building in the style of the 11th century, with a high choir, and vault roof, exquisitely groined. Its only objects worth notice are an old painting of the Virgin, and the two detached shutters, with the portraits of Pierre II., the Duc de Bourbon, and his wife. In the chapel of the Lycée, is the monument of the Duc de Montmorency, executed at Toulouse in 1632, for conspiracy against Louis XIII. and his Prime Minister Richelieu. His wife had his remains interred in the chapel, and got the monument erected. She became the lady abbess of the nunnery connected with the church.

Moulins is also remarkable as being the spot where Lord Clarendon, during his exile, wrote the history of the great rebellion. It is also the birthplace of Marshal Villars and the Duke of Berwick, the latter a natural son of James II.

An excursion can be made from Moulins up the valley of the Allier, through the Limagne, Clermont, and the volcanic district of Auvergne.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway to Clermont and Montpellier, and also to Vichy. See pages 42, 53, 55, and 61.

Nancy.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 52,978.—HOTELS: EUROPE; FRANCE; D'ANGLETERRE,

Distant 220 E. miles from Paris, and 93 from Strasburg by rail. Capital of dep. Meurthe, on the river of that name; divided into old and new towns; the latter by far the larger as well as more handsome of the two. The Gates of Nancy are particularly fine, and are more like triumphal arches than the mere entrances to a city. The royal Square, built by Stanislaus, is surrounded by an iron railing, and by some of the finest buildings in the town. The streets of the old town are narrow and crooked; but it contains two well built suburbs. Of its public edifices the chief are the elegant Town-hall; the Cathedral, a large modern edifice; the church of St. Sebastian; the church of Nôtre Dame; and the Theatre, all situated in the new town; besides the palais de justice. Extensive and beautiful promenade. Nancy is celebrated for preserved fruits and champagne.

It was occupied 12th August, 1870, by the Crown Prince's army, preceded by the entry of "four Uhlans"; and was the head-quarters of the army of occupation under Manteuffel, after his removal from Compiègne.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 61, 63, 64, 66, 70, 72, and 77.

Nantes.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 118,517. HOTELS: DE FRANCE; DU COMMERCE; DES COLONIES; DE NANTES; DE PARIS; DE L'EUROPE.

Restaurants:—Grand Restaurant Rocher de Cancale, Martin; good cookery. Baths at the Hotel de France à la petite Hollande.

Omnibuses from the Station to the hotels, 60 centimes, within the town, 15 c. Voiture, four wheels, during the day time, 1 fr. 50 c. the course. Two-wheeled voitures, 1 fr. the course; past 10 o'clock, 2 frs. and 3 frs.

One of the largest and richest commercial cities in France, capital of the department of Lower Loire, seated on the Loire, 269 miles W. of Paris by rail, and 58 from Rennes. It was formerly the residence of the Dukes of Bretagne, who built a strong Castle on the side of the river, which still exists. The Cathedral contains the tombs of the ancient dukes, besides which there are a collegiate church and 15 parish churches. The splendid new church of St. Nicholas, and the fine Jardin des Plantes, should be noticed; with the statue of Cambronne in the E. of the town. The bridges over the Loire, in which are some islands, are almost a league in length. The city contains 20 squares; a handsome Palais de Justice; and a Museum (open Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, to strangers from 12 to 4.—catalogue, 1 fr. 25c.) at which are more than 1000 paintings and 300 works in sculpture. The suburbs exceed the city in extent. Much salt is made in the territory of Nantes, both at the bay of Bourgneuf and in the salt marshes of Guerande and Croisic; and a great manufacture of preserved provisions is carried on here, the principal of which are sardines. Large vessels can come no higher than PAIMBOEUF, which is 30 miles from Nantes; but its fine quays are crowded with those of less burden than 100 tons. It is the great point of export of brandy. It has some building yards for Steam vessels, and also large naval store-houses. Principally engaged in fishing, and in the manufacture of cotton goods, glass, &c. It was here that Henry IV. promulgated the famous edict, in 1598, in favour of the Protestants, which was revoked by Louis XIV. in 1685.

H. B. M.'s. CONSUL, Captain Clipperton, Rue de l'Herronière, No. 6.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—F. Olcott, Esq.

DIVINE SERVICE is held every Sunday at 11-30 a.m., by the chaplain the Rev. Wm. James, B.D., at H.M.'s consulate, Rue de l'Herronière, No. 6.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 39, 40 & 47.

Nevers.—Stat.—Pop. 21,000. HOTELS: HOTEL DE FRANCE, in a good situation; HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, moderate.

Chief town of department Nièvre, a bishop's see, and the seat of very old established pottery and china manufactures. There is a government iron foundry, besides many private ones; and it is a busy, thriving place, on the Loire, which is here crossed by the railway bridge of the Paris and Lyons (Bourbonnais) line. The river Nièvre joins the Loire here. Nevers is a very ancient town. The objects deserving most attention are the old Church of St Etienne, of the 11th century, in the Romano-Byzantine style; Chateau Ducal, now the Hotel de Ville, and Palais de Justice, of the 15th century, in the flamboyant style. Cathedral of St Cyr, of the 13th to 15th centuries, standing on the top of the hill, is of the Romanesque style, with a beautiful doorway in the inside, leading to a curious spiral staircase. An old gateway in the town wall (Porte du Croux) is very ancient, and still bears a bas-relief of 1593. Another gate, the Porte de Paris, was erected 1746, as a triumphal arch for Maréchal Saxe, grandfather of Mad. Georges Sand. About twelve miles from Nevers, half an hour by railroad on the line to Paris, is Pougues les Eaux, a thermal establishment, the waters of which are cold, and said to resemble those of Spa, Selters, &c. There is an establishment, and two hotels.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 53 and 58.

Nice (Italian, Nizza.)—Pop. (1872) 52,377.—KRAFT'S HOTEL DE NICE, kept by M.M. Kraft (Bernerhof Suisse,) very good situation, excellent accommodation.

HOTEL DE LA GRANDE BRETAGNE (Limited Co.)—First-class Establishment, combining comfort with moderate charges. Mr. J. Lavit, manager.

CHAUVAIN'S GREAT HOTEL is open all the year. Highly recommended, in every respect, to English families and single gentlemen.

HOTEL DES ANGLAIS, first-class hotel, facing the sea. Address the Secretary, Mediterranean Hotel Company, 80, Coleman Street, London, E.C., or the Hotel, Nice.

GRAND HOTEL DE LA PAIX. Kept by Messrs. Gavotto & Co. First-class hotel; comfortable & clean.

WINDSOR HOTEL (Quartier Carabacel), surrounded with a beautiful garden.

HOTEL ET PENSION SUISSE.

Prices of hotels, pensions, and provisions are increasing at this attractive resort. At first-class hotels—bedrooms are 8 to 10 francs a day; Sitting-rooms, 10 to 30 francs; table d'hôte, 5 francs, Pensions, 7 to 12 francs. Apartments let for six months only.

This town, formerly belonging to Piedmont, but now ceded to France, is situated at the foot of Mont Albano, with a fortified castle, and a population engaged in the preparation of silk, thread, perfumery, &c. The old town has few attractions, being dark and dirty; but the new portion is finely built, and has broad streets and high houses, much in the Parisian style. There are many private hotels with a grille in front. Fine statue of King Carlo Felice on the sea shore. A noble walk has been made by the seaside, 80 feet wide, called Promenade des Anglais, in a line with the Quai du Midi, with which it is connected by a handsome new iron bridge, called 'Pont Napoleon;' it is more than a mile long, with borders of flowering plants, palms, and shrubs on either side, in front of numerous fine villas, Pensions, and hotels. The town and environs are highly celebrated for a pure and healthy air, which is accounted for by the situation of the neighbouring mountains, offshoots from the Maritime Alps. It is the equability of its temperature which attracts residents. There are no fogs at Nice. See Dr. Edwin Lee's "NICE AND ITS CLIMATE."

Donkeys are few and dear. There are a great many single and two horse carriages to be had at moderate charges. Two-horse street calashes per hour, 2 frs. 60 cents.; for every succeeding half-hour, 1 fr. 10 cents; for one course in the town or its vicinity, 1 fr. One-horse cittadine, 2 places the course, 60 cents.; by the hour, 1 fr. 60 cents. Carriage and pair, 800 to 1000 frs. a month.

Strangers will do well to consult a resident medical man before taking apartments for invalids, as the climate varies much in different parts of Nice and neighbourhood. The environs of Carabacel and Cimiés are generally preferred. Fish and fruit are cheap; excellent figs, grapes, and peaches. Villa Gastaud, near Nice, is noted for roses. The Château has public gardens full of exotics. View from top very fine.

There is an Anglo-American College in Rue de France.

H. B. M's. CONSUL.—F. Warwick, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—W. Vesey, Esq.

ENGLISH CHURCH, Rue de France—Chaplain, Rev. Charles Childers, M. A. Service at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. on Sundays, and at 11 a.m. on Wednesdays. There is also a chapel of ease at Carabacel. Service at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

SCOTCH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. — (Eglise Ecossaise,) [au coin de Boulevard du Bouchage, et ce la Rue St. Etienne.] Hours of Service (October to May)—Sundays, 11 a.m.; 8 p.m. Thursdays, 11 a.m. Rev. Alexander Burn Murdoch, B.A., Minister. (Residence at the Church).

HOUSE AND GENERAL AGENT, and Depôt for Bradshaw's Guides, Mr. Charles Jongla, House Agent, who has published good maps of Nice and its environs; he publishes also the "List of Strangers."

WINE MERCHANT.—John Hodgson, No. 1, Rue du Pont Neuf a L'Entresol. Wines and spirits kept in bond for the convenience of families at Cannes, Mentone, &c.

Steamers come alongside the pier. There is hardly any boating at Nice, but boats may be hired on the harbour or from the beach, 2 frs. the first hour, and 75 cents. every succeeding hour. Excellent fast day-boats run three times a week between Nice and Genoa, in about 8 hours; also to Corsica, with the mail, weekly, in 10 to 11 hours. At Villefranca, is a Russian anchorage, where the body of the Czarewitch, who died at Villa Bermont, Nice, was embarked, 1865, for transmission to Russia.

Furnished apartments are generally taken for the season, from 1st November to 1st May, and vary much in price according to size and situation. Single apartments may be had from 400 to 600 frs.; for a small family, from 1000 to 1500 frs. Apartments should be secured early. In Pension, board and lodging ranges from 7 to 15 frs. per day.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see page 55.

Nismes.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 62,294. HOTELS: GRAND HOTEL DU LUXEMBOURG.—An excellent first class Hotel for families and gentlemen.

Capital of dep. Gard, (the Roman Nemausus,) and a Bishop's see; 79 miles N. of Marseilles. Here are numerous monuments of antiquity, of which the Amphitheatre, built by the Romans, is the principal. There are likewise the ruins of a temple of Diana, and a grand tower. The Maison Carrée, or the Square House, is one of the finest relics of Roman architecture (of the Corinthian order) in France, and is used as a Museum. Here are manufactures of silk, stockings, cloth, leather, &c., and a considerable trade in silk, corn, dried fruits, oil, and wine. Mosquitoes are troublesome in the season.

Besides the antiquities mentioned, the public gardens, in which the remains of the temple of Diana are situated, and from which the Tour Magne is reached are worthy of notice for their extent and arrangement. A band plays here on Sunday afternoons. The view from the Tour Magne is very extensive. In the "Grande Place" there is a magnificent marble Fountain by the sculptor Pradier, which cost 250,000 francs. When viewed by moonlight the effect is admirable. No traveller should omit visiting the famous Pont du Gard, a day's excursion from here. 15 m.s. distant; 12 frs. for a cab. It is part of a Roman aqueduct.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 55, 57, & 60.

Diligence from Nismes to Pont du Gard, where there is another diligence to Avignon.

Noyon.—Stat.—Pop. 6,272.—HOTELS:—DU NORD, DES CHEVALETS.

77¼ English miles from Paris, and 28¼ from St. Quentin. It has manufactures of linen, leather, hats, and stockings.

The Cathedral is a very striking and imposing mass, justly admired for its deeply recessed portals, massive buttresses, and noble façade; few gothic edifices of the 12th century equal this magnificent structure. The town hall has a fine exterior. Ourscamp, 4 miles distant, possesses a Gothic edifice, with an immense hall of remarkable beauty.

Olsans (Le Bourg d')—HOTELS:—DE FRANCE; DE MILAN.

Population, 2800. In the midst of the district called Romanche, of 391 sq. miles. 37½ miles long, 7½ to 9½ wide. This is a grand valley watered by the Romanche, presenting rich pastures, sublime mountains, forests, lakes, torrents, mines, crystals.

&c. Cascade de la Pisse, 200 mètres; many other waterfalls. The visitor may occasionally enjoy a dish of bear here, where it is reckoned quite a delicacy. Excursion to St. Christophe and La Besarde, on foot, exceedingly fine.

Orange.—Stat.—Pop. 10,000.—HOTELS:—DES PRINCES; DE L'EVECHE; POSTE; LUXEMBOURG.

A very ancient town on the main line from Lyons to Marseilles, once held by the family of William III. to whom it gave the title of Prince of Orange. Its chief objects of interest are the Roman remains, the triumphal Arch, and the Roman Theatre, height, 35 mètres, length, 103, built of stone without cement. It has a collection of antiquities. The triumphal Arch is 22 mètres high, and 21 broad, and covered with fine bas-reliefs. almost every house incorporates some remnant of antiquity. The Cathedral is of the 6th century.

Orange is situated on the Meyne, a tributary of the Rhone, 12 miles N. of Avignon. It is an industrious town, with numerous silk mills, manufactures of coloured linens, called toiles d'Orange, and potteries, &c.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 56.

Orleans—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 48,976. HOTELS: D'ORLEANS; ST. AIGNAN; DE LA BOULE D'OR.

Capital of the department of Loiret, situated on the right bank of the Loire, 76 miles S.W. of Paris and 71 N.W. of Tours,—a Bishop's see. Many of the houses are built of wood, and the streets are very irregular. Under the sons of Clovis it was the head of a kingdom. In 1428 it stood a memorable siege against the English, which was raised by the celebrated Joan of Arc, called the Maid of Orleans, to whom there is a bronze statue.

Principal Buildings:—The fine Cathedral, with its two lofty towers, upwards of 250 feet high; Church of St. Aignan; Belfry Tower; the Hotel de Ville; public Library and Botanical garden; court of Justice, mint, and theatre. The Museum, in the old Hotel de Ville, open Sundays and Thursdays from 1 till 4; (every day for foreigners,) has 323 paintings, 586 statues and curiosities. Houses of Joan d'Arc; Agnes Sorel, Francis I., and Diana of Poitiers. Trade in stockings, sheep-skins, wine, brandy, corn, grocery, and particularly sugar, which is brought raw from Nantes and Rochelle. The faubourg Bourgogne is of a prodigious length, and that of St. Marceau, on the left side of the Loire, has a communication with the city by a bridge of nine arches. The railway now crosses the Loire by a magnificent bridge of fifteen arches. Near the city is a Forest containing 94,000 acres, planted with oak and other valuable trees. Here, 11th October, the army of the Loire was driven out by General Von der Tann; who, in his turn, was attacked 9th November, at Coulmiers, by General D'Anrelle de Paladines, and obliged to evacuate the city. It was again taken 5th December, by Prince Frederick Charles, with the loss of 10,000 men, 77 guns, &c., on the French side.

Population of the City of Paris (1872) 1,851,792.

Hotel accommodation in Paris.—The first object of a stranger arriving in Paris is to install himself in one of the good Hotels which combines the advantages of situation, comfort, cheerful rooms, great cleanliness, and as many of the luxuries as an English traveller is accustomed to find in good Family and Commercial Hotels in England.

For many years the Hotels in the Rue de Rivoli, the Place Vendôme, and the Rue de la Paix, were principally frequented by English and American travellers, not only on account of their being the best, but also because they were situated in the gayest and most cheerful part of Paris, close to the Tuileries, the Champs Elysées, and the Boulevards. Paris, however, has been so improved and embellished, so many great arteries of thoroughfares have been opened in all directions, increasing the beauty and salubrity of all quarters of the capital, and so many new Hotels have been established, that the choice of an Hotel must be a matter of consideration with the visitor. The large Hotels du Louvre, the Grand Hotel, and the newly-opened and first-rate Hotel de l'Athenée, afford extensive accommodations suited to persons who do not object to reside in such large Hotels; but for families who prefer quieter houses, or commercial gentlemen who wish to reside in other parts of the city, we give the following list of Hotels:—

HOTEL DES DEUX MONDES ET D'ANGLETERRE, 8, Rue d'Anjou, first rate, cannot be too highly recommended for its comfort, cleanliness, and moderate charges. Excellent Table d'hôte. Hot, cold, and shower baths.

GRAND HOTEL DU LOUVRE.—Reduced Tariff.

GRAND HOTEL, Boulevard des Capucines, 12, reopened. New Managers have reduced the Tariffs.

GRAND HOTEL MIRABEAU, 8, Rue de la Paix, the finest part of Paris; table d'hôte at 6 fr.

HOTEL MEURICE, 228, Rue de Rivoli; fine situation; conducted by H. Scheurish.

ST. JAMES'S HOTEL, 211 Rue Saint Honoré; excellent. The HOTEL BERGERE, Rue Bergere, belong to the same proprietor.

HOTEL DE LILLE ET D'ALBION, 223, Rue St. Honoré, a well conducted good house.

HOTEL DE WAGRAM, 208, Rue de Rivoli, overlooking the Tuileries Gardens. J Boeck, proprietor.

GRAND HOTEL DE CASTILE, beautiful establishment, superintended by the proprietor himself. Two great entrances: Rue de Richelieu, 101, and Boulevard des Italiens, 5.—Recommended.

GRAND HOTEL DU PARLEMENT, Boulevard de la Madeleine, and 18, Place de la Madeleine; well situated, comfort, moderate charges.

SPLENDIDE HOTEL, Place de l'Opera, Rue de la Paix, and Avenue Napoleon; magnificent establishment, with all the apartments in front.

GRAND HOTEL DE LA PLACE DU PALAIS ROYAL, 170, Rue de Rivoli, deservedly recommended for its comfort and good Table d'Hôte.

GRAND HOTEL DE L'ATHENEE, 15, Rue Scribe. Conducted with great care by Mr Vantier, manager. Lift. 2 Bath Rooms on each floor.

MESSRS. GALIGNANI & Co.'s extensive Literary Establishment, 224, Rue de Rivoli, (recently removed from the Rue Vivienne), French and English Circulating Libraries. A handsome reading-room supplied with the most important papers of the English and Continental press, English publications and periodicals. An Address Book of English and American Residents and Arrivals is kept for the inspection of all visitors. The Daily English Newspaper, Galignani's Messenger, is distinguished by great impartiality, giving full extracts and the leading articles of all the London Papers; also the latest news from Great Britain, the Continent, and all parts of the world. Under the head of "STRANGERS' DIARY" are found every day the hours of admission to all places worthy of attention in Paris. It is forwarded with great regularity to subscribers in France and abroad. Cheap Reprints of popular authors, and all English Editions at London prices.

PARIS is situated on the Seine, in the same manner as London on the Thames, the river running from east to west; the circumference of the city is 15 English miles. Viewed from an eminence, the form of the city is nearly circular. It contains about 1,350 streets, 204 covered avenues, 30 boulevards, 99 public establishments, 58 barriers, 28 bridges, and 38 quays. The city is divided into 20 parishes, each containing its church, and two or three chapels of ease. There are two islands formed in the Seine—Ile de la Cité and Ile St. Louis; and its sides are lined by thirty-three quays. Houses on the right-hand of the streets are numbered even, on the left-hand odd; beginning with reference to the direction of the river.

The most lively streets are the Boulevards, the Rue de la Paix, Rue St. Honoré, Vivienne, Richelieu, Neuve-des-Petits-Champs, Rivoli. The city is fortified with a strong wall, taking in all the town, as far as St. Denis and Mont Valerian. On passing the barrier, the luggage is examined. Commissioners (or porters) at every railway station or coach-office, convey the traveller and his luggage to any of the hotels, at a charge of 1 franc. Having arrived at the hotel, it is necessary to arrange the charge for lodging from one mid-day to another.

EVENTS OF 1870–1.—The principal events in this dark period of Paris history are, the flight of the Empress in Sept. 1870, after the surrender of the Emperor at Sedan; the appointment of the government of National Defence under General Trochu; the complete investment of the capital on 19th Sept. by the Germans; the repeated attempts of the Parisians to break out, during a siege of four months, till the starving condition of the population led to a capitulation on 28th Jan. 1871, and the surrender of the forts to the new German Emperor, whose head-quarters were at Versailles. An armistice was agreed on, and the National Assembly was summoned by M. Thiers, when the party of the Reds rose against his government, 18th March, occupied the Hotel de Ville, killed Generals Lecomte and Clement Thomas, and proclaimed the Commune, which lasted till 22-6 May, when Paris was recaptured by the French army under Marshal MacMahon, the National Assembly having in the meantime fixed itself at Versailles. The disastrous rule of the fanatical Commune was finally marked by the destruction of the Vendome Column, burning the Tuileries, Palais Royal, and Hotel de Ville, much injury done to the Louvre, Luxemburg, and other public buildings, and the murder of the archbishop of Paris, President Bonjean, and other persons seized as hostages, who were put to death in the Roquette Prison, and in Rue Haxo. The mischief done to property has been calculated at 25 millions sterling.

POST-OFFICE.—The General Post-office is situated in the Rues Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Coq-Heron There are also 1 Gauxiliary Bureaux, called Bureaux d'Arrondissement, and 268 smaller offices, called Boites aux Lettres. Postage stamp are 25 centimes, or 2½d., for the provinces, and 15 centimes within the fortifications. Letters for England (3d), foreign countries, and the departments, are in time at the boites till 3.30; at the bureaux d'arrondissement, till 5 45, and by additional payment up to 6.15; and at the General Post-office till 5, except on Sundays and holidays, when the Exchange is shut—the general post-office then closes at 3. Letters may be directed to a traveller, Poste Restante, Paris, or any other town where he intends to go. The Poste Restante is open daily from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., Sundays excepted, when it closes at 5 p.m.

OMNIBUSES.—Fares are 30c. (3d.) inside, and 15c. (1½d.) outside, for any distance however great. Inside passengers can get a ticket of correspondence to use any other omnibus crossing the line of route, without extra charge. They are marked by letters of the alphabet, and differences of colour.

HACKNEY CARRIAGE, CAB, & CABRIOLET FARES.—These are regulated by the course, or by time, at the option of the traveller. A Course is any distance within the limits of Paris, whether long or short, and without stoppage. A Voiture de Place is a common cab, with railing for luggage.

TARIFF FOR VOITURES DE PLACE, OR VOITURES DE REMISE, when plying in the streets, within the city, as follows:—[N.B. The British Charitable Fund gives assistance to distressed British subjects. The committee meets at 235, Rue Faubourg St. Honoré, every Monday and Thursday, at 2 p.m. Miss Low's Home for young Englishwomen, is at 77, Avenue Wagram.

CHURCHES.—The Cathedral of Notre Dame is a very noble pile of building, erected in the 12th century. Its destruction was attempted by the Commune in May, 1871. It has two majestic towers. The three principal entrances are finely carved, from subjects out of the New Testament. The colossal bell in the north tower, called Le Bourdon, weighs 322 cwt. It is only rung on state occasions, requiring the labour of eight men. There are some most beautiful paintings and magnificent carvings in the choir, which is supported by 120 massive pillars, and the gallery by 297 pillars. The floor is of marble. The altar is most magnificently carved, and here are placed the statues of Louis XIII. and XIV. In a niche there is a beautiful marble group, representing the Descent from the Cross. The charge for ascending the tower, from which there is a delightful prospect, is 20 cents.—The New Church of the Madeleine, situated on the place of the same name, opposite the Rue Royal. The first stone was laid in 1764, and it was finished by Louis Philippe. It is surrounded by 52 Corinthian pillars, ornamented by a splendid façade. This building was intended by Napoleon to represent the Temple of Fame. The bas-relief over the portico is worthy of particular attention. The interior is most magnificently ornamented with rich gilding, paintings and statuary, and is lighted by its three domes, which are most beautifully painted.—The Church Nôtre Dame de Lorette, at the end of the Rue Lafitte, was completed in 1823, and is fitted up in the most costly manner with paintings by the best French artists.—The Church St. Etienne du Mont, in the square of the same name, near the Pantheon, celebrated for its choir, pulpit, and the grave of the holy Genovefa.—The Church St. Eustache, in the Rue Trainée, is one of the largest and most handsome in Paris.—The Church of St. Germain des Près, in the square of the same name, is the oldest in Paris, containing the monument to King Casimir of Poland, and the remains of Descartes and Boileau.—The Church of St. Germain l'Auxerrois, in the place of the same name, opposite the colonnade of the Louvre, is remarkable for its antique architecture.—Also the Gothic Church of St. Merry, in the Rue St. Martin, and the Church of St. Roch, in the Rue St. Honoré, containing monuments of Crequi, Corneille and Le Nôtre, and a splendid pulpit.—The Church of St. Sulpice, in the place of the same name, has a beautiful portico, baptismal fonts of colossal shells, and a beautiful pulpit.—The Pantheon, which is now restored to church purposes, and called the Church of St. Geneviève, may be classed among the most beautiful buildings in Paris. The Synagogue of the Jews, in the Rue Mètre Dame de Nazareth, is a beautiful temple, resting on thirty Doric pillars. The modern church of St. Clotilde (Gothic), and the Basilica church of St. Vincent-de-Paul are both remarkable for their internal beauty and magnificent decorations.

FOUNTAINS AND WATERWORKS.—Among the public fountains in Paris, those most worthy of note are on the Place de la Concorde, the Fontaine Molière and the Fontaine Cuvier; the Artesian Well de Grenelle, made from 1834 to 1841, is 1800 feet in depth, and throwing up 4,700 cubic feet of water per hour.—The Water Filtering Establishment, 24, Quai des Celestins, is well worth seeing.

PALACES AND OTHER PUBLIC BUILDINGS.—The Palace of the Tuileries (formerly the residence of the sovereigns of France) which claimed attention for its magnificent garden, adorned with statues, vases, and fountains, was nearly all burnt by the Commune, May, 1871. Their attempt to fire the Louvre was luckily frustrated, and its rich collections are safe. It may be classed among the most beautiful of the Parisian palaces; its splendid picture gallery reaches to the Tuileries. The colonnade, opposite the Church St. Germain l'Auxerrois, is worthy of notice.—The Palace of the Luxembourg, Rue de Vaugirard, formerly used as the House of Peers, and now as a Hotel de Ville, has a beautiful garden. The splendid steps, the Hercules Saloon, the Salon de la Réunion and des Séances, with its amphitheatrical arrangement for its members; la Salle du Trone, the Library next to the Chapel, a saloon adorned with panel paintings by Rubens; a gallery studded with sculpture and paintings, and the Observatory, claim the visitor's inspection.—The Palais Royal, Rue St. Honoré, contains innumerable courts, galleries, arcades, and a garden planned by Cardinal Richelieu in 1629. Philip Egalité, the father of Louis Philippe converted this superb mass of building into mercantile purposes. Louis Philippe finished a part of the square which had been left incomplete. Of this pile, the portion facing Rue St. Honoré, formerly the apartments of Egalité, was burnt by order of the Commune, 1871; and it was restored again in 1873. The Palais de Justice, situated in the Place of the same name, containing an enormous saloon called the Salle de Pas-Perdus, was also burnt. On the south side, La Sainte Chapelle, a gothic building, erected by St. Louis, is quite a gem, and worth a visit. Those who wish to view the interior must apply to the porter, behind the chapel. It was threatened by the Commune, 1871, but fortunately saved. The Palais des Beaux Arts, in the Rue des Petits Augustins, is principally used for the exhibition of works of art, manufactures, and architectural models. In the large court-yard is a portico of the château of Gaillon. The Hôtel des Invalides is situated between the Suburb St. Germain and Le Gros Caillou, and is open to public inspection on Mon. Tues. Thur. and Fri., from 12 to 3. Under the beautiful dome of the church rest the remains of Napoleon. The tomb is magnificent; it is in a separate building at the back. The Entrance Gate in Avenue Tourville, the Royal Court, the Library, and the Kitchens, are well worthy inspection.—The Palais Bourbon, the late Corps Législatif, is situated in the Rue del'Université. The Military School (now used as barracks) is on the Champ de Mars. The Hôtel des Monnaies (containing a rich collection of coins and medals), is on the Quai de Conti.—The Hôtel de Ville (Town Hall), and residence of the Prefet de la Seine, in the place of the same name, is now a ruin. Its 16 statues of celebrated men, and its other memorials were destroyed May, 1871, when the Communes deliberately set it on fire.

The Exchange (La Bourse), is situated in the square of the same name, the buildings composing it forming a parallelogram, supported externally by 66 Corinthian columns. The principal saloon will contain two thousand persons, and is handsomely decorated with cartoons.—The Halle au blé, in the Rue de Viarmes, is a beautiful structure, in which there is a remarkable echo, and near to this building stands the Pillar built by Catharine de Medicis. This building is the grain market of Paris. The hall is 126 feet in diameter.—The Halle aux Vins (wine market) on Quai St. Bernard, covers a vast surface, and is portioned off into streets.

EXHIBITIONS, MUSEUMS AND LIBRARIES.—The National Library, in the Rue Richelieu, contains 800,000 volumes, 72,000 manuscripts, 5,000 portfolios of engravings, and a most complete collection of coins and medals.—The Library of the Arsenal, in the Rue de Sully, contains 170,000 vols., and 6,000 manuscripts.—The Library of St. Geneviève, in the Square of the Pantheon, contains 110,000 vols. and 2,000 manuscripts, besides several other collections of rare books.—The Museum of the Jardin des Plantes has three entrances, one in the Rue du Jardin, the second in the Rue Cuvier, and the third opposite the Bridge of Austerlitz. This is a most astonishing exhibition, somewhat like the Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, London. Part of the zoological collection, in the Swiss Valley, was sacrificed in the siege of 1870-1. The museum contains a magnificent collection of mineralogical, botanical, and zoological specimens; also a splendid anatomical collection.—The Conservatoire des Arts et Metiers, Rue St. Martin, contains a good collection of mechanical and industrial models, &c.—The Museum of the Louvre is divided in the following manner: 1. Collection of Antiquities. 2. Museum of French Sculpture. 3. Gallery of Drawings. 4. Gallery of Paintings of the Italian, Flemish, and French Schools. 5. Collection of Spanish Paintings. 6. Collection of Greek, Roman, and Egyptian Antiquities, Vases, Statues &c. 7. Models of Shipping, highly interesting.—[We recommend the visitor to purchase a catalogue at the temporary entrance, Pavillon Sully, Escalier Hen. II., costing but a trifle.] Admission every day, except Monday, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.—The Museum of the Luxembourg contains the best collection of paintings by modern artists; and the Artillery Museum, in the Place St. Thomas d'Aquin, a fine collection of armour and accoutrements, from the most remote ages to the present time. Admission, same as the Louvre.—The Museum de l'Hotel de Cluny and du Palais des Thermes, in the Rue de la Harpe, joined to each other by a passage, contain surprising collections of rare mediæval productions. The is open Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, 12 till 4.—The National Institute of France is on the Quai Conti, and the College of France in the Place Cambrai, and various literary and scientific societies hold their meetings in the Town Hall, &c. The Archives Nationales, in the old palace of the Prince de Soubise (of the reign of Louis XIII), has some very interesting documents and relics; including autographs of great characters at the time of the First Revolution, and the table on which Robespierre was placed after he had shot himself, with traces of his blood. Order required from the keeper, Count L. de Laborde.

BRITISH FREE LIBRARY.—Books lent gratis, on giving name and address, at the Wesley an Church, 4, Rue Roquépine, every morning at 10.30. Gifts of old books are thankfully received by the Secretary, Surgeon Ricketts, Royal Artillery.

The attention of visitors to Paris should be directed to the Chapelle Expiatoire, on the spot where the remains of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette were interred, after being guillotined; and also to the statue of Marshal Ney, recently erected on the spot behind the Palais du Luxembourg, where he was shot in 1815.

PERE LA CHAISE.—This celebrated Cemetery, situated at the end of the Rue de la Roquette, is well worth a visit, containing as it does the celebrated monuments to Abelard and Heloise, to Fontaine, Molière, Talma, Raucourt, De Lille, Kellermann, Davoust, and many others, as well as the beautiful mausoleum of Demidof.

This resort of the English and former capital of Navarre, in the Basses Pyrenees, stands on the Plateau Long, above the valleys of the Ousse and Gave, separated by the Hêas. Climate rather variable. It is the birth-place of Henry IV. Principal objects—Châteaux of Henry IV. embellished by Margaret d'Anjou; joined to the town by 3 bridges, and flanked by 5 towers; it contains the Donjon of Gaston Phœbus, 112 feet high; the Salle des Gardes, des Princes, des Etats, &c. It was occupied by Abdel-Kader, and by Queen Isabella of Spain. At the Mairie is a statue of Henry IV., by Bosio; and in the beautiful Place Royale another by Raggi. St. Martin's and St. Jacques are two fine modern churches. The Parc is an admirable promenade, with a splendid view of the Pyrenees. The Museum contains a collection of Pyrenean marbles. At the Library are 25,000 vols. of books. Pau now possesses three English churches; excellent hotels; and physicians of reputation. In the neighbourhood is the beautiful Val d'Ossau.

Pierrefonds les Bains.—Pop. 1500.
HOTELS:—DES BAINS; DE PIERREFONDS; DES ETRANGERS; DES RUINS.

A pretty village, three hours from Paris by Northern of France rail, in the centre of the forest of Compiègne, and 7½ miles from that town. Omnibuses 1fr. 25c. A more picturesque position cannot be found. The fine Castle overlooking the landscape, was restored during the Empire by M. Viollet de Duc. Sulphurous mineral waters are very abundant, light to the stomach, and easy of digestion. An excellent Bath-house. For the waters, see the Etude Medicale of Dr. Sales Giron, published in Paris at the Library of Victor Masson.

Plombières.—274 miles from Paris, not far from Luxéville.—Population 1500.

Plombières has a handsome ogival church, and many pleasant walks near it. The Parc, the Route de Luxeuil, Ferme, Jocquet, &c. These springs were frequented of late years by the French Imperial family. Here the Emperor met Cavour, 1858, before the Italian war.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see page 48.

Poissy.—See Route 25, Special Edition.

Poitiers.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 30,036—HOTELS: GRAND HOTEL DU PALAIS.

DE L'EUROPE; DE FRANCE; DES TROIS PILIERS.

Capital of the department of Vienne, near the river Clain, 210 English miles from Paris. It is divided into four quarters, all built in an antiquated style. The streets are for the most part steep, winding, and ill paved. It has several squares, the finest of which is the Place d'Armes. The Cathedral is in the gothic style, with lofty aisles. Of the other churches the most interesting is that of St. Hilaire, of 10th to 12th century; also Nôtre Dame Romano—Byzantine or Romanesque in style, and Sainte Radogonde, with curious legends. Remains of a Roman temple still exist here, besides other Roman antiquities. The Palace of Justice, which has a room much like Westminster Hall, should on no account be omitted. Notice too, the Tower of St. Porchaire; Roman Baptistery of St. John; old house known as la Prevôté; public garden of Blossac; a fine Dolmen, known as the "Pierre Levée," one mile on the road to Bourges. The English held the town for 300 years. Four miles distant from the town is shown the battle-field where the Black Prince defeated the French under John, who was taken prisoner there, 1356.

The Faculty of Droit and Medicine has a Museum, with antiquities of the Age of Stone.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 35, 38, 41, & 42.

Pont-a-Mousson.—See Rte. 30, Special Edtn.

Pontoise.—Stat.—Pop. 6,060—HOTELS:—GRAND CERF, and MESSAGERIES.

17½ miles E. from Paris. It is in general well built, but the streets are steep and narrow. From the higher part of the town there is a magnificent prospect. The remains of the ancient Castle still exist. Remark the Hospital, the fine promenade, and the church of St. Maïon—in the neighbourhood, the Chateau St. Martin. From this station to Creil the Oise is on the right of the Railway, sometimes visible, sometimes its course only indicated by the luxuriant vegetation, and the trees which skirt its banks. Supplies Paris with calves and flour.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 12, 18, 22, and 25. To Gisors, by Char and Magny

Puy, (Le)—Stat.—Pop. 17,015—HOTELS:—HOTEL DES AMBASSADEURS, good; DE L'EUROPE.

Capital of the department of the Haute Loire (formerly capital of that part of Languedoc called Le Velay), 349 miles south of Paris, 54 from St. Etienne, and 89 from Lyons. In the midst of this very curious town there arise two immense volcanic peaks—L'Aiguille (Needle), on which is the chapel of St. Michael, and Corneille, which is crowned by a cast iron statue of the Virgin and Child, made from guns taken at Sebastopol, and painted to resemble bright bronze. It is 52 feet high, and weighs about 80 tons. Inside is a spiral staircase, by means of which the visitor may sit on the top of the head of the statue. Some very steep streets lead up to the Cathedral, which, with its cloisters, its remains of a Druidical dolmen, and a Roman temple, is very interesting. The Orgues d'Espailly is a striking mass of basaltic pillars, resembling wooden organ pipes, about two miles west of the town. Polignac, a village with a ruined castle of the Polignac family, is three miles from the town.

The rail from St. Etienne for several miles as it approaches Le Puy, passes through a most picturesque gorge, flanked by volcanic rocks and mountains, and following the sinuosities of the Loire.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway see page 59. Diligences corresponding with another railway to Brioude and Clermont Ferrand.

Reims or Rheims.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 71,994.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL LION D'OR, very good Hotel, recommended to English Travellers; Mr. Disant, Proprietor. [Prices are reported as "very large." 1875.]

HOTEL DU COMMERCE; DE LA MAISON ROUGE DU PALAIS, &c.

A sous-préfecture in the department of the Marne. It presents great attractions to tourists. The Cathedral dedicated to Nôtre Dame is justly esteemed one of the most magnificent gothic buildings in France, begun in 1212. This colossal edifice was erected in the thirteenth century, and is chiefly renowned for the grandeur of its west front, the three superb portals with their richly carved canopies, the wheel windows filled with the finest stained glass, and the screen of kings surmounted by the two great front towers. In this building the kings of France were formerly crowned. The great bell weighs 23,000 lbs. The interior contains paintings of Tintoretto and Titian. The abbey church of St. Remi is a fine building in the Norman style. Reims is also remarkable for its Roman Arch, said to be larger than any at Rome. The town possesses beautiful public gardens, a fine town-hall spinning factories and champagne vaults. The King of Prussia entered the city with his forces 5th September, 1870, on his march to Paris; and it was the head-quarters of the German army of occupation.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—A. G. Gill, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see p. 12, 15, 64, 66, 67, 70.

Rennes.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 52,044—HOTELS: GRAND HOTEL.—First class hotel, recommended to English travellers. DE FRANCE; DE LA CORNE-DE-CERF; JULIEN; DU COMMERCE; PIRS; DE L'EUROPE. There is a Buffet at the Station. 220½ English miles W. of Paris.

It is the capital of the department of the Ile et Vilaine, situated at the confluence of these two rivers, the latter dividing the town into two parts, connected by bridges. The part built on the left bank is called the lower town; that on the right, called the upper town, stands on an eminence, and forms the finest and most considerable part of the city. It has several fine squares and promenades. The principal public edifices are the Cathedral, dedicated to St. Peter, with its lofty towers and its relics. Other Churches,—Sainte Melaine or Nôtre Dame (11th to 16th century), and Saint Sauveur (1730), with copies of paintings of Raphael, &c. The University, a good building, has a good collection of paintings, mineralogy, medals, &c. Observe the building, formerly the house of meeting for the Parliament of Brittany; the town-hall, and the college formerly belonging to the Jesuits; also, a public library, containing 30,000 volumes.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 28 and 30.

Riom.—Stat.—Pop. 13,000—HOTELS:—COLONNE; DU PALAIS; DE L'ECU; DE FRANCE.

A picturesquely situated town and sous-préfecture of the department of the Puy-de-Dôme. The principal objects of interest are the interesting church of St. Amable; the Palais de Justice and Ste. Chapelle; and the monument to General Desaix. The Tour de l'Horloge is interesting. The chateau of Tournoël, one mile from Volvic should be seen. The town is built of lava brought from the quarries of Volvic, a place about six miles from Riom, and well worth a visit.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 60.

Rive de Gier.—Stat.—Pop. 14,720.

A flourishing manufacturing town, situated on the Gier, and in the centre of the best coal field in France. There are large manufactories of glass, machinery, railway carriages, &c., here; also an English steel factory, and in the neighbourhood are about 50 coal mines.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 56.

Rochefort.—Stat.—Pop. (1866) 30,155.

HOTELS:—DES ETRANGERS; DU GRAND BACHA.

An important maritime town situated on the Charente, on the Bay of Biscay, in dep. Charente Inférieure. It is comparatively modern, dating only from the 17th century, and possessing little to interest the traveller beyond its dockyards and workshops, which may be seen on application to the Major de la Marine. The buildings worthy of notice are the Hôpital de la Marine, containing 1,300 beds, a library, and a museum of anatomy and natural history; the Bagne, or convict-depôt; and the library containing 10,000 volumes.

The principal article of commerce is brandy, a large quantity of which is manufactured here, and exported to England: there are also some iron and copper works, and clock factories.

AMERICAN C. AGENT.—A. Giraud, Esq.

GRAND HOTEL DE FRANCE.—Rue des Carmes. Good accommodation. Proprietor, Mr. Soulé.

ALGER; EMPEREURS: NORD; MIDI; GRAND HOTEL; NORMANDIE; PARIS.

Normandy not being a wine-growing province, all wines at the table d'hôte are charged for extra.

This fine old Gothic town, situated on the river Seine, the ancient capital of Normandy, is replete with picturesque attractions to the English tourist. Some relic of antiquity here meets the traveller at every turn, either in the form of a pointed arch, the mutilated statue of some saint, or a gothic fountain; the door-posts, window frames, beaumends, and wood-work of almost every building are chequered, intersected, and ornamented with rich carving, grotesque heads, flowers and other fanciful devices; while the mouldering magnificence of the cathedral, churches, Palais de Justice, and other public edifices, carries the traveller in imagination half-a-dozen centuries backward. The Cathedral, among the public edifices of Rouen, stands pre-eminent, and is said to have been founded as early as 260. It has a fine new iron spire. Some splendid monuments are found within its walls; and its churches are equally rich in this respect. St. Ouen is a magnificent church. The church of St. Maclou is famous for its magnificent front, the carved stone of which resembles lace. The cathedral-like church of St. Vincent should also be seen; and no one interested in architecture should fail to visit the abbey church of St. George Boscherville; though now but the parish chapel of an insignificant village, it is yet one of the finest specimens of Norman architecture in France.

Rouen has already received many so-called improvements in the shape of straight streets and high modern houses, (Paris fashion.) Joan of Arc's Statue ornaments the Market-place, in the Place de la Pucelle. The Jardin des Plantes, Rue d'Elbœuf, is well worth seeing. The Museum o Antiquities is very rich, and the house deserves s dy. Notice, also, the Tour de l'Horloge; the st..ue to Thomas Cornellle; and the Suspension Bridge. Mount St. Catharine commands a beautiful view of the city and river, it is surmounted by the beautiful modern gothic church of Nôtre Dame du Bon Secours, the interior of which is a blaze of gold and colours.

The great industry is cotton spinning, with the making up broad silks, hardware goods, earthenware, velvets, &c. Weavers of the department 150,000; 4-5ths of these are resident in Rouen.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL, H. F. Herring, Esq.

AMERICAN C. AGENT.—L. Guebert, Esq.

St. Cloud—Stat.—Pop. 4,496—with its park, and fountains which only play three or four times a year. About 6 miles from Paris.—See page 38. The Palace (still a ruin) was set fire to by the French when they held Mont Valérien, to prevent its occupation by the Germans.

St. Denis.—Stat.—Pop. 22,190.—HOTELS:—

A town four miles from Paris, of very ancient origin, celebrated for its Abbey Church, the burial place of the kings of France. During the revolution more than fifty tombs were demolished, in consequence of the decree of 1793. Napoleon I. made considerable additions to the church, and was careful to restore the injuries it had received. He intended it should be the last resting-place for his own dynasty. He founded here an institution for the gratuitous education of relatives of members of the Legion of Honour, in which 900 pupils (girls) are educated. Napoleon III. did much to restore the church.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 18, 22, 23, & 32.

Sedan.—HOTELS:—DE L'EUROPE kept by J. Jacoupy, comfortable and well situated; and CROIX D'OR: two large hotels, making up 50 beds each.

French Protestant Church, in Rue des Francs-Bourgeois, Rev. A. Goulden. Service at 10.30 a.m.

The birth-place of the celebrated French Marshals Turenne and Macdonald. A frontier town on the banks of the Meuse, in the department of the Ardennes, 170 miles N.E. of Paris. Population, (1873) 15,540. It is strongly fortified, being surrounded by walls, bastions, ditches, and other works, many of which were constructed by the celebrated Vauban. Sedan has long been celebrated for its manufacture of superfine woollen goods. This town will be famous in history, for the disastrous battle of 1st September, 1870, between the French under Napoleon III. and Marshal MacMahon, and the Germans under King William I. of Prussia; the French being completely defeated, and compelled to surrender their whole army upwards of 83,000 men—with all their war material, as prisoners to the Germans. The Emperor also surrendered himself as prisoner of war the day after, and was sent to Wilhemshöhe. His memorable interview with the King took place at M. Ameur's Château Bellevue, 3 miles west of Sedan, overlooking the Meuse and the battle field. It was visited by the Prince of Wales, and the King of Saxony, in 1871. A weaver's cottage is shown called Maison de Tisserand, or de l'Empereur, where Napoleon met Bismarck on 1st September. The French, under De Failly, had previously sustained a defeat at Beaumont. Bazeilles—about three miles from Sedan—was burnt in a fight, before the surrender at Sedan. The village contained nearly 600 houses, and 2,000 inhabitants. It also suffered from a storm, July, 1873. The work of restoration is going on, but only very slowly. Guide to the battle-field, Mr. J. Thompson.

Sens.—Stat.—Pop. 11,000—HOTELS:—HOTEL DE PARIS; DE L'ECU.

A small and lively town pleasantly situated on the Yonne. The Norman Cathedral is a magnificent structure, with an imposing façade and admirably proportioned nave. The treasures and tapestry work in the sacristy are well worth seeing. They show the Mitre and Cope of Becket, who took refuge here, 1164. A small Norman church near the bridge deserving of notice, from the singularity of of its details. The building to the right of the cathedral façade is an elegant specimen of Gothic architecture, the geometrical tracery in the windows being exceedingly beautiful.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 48 and 62.

Sixt.—HOTEL DU FER A CHEVAL.

In Savoy, in a valley combining all the attractions of the sublime and the beautiful, inhabited, and graphically described by M. H. Wills, whose book, the "Eagle's Nest," is the best guide to the locality. It is only separated from Chamounix by the Aiguilles Rouges, from Champery and the Canton of Valais by the ridge of Dent du Midi, offering splendid passes, little frequented, and from the lake of Geneva by the Dent d'Oche chain. Sixt is an excellent centre for countless excursions amidst waterfalls, pine forests and peaks, offering the additional attractions of many botanical and fossil treasures.

PRINCIPAL POINTS TO VISIT:—The Gouffre des Tines, and the fall of the Giant Dent, falling a height of 650 feet from Mont Anbené.

Soissons.—Stat.—Population (1873) 8,890. HOTEL:—CROIX D'OR.

A small fortified town, pleasantly situated on the river Aisne. It capitulated to the German forces, 16th October, 1870, with 4000 men, after four days bombardment. The Cathedral is a splendid edifice, possessing a fine interior. All that remains of the once magnificent Church of St. Jean is the west front, a vast and imposing mass. About two miles off is the Abbey of St. Médard, now a Deaf and Dumb Asylum, with the tomb of Clotaire, and a church of the sixth century.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 15.

Toulon, 564 English miles from Paris, and 30 from Marseilles, is an important naval station in the south-east of France, department of Var, in a beautiful bay of the Mediterranean. It is built at the foot of a ridge of lofty hills, called Pharon or Faron, which shelter it from the north; and is surrounded with ramparts, ditches, and bastions, and defended by a fine citadel, and a number of forts and batteries, one of them, La Malgue (where Abd-el-Kader was kept prisoner), has a particularly fine view.

The town is divided into two parts,—Old and New. The former is ill built, and full of quaint narrow streets; the latter contains the public structures erected by Louis XIV., and several squares or places—as Champ de Bataille, Puget, and S. Pierre. The principal public buildings are the Town-hall, the Hotel del'Intendance, St. Stephen's Cathedral which has a good interior; the Civil and Naval Hospitals, a handsome theatre and a Jardin des Plantes, where palms grow out of doors. It has a large Arsenal, with basins for 200 sail of the-line and inner and outer ports, sheltered on all sides and protected by batteries. The Bagne for convicts has been removed since 1872. No one should omit ascending the Tower of Mourillon. Permission to view the Dockyard must be procured (with passport or card) between 10 and 11, of the Major-General de la Marine. Here are docks for ship-building, storehouses for timber, factories for canvas, cordage, anchors, &c. Boats to St. Mandrier and its naval hospital, La Seyne, and Tamaris Within a short distance are La Valette, St. Marguerite, Cape Brun, La Garie Château, the fine Gorge of Ollioulles, Hyères, &c.

Chief city of the Haute Garonne, on the Canal du Midi and the Garonne, here crossed by a fine bridge. It is the Roman Tolosa which became a capital of the Visigoths, and was taken by the Saracens, 721. It is large and well-built, containing fine streets and squares: remains of old turreted walls; a Cathedral, and 10 Churches, the best of which is St. Servan; a government arsenal, and tobacco factory, a University, Academy of Floral games, (so called from the Troubadours); a well-stocked Museum; and part of the ancient Capitol or Capoul at the Hotel de Ville. At the Cemetery are graves of the English who fell on 10th April, 1814, the last fought battle before the peace. Cheap fruit, vegetables, wines, ortolans, and truffles, &c. Enormous damage was done here by the great floods of June 1875; many hundred houses and 3 bridges (including the suspension bridge) at St. Cyprian were swept away; and up and down the river hundreds of lives were lost and some millions worth of property destroyed.

Trouville-sur-Mer.—Stat.—Pop. 4,163.

HOTELS:—GRAND HOTEL DES ROCHES NOIRES.—First class hotel, commanding a fine view of the sea. DE PARIS; DE LA PLAGE; BELLE VUE; and DU BRAS D'OR.

Situated on the coast of Calvados, on the north of the small river Touques. It is about 10 miles from Havre, with which place daily communication is kept up by steamers. Trouville has been rapidly increasing in reputation for several years past, and is admirably adapted for sea-bathing, the shore being sand, without shingle, extending for miles on each side the town. Many of the villas are tasteful and elegant, and the scenery in the neighbourhood is very pretty and English. Chalet Cordier, on Hennequeville Hill, was formerly the summer residence of M. Thiers; Houlgate is still that of Q. Isabella. Here Louis Philippe embarked, 1849, in his flight to England; and the Empress Eugénie in 1870.

Visitors are cautioned against the exorbitant charges.

There are in the vicinity two other sea-bathing places deserving of notice, viz., Villers-sur Mer which is the summer residence of the Orleans family; and Houlgate or Beuzeval; excellent accommodation for visitors at both places. Cabourg is a third place of resort, nearest to Caen.

Deauville, is opposite Trouville, as above. Pop. 1,250. HOTELS:—Du Casino, Grand Hotel, del'Europe, on the sea.

Deauville, on the river Touques has become an important French watering places, owing to the exertions of the late Duke de Morny, and of Sir J. Olliffe, Physician to the British Embassy in Paris. It has a handsome Casino, and an Esplanade two or three miles long, with extensive sands, affording good bathing ground. The Deauville Land Society have constructed, at their own expense, a handsome Church in which English and French Protestant services are held twice every Sunday, and which is resorted to by the inhabitants of Trouville as well. Chaplain supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 27.

Steamer to Havre daily, see alphabetical list.

Troyes.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 48,113. HOTELS: DU GRAND MULET; DU COMMERCE; DES COURRIERS; DE FRANCE; DE PARIS; DU CHAR D'OR.

103½ English miles from Paris 152½ from Besançon, and 70 from Reims. Troyes is a large town in Champagne, the capital of the department of the Aube, situated between two fine meadows on the Seine. Its streets of wooden houses are very picturesque. It has considerable manufactures, particularly in cotton and cotton stockings. Woollen, linen, leather, and thread, are all made here, but on a smaller scale. Its chief edifices are in particular the Cathedral, and the churches of St. Etienne and St. Urban. A public mall, or walk, extends along the ramparts, and is of great length. Troy weight takes its name from this town.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 62, 68, and 73.

Uriage.—7½ miles from Grenoble.—HOTELS: DU CERCLE; DES BAINS; DU NORD; DU MIDI. RESTAURANTS:—ROBIN; MONNIER; CARTIER. Pop. 2234; Heights 414 mètres, in the vale of Sonnant. Chlorine, sodic, and sulphurous water. Bathing Establishment, Douches, &c. Gallo Roman remains, Aqueduct, Piscina, &c. Refreshments and if required shelter for the night, chez la garde. Ascent of Chamrousse (4 hours), panoramic view. On the top a cross of 11 mètres in height. At hand are the Cascade de l'Oursiere formed by the Domenon from the Glacier of Belledonne.

Valence.—See Route 27, Special Edition.

Valenciennes—Stat.—Pop. 25,000. HOTELS: DU COMMERCE; DES PRINCES; DU MOUTON BLANC; DE MOULIN; DE BRUSSELS; DES FLANDRE.

Conveyances at the Station, a quarter of a mile distant from the town; there is a good Buffet here.

A place of considerable trade and wealth; also strongly fortified by its position on the Scheldt, at its confluence with the Rhendelle, by which it may be surrounded for three-fourths of its circumference by water, retained by means of sluices in the fortifications. The town is well built; the houses are generally of brick and white stone. The Hotel de Ville, in the Gothic style, is highly decorated; the handsome façade, surmounted by an attic, adorned with Caristide figures, representing the four seasons. The Hospital and the Theatre are also remarkable. Many agreeable promenades will be found—the Cours-Bourbon, the Place-Verte, &c. From the Citadel the valley of the Scheldt is seen to advantage. Froissart, the historian of the 14th century, was born here.

The mining territory known as the Bassin de Valenciennes covers 145,000 acres, and furnishes three quarters of the coal obtained in France. The yield in 1863 was 3,000,000 tons. At the end of 1864 there were in the district 65 coal mines, employing 16,500 hands.

Next to coal mining stands the beet-root sugar manufacture. Valenciennes is also noted for its lace, fine cambric, linseed oil, cotton yarn, and hosiery.

Railway, see pages 14, 15, 17, and 84.

Verdun.—Stat.—Pop. 12,410.—HOTELS:—DE L'EUROPE; DES TROIS MAURES.

This is one of Vauban's fortified towns, on the river Meuse, at the end of the Rheims and Verdun Railway; noted as a place for English prisoners in the Revolutionary war, which ended 1814. It surrendered to the Germans, 9th November, 1870, with 4000 prisoners and 160 guns.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 67 and 70.

Vernon.—See Route 25, Special Edition.

HOTEL DU LION D'OR.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 24 and 21.

Versailles.—Stat.—Pop. (1872) 61,686.

HOTEL VATEL & GRAND H. DES RESERVOIRS.—Restaurants in Rue des Reservoirs.

The Restaurants opposite the Station are inferior and the charges high. Better accommodation in the town.

Reached by Railways from Paris on both sides of the Seine in half an hour. Statue of Gen. Hoche. It would require many pages to describe the beauties of the Palace here, with its pleasure-grounds, galleries, and noble saloons; containing the Historical Museum, or collection of paintings, representing the wars of France, from the earliest period to the present time; ending with Versailles having became the head-quarters of the King of Prussia, 5th Feb., 1871; who was here proclaimed German Emperor, 18th February, 1871. The National Assembly removed from Bordeaux to the theatre here, after the insurrection of the Commune at Paris, March 18th, 1870. The floors throughout are full with statuary. It takes four hours merely to wander through the various apartments and gardens. The principal masters who have contributed to its adornment are Horace Vernet, Paul Delaroche, and Johannot. Here are the Cabinet of Natural history, the Opera Saloon, the Chapel, the Park, with its statues, fountains, and cascades, as planned by Louis XIV., and the two Trianons. The Hall of the Jeu de Paume or Tennis Court, the scene of the first decided act of the French Revolution is also interesting.—A Catalogue may be bought in the Palace.—The Palace is open to the public every day, except Mondays, from 11 till 5. The Water Works play once or twice a month from May to October.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND—Service on Sundays at the English Chapel, 11 bis, Rue des Bons Enfans, at 11.30a.m. and 4.30 p.m., Rev. E. Luxley, Chaplain. The Municipality have undertaken to restore it at the expense of the town.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 28, 30, and 32. All baggage is examined by the officers of the Octroi.

Tram Railway to Paris about every hour, via Sevres and the Champ Elysées. The fare is high. The new Experimental Camp is at Satory.

Vichy.—Stat.—Pop. 5,750.—HOTELS:—GERMOT GRAND HOTEL DU PARC, opposite the baths and the park; comfortable and elegant.

GRAND HOTEL DES PRINCES, Favies-Maud, Proprietor; recommended to English travellers; very well situated.

GRAND HOTEL DES AMBASSADEURS, first-rate hotel, well situated. Recommended to English travellers.

GRAND HOTEL DE CHERBOURG, well situated, first class hotel.—See Advertisement.

HOTELS:—DE SUEDE; DE RICHELIEU; DU LOUVRE; DU RHONE; DU CENTRE; BONNET; DE LA PAIX.

The prices of the hotels in Vichy are from 10 to 12 frs. per day. Dinner at the table d'hôte and breakfast, at the second-rate hotels, 8 to 10 frs per day. Cabs with 1 horse 2 fr. the hour, 2 hours 3 fr.

Vichy is in the department of the Allier. 256 miles south-east of Paris, upon the banks of the Allier, about forty miles south of Moulins, in a beautiful valley enclosed in an amphitheatre of hills, covered with a profusion of fruit trees and vineyards. It is the most frequented watering-place in France, and contains seven springs, which all belong to the thermal Establishment, except the Puits Lardy, which is private property. The roads in the vicinity of the town are good, and very fine views may be obtained. Strangers will find every convenience in the town. The bathing season begins on the 1st of May, and ends on the 15th of October. Vichy is divided into the old and the new towns, Vichy la Ville and Vichy les Bains. The old town is picturesque, with its broken walls and its ancient tower; and it is evident from the Roman road, "the Jews' town," and other remains of olden times, that Vichy la Ville was once much more populous than it is now, and possibly ranked amongst the foremost of the aquæ calidæ of the Romans.

A very large number of English and Americans resort here in the season, and many wonderful cures of gout and rheumatism are reported.

The principal hotels are around and near to the Old Park, at one end of which is the thermal establishment, and at the other the handsome new casino. A first class band plays in a kiosk near the casino, morning and afternoon.

Two bathing establishments, with 440 bath rooms, 56 douches. Waters 110° Fahr. Bicarbonate of soda, useful in diseases of the liver and stomach

RESORTS.—The Casino, Le Parc, Le Parc Anglais.

EXCURSIONS.—Cusset, 2½ miles; old town with houses of the 15th century, 3 miles; Montagne Verte, Restaurant, fine view; Côte Saine Amand (435 mètres), fine view, 2½ miles; La Montagne Verte, beautiful views, 2½ miles; L'Ardoisiere, valley and river, 5 miles; Chateau Bourbon Basset, 3 miles; Forest of Montpensier, and Chateau Randan, 8½ miles; Chateldon, very picturesque, 13½ miles; Clermont, and the Peak of the Puy de Dome, magnificent mountain scenery, 25 miles—can be reached by rail.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE in the new "Temple Protestant," in the Place du Marché. Chaplain appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

A good supply of carriages, saddle horses, and donkeys. Good fishing in the Allier.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway by St. Germain des Fosses to Paris, Orleans, Tours, Lyons, Geneva, &c. See page 60.

Vienne.—Stat.—Pop. 20,000.—HOTELS:—DU NORD; DE LA TABLE RONDE.

A sous préfecture of dep. Isère, the Roman Vienna, and one of the earliest seats of Christianity in France, standing under the cliff of the Rhône, at the influx of the Gère, which supplies the motive power to a number of cloth mills, paper mills, and iron works. A suspension bridge to St. Colombe. The principal objects of attraction are the Museum, which was a temple dedicated to Augustus, and contains Roman inscriptions, marbles, fragments of columns, capitals, &c.; the ancient portico called the Arc de Triomphe, once part of the Forum; the cathedral of St. Maurice; the tower of St. André le Bas; and outside the town the Aiguille, a sort of Roman obelisk. From the Tour de Mauconseil, Pontius Pilate, who was banished here, is said to have thrown himself, A.D. 38. In the neighbourhood are lead mines, and Ampuis, where the Côte Rotie wine is produced. Mont Pilas, in view, is 4516 feet above sea.

Vitré.—Stat.—Pop. 8,900.—HOTEL:—POSTE.

A curious old walled town in a picturesque part of Vilaine, at the junction of the Fougères branch with the main Western line. It has an ancient church, convent, and ruined castle of the Tremouille family. Savary, author of Letters on Egypt, was born here. Mad. de Sévigné's seat is at Rochers, 1½ mile south.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 28 and 29, to Fougères—the latter through fine scenery.

Viziers.—See Route 29, Special Edition.

BELGIUM.

For a more detailed description of Belgium and the Rhine, see BRADSHAW'S ILLUSTRATED HANDBOOK OF BELGIUM AND THE RHINE, with Plans of the Towns, and Panorama Map of the Rhine, the Sambre, Meuse, &c.—Price Five Shillings.

BELGIUM is situated between 49°27′ and 51°31′ north latitude, and 2°37′ and 6°0 east longitude. Its greatest length from N.W. to S.E. is about 175 English miles, and its greatest breadth from N.E. to S.W. about 127 English miles. Its superficial area is about 7,279,448 English acres, or 11,375 square miles. The general aspect of Belgium is level, indeed it contains no ridge that could be properly called a mountain. The southern portion, however, is high, very picturesque and romantic, like a little Switzerland, but towards the north it sinks into a flat plain. The country in the northern provinces, along the rivers and estuaries is, like that of Holland, protected from inundation by dykes; and along the open sea by sand hills or downs, which vary in breadth from one to three miles, rise to a height of fifty or sixty feet, and are in most cases thickly covered with pine trees. The sea itself, to a great distance from the shore, is filled along the whole coast with sand banks, which render the navigation very intricate, and very dangerous to large vessels.

In climate the Belgian provinces differ much: for whilst in Luxembourg the climate is temperate, in Liegeit is somewhat hasty. In Namur the air is sharp and agreeable, and in Hainault the climate is mild and temperate. East and West Flanders enjoy a moist climate. The summer here is not too warm, and the winter not very cold. In fact Belgium deserves, in every respect, the flattering denomination of "JARDIN DE L'EUROPE," which it first received from its late King, Leopold I, and it has often been said and repeated, by the most eminent travellers, that no tour on the Continent can be considered complete, without a visit to this admired country, and a sojourn of a few days in Brussels, its beautiful capital.

Population—5,916,360; of two distinct stocks—the Germanic and the Celtic. To the former belong the proper Belgians or Netherlanders, who formerly spoke only the Flemish tongue, and a small number of German-Dutch—mostly in Limburg and Luxembourg. To the latter, the Walloons, who inhabit the southern portion of the country who spoke the French-Flemish or the Walloon—two dialects of the French language, which has now become the language of the country.

Commerce, Trade—Productive industry has long characterised the Belgians, the principal productions of which are Brussels, Mechlin, Bruges, Ghent, and St. Trona laces, the cloths of Flanders, Brabant, and Hainault, the printed cottons of Ghent, Brussels, and other places, the bleaching establishments of Courtray, which rival those of Haarlem, the carpets of Tournay, the papers of Liége, with its military arms and cutlery. The industry of the Flemings has within two hundred years converted a tract of land, once a sandy and barren heath, into a beautiful garden; and the produce of its wheat is often not less than sixteen to one, and oats ten to one; whilst scarcely in any part of Britain does wheat give more than eight to ten for one. East and West Flanders alone produce annually flax to the amount of £1,600,000. The coal mines of Hainault produce more than those of the whole of France; and the annual quantity raised in Belgium is 2,000,000 chaldrons. More than 150,000 tons of iron are annually founded. The cotton manufactures, have improved steadily since 1830, and now represent a capital of £3,000,000 sterling. Principal exports are corn, bran, coal, oil, lace, woollen and cotton cloths, linen, canvas, arms, cutlery, and ironmongery. The Exports and Imports to and from England, (1873) were 13 millions and 14½ millions respectively.

Revenue, Government.—The Revenue (1873) is 8½ millions sterling. Debt 33½ millions

The Administrative divisions of Belgium consist of nine Provinces, subdivided into arrondissements, communes, and cantons. The States composing Belgium belonged to Austria, till 1795, when France annexed them to Holland. Upon the revolution of 1830, and the separation from Holland, Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, uncle to Queen Victoria, became Leopold I, King of the Belgians in June 1831; succeeded in 1865 by his son Leopold II, the reigning king. He was born 1835, and has two daughters. A son died 1869; and the king's brother, the Count of Flanders, is the present heir apparent.

Hotels.—The hotels are remarkable for cleanliness, the service is well attended to, and the charges no higher than in any other Capital on the Continent. Belgium not being a wine country, the wines are not as cheap as in France, and at the table d'hôte are paid for extra Churches.—Some of the grandest are found in small towns too seldom visited. The following list will assist the traveller. They are given in their order of merit:—Tournai, Brussels (St. Gudule) Antwerp, Mons, Ypres, Malines, Liége (St. Paul), Lierre, Louvain (St. Pierre), Ghent (St. Bevon), Bruges, Hal, Herenthal, Alost, Tongres, Diest, Furnes, Dixmude, &c. NOTE.—Churches are nearly always closed from 12 to 3.

Town-Halls.—The following are those remarkable for their beauty and proportions:—Brussels, Louvain, Ypres, Ghent, Bruges, Oudenarde, Antwerp. Courtrai, and Mons.

Railways.—The railway system was adopted 1834, and at present there is not one town or village of any importance without railway communication. The fares are nearly the same as in other countries. Return Tickets at a fare and three fifths are issued for a great many places, at all Stations to all classes; the Express fare is 25 per cent. higher than the ordinary fare.

Postage.—10c. per Inland letter; and 25c. to England, France, Switzerland, &c. England to Belgium, 2½d. under ½ oz.

Money.—100 centimes = 1 franc = 9½d. GOLD COINS.—Pieces of 20, 10, and 5 francs, worth respectively 15s. 10d.; 7s. 11d.; 3s. 10½d. SILVER COINS.—Pieces of 5, 2, 1 franc and 50 centimes, worth respectively 3s. 10½d.; 1s. 7d.; 9½d.; 4¾d. COPPER COINS.—Pieces of 1 and 2 centimes. NICKEL COINS. Pieces of 20. 10, and 5 centimes. English Sovereigns are convertible into francs throughout Belgium, at the rate of exchange of the day. The Sovereign, or Pound Sterling, is always worth its par value of 25 francs, and sometimes from 10 to 20 centimes more.—From The Money, Weights, and Measures of all Nations, by W. A. Browne, LL.D. London: Stanford.

Electric Telegraph.—First opened 15th March, 1851. The lines are in connexion with the Submarine Telegraph. Fares, 50c. (5d.) for a message of 20 words to any station in Belgium.

Routes from London to Belgium, 1.—By South Eastern Railway from Cannon Street and Charing Cross Stations to Dover, at 7.40 morn. and 8.45 night. By London, Chatham, and Dover Railway from Victoria and Ludgate Hill Stations at 7.40 morn. and 8.35 night. Steamers leave Dover for Calais and trains leave Calais for Brussels, vid Lille, and thence by the newly opened short line to Tournay, Hal, &c. Brussels at 6.10 morning and 5.15 evening at the South Station.—See page 80.

2.—By the above Trains from London to Dover, and thence by Mail Steamer for Ostend, 9.35 morn, and 10.45 night daily. Trains leave Ostend for Brussels at 4.10, 6.45, and 12.0 morn., and at 3.5, and 6.40 afternoon. For further particulars, see advertisement, pages 702 and 703.

3.—To Antwerp by the Great Eastern Railway from Bishopsgate Station, vid Harwich, every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at 7.0 p.m.

4.—By Steam to Ostend every Tuesday and Friday, direct from St. Katherine's Wharf. See Alphabetical list. The "Holland" and "Belgium" are good ships, and perform the passage in ten hour.

5.—By Steam to Antwerp, direct from St. Katherine's Wharf. See list of Steamers. The packet on this station are now of a very superior description. The General Steam Navigation Company's steamers "Dolphin," "Orion," and "Earl of Aberdeen" are superior first-class ships. The Belgian Company's ship "Baron Osy," is also a very fine vessel. They perform the passage in about 17 hours, and reach Antwerp on the day after leaving London, in ample time to enable the passengers to proceed, if they wish, by the first or second train to Brussels. But few persons do this, as the "glorious works of art" in Antwerp are objects of too much interest to be passed unvisited. Railway to Brussels, page 83

6.—By Steam to Calais, direct, from London Bridge Wharf. See list of steamers.

7.—By the Screw Steam Shipping Co's Steamers from off Irongate Wharf to Dunkirk, thence by Rail to any part of Belgium.

Grimsby to Antwerp, by the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company's first-class Steamers, every Wednesday and Saturday. Average passage, 20 hours. See advertisement, page 715.

8.—Hull to Antwerp, by Brownlow, Lumsden, & Co.'s Steamers. See advertisement, p. 704, and 705.

ROUTE 1.

In order to assist travellers in their Belgian tour, the places are arranged as they come, the principal railway routes; including some places deserving of notice, which, though not on the direct route, yet admit of a short visit by a little delay.

London to Brussels, Cologne, &c., via Dover and Calais.

Travellers should take their tickets from London to Brussels only, in the first instance, and thence choose new and cheap routes to the Rhine, baths of Germany and Switzerland.

Tourists will necessarily choose their own route from London to Dover by the South Eastern Railway from London Bridge or Charing Cross, or by the London and Chatham from Victoria Station or Ludgate Hill, for the choice of which we can only advise them to consult the respective advertisements of the two companies, pages 697 and 700, to ascertain which offers the best accommodation in the shape of corresponding trains to convey them with the greatest comfort and celerity, and at the most suitable hours, from London to Brussels, either by Express Mail trains at night, or the trains leaving in the morning and reaching Brussels the same evening.

The Trains by both routes from London to Dover pass through some of the finest scenery in Kent, and reach Dover in about the same time, proceeding on their arrival direct to the pier in front of the steamers, on board of which passengers and luggage are embarked immediately, and which start forthwith, "wind and weather permitting," for Calais. The passage across is but of short duration, ninety minutes from harbour to harbour. All is changed for the better, though at times too much authority breaks forth from the functionaries on entering the frontiers of "la belle France."

Following the crowd of fellow passengers you enter the room, in the station, where your baggage has been brought from the steamer. If you have a through ticket for Brussels, and have registered your baggage, it is forwarded without examination from Calais to Blandain, the frontier station between Lille and Tournai, but it is advisable to have an eye upon it now and then to see it is travelling by the same train as yourself.

Time is generally allowed to take some refreshment at the excellent buffet in the station, and then passengers hasten to take their seats, and rest quietly while the train carries them up to Lille.

The opening of the new line from Lille to Brussels direct, by Tournay, Ath, Enghien, and Hal, is a great advantage to English travellers. The distance is considerably reduced; it avoids the long detour via Ghent, and passes over a really very pretty country. Without changing carriages at Lille, passengers for Brussels proceed by train at 2.25 p.m. to Tournay.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 31,003.

HOTELS:—DE L'IMPERATRICE; DU SINGE D'OR.

A fortified town in Hainault, containing the most ancient Cathedral in the country, a colossal edifice, with several celebrated pictures by Rubens, and some marble groupings by Dufresnoy. The Gothic choir is very lofty and magnificent, and constructed of grey stone which harmonizes well with the rich stained glass; the nave is Norman with a double triforium; the transepts are speed and of striking grandeur; the exterior, with its five Towers, is most imposing. There are interesting specimens of domestic architecture, &c., and a Museum in the fine Town Hall. In the Grande Place is a statue erected, 1863, to Lalaing who defended the town against Farnese, 1568.

Ath.—Stat.—Pop. 8,135.—HOTELS:—DU CYGNE; DU PAON.

A small strongly fortified town, situated on the Dendre, which here becomes navigable. Extensive trade in flax, hemp, and hops. Train leaves at 4.22, passing Enghien.—Stat.—Pop. 3,000.

A pretty little town, remarkable for the beauty of the park and gardens attached to the castle, which belongs to the Prince of Aremberg. Extensive manufactures of cloth; numerous tan-yards and bleaching-grounds.

Hal.—Stat.—Pop. 7,815.—HOTELS:—DES PAYS BAS; DUC DE BRABANT. A small but pretty village built partly on the Senne, and partly on the canal Charleroi. It has no objects of particular interest, save the Church of St. Mary, celebrated as possessing a miracle-working image of the Virgin. It is of wood, 2 feet high, and has acquired immense wealth by pious offerings, including gold plate given by Charles V., Maximilian I., Pope Julius II., &c. It has a beautiful high altar and font of brass.

The train then passes several villages, and, traversing the meadow-land along the banks of the Senne, reaches the South Station of Brussels (at 5.15 p.m.), where the baggage of passengers from London to Calais is slightly examined, and where omnibuses and cabs are in waiting to convey passengers to the various Hotels. Fare by omnibus, 7d., including luggage.

The two-horse cabs are the best; but if travellers be not on their guard, the drivers will take them to inferior hotels, to save themselves the trouble of conveying them to the hotels on the Place Royale. Omnibuses are generally preferable, as the conductors are trustworthy; but even with them it is necessary for the traveller to be particular in compelling them to drive direct to the hotel he has selected. Travellers should also avoid being misled by touters and porters at the stations, who are interested in recommending hotels unfit for English visitors.

Haerlebeke.—Olsene.—Nazareth.—(BRANCH LINE.)

Audenarde.—Stat.—HOTELS:—DE LA POMME D'OR; DU LION D'OR.—A very picturesque and quiet town, the same as Oudenarde, where Marlborough defeated the French, 7th July 1[illegible]

Pop. 6,265. It possesses a magnificent Gothic Town-hall and two churches; the former is well worth seeing. The railway from Ghent, via Nazareth and Audenarde, to Mons, passes through a pretty and most fertile country.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pp. 78, 86, 98, and 100.

GHENT, ENG. Gaunt; FR. Gand.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 121,470—(Map in Special Edition.)

HOTELS.—Hints.—Travellers should proceed direct to the hotel they have selected in a Cab, as the Omnibuses charge as much, and make so many stoppages, that the best accommodation is generally engaged before passengers by these vehicles reach the hotel. It is advisable to take a Cab on leaving.

HOTEL ROYAL, Place d'Armes, in the centre of this town, and nearest to the railway station, a first-class Hotel—highly recommended to English travellers, andlord, MR. MARIT.

HOTEL DE LA POSTE, Place d'Armes—This old established first-rate Hotel is conducted by Mr. A. Van de Putte, and is highly recommended.

HOTEL DE VIENNE, nearest hotel to the churches St. Bavon, St. Nichol, and St. Michael. A. Rossmann, proprietor.

DU COMTE D'EGMONT; D'ALLEMAGNE; DU DUC DE WELLINGTON; DE COURTRAI.

There is a Buffet at the station, which is within the town. Cabs are always in attendance.

Vigilantes—The course, 1 fr.; 1 hour, 1 fr. 50 c. following hours, 1 fr.

Distance from Bruges, 28 miles. The station of the direct railway to Antwerp is at the Porte d'Anvers. This direct line runs through the Pays de Waes, the most densely populated district in Belgium; it passes the important town of Lokeren. Here John of "Gaunt," son of Edward III., and father of Henry IV., was born 1340; his mother being Philippa of Hainault.

The streets and public squares of Ghent are wide and spacious; it has more the appearance of a modern city than Bruges, and elegant equipages enliven its busy thoroughfares. The Town-hall offers an exquisite specimen of florid gothic architecture in the right wing and corner; the other side is not so good. A bust of Philip van Artevelde, the famous Captain General, is to be seen here. The oldest and one of the finest churches is that of St. Nicholas. The curious will be interested by visiting the site of the houses of Van Artevelde and Count Egmont; also the Gilded Dragon, brought by Van Artevelde from Bruges, now on the belfry.

The Cathedral of St. Bavon is not remarkable for external beauty, but the interior presents a singular appearance, from its being lined with black marble, and from its having 24 Chapels containing ornaments and paintings of great value. It would occupy too much space to describe each oratory; but we would direct attention to the eleventh, which is embellished by one of the most remarkable works of the early Flemish school. A painting, representing "The Adoration of the Lamb," by the brothers Van Eyck, is considered an extraordinary chef d'œuvre. The colouring is as fresh and as pure as the first day it left the hands of the painters. The composition combines the breadth and power of the Flemish school, with the grace and delicacy of the Italian. No person should quit this chapel without having the details of the picture described to him. In another part of the church (in chapel fourteenth) there is a painting by Rubens equally admired. It is a picture representing a religious ceremony—St. Bavon renouncing the military profession to become a monk. Sir Joshua Reynolds says of this painting, that "for composition, colouring, richness of effect, and all those qualities in which Rubens more particularly excelled, it claims a rank among his greatest and best works." The wood carvings of the pulpit and other carvings are very remarkable.

The pictures in the church of St. Michael have been shamefully treated by the vandalism of ruthless depredators and modern restorers or picture cleaners. The once beautiful work representing the Crucifixion, by Van Dyck, is so disfigured as not to be worth examination. The museum of Ghent is by no means worthy of such a city; but the florist will be much gratified by a visit to the Botanical gardens, which contain some of the choicest exotics and rarest plants acclimatized in Europe. The Town library (70,000 vols.) is rich in valuable MSS., and has a folio Latin bible (of 1466 to 1470), the bible of Mayence, 1472, &c. The Palace of the University is remarkable, and the Museum and Academy of paintings contain some good pictures. The Great Theatre has a fine façade. The Beguignage contains one of the finest pictures by Raphael in Belgium, the subject is the head of our Saviour. It is a convent, but the inmates may leave when they like, may get married and even return in widowhood. The theatre and public ball and concert rooms, close to the Hotel de la Poste, are worthy of a visit; as also the ruins of the Monastery of St. Bavon, near the Porte d'Anvers, about ten minutes walk from the Church of St. Jaques, (1 franc. for a party.) At the Casino the English Volunteers were received at the International Tir of 1872. The Marché au Vendredi and the Qual au Blé, with the quaint old Spanish houses, should be seen.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine, see first Time Tables of Belgian Railways.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SERVICE.—On Sundays, alternately, at 10.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m., at the Chapel in the Rue Digue du Brabant, near the railway station. Holy Communion, second Sunday

AMERICAN CONSUL.—W. Brisbane, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 14, 78, 84, 82, 86, 90, 92, 93, 97, 98, 100, and 101.

YPRES TO BRUSSELS, viâ COURTRAI, TOURNAY, ATH, AND JURBISE.

Ypres.—Stat.—A very interesting fortified town. Pop. 17,000. The Cathedral is one of the finest in Belgium, and the famous Cloth Hall (now the Town Hall, restored 1860) is equalled by none in Europe. No one should omit to visit Ypres. Here diaper (d' Ypres) linen was first made.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 92, 94, 96, 99 and 100.

Comines, Wervicq, Menin.—Small and picturesque towns, the first of which gave birth to Philip de Comines, the historian.

Courtral, or Courtray.—Stat.—Hotel du Lion d'Or.—A very clean and lively town. Pop. 23,510. The Town hall possesses a magnificent Gothic chimney-piece, a splendid work of art.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 78, 80, 87, 92, 93, 94, 96 and 100.

Tournay.—Hotels:—Du Singe d'Or; De Belle Vue; De l'Imperatrice.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 80, 86, 97, and 100.

Braine-le-Comte.—Stat.—Pop. 6,220.

This town was formerly in the department of Jemappe, and derived its name from the celebrated Brennus, in the time of Julius Cæsar, who built the town, and strongly fortified it with a castle, &c. Both castle and town, however, were destroyed by the Spaniards about the year 1677. The district around furnishes some of the finest flax in the world. A few miles to the north-west is Steenkerke, remarkable as being the spot where the Duke of Luxembourg defeated William III., in 1692, with a loss of 7000 men. From here a railway branches off to Charleroi and Namur.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 14, 78, 84, 90, 100, 101 and 102.

Route from Ghent via Alost to Brussels.

Melle, Wetteren, Schellebelle, Lede. See page 78.

Alost.—Stat.—Pop. 20,000. Hotels:—Pays Bas; Des Trois Rois.

On the river Dendre, the chief town of the district of East Flanders, is said to owe its origin to a fortress built by the Goths in 111. It was formerly the capital of what was called Imperial Flanders, and was reduced to ashes by a conflagration in 1360; in 1667 the celebrated Marshal Turenne took and dismantled it. The Town hall is a fine gothic edifice, built in 1210, and is in excellent preservation. The collegiate church of St. Martin was built by the same architect as the cathedral of Amiens, and contains a fine picture by Rubens, representing the "Plague of Alost." Linen, soap, and thread-lace, are the chief manufactures. Great Hop Market. Railway, see pages 78, 82.

Route from Ghent via Termonde and Malines to Brussels.

Melle. Wetteren.

Termonde (or Dendermonde)—Stat.—Pop. 8,640.—Hotels:—Aigle; De la Demi-lune.

Buggenhout.—Malderen.—Londerzeel.—Capelle.

Malines, or Mechlin.—Stat.—Pop. (1860) 36,090.

Hotels.—The Hotel de la Grue; Hotel la Coupe. Good buffet at the Station.

A large town, in the province of Antwerp, divided by the Dyle into two parts. It is equidistant from Brussels, Antwerp, and Louvain. The Malines station is about five minutes' walk from the town, which is one of the most picturesque Flemish cities. An obelisk is here erected, to mark the point where the various Belgic lines of railway diverge.

The entrance from the railway station is very fine. The streets are broad, and bordered in many places by good buildings. The public square and the market-place are spacious, and regularly built. The Cathedral has a tower 350 feet high, of massive Gothic construction. Although unfinished, it is worthy of attention, especially the interior, which is elegant. The other buildings of interest are the arsenal, the town-house, a Franciscan monastery and an asylum for 800 widows and elderly women. The town also contains many curious old buildings. It has manufactures of fine Brabant lace and linen, damask silk, and woollen stuffs, besides a thread lace, known and celebrated as the Mechlin lace.

Works of Art in the Churches at Malines.—The Church of St. Rumbold—in the chapel on the left there is a fine painting, "Christ crucified between the Two Thieves," by Van Dyck. The Church of Notre Dame contains a picture by Rubens, "The Miraculous Draught of Fishes." The Church of St. John possesses several of Rubens' finest paintings, "The Worshipping of the Magi," two painted shutters, and three other small pictures. The receipt is shown in the vestry, dated March 12 1624, stating that Rubens painted these eight paintings in 18 days, and received 1800 florins.

Conveyances.—Railway, to Cologne and the Rhine to Ostend and Ghent to Brussels, 82, and 86. [Travellers from Ghent or Ostend change carriages here, if proceeding to Antwerp or Cologne.]

Continuing his journey towards Brussels, the traveller next arrives at Vilvorde.—Stat.—Pop. 5,200. A small town, situated between Malines and Brussels where Tindal translated the Bible. The great Penitentiary is in the suburbs.

BRUSSELS.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 171,380, or 314,080, including the surrounding Communes.—(Map in Special Edition.)

BRITISH MINISTER—His Excellency J. S. Lumley.

VICE-CONSUL.—T. Malfby, Esq.

AMERICAN MINISTER.—His Excellency R. Jones.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—J. Wilson, Esq.

This, the capital of the kingdom and seat of Government, is 88 miles from Ostend, 27½ from Antwerp, 48 from Ghent, 71½ from Liége, 92½ from Lille, 149½ from Cologne, and 215 from Paris.

Brussels is a favourite place of resort in summer (en route to and from the Rhine), and of residence in winter with the English; Hotel accommodation and entertainment is very good, and families or travellers can always obtain apartments at as economical rates as in private lodgings.

Brussels has formed the subject of the warmest eulogium from three of our greatest modern poets, Byron, Scott, and Southey. The traveller who visits the upper or "west end" of the city, the Place Royale, the church, of St. Jaques sur Caudenberg, and the statue of the Crusader, Godfrey of Bouillon, who, on 15th July, 1099, led the storming party which successfully entered Jerusalem and delivered the Holy places from the hands of the Moslems—thence to the Place des Palais, the King's Palace, the Palace of the Prince of Orange, the Park, the Rue Royale, the buildings in the Rue de la Loi, the view from the Place du Congrès, —will admit that the good points of this part of Brussels render it a very agreeable city.

The cities of Antwerp, Bruges, and Ghent, are objects of reverence to the antiquarian, the historian, and the lover of the fine arts, but the capital of Belgium is Paris in miniature, Parisian toilettes, pantories, chaussures, and, above all, the genuine lace of Mechlin and Brussels manufacture are to be had here on advantageous terms, in the Montagne de la Cour, the Rue de la Madeleine, and the beautiful Arcade of St. Hubert. Let the visitor proceed to the Grande Place, to admire the fine Gothic spire of the Hotel de Ville, and the various architectural designs of the surrounding buildings, together with the lately erected statues in bronze of Counts Egmont and Hoorne; both of which stand on one pedestal opposite the Hotel de Ville, and very near the house in front of which they were beheaded.

If the traveller next visits the Cathedral of Sainte Gudule, he is struck by the beautiful painted glass in its windows, particularly that of the St. Sacrament chapel, which is deemed the most exquisitely painted window in Europe. The carved pulpit, by Verbruggen, representing the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the garden of Eden, is also an object of admiration. In the Grande Place, just opposite to the Hotel de Ville, may be seen the "Maison du Roi" in the front room, on the first floor of which Charles V. signed his abdication.

The amateur of paintings will be gratified by paying a visit to the Museum, where, among other specimens of art, he may see "The Deluge," by Corriers; "Diana," by Annibal Carracci; "Holy Family," by Guido; "Song of the Angels," by Paul Veronese; "Christ bearing the Cross," by Rubens; in the upper storey are some paintings of little note.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine, see first Time Tables of Belgian Railways.

For Route to Sedan, Metz, and Strasbourg, see page 105.

A New Line has been opened from the Midi Station for Waterloo and Braine d'Alleud, the latter being best for pedestrians, as being nearer to the Lion Mount.

Money. Circular Notes.—It is a mistake to suppose circular notes can only be cashed at certain bankers named in the Letters of Indication; on the contrary, they are readily exchanged by Suffell, 81, Montagne de la Cour (two doors from the Hotel de l'Europe) on most liberal terms.

N.B.—The rate of exchange is posted up daily

LIST OF OBJECTS OF INTEREST IN BRUSSELS.

1. The beautiful Park.—Concerts every evening. The Boulevards—Fashionable Promenade between 2 and 4 every afternoon.

2. The Bois de la Cambre.—Beautiful drives in a splendid wood.

3. Zoological Gardens.—Concerts nearly every evening.

4. Botanical Gardens.—Rare Flowers and Plants.

5. Flower and Fruit Markets, Rue de la Madeleine.

6. Gothic Architecture — Town Hall — Grande place—beautiful spire 364 feet high, in the centre of the most picturesque square in Europe.

7. The Cathedral of Ste. Gudule—see above

8. Church of Nôtre Dame de la Chapelle—high altar designed by Rubens.

9. Church of the Sablon, in which is a beautiful chapel of St. Ursula.

9A. The new Exchange.

10. Fine Arts and Sciences.—Museum of Ancient Paintings, Rue du Musée, open daily from 10 to 4, free admission,—contains rare specimens of the Flemish, Italian, and Spanish schools of painting, especially Rubens, Van Dyck, Cuyp, Dow, Teniers, Guido, Perugino, Velasquez, &c. It has also a rare collection of objects of natural history from the Indies. The same pile of Buildings contains a Museum of Modern Inventions, or Palace of Industry, a permanent exhibition of the products of national manufactures; also, a Gallery of Natural history and Mineralogy, exceedingly well classified, and the celebrated Burgundian Library containing 18,000 MSS. of surpassing interest, many of them being exquisitely ornamented with miniature paintings of great beauty.

11. THE MUSEUM OF MODERN PAINTINGS AND STATUARY, Palais Ducal, open daily from 10 to 4, free admission. Fine specimens of Belgian modern Painters; but finer still of beautiful Statuary.

12. THE PALACE OF THE DUKE OF ARENBERG.—Strangers are admitted to see the Picture Gallery by applying to the Porter at the Lodge. The collection has many beautiful specimens of the Dutch and Flemish Masters, Van de Veldes', Van Ostade's Gerard Dow's, F. Mier's, Metzu's, several portraits by Rubens and Van Dyck—the "Game of Bowls," a clear and sparkling picture by Teniers; but the gem of the gallery is the face of a Child, by a very rare Master, Van der Meer of Delft, worth all the Greuses in the world.

13. THE WIERTZ GALLERY OR MUSEUM, situated on an eminence above the Zoological Gardens, open from 10 to 4 daily, admission free.—Contains some of the most extravagant and extraordinary productions of modern times; well worth visiting. Some of the principal are:—"Fight for the body of Patroclus," (No. 1.); "The Last Cannon," (No. 57); "The Triumph of Christ' (No. 20.); "The Confidence," (No. 43.); "The Rose-bud," (No. 42.); "A second after Death," (No. 61.); "The Dog in his Corner," (No. 100.) "The Concierge," (No. 79); "The beautiful Rosine," (No. 38.); "The Precipitate Burial," (No. 24.), a very extraordinary picture.

PALAIS DE JUSTICE, possesses the celebrated picture of the Abdication of Charles V. by Gallait, and that of the "Compromise" of the Nobles by Biefre.

15. Celebrated PORTE DE HAL, a Bastille on a small scale, now used as a Museum of ancient armour and weapons of warfare from the remotest periods. The altar screens taken from suppressed convents and monasteries are most beautiful specimens of carved wood.

16. GALLERY ST. HUBERT, is a noble Arcade, fitted up with elegant shops, near the Grand Place.

17. THE SQUARES OF BRUSSELS.—PLACE ROYAL contains the Palace of the Count and Countess of Flanders; the principal Hotels, and a fine statue of Godfrey de Bouillon, the hero of Tasso's Jerusalem.

18. THE GRANDE PLACE, containing the Hotel de Ville with its tower of 364 feet, and the Fraikin's Monument to Counts Egmont and Hoorne, set up 1864.

19. THE PLACE DES MARTYRS, in the centre of which is a statue of Liberty, over the tombs of the Belgian Patriots who fell fighting to regain their independence. September, 1830.

20. FOUNTAINS.—Two in the Park; another in the place du Sablon, erected by Lord Ailesbury; last and also least, though the most important, the diminutive far-famed statue, the "Manneken Fountain," in the Rue de l'Etuve, behind the Town Hall.

22. The Geographical Establishment of Van der Maelen (Porte de Flandre) open every day 9 to 11 and 1 to 4, has many interesting collections medals, vellums, specimens of industrial art, &c.

24. EXCURSIONS TO LACKEN—King's Palace.

25. EXCURSIONS TO WATERLOO by Bois de la Cambre, private carriage through the wood. 30frs. By the Four-horse Coaches twice daily (Sundays excepted). Fare there and back, 7frs. By rail, there and back, 1fr. 10c. Waterloo is still a place of surpassing interest to most Englishmen, and Hougoumont especially deserves a visit; but we trust that the monuments of international conflict will soon give way before those of more peaceful competitions, with the growing aversion which all civilized nations have to war. Near the Haye Sainte is a monument to the Hanoverians and Colonel Gordon, and the spot is shown where Picton fell while leading his men on to a victorious charge.

THE ROYAL ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF BRUSSELS is situated in one of the finest parts of the environs, near the Luxembourg Railway Station. Concerts every Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday; and Fêtes during the Summer. Entrance 1 fr.; Children ½ fr.; Subscribers 5 fr. per month.

ROUTE 2.

OSTEND TO BRUSSELS.

Ostend—Stat.—Pop. 17,340.—(With Map in Special Edition).—HOTELS:

HOTEL FONTAINE, very conveniently situated near the sea & harbour; it has a splendid dining-room.

HOTEL DU GRAND CAFE, very well situated, on the Place d'Armes, opposite the Casino. Very clean.

HOTEL DE COMMERCE, situated opposite the Station, and very near the Quai.

THE SHIP HOTEL, situated on the Quai, opposite the Custom House; moderate charges.

HOTEL DES BAINS, an old established first-class Hotel. Recommended.

ENGLISH PRIVATE FAMILY HOUSE, 18, Rue Louise, close to the sea-side; moderate charges. W. C. Wittcher, proprietor. Recommended.

HOTEL ROYAL DE PRUSSE; HOTEL DU LION D'OR. HOTEL DE FRANCE.

Omnibuses at the arrival of each train; fare to the Hotels, 50 centimes.

Ostend is at present principally known as a favourite watering-place, much patronized by the neighbouring élite, who resort here in great numbers during the summer. The town itself has no particular object deserving of notice, but it possesses one of the finest marine parades in Europe. The Digue of Ostend is a celebrated walk along the shore, upon an elevated mole built parallel with the sea, and so constructed, that while it serves as a barrier against the encroaching and formidable attacks of the sea, it forms a most agreeable promenade. Here an excellent band plays, and hundreds of gay people may be seen walking up and down from morning till late hours, especially about the time of high-water. Bathing machines are good, and the sands excellent.

By an order of the Board of Customs, luggage of travellers arriving by the mails at Dover or Ostend is examined at any hour by day or night.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine, see first Time Tables of Belgian Railways.

Bruges—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 47,630. HOTELS: HOTEL DU COMMERCE, a first-rate old-established house, enjoying an excellent reputation.

HOTEL DE FLANDRE.—An old established house, famous for its fine wines and good dinners.

HOTEL DE L'OURS D'OR.—Second class hotel. Kept by Mr. Desmet-Desmedt.

HOTEL DE L'UNIVERS.

Voitures, called Vigilantes—the course, 1 fr.; 1st hour, 1 fr. 50 c.; after hours, 1 fr.

Omnibuses attend the railway stations; fare to Hotels, 50 centimes.

Bruges is 4¼ miles in circuit; distance from Ostend, 13¾ miles; time occupied in transit 30 to 35 minutes. Six canals here meet, from Ghent, Ostend, Dunkirk, Sluys, Furnes, and Ypres, in the large dock or basin, which is the finest in Belgium. The railway station at Bruges is on the Vrydags Markt. The West Flanders Railway is now open to Courtray, making a direct railway from Ostend and Bruges to Paris, viâ Lille, Amiens, &c. It is 23 miles shorter than by Ghent.

On leaving Ostend, it is a very general custom for travellers going to Germany to take a railway ticket for the whole distance to Cologne, for the purpose of reaching the Rhine with the least possible delay. In so doing they deprive themselves of the opportunity of visiting the cities in Belgium which possess so many objects of interest to the lover of gothic architecture.

Commencing with Bruges, which occupies a prominent place in the history of Flanders, and which was, in the 15th and 16th centuries, the commercial capital of Northern Europe, the traveller will find this town worthy of notice, because it has preserved the peculiarities which distinguished the middle ages; and on fête days the fine old city wears a gay and animated appearance.

The churches and other public edifices of Bruges contain several rare paintings. The Cathedral is a large brick building rich in paintings. The church of Notre Dame has many works of art worthy of an attentive examination. A statue of the Virgin and the infant Jesus, supposed to be by Michael Angelo, is greatly admired by connoisseurs for the classical beauty of feature and delicate form of the hands which characterises the two figures. In a chapel, in the aisle south of the choir, are the Tombs of the last Duke of Burgundy and his daughter, two of the most remarkable monuments in Belgium. Among the paintings we need only direct attention to a picture of the Virgin and Child, surrounded by Saints, reputed to be by Van Dyck, the "Adoration of the Shepherds," and the "Adoration of the Magi." Before quitting the church the traveller should inspect the Pulpit, one of the most beautiful and highly finished pieces of carving in wood to be seen in Belgium. 1 fr. entrance during hours when church is shut; 1 fr. 50 c. fee to see tombs of Charles le Temeraire and Mary of Burgundy. Instead of visiting the neighbouring churches, the traveller will do well to go to the Hospital of St John, which is close to the church of Notre Dame, as this institution is celebrated for possessing several beautiful pictures, painted by Hans Hemling, so remarkable for purity of colouring and brightness of tone, that the most indifferent spectator will find himself an admirer and a describer of their prominent beauties. 1 fr. 50 c. entrance fee. The Town Hall is a magnificent gothic edifice, and attached to it is the chapel of St. Sang, a gem of gothic architecture.

The Belfrey of Bruges has, according to some, the finest chime of bells in Europe, 48 in number, played 4 times an hour by curious machinery, which can be inspected by paying a small fee. The lace-working which is the chief industry of the poor women, can be seen in almost every street. The Fish market is very curious. Bruges has the characteristics of a Dutch town, more than any in Belgium. The Hotel de Ville is of elegant architecture, 14th century. Library (10,000 vols.) has valuable MSS. Museum has some fine paintings of Van Eyck and others.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—On Sundays, at the chapel, Rue d'Ostende. Divine service 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Chaplain, Rev. A. V. Hughes Hallett.

EXCURSIONS may be made to the three very interesting, small, clean, quaint, and expressive Flemish towns of Nieuport, Dixmude, and Furnes.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine, see first Time Tables of Belgian Railway.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 76, 92, 93, 96, and 97.

Nieuport.—Pop. 3400.—HOTEL DU PELICAN. Surrounded with old ramparts, and wide ditches filled with water, having a fine salubrious air from the sea, and a flat country round it. Also two interesting old churches.

Dixmude.—HOTEL DE VILLE.—Remarkable for its old colossal church (100 yards long).

Furnes.—HOTEL ROSE.—Of chief interest from its having once possessed an abbey, from which a colony of monks proceeding, founded, it is believed, the English abbey of Furness. Of the first, however, no vestiges now exist. All three places are full of quaint and varied architecture.

GHENT TO ANTWERP, viâ ST. NICHOLAS & LOKEREN

Ghent.—See page 396.

Persons entering Belgium at Ostend, and who, proceeding to Ghent, wish to visit Antwerp, might make a very expeditious tour by proceeding direct from Ghent, and will arrive at Antwerp in 1½ hrs. If it be so wished a visit can be made to Lokeren.—Stat.—Pop. 18,570.—HOTELS:—DES QUATRE SCHAUX; DE LA POSTE.

A considerable manufacturing town, on the direct railway from Ghent to Antwerp, situated on the river Durme, by which it communicates with the Scheldt. The market-place and quay deserve notice. The Church, the construction of which dates as far back as the seventeenth century, is adorned with an elevated tower, and contains one of the finest Pulpits in Belgium magnificently carved and representing in a group of ten figures, "Jesus among the Doctors." There are also some fine pictures: one especially should be examined, the Circumcision, by Verseghen.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 82, 92, and 101.

A visit may also be paid to

St. Nicholas.—Stat —Pop. 21,780—Hotels: Quatre Scheaux; De l'Ancre.

Chief town of the arrondissement, and a manufacturing place of the first class, in a rich agricultural district, having a flourishing trade in flax, shawls, linen cloths, and all sorts of stuffs. Its clean, tidy street, radiate from a large market place. There are 3 Churches, and a college for ladies. The principal Church, St. Nicholas, contains some excellent paintings, and a fine Christ in ivory. Nôtre Dame is a modern building, containing fine fresco painting of the seven sorrows of the Virgin.

This town is the Central Station of the Pays de Waes Rail, and has the Company's Workshops. Rail. to Antwerp, see p. 92.

Passing Nieukerke, we arrive at Antwerp.—Stat.—See Route 8 below.

Waterloo.—The Museum Hotel. The Museum is kept by the niece of the late Sergeant-Major Cotton.

The Hotel des Colonnes at Mont St. Jean, half a mile distant from the Lion Mount, see advt.

Private Carriages, to convey from 1 to 5 persons, are supplied by Mr. Suffell, 81, Montagne de la Cour; fare, 30 frs. His coachmen civil, and entirely acquainted with the drive through the Forest of Soignies. The best hour to start is 9 or 9½ o'Clock in the morning.

Conveyances.—From Brussels, by rail, South Station, see pp. 87, and 90. Fare there and back, 1fr. 10c. By the Four-horse Coaches, twice daily (Sundays excepted). Fare there and back, 7 frs.

Places are secured at Mr. Suffell's office, 81, Montagne de la Cour.

Genappe.—Stat.—Pop 1,800.

About 19 miles from Brussels. On the road a little way out of the town, the Prussians captured the carriage of Napoleon, 1815; and he himself was nearly taken prisoner in it on the night of the battle.—At Boissy, 1½ mile, Godfrey of Bouillon was born, and at about 6 miles distance, the celebrated Tilly, the opponent of Gustavus Adolphus, was born.

Conveyances.—Rail to Brussels and Louvain, p. 92. The Junction with the Brussels line (Great Luxembourg Railway) is at Ottignies.

Nivelles or Nyvel.—Stat.—Pop. 8,830.

About 11 miles from Genappe. In the church of St. Gertende, are two pulpits, carved by Delvaux said to be the finest in Belgium.

On the top of a tower, is a colossal statue, called Jean de Nivelles, which strikes the hours. Here are manufactured the numerous reliques of Waterloo, found by the guides on the field.

ROUTE 8.

London (vis Harwich and per direct Steamer) to Antwerp, thence to Malines, Brussels, Liege, Verviers, Aix-la-Chapelle, and Cologne.

ANTWERP, or Anvers in French.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 122,665—(With Map in Second Edition.) Hotels:—

Hotel St. Antoine—Well situated, first-class hotel; highly recommended to English and American travellers.

Hotel de l' Europe, on the place Verte, close to the Cathedral; exceedingly good in every respect, and charges reasonable.

Hotel de la Paix, Rue des Menuisiers, in the centre of the town. Deservedly recommended for its good accommodation and moderate charges. Great attention shown to visitors.

Hotel de Holland, good second class hotel, moderate charges.

Hotel des Flandres.—A very good hotel, J. J. Lambert, proprietor.

Hotel du Bien etre.—Second-class Hotel, near the Place de Meir.

The Churches are closed between 12 and 3; a fee charged for seeing the paintings, &c. At the Cathedral, 1 franc.

The Steam-Packet direct from London to Antwerp reaches the mouth of the Scheldt a few hours before or after midnight; passing Flushing, it generally ascends the river up to Fort Lillo, before passengers have left their berths. At this point the beautiful spire of the cathedral becomes conspicuous, towering into the sky. After passing Fort Lillo the passengers usually prepare their luggage for the examination of the Belgian Douaniers.

This commercial capital of Belgium is situated on the banks of the Scheldt, 60 miles from the sea, 27½ from Brussels, 32 from Ghent, 150½ from Cologne, and 258½ from Paris. It is celebrated for the magnificent Docks, constructed by Napoleon, large enough for two thousand ships.

The streets of Antwerp, like those of many of the towns in Belgium, are not laid out upon any plan, but have followed the natural caprices of a growing population. They wind and turn so, that a stranger has no small difficulty in choosing his way. But the quaint old houses, six or seven stories high, tapering up to a pinnacle, and their fronts all adorned with the luxuriant tracery which characterises the buildings erected in Flanders by the Spaniards, present themselves in such groups, and yet so picturesquely that you forgive the irregular construction of the city. Notice the peculiar straw bonnets of the women, and the coquettish, gay contrast in the toilette of the girls.

The city arms are Two Hands, in allusion to the name (aan, a hand, werpen, to throw), derived from a certain giant, Antigonus, who amused himself by cutting off the hands of those who would not pay him toll, and threw them into the Scheldt; till he was conquered by another, Giant Brabo, who gives name to Brabant.

There are few places in Europe so rich in magnificent churches, embellished by the most remarkable works of art, and enriched by the best productions of Rubens and Van Dyck, and other great masters of painting, natives of the city.

Cathedral of Nôtre Dame (open on Sunday and Thursday, Free; on other days, after 12, for 1 fr. Tickets at the Gardien's, near the south door.) The traveller will first examine the spire—a Gothic structure of exceeding beauty. It is 402 feet high, and runs up tapering into the clouds, with a gradual, yet correct mathematical precision. Entering the first object of attraction is the celebrated painting—with engraved copies of which most people are familiar — viz., The Descent from the Cross—reputed to be the chef d'œuvre of Rubens.

On the other side is another painting—the pendant, as the French express it—representing the "Elevation of the Cross," which Sir Joshua Reynolds describes as one of the best and most animated compositions painted by Rubens. "The Assumption of the Virgin" and "The Resurrection of the Saviour," are two other admirable paintings by the same master. The pulpit is of carved wood.

In front of the west door of the cathedral is a remarkable work in iron, executed by the celebrated Antwerp blacksmith, Quentin Matsys, who subsequently became a great painter; and in the Place Verte, opposite the cathedral, is a fine statue of Rubens.

The church of St. Jacques is an imposing-looking edifice, which contains many precious and rare works in painting and sculpture; and the interior of the church is embellished with splendour and richness of decoration. The tomb of Rubens is, however, the principal object of attraction. The altar-piece is also by Rubens, and the beautiful picture of the Saviour Crucified is by Van Dyck. The marble statue of the Virgin is greatly admired; it is by Duquesnoy.

On entering the church of St. Paul, the visitor will be struck by a representation of Mount Calvary, —the Crucifixion—and the Ordeal of Purgatory. The coarse and rough manner in which these scenes are represented, forms a singular contrast to the numerous works of art executed in the highest perfection within the church. The "Adoration of the Shepherds" is said—but not generally considered —to be the production of Rubens; others are "The Descent from the Cross," a magnificent altar-piece—"The Works of Mercy"—and last, though not the least worthy of notice, the thrilling picture designated "The Scourging of Christ," by Rubens. No person can behold this extraordinary painting with unmoved feelings.

The churches of St. Augustine and of the Jesuits also contain several good paintings and remarkable statues in wood. In the church of St. Augustine is the celebrated altar-piece by Reubens, the Marriage of St. Catharine. The church of St. Andrew has a pulpit representing the calling of Andrew the patron saint of the church. The carving is as fine as lace, and is, perhaps, Verbruggen's best work.

The collection of pictures at the Museum is open Sunday and Thursday (Free), 10 to 3. Quentin Matsys has several works of merit here—his "Descent from the Cross" is one of the best; No. 82, "The Dead Christ"; 84, "The Virgin holding the infant Redeemer;" 83, "St. John;" 85, "A Holy Family;" 86, "Our Saviour on the Cross;" 72, "The Crucifixion of Christ between the two Thieves." Nos. 73, 75, 76, 77, and 79, are the works of Reubens; 111, 112, 113, of Van Dyck.

Teniers, Van Dyck, Sneiders, and Jordaens, all celebrated Flemish painters, were born in Antwerp. The fine old city Exchange was burnt 1859. The Zoological gardens are well worth visiting for the collection of beautiful birds, and various specimens of animals.

Conveyances.—Railway to Ghent direct, see page 92.—To Malines and Brussels, page 83.—To Malines, Liege, Verviers, Aix-la-Chapelle, and Cologne, pages 83 and 88.—To Breda see page 105. To Moerdyck, thence to Rotterdam by steamers, see p. 105. The passage from Antwerp to London is now performed in 18 hours by the General Steam Navigation Company's new ships "Dolphin" and "Rhine"; or the Belgian Company's New Ship, "Baron Osy." These vessels have generally pretty good accommodation for passengers; and from the sea-passage only occupying a few hours, the route, viâ the Scheldt and Thames, or vice versa, is most agreeable, and particularly convenient for families going to or returning from the Rhine. Steamers from Antwerp to Rotterdam, and from Antwerp to Hull, see alphabetical list. Travellers frequently book their places and secure a berth at the Company's offices.

Ship Broker.—Mr. B. Kennedy, Agent of the General Steam Navigation Company.

At the Tête de Flandre, on the opposite bank of the river, is the station of the Direct Railway to Ghent, through St. Nicholas, Lokaren, and the fine country called the Pays de Waes, shortening the distance by more than one-third, or 32½ miles, instead of 49½ miles, and saving about 1 hour's time. Omnibuses call at the hotels to convey passengers to and from the railway station. The stand for Vigilantes is by the Post-office and Place de Meir.

Between Antwerp and Malines the land is well cultivated. The stations are Malines, or Mechlin, (for description of which see page 397). This is the central station to which the Brussels, Antwerp, Ostend, and Cologne lines converge. Passengers from Antwerp or Ostend going to Cologne, change trains at this station.

The Guards will always promptly answer this question:—Change t'on de correct ici pour Cologne? i. e., Do we change train here for Cologne?

The country through which the tourist passes from Malines to Louvain is very well cultivated; in fact more interesting than usual in Flanders. What it wants in beauty is made up in fertility. Every little patch of ground is cultivated with the most sedulous care, and the earth repays the toil bestowed upon it in plentiful crops. There is a resemblance between the general features of rural life here and in England. The cottages in particular are clean, and rather picturesque.

Louvain.—Stat.—Pop. ('69) 31,930. Hotels: Hotel de Suede, good; De la Cour de Mons.

This town is situated on the river Dyle, 27 miles from Brussels by the railroad, and 44 from Liége.

The Town-hall is a splendid specimen of gothic architecture, and contains a fine gallery of paintings, the greater part by the first masters of the Flemish school. Travellers should also pay a visit to the Church of St. Peter, and its celebrated chapel of "Martyrdom." The Church of St. Peter has several fine pictures; the one representing "Jesus giving the Keys to St. Peter," was taken by the French to Paris, and afterwards returned. The stalls in the choir of the Church St. Gertrude are considered remarkably beautiful. The university of Louvain consists of several Colleges and the building of the Halles; the Library of 70,000 vols. open every day, Saturday and Sundays excepted, 2 to 4 in winter, 2 to 5 in summer. Botanical garden. In the 14th century Louvain contained 140,000 inhabitants. The most important article of trade is beer. It also carries on considerable traffic in lace, corn, and hops. Here Van De Weyer, the founder of the new Belgian Monarchy was born, 1802.

Tirlemont—Stat.—Pop. 12,260.—HOTELS:—LE PLAT D'ETAIN; DES QUATRE SAISONS; DE FLANDRE. There is a good Buffet at the Station, a quarter of a mile from the town. Omnibuses and Cabs attend the Trains.

The chief city of a canton in the Louvain district and province of Brabant. The space within its walls south of the railway contains at present very few houses, but has very old gates. Among the chief objects of its attractions may be enumerated the old Church of St. Germain, built upon an eminence overhanging the town. It is an erection of the ninth century, containing an altar-piece by Wappes. There is a Boys' School at the Stanislas Convent.

On nearing Landen, the line runs through the plain of Neerwinden, celebrated for two great battles fought there in 1693, when the third William was beaten by the French under Marshal Luxembourg, and in 1793, when the Austrians defeated the revolutionary army, and drove them from Belgium. The town itself is seated on the river Beck, 9 miles S.E. of Louvain.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 84 and 88.

Landen.—Stat.—Pop. 700.

It is seated on the river Beck, 19 miles south-east of Louvain the birth-place of Pepin of Landen, founder of the race of Charlemagne.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 84, 88, 96, 105.

A branch railway from Landen leads to

St. Trond.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000.—HOTELS:—DE L'EUROPE, DU SAUVAGE.

A very ancient city, in the province of Liége, 15 miles W.N.W. of Maestricht called after St. Trudon, who built a monastery here. At Borstem, near this, a great battle was fought in 1417, between Charles the Bold and his rebellious subjects at Liége.

Hasselt - Stat.—Pop. 9,900. see pp. 97, 105 and 106.

Maestricht.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 28,100.

HOTELS:—DU CASQUE; NANTES; DE PARIS; DU LEVRIER.

This town is the capital of the Dutch portion of the province of Limburg. It is situated on the river Maas, and has one of the strongest fortresses in Europe. The most remarkable things to be seen at Maestricht are the subterranean Quarries—under the Pietersberg Hill—which extend over a space of 13 miles. The walk through the largest caverns is considered attractive, and only occupies an hour. The view from the top of the Pietersberg is fine.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 90 and 105; Steamers daily to Liege in 2½ hours.

Fexhe—Stat.—Pop. 1,200.

On approaching Liége the traveller should be particular in watching the ascent of the train, from the station at Ans to the stationary engine-house on the summit of the hill, and then prepare himself to behold, during the descent on the inclined plane, a very fine view of the town and Meuse valley. The whole city of Liége, with its numerous manufactories and churches, extended over the valley, or plain—at the junction of the Meuse and Ourthe—lies stretched out before you. The descent from the top of this hill is down an inclined plane of 2½ miles to Liége, and the train is drawn down or up this line by means of a rope and two fixed engines of 80 horse power.

The station is between 400 and 500 feet above the level of the Meuse; the gradient of descent being so steep, that the locomotive engines cannot be used. Emerging from the "cuttings" of the railway, you come suddenly on Liége, lying in a valley below, on the left-hand side, and embosomed in hills. The town itself is, in many of its features, very similar to our large manufacturing towns, with the advantage of a finer position than most of them, except perhaps Sheffield and Leeds.

Vigilantes.—The course, 1 person, 50 cents., 2 persons, 1 fr.; 1 hour, 1 fr. 50 c., every quarter of an hour more. 25c. Steamers to Namur, twice a day. To Maestricht in summer, 3 times per day.

The Liége terminus lies on the south bank of the Meuse, close to the Quai d'Avroy. The railway crosses by the bridge of Val St. Benoit.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine, see first Time Tables of Belgian Railways.

This thriving town is situated in the middle of a plain, girt by hills, at the junction of the Meuse and Ourthe, 71¼ miles from Brussels, and 34¼ from Aix-la-Chapelle. Liége, from its extensive iron works, has acquired the title of the Birmingham of Belgium. It presents many historical reminiscences and associations to interest the antiquarian; many splendid Churches to attract the curious; and an active, hardy, and industrious population, to amuse the observant man of commercial acquirements. Its history is connected with the celebrated bishops of Liége—the repeated conflicts between the citizens and their bishops—the bishops against their allies, the Dukes of Burgundy—and there is probably no better historical narrative of these events than that given by Scott in Quentin Durward; where the town and Palace of Liége are so graphically described, that the details are correct even at the present day. The finest building is the Cathedral of St. Paul, a Gothic edifice of considerable beauty. The church of St. Jaques is remarkable for a similarity existing between the style of its architecture and that of the Bourse at Antwerp. Both are distinguished by the piazzas, of Gothic Moorish art, characterized by the same beautiful elegance of design.

N.B.—The Liege Churches (except Notre Dame du Mont Carmel) are closed from 11 to 2; when even the usual silver key fails to open them.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—C. KLEEBERG, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 16, 86, 88, 90, 94, 107, 108, and 109.

N.B.—The boats to Namur through the fine parts of the river have ceased running. Those to Maestricht go viâ canal only, a somewhat dull route.

Leaving Liége, the traveller crosses the Meuse by a fine bridge of seven arches 469 feet long. There are nineteen tunnels on the Belgian part of the line alone. It follows nearly the same course at the high road as far as Limbourg, crossing the Vesdre by seventeen bridges. The Ourthe is crossed at Chênee.

By railway, from Liége to Verviers, the traveller will pass through the most picturesque portion of the line; woodland and stream, greet the eye as the train shoots along; which after the flat fertility of Belgium, is only the more grateful.

Chenee, at the junction of the Ourthe with the Vesdre. The railway crosses the windings of the beautiful Vesdre, all the way to Limbourg. The scenery is at times varied by large factories principally of cloth, all along to Chaudefontaine (Warm Fountain).

HOTEL DES BAINS.

A beautiful village, five miles distant from Liége in the valley of the Vesdre, much frequented by travellers on account of its warm mineral springs. The season commences on the 1st of May; and travellers going to the Rhine, or returning from Germany, find it most refreshing to take a few hours' rest at this charming place.

HOTEL LEROY TAYLOR.

HOTEL DES PAYS BAS, a quiet well conducted house, and reasonable prices.

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, opposite the Cascade; kept by Mr. Henrard Richard. A very good house.

HOTEL DE BELLE VUE, Place Royal, well situated, entirely refurnished—combines elegance and comfort with moderate prices.

HOTEL DU PORTUGAL, well situated, facing one of the finest promenades. Kept by L. Gernay.

HOTEL BRITANNIQUE; HOTEL DE BELLE VUE; HOTEL DU MIDI.

Cafés Restaurant are very numerous, De Paris; Casino; Rochor de Cancale. Saddle-horses, carriages, and pony-chaises. The ponies are sure-footed animals of Andalusian blood.

Spa lies in the beautiful valley of the Wayai under the Ardennes, about 17 miles from Aix-la-Chapelle, in a spot abounding with beautiful walks and drives. Height above sea, about 1000 feet; with a bracing and healthy climate, though a little chilly just after sunset. The season is from May to October. Its chalybeate (or iron) springs, which were known even to the Romans, attract visitors from all parts of the Continent and from America; in fact, Spa has given a general name to all sites for mineral waters. As a medical resort it has enjoyed perfect neutrality during the hottest wars. The waters are full of carbonic acid gas, sparkling, cheering, easily digested, and containing carbonate of iron, soda, lime, and magnesia. Those most frequented are as follows:—The Pouhon, used by Peter the Great 1717, whose tablet and certificate are here; Sauvenière and Groesbeck, in a fine wood 1¼ miles from the town, and 470 feet higher, near the Promenade d'Orleans, and the pillar to Louis Philippe's mother; Geronstère, in a beautiful wood, 2 miles distant, having a slight sulphur taste; Barisart, 1 mile, sparkling and refreshing, especially good in dyspepsia; Tonnelets, 1 mile, in a boggy spot; and the two Prince of Condé springs, much in vogue since 1863, clear, agreeable, and easily digested. Tens of thousands of bottles of the Condé and the Pouhon are exported. The waters must be taken under medical direction, and may be drunk or bathed in. In the latter case, the waters being in their nature highly charged with gases, and heated by steam, the patient fancies himself bathing in "creaming champagne." Peat and medicated baths are also administered with good effect. Breakfast parties and pic-nics are often made to the more distant Spas.

Public walks—the Promenades de Sept Heures, d Orleans, des Artistes, de Meyerbeer, and de Ralkem (near the Allée du Marteau the Rotten Row), and the Boulevard des Anglais, in the Wayai valley all well planted and connected with each other. The band plays daily in the Promenade de Sept Heures; or in the Casino, a large building containing a splendid ball room, music, card, and conversation rooms; an elegant theatre, open three times a week. Balls, concerts, and fêtes champêtres are given at the Vauxhall, the Salle Levos, and other pretty gardens. A splendid Bath House was opened 1868, at a cost of £80,000, and in another part of the town there is a magnificent swimming bath. Races and Steeple-chases in June and September, and Cricket in the season. Articles of painted and varnished ware are sold. Fishing and shooting may be had, and hunting at Viel Salm, about an hour's distance by rail. Distant excursions can be enjoyed to the Coo Fall, the Remonchamp, and Hoy Grottoes, and in the ravines and glens of the neighbouring hills, 2000 feet high; the plants and strata of which are described in Dr. Cutler's "Notes on Spa."

The Administration of the Town and the new Directors of the Casino have used every means to give the greatest eclat to the Fêtes. Travellers fond of amusement and pleasure may, therefore, go to Spa at any time of the season and be certain, beforehand, to meet with the object of their journey. See Advt.

CONVEYANCE.—The entire journey from London to Spa is performed in one day. Travellers leaving London at 7.45 a.m., arrive at Spa at 9.58 p.m.

CHAPLAIN.—Rev. James Harrison, M.A. Sunday Services at 8.30, 11.30, and 7.0; Daily, 8.30 a.m. The building of an English Church is progressing favourably, but funds are urgently needed for its completion. Subscriptions are received at the London and Westminster Bank (Western Branch).

RESIDENT PHYSICIANS.—T. Cutler, Esq., M.D., M. Jules Leczaack, and Dr. Damseaux.

BANKER—Mr. Henry Hayemal, correspondent of all the Great Bankers in England, recommended in full confidence.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 72, 88 and 90.

MONEY CHANGER.—Suffell, English money changer, at Brussels, attends Spa, every Tuesday and Friday from 10 a.m. till 3 p.m., changes circular and bank notes, whether addressed to him or not, letters of credit, &c. Cheques cashed at sight, on the London and County Bank, London and Provincial Bank, Coutts, Drummond, Scott, London and Westminster, Union Bank of London, and all other banks in town or country.

Ensival.—Stat—Possessing important factories, and is a suburb of Verviers.

CONVEYANCES.—For Railway see page 48

Verviers. — Stat. — Pop. (1869) 33,735.

HOTELS:—

HOTEL DU CHEMIN DE FER, an Inn conveniently situated, opposite the Railway station

The examination of baggage does not now take place at this frontier town and the traveller going on has only time to collect his baggage, register it afresh and take his ticket for Cologne. He cannot rely on obtaining change at the Buffet. The Train stops 10 minutes at the next station for inspection by the Custom's Officers; but registered baggage is examined at Cologne.

All Baggage destined for Aix-la-Chapelle, or Cologne, is allowed to proceed for examination at either of these places. Since the opening of a new line to Dusseldorf (avoiding Cologne), the journey between Ostend and Berlin is done in 19 hours, express.

Travellers entering Belgium from Prussia have their luggage subjected to examination; whereas, carriages are also changed here, both in going and returning.

BUFFET OR REFRESHMENT ROOM.—In consequence of change of carriages and the examination of the baggage on coming from Germany, there is ample time to take refreshments at this station, which has one of the best "Buffets" on the line. The Special Express Fare to Brussels, 1st cl., 13fr. 20c.

Verviers, situated in the valley of the Vesdre, about sixteen miles from Liége, is the seat of the cloth trade, and may justly be termed the Leeds of Belgium. It is rarely that a complaint is heard of want of employment; many of the manufacturers are very wealthy. Coarse woollen cloths are principally made. The site of the town is extremely picturesque. Hotel charges have increased at Verviers. About here the railroad is laid with coal dust, as the traveller will soon find out.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—C. Kleeberg, Esq.

Railway, see pages 16, 87, 88, 94, 122, and 140

Herbesthal.—Stat.—A short distance from this station the railway is carried on a bridge of seventeen arches, 120 feet high in the centre, over the valley of the Gulle, passing through two tunnels, the second of which is 2,220 feet long, pierced through a sand hill. It finally terminates at Aix-la-Chapelle, down an inclined plane, up which carriages are drawn by a stationary engine in coming from Aix-la-Chapelle.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine see first Time Tables of Belgian Railways.

PRUSSIAN TERRITORY.

Aix-la-Chapelle, see page 451.

From Aix the traveller proceeds per rail to Cologne, a distance of 45 English miles, and to Dusseldorf direct. Close by the side of the line is the Castle of Frankenburg, Charlemagne is reported to have founded a Castle on this spot, in which he dwelt; his Queen Fastrado died there.

Nirem.—This village is seen just previous to entering the cutting leading to the Nirem Tunnel, 327 yards long, which carries the railway through the basin of hills which surrounds Aix. Passing through the beautiful wood of Reichswald we reach is built about three miles south of the station, up a valley studded with mills, forges, &c. The town is surmounted by a picturesque old castle. Coals, zinc, iron, and glass. Railway, see pages 122, 124.

Eschweiler—Stat.—Pop 13,600.—An industrious little town, built on the Jude, and having silk, iron and wire manufactories, and also an old picturesque castle close to the line. The old Castle of Nothberg is next passed.

Langerwehe.—Beyond this, through the Vale of the Wehe, a viaduct of seven arches conveys the railway, close by the village and castle of Merode, and through the village of Dhorn. Crossing the Roer immediately after, we enter

Duren—Stat.—Pop. 10,278.—HOTELS:—

ESSENS AND POST.—MOMMER, bost.

The Roman Marcodurem, near which Charlemagne defeated the Saxons. From here a pleasant excursion may be made up the Ruhr to Niedeggen Castle, where Engelbert, Archbishop of Cologne, was imprisoned in the thirteenth century. The railway passes over a cutting between the Meuse and Rhine, terminates a little way short of

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 88, 118, 120, 123 and 153.

Buir, whence it proceeds over the lowlands of the Valley of the Erft; crossing that river by three bridges before reaching Horrem, beyond which village is the fine old Castle of Frens. Passing from the Erft into the Valley of the Rhine, through Königsdorf Tunnel, a mile long, carried through a hill of sand 136 feet below the summit, we arrive at

Konigsdorf; from here we proceed to Mugernsdorf, crossing the road from Cologne to Julich. Here a very fine view can be had of Cologne, with its many towers and steeples, rising far above which is the octagon of St. Gereon, with its detached forts and half-buried towers surrounded with trees.

About 10 miles N. W. of Juliers, on the Roer.

Gladbach.—Stat.—Pop, 18,670.

On the Ners, about 18 miles N. of Juliers. It has a Benedictine Abbey; and considerable manufactures of fine strong linen are carried on. This is the Junction where the Railway branches off to Ruhrort. See pages 140, 144, 148, 153, and 154.

Neuss.—Stat.—Pop. 10,720.—HOTEL:—

ROMISCHER KAISER.

This place used formerly to be quite close to the Rhine, but since the fourteenth century, owing to the altered course of the stream, it has been removed from it about a mile and a half.

Numerous excavations of Roman antiquities have been made on the site, supposed to be the Novesium of the Romans. Here Drusus, who built the town, threw a bridge over the Rhine. Neuss has sustained some remarkable sieges, which are mentioned in history. Among its edifices the old church of St. Quirinus, a fine Gothic building, erected in 1209, is well worthy examination, its dome having some early paintings in fresco by Cornelius.

Near Neuss, is the ancient abbey of Eberach, the church of which, built in the thirteenth century, was remarkable for its monuments. On the decease of the Princes and Bishops of Wurzburg, their hearts were deposited in it. Also, near here is the ancient castle of the family of Dyck.

Dusseldorf, for description of, see page 421.

Crefeld.—Stat.—Pop. 53,420.—HOTELS:—

OBERHEIMS HOF; WILDERMANN.

This is a flourishing town, with fine wide streets of nicely-built houses, about 5 miles from the Rhine, between Dusseldorf and Cleves. Here, there are considerable manufactures of velvet, silk, cotton, wool, linen and other articles, besides dye-works. The produce of the looms amounts annually to about 4,000,000 dollars. During the Seven Years' war, an important conflict took place hereabout. In the neighbourhood are the charming villages of Tennenthal, Crebau, Freiheit, and Ruine.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway see pp. 112, 120, 140 and 144.

Uerdingen.—Stat.—Pop. 3000.

Close to the left bank of the Rhine, surrounded by poplars.

Ruhrort.—Stat.—Pop. 3,740.—HOTEL:—

VILLES DE CLEVES.

Situated at the confluence of the Ruhr (Roer), with the Rhine. This is the best harbour on the Lower Rhine. It possesses many ship-building docks, and has a large carrying trade, including an immense coal-trade with Holland, the coal being derived from the large beds of that mineral on the banks of the Roer. To Luftballon, a public pleasure garden about a mile distant, an agreeable walk may be taken; and the iron-works at Sterkerade, near Oberhausen, are worth visiting. At Ruhrort is an Hydraulic Establishment, consisting of two towers, each 120 feet high, one on each side of the Rhine, at Homberg and Ruhrort, each of which contains an engine; by means of which two large waggons, loaded with goods, can be raised and lowered according to the difference of the height of the water and the rails of the railway, which terminate in the towers. The correspondence between the two banks, and the stations of Homberg and Ruhrort, is made by a large steamer, having rails on deck carrying twelve carriages, and in this manner the passengers are conveyed in the railway carriages without changing their seats, from one bank to the other.

At Jurbise the line branches off to Ath and Tournay.

Mons (Bergen, in German).—Pop. 30,000.

HOTELS.—DU SINGE D'OR is a house of humble pretensions, but very good, and exceedingly quiet. DE LA COURONNE; DE L'AIGLE NOIR; ROYAL.

This important town is divided into two sections by the river Trouille. It is surrounded by an earth-work and ditch, and was considerably strengthened in 1820. The Hotel de Ville is a fine old structure, richly ornamented with sculpture; and the old church of St. Elizabeth is said to have been erected on the site of a fortress erected by Julius Cæsar. It has suffered considerably at times from the ravages of war. The chief manufactures are woollen stuffs, linen, lace, and earthenware. The surrounding district abounds with coal-mines and extensive bleaching grounds. One building worth notice is the Church of St. Waudru, built in the Gothic style, commenced in 1460, but not finished until 1580. It stands on the left-hand side as we enter Mons from the railway. Its rude piers without capitals, network of ribs, and high altar decorated with bas-reliefs from the New Tetament, and cut by an Italian artist, command attention.

Mons has a communication with the Scheldt by the Canal de Condé, and also by railway, with Jurbise, Ath, Tournai, Lille, and Calais.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 14, 80, 82, 84, 85, 86, 92, 97, 98, 102, and 107.

A branch railway ensures a direct communication to Paris, Charleroi, Namur, and Cologne. This route avoids the detour to Braine-le-Comte.

On leaving Mons the railway passes the Stations of Cuesmes, Frameries, Quevy (the Belgian Custom-house), Feignies (the French Custom-house); the ceremonies of the Custom-house, at either place, occupies about twenty minutes: every courtesy is shown to travellers by the officials. It then reaches—

Maubeuge, and joins the Northern of France line. From this there is a line to Paris viâ the following:—

St. Quentin, see page 17 and p. 84.

Paris, see page 17 and p. 84.

The traveller may also proceed from Mons to Paris by way of Jemappes.—Pop. 4,670—This village is remarkable for the defeat, 1792, of the Austrians by General Dumouriez and the Duke de Chartres, afterwards Louis Philippe; an event followed by the annexation of Belgium. As we approach St. Ghislain, to the left are seen the magnificent establishments of Hornu.

St. Ghislain.—Pop. 1,860.—The country about has a great resemblance to the neighbourhood of Manchester and Bolton, the roads being black with coal dust and studded with cottages. The Railway to Ghent by Audenarde branches off here. From this Station there is nothing remarkable to be seen until we reach Bousu.—Thulin.

Quievrain.—Pop. 2,180.—A town carrying on an active commerce with France, but does not contain anything worth notice. This is the frontier station of the Southern line, and the point of junction with the Great Northern of France Railway; and here is the Belgian custom-house, where the examination of the Passport and Luggage take place on entering Belgium; one half mile further, the small river Annelle marks the boundary of France. The neighbourhood abounds in coal and other minerals.

Blanc Misseron (France) is next met with, after which we enter Valenciennes.

The examination of luggage occupies about half an hour: there is an excellent Buffet here.

The next station of importance met with is Douai, after passing St. Raismes, St. Vaillars, Louvain, and Martigny, all places of small note, and not requiring a special notice at our hands.

Douai.

Meeting St. Vitry and Roux we reach Arras, which is described at page 364.

We meet Amiens next, for description of which see page 352.

From this place the traveller is carried on past Clermont, Creil, and Chantilly, and shortly after enters Paris. See p. 377.

ROUTE 6.

BRUSSELS TO PARIS.

BY CHARLEROI, EREQUELINNES, AND CREIL.

GREAT LUXEMBOURG STATION.

Brussels. See description, p. 397.

Distance, 215 miles. Fares, 36fr. 80c. 1st class, 27fr. 30c. 2nd class.

Boitsfort. the first station on the Luxembourg line, three miles from Brussels. The village lies in a valley on the border of the forest of Soignies. It is the great resort of pleasure parties, as it contains several excellent restaurants and gardens where refreshments, good dinners, and delicious fish may be obtained at reasonable prices.

Groenendael, six miles from Brussels, is situated in the heart of the forest. Near the station may be seen the ruined foundations of a Priory, which once existed here, and which must have been a large pile of building. The village of Hoyelaert, which is close by, is very picturesque.

La Hulpe is nine miles from Brussels, and is a village of some importance. It was once a provincial town. From the station there is a fine view over an extensive sheet of water towards the country seat of the Marquis de Bethune, which is a remarkably fine house, with extensive grounds. There is a paper mill in the village, which gives employment to a great many hands. From the high ground above the station may be seen, on a clear day the monumental Lion on the field of Waterloo

Rixensart is 11 miles from Brussels, and is a pretty little village, closed in by a wooded country. The Count de Merode has a chateau in the village, and is the chief landed proprietor of the neighbourhood.

Ottignies is 15 miles from Brussels, at the junction of the Charleroi and Louvain and the Manage and Wavre lines with that of the Luxembourg, making one common station for the three companies. There is a considerable movement here, owing to the change of trains by passengers, and the goods traffic passing from one line to another.

La Roche.

Court St. Etienne.—

On leaving this station the traveller should remember that he is approaching one of the most singular and beautiful views in Europe, viz.—the ruins of the Abbey le Villers at Villers la Ville.—Pop. 778.

The line passes through the garden of the Abbey, and generally so rapidly, that only a glimpse can be obtained of these magnificent ruins. The tourist should therefore make an excursion expressly to visit them from Brussels, or alight at this station and take a subsequent train on to Paris; but the former course is the most pleasant. Arrangements have been made by which tourists can leave Brussels every day at 9.5 in the morning, and return to Brussels at 4.20 in the afternoon, in time for the tables d'hôtes, thus spending a most delightful day at the Abbey. The Abbey de Villers is one of the most splendid, romantic, and picturesque pile of ruins in Europe. Situated in a beautiful valley, in the centre of an ancient forest, the ruins cover an immense area of enclosed grounds, as extensive as some towns; and the remains attest not only the importance of this celebrated monastery, but its former splendour and palatial grandeur.

The best view of the ruins is from the terrace gardens beyond the railway; but it is impossible to say which excites the most admiration, the view from the heights around, or a walk through the ruins. No one can behold the refectory, the cloisters, the crypts, and lastly the magnificent ruins of the beautiful church, without feelings of awe and wonder. It is a scene of surpassing beauty, particularly in the effulgence of the noon-day or setting sun. Amid these ruins the silence is so profound that it impresses the visitor with an indescribable awe.

The Abbey de Villers was first pillaged, and then set fire to by a party of French Republican soldiers in 1789. The ruins were then sold to a person of the name of La Terrace for 70,000fr., who continued the work of destruction, and left the present ruins, which, with the adjacent land, is now the property of Madame Huart d'Enghien.

Tilly, Marbais, Ligny, Fleurus, Ransart, and Lodelinsart are passed, and the next station of importance is Charleroi.—Pop. 13,500.—HOTELS:—DE PAYS BAS. DU GRAND MONARQUE, DE L'UNIVERS. Buffet at the Station.

The fortifications have prevented Charleroi from becoming what it otherwise would have been—one of the most flourishing towns on the Continent; but the surrounding neighbourhood has a population of 80,000, and presents a scene of extraordinary activity. The Charleroi coal-field is the most extensive in Belgium, giving employment to 10,000 miners, and yielding annually 3,000,000 tons of coal; the glass trade is also carried on to a great extent, and those numerous and extensive iron works, which derive their supplies of iron ore from the Sambre and Meuse district,—one of the most picturesque and interesting counties in Belgium, but, with the exception of a few eminent geologists, totally unknown to travellers. This district affords employment to 6000 persons in making nails. It extends about 4 miles south of Charleroi to the French Ardennes.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Namur, Liege, Braine le-Comte, and Brussels, see page 90. To Couvin and Vireux, page 104 To St Quentin, &c., page 16. To Erquelinnes, see pp. 92, 94. 96, 98, 100, 101, 102.

At two leagues' distance from Charleroi, in the picturesque valley of the Sambre, are the ruins of the Abbaye d'Aine, the most ancient monastery perhaps in Europe, built in 656.

From Charleroi to the French frontier the line proceeds through remarkably fine and even picturesque scenery to Erquelinnes, (the Buffet Hotel), the last station in Belgium, where the baggage and passports are examined. The line then traverses a most uninteresting, interminable, flat, and arid plain passing St. Quentin and Creil—at both of which places there are refreshment rooms—and thence to Paris.

From Erquelinnes there is a branch line to Binche and

Baume.—See Time Tables.

ROUTE 6 A.

BRUSSELS TO COLOGNE BY NAMUR, LIEGE, AND VERVIERS.

Change carriages at Namur, for Cologne Fare to Luxemburg. 1st class, 18 fr. 40 c. No 2nd class through tickets to Cologne are issued.

Great Luxembourg Railway Station, Quartier Leopold.

The scenery by this Route is exceedingly fine, particularly between Namur and Liege.

BOITSFORT.
GROENENDAEL.
LA HULPE.
OTTIGNIES.
} For description, see p. 409.

Mont St. Gulbert—Pop. 969—A picturesque village, with remains of an old Castle, which will be seen from the railway. From Brussels to this point the country is chiefly a sand formation, as may be seen by the deep cuttings which are passed. The undulations are continuous to Namur, which is an agreeable change after passing over the low country from the coast.

Gembloux—Pop. 2,320—A small town, the trade of which is cutlery. Very little is seen from the railway, as it lies in a hollow. Here the Austrians were defeated 1794. A large pile of brick was formerly a Benedictine College, but in 1789 the monks were dispersed, and the property was seized and sold.

St. Denis Bovesse, 28 miles from Brussels. Before reaching this station, the highest altitude between Brussels and Namur is passed, being 192 metres above the sea, or about 640 feet English. Very rich iron ore is found in this neighbourhood, which has made this rather insignificant station important for its traffic.

Rhisnes.—Pop. 785.

The last station before reaching Namur. The train passes through several deep cuttings in rock, giving occasional peeps of very lovely country. After passing the last cutting, the line is carried over a long bank, below which lie the State railway and the river Sambre; the valley of the Sambre, thus presented to view, showing one of the richest scenes in Europe. The formidable citadel overhanging the valley on the one side, with the richly wooded hills surrounding it on the other, together with its surface so highly cultivated, is most interesting to view.

Namur.—Stat.—Pop. 26,530.—HOTELS:—HOTEL BELLE VUE, HOTEL D'HARSCAMP.

The capital of the province of Namur, at the conflux of the Sambre and the Meuse, and a well-built city, with wide and clean streets. The town is divided into two parts by the Rue de Fer and the Rue de l'Huge, leading to the Grande Place. It is defended by a citadel built on the summit of a craggy rock, from which there is a magnificent panoramic view of the Valley of the Meuse. The cathedral and the church of the Jesuits are both worthy attention: the former is a fine specimen of modern, the latter of ancient architecture. The chief curiosity of Namur is the Church of St. Loup, formerly that of the Jesuits, with decorated vaults and porphyry and black marble pillars. The citadel is very strong, one of the strongest in Belgium. Namur was taken by Louis XIV. in 1692, and has often changed masters, and is noted for the many sieges which it has sustained. The population is chiefly employed in the cutlery business. Here are extensive manufactures of fire-arms, swords, knives, scissors, and other articles of iron, copper, and brass. Quantities of leather, paper, thread, and tobacco are also prepared here.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 16, 72, 84, 90, 94, 96, 101, and 106. Change here for Cologne. The boats to Liege through the fine parts of the river have ceased running.

Proceeding from Namur to Liege, the first station is Marche-les-Dames—The scenery in the vicinity of this station is of a bold and singularly romantic description.

Huy (pronounced We.)—Stat.—Pop. 10,830.—HOTEL:—POSTE, at the water side.

This is the most flourishing and remarkable town between Namur and Liége. The fort may be distinguished in the distance shortly after leaving Bas-Oha; but a sharp bend of the river prevents the town from being seen, till the Statte tunnel has been passed, and the station entered. The fort and church are very striking; the latter possesses a fine oriel window and carved gateway. A day's stay at this town will be amply repaid; and an excursion up the valley of the Hoyoux, as far as Modave, is strongly recommended. The trout fishing in the neighbourhood is excellent.

Engis.—There are many châteaux in the neighbourhood: one, called the Château d'Aigremont, was the residence of the celebrated William de la Marcke, the "Wild Boar of the Ardennes;" another, called the Château de Chokier, is situated on the summit of a wild and rugged rock.

Flemalle.—At this station the line crosses the Meuse, and proceeds towards Liege on the other side of the river to that which it has followed since leaving Namur.

Seraing.—This town is the centre of numerous manufactories, smelting furnaces, rolling mills, and collieries, originally founded (1814) by an Englishman, John Cockerill, which employs 8000 men, and is of an extent hardly surpassed even in Great Britain. The statue of Cockerill, who was a working man's son, was set up in 1871. It may be seen immediately on the left of the station.

Ougree.—Here, also, rolling mills, furnaces, and collieries are the prevailing characteristics. After passing Ougrée the line runs along the side of a picturesque hill, and, on nearing Liege, crosses the Government line from Liege to Cologne, with which it has junction curves in the four directions. A mile and a-half beyond this point the train arrives at Longdox.

Liege.—See page 405.

Longdox, the Company's station at Liége, is much more central and nearer to the town than that of the Government, called Guillemins. From Longdox the line continues to Maestricht.

The branch line, which leaves at Flemalle, runs through a populous and thriving district, on the left bank of the Meuse, possessing many establishments and collieries. The two stations are those of Jemappe and Tilleur. The branch terminates at the Guillemins station, which is conjointly worked by the Government and Company, and where trains must be changed by those passengers going through to Verviers, Aix-la-Chapelle, and Cologne, in the one direction, or to Brussels, Antwerp, and Ostend in the other.

ROUTE 7.

New Route from Brussels to the Rhine, Switzerland, or the Baths of Germany, by Great Luxembourg Railway to Namur and Luxembourg, thence to Treves and the Moselle.

From Brussels Station, Quartier Leopold, via Boitsfort, Groenendael, &c., as in preceding Route to Namur; thence by rail to Dinant.

Excursions from Namur to Dinant may be made up the Meuse by steamer.

Dinant.—Stat.—Pop. 7,239—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE LA TETE D'OR, an excellent house, and very reasonable; recommended. Good trout fishing.

HOTEL DES POSTES. Very good.

A romantically-situated town on the banks of the Meuse, rich in historical recollections, formerly the scene of one of the bad acts of Philip the Good, who entirely destroyed the town, under circumstances of great cruelty. Some highly interesting natural curiosities may be visited in the neighbourhood—La Petite Suisse, the Grotto of Han, the Chateau of King Leopold, the Roche à Bayard, &c.; the view from the Citadel is very fine. Behind the Casino is a beautiful garden, reaching to the top of the cliff, and to which travellers have free access. From the Grotto of Han, the tourist can proceed to St. Hubert, in the Forest, about six or seven hours' walk.

From Namur the train proceeds over the Meuse by a fine bridge, and thence on to Ciney. At the Jemelle station passengers alight for Rochefort, or the Grotto of Han, to which they are conveyed by omnibus.

CONVEYANCES.—Rail to Namur and Brussels, p. 94

Rochefort.—Pop. 1300.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE LA CLOCHE D'OR; HOTEL BIRON; DE L'ETOILE.

This is a fine old picturesque town, one mile from the Station, surrounded by walls and surmounted by a ruined Castle, where Lafayette was made prisoner by the Austrians 1792.

Rochefort is in the heart of the Ardennes, and was formerly capital head-quarters for sportsmen and anglers. Excursions may be made in all directions: living, also, is very reasonable; but neither fishing nor shooting is to be had now, all having been taken up for some years past. "I might as a favour have got an occasional day's fishing and probably a day's shooting. Fish is scarce, nor is there much game."—F. R. F. The Grotto of HAN is really beautiful, and certainly very well worth seeing; the charge is 5fr. a head, besides something to the guide.

From Rochefort the railway proceeds through the valley of the Homme, and makes a circuit round the fine old castle of Miewart, thence to Poix station, four and a half miles from the Abbey of St. Hubert, which no lover of the chase ever omits to visit.

St. Hubert.—INN.—HOTEL DES PAYS BAS.

A dull town in the midst of the Forest of St. Hubert. The Abbey is a Gothic building elaborately adorned and ornamented inside. Its founder St. Hubert, the patron of sportsmen, was so fond of the chase as to hunt on Sundays, but was induced to abandon his pleasures and devote himself to the service of the church.

Luxembourg.—Stat.—Pop (1871) 14,440.

HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE COLOGNE, in the centre of the town, an old-established house, affording good accommodation.

HOTEL DU LUXEMBOURG, kept by Mr. J. P. Hastert, very well situated.

The Station is half a mile from the town. Omnibuses from the various Inns attend the different Trains, 50 c.; no cabs at the Station.

Luxembourg, capital of the Duchy and once a strong fortress garrisoned by Prussia, after being a bone of contention with France was placed under the ward of the Great Powers and dismantled 1867. The town is divided by the river Else into two parts, called the upper and lower; the former is built on a rock, and the latter forms two valleys. Notice the church of St. Nicholas, the bridge over the valley, and the ruins of the palace. The King of Holland is Duke of Luxembourg.

The line from Brussels to Luxembourg is regulated by Belgian time, which is about a quarter of an hour earlier than that of Cologne. From Luxemburg to Treves, German time is kept.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Namur, Liége, Brussels, Thionville, Treves, Metz, Strasburg, Bâle, Switzerland and Germany, see pages 72, 77, 90, 106, and 125.

Treves (Ger. Trier)—In Rhenish Prussia.—Pop. (1871) 21,425. HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE TREVES.—A first-class Hotel for families and gentlemen, highly recommended.

HOTEL ROTHES HAUS. An old-established good house, comfortable and well situated.

CAFE: Steinhaus. POST-OFFICE in Grande Place.

Cabs, 25 sgr. per hour for 3 persons.

On the right bank of the Moselle, in a rich and fertile valley, bounded with hills rich in vine-clad beauty. It is the Roman Augusta Trevirorum, and the oldest city in Germany. Chief objects of attraction are as follow:—The Cathedral of St. Peter containing the highly venerated relic of the Holy Coat, attributed to our Saviour and an object of devout pilgrimage; the Liebfrauenkirche, or Lady's Chapel. The Palace of the Electors of Treves, now a barrack. The Pillar of Granite, surmounted by a cross, which stands in the market-place, commemorative of the appearance of the fiery cross in the sky in 958. Also the Roman Baths and Amphitheatre; and the Black Gate or Porta Nigra, sometime used as a church, but restored as a gate 1817, (Schwartzes Thor), very interesting, (A.D. 312); and a Bridge over the Moselle, (B. C. 28). In the environs are Pallien, very picturesque, and a fine point of view; and Igel, 6 miles off, on the Luxembourg road, worth visiting for its beautiful Roman monument, 70 feet high. Carriages to it can be had at the Hotel de Treves. Many other traces of Roman antiquity are noticeable.

The Paulinuskirche ¼ mile outside the Porta Nigra, stands on the site of the oldest church in Treves, and has been rebuilt 5 times; the present erection is of the last century. It has a fine painted ceiling by Scheffer of Augsburg, Rubens' pupil. The Basilica Romaine has been repaired and is now a Protestant temple.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, pages 72, 77, 118, and 125. The line to Diiren is one of great beauty.

Steamers down the Moselle to Coblenz, touching at Berncastle or Trabach, in 9 hours; see Alphabetical list of Sailings.

The voyage up or down the Moselle is a most pleasant and interesting excursion, and several days may be very agreeably spent in excursions from the different towns on its beautiful banks. They are often bordered by undulating hills, covered not only by vines, but with rich wood; alternating with picturesque villages, projecting promontories, innumerable villages and towns, with ruins of castles, watch towers, and Gothic church steeples, which enliven the landscape.

The scenery begins to improve in beauty at the village of Mulheim.

Berncastel.—Pop. 3,800—HOTELS:—DREI KONIGS; POSTE.

A dirty town, but in a picturesque position, under an old castle. The walk over the hills to Trarbach affords fine views, through the centre of the vine district of the Moselle.

Trarbach.—Pop. 1,620—HOTELS:—HOTEL BERTZ; METZGU.

Most picturesquely situated in one of the valleys leading to the river, and the scenery between this and Cabern is exceedingly interesting.

Trabem.—Pop. 1,293—HOTEL CLAUS.

Fine view from Fort Montroyal.

Travellers should land opposite Punderich, and walk to Marienburg, the view from which is much admired as offering a beautiful panorama.

There is a small inn within the ruins of Marienburg, where one may breakfast or dine.

Zell.—Pop. 1,500—KOCHS' INN.—A small town opposite Marienburg.

Alf.—INN: POST.—A village prettily situated at the mouth of the valley of Isabach. Just below this there is a remarkable echo.

Cochem.—(In Rhenish Prussia.)—Pop. 2,870. HOTEL:—DE L'UNION.

Kaiser.—The view of this town from the river is very picturesque, with its two castles on the summits of the surrounding hills.

Cardon.—BRAUERS' INN.—A pretty village in one of the sweetest spots on the Moselle.

Brodenbach, near the mouth of the Ehrenbach, situate in a lovely valley, closed up in front by a rocky hill, on the summit of which is the Castle of Ehrenberg, one of the finest monuments of the Rhine or Moselle.

Cobern, a little town, defended by two castles—the Neiderberg and Oberberg—the former containing the Chapel of St. Matthias—an elegant gothic structure which deserves to be visited. The keys are with the pastor of the new church.

Diebelich.—A pretty spot, famous for witches, who are said to haunt the neighbourhood.

Guls.—A small town, conspicuous by its modern twin spires.

Moselweiss.—A village of great antiquity.

Coblentz.—On the Rhine.—See page 427.

HOLLAND, OR NETHERLAND.

HOLLAND (etymologically, Hollowland) is situated along the south-eastern coast of the North Sea, and extends in its greatest length, from N.E. to S.W., about 190 English miles. Its greatest breadth, from E. to W., is about 133 English miles. The superficial area is 7,614,252 English acres, or 11,897 English square miles. The ancient accounts of Holland represent it as an extended swamp, alternately covered with and abandoned by the waters of the ocean. Holland has had a severe contest with the ocean, which has ended as a great triumph for human industry, and in the country being brought into a high state of cultivation and comparative safety. The canals are very numerous, and of the greatest utility in draining off the waters and in facilitating the internal trade. They are lined with trees, which tend greatly to improve the country, in itself so flat that to those approaching it along the rivers, and some part of the coast, the trees and spires seem to rise out of the water. Along the coast of the North Sea there is a line of broad sand-hills and downs, in some parts so very high as to shut out the view of the sea even from the tops of the spires. In some parts of Zealand and of North Holland the defensive war against the encroachments of the sea is kept up with great difficulty and at an immense expense. The province of Friesland, which has no sandhills, is protected against the sea by stupendous dykes and palisadoes, the repair of which costs upwards of half a million sterling yearly. Vast meadows, clad with the richest verdure, are, during eight months of the year, covered with cattle, whose high condition attests an abundant and wholesome nutriment. In the North, wheat, flax, and madder are raised; and in the South, where agriculture has made the greatest progress, an inferior kind of tobacco is grown, and different kinds of fruit-trees cover the fields.

In the towns, beyond the complete collections of Dutch Paintings at the Hague and Amsterdam, (and the Japanese Collections, which circumstances render peculiar to Holland,) there is little to attract. Holland, however, presents the picture of a people owing not only their wealth and high commercial position, but even the very land, to their own labour and enterprise. The best seasons for visiting Holland are the months of May, June, September, and the middle of October.

The Dutch possess an excellent system of Education, regulated according to laws passed in 1857 and 1863, and based on a system of religious equality, and a total separation of Church and State. These laws are most complete in all their details and provisions, and ensure for every child in the country an education in the simple branches of secular knowledge. The law does not compel parents to send their children to school, but refuses all relief from the public funds unless they do so; and the result is, there are none without education. The three Universities of Leyden, Utrecht, and Groningen, contain upwards of 1400 students.

Population—(1873) 3,176,002. In 1865, 3,529,108. The Protestants amount to 2,193,281; the Catholics to 1,313,084. There are about 68,000 Jews. The Protestant and Catholic clergy are paid by the state.

Several dialects are spoken in Holland; the Dutch, which is in fact an offspring of the Low German or Nieder Deutsch, is the language of two-thirds of the inhabitants. Flemish is spoken on the Belgian frontier, and the provinces have each their peculiar dialect; that of Friesland partakes of the ancient Frison, that of Guelderland and Overijsselretains much of the ancient Low Saxon intermixed with modern Dutch. French and English are generally understood by the middle and upper classes.

Government.—A Constitutional Monarchy, dating from 1814, and styled Het Koningrijk der Nederlanden, or "Kingdom of the Netherlands," the proper name of the country. William III., born 1817, is reigning King; Grand Duke of Luxembourg and Duke of Limburg; his eldest son is William Prince of Orange, born 1840. The first chamber is chosen by the Provincial States, and consists of 39 members who sit during nine years. The second Chamber consists of 72 members, sitting 4 years and chosen by ballot by the tax-payers. The chief legislative power resides in the second Chamber, which contains the most eminent political men in the country. There is religious toleration, though the prevailing religion is Protestantism. Each of the 11 Provinces has its own Governor, or "King's Commissioner," and its Provincial States. Revenue—(1874), 7¾ millions sterling. Debt, 77 millions. The Colonial Government is vested nominally in the Crown, the "States" having a right of inquiry and of voting the supplies.

Productive Industry.—At present the manufactures of Holland are upon a narrow though gradually increasing scale. Linen, tapes, and other smallware are partially manufactured, principally for domestic consumption. There are now many large manufactories in Enschede and Tilbourg that supply the Dutch Indies with calicoes, cloths, &c., &c. The sugar-refining trade is extensively cultivated; and the manufacture of tobacco and snuff gives employment to a large number of persons. The breweries are also extensive; but the building of ships, barges, and boats, form the staple industry of many of the localities on the banks of the rivers. There are several rising Iron and Metal Works at Rotterdam, The Hague, and Amsterdam. The Imports and Exports from and to England are worth 25¾ millions, and 14 millions respectively.

Routes to Holland.—Grimsby to Rotterdam, by the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company's first-class Steamers, every Wednesday and Saturday. Average passage,—hours. See advr. page 715. Hull to Amsterdam.—The "Alert," every Wednesday. Hull to Geestemunde in about 30 hours. See page 311. Hull to Rotterdam.—Steamers, in 20 hours. Distance about 210 miles. See p. 311. London to Rotterdam, by the Netherland Steamboat Co.'s Steamers every Wednesday Thursday, and Saturday embarking passengers at Brunswick Wharf, Blackwall—for times of sailing, see advertisements on page 730. Distance about 200 miles. By the Great Eastern Railway, via HARWICH, from the Bishopsgate Station every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. For hours of departure during the month refer to page opposite the cover. Also Steamers every Wednesday and Saturday, at 11 a.m. in summer, in 18 hours, by the General Steam Navigation Co.'s vessels from St. Katherine's Steam Wharf. Rotterdam to Antwerp "per Telegraph" steamer, in about 7 hours.

Money.—100 cents = 1 guilder, or florin = 1s. 8d. The Gold coinage, which was suppressed in 1850 and has not since been re-established, consisted of 10 and 5 gulden pieces; but the re-establishment of a gold currency of a fineness of 9-10ths with pieces of 10 florins and 5 florins, weighing respectively 6·774 grammes and 3·387 grammes, and worth 16s. 8d. and 8s. 4d. English, is now (May, 1875,) being embodied in a project of law. The silver coins are pieces of 2½, 1, and ½ guldon or florins, worth respectively 4s. 2d., 1s 8d., and 10d. sterling. There are also in silver, of a lower standard, 25, 10, and 5 cent pieces. worth respectively 5d., 2d., 1d. sterling. The copper coins are the cent and the half-cent. Money Notes are issued by the Government of the value 10, 50, and 100 guilders; Bank of Netherlands Notes, value 25, 40, 60, 100, and 1000 guilders. The name "stiver," meaning a 5 cent piece (= 1d) is nearly obsolete. See The Merchant's Handbook, by W. A. Browne, LL.D., London, Stanford. In Rotterdam Dutch money may be had at De Waal's Exchange Office, Boompjes.

Railways.—The Hollandsche Ijzeren Spoorweg, from Rotterdam to the Hague, Leyden, Haarlem, and Amsterdam, and from Helder to Amsterdam; the Nederlandsche Rhijn Spoorweg, or Dutch Rhenish Railway, from Rotterdam to Amsterdam, Arnhem, and Emmerich, vis Gouda; the Centraal Spoorweg, from Utrecht to Zwolle; the Staatsspoorwegen, from Harlingen to Groningen; Arnhem to Salzbergen; Bergen-op-Zoom to Roosendaal; and Rotterdam to Eindhoven, Venlo, Maastricht, and Liége. See pages 108 to 114. Cabs and Omnibuses ply to and from the Stations; a tariff is suspended in every cab. On Sundays, Railway Return Tickets are issued at reduced prices. At the principal Stations of the Dutch Rhenish Railway Co., there is now a cloak room; fee for each package, 2d.

Canals.—These afford abundant modes of conveyance, several times a day, to all the large towns, forming not only the high roads, but almost the streets of Holland. Fares for barges (Trekschuiten) about 5 cents. per mile. Rate of travelling, five miles per hour. Some faster ones are moved by steam;-for example, from Rotterdam to Delft; and they are worth travelling in by those who wish to become acquainted with the country and people.

Inns.—The average charges are—bed, 1 florin; breakfast, 70 cents.; tea, ditto; dinner, with wine, 2½ florins; table d'hôte at 4 o'clock. Service ½ florin. The city of Amsterdam is supplied from Haarlem with good water fit for table use, but the effervescing water from the Nassau springs, or artificial mineral water, is generally adopted for drinking by travellers.

Carriages.—Hire of carriages in Holland very expensive.

Books.—English travellers in Holland wishing to render their visit interesting to themselves on account of the historical associations of the country would do well to read Motley's "Rise of the Dutch Republic," and his "History of the United Netherlands," or Channing's Concise "History of the Netherlands," before leaving home.

Rimmel's Perfumery, 136, Kalver Straat.

Amsterdam, or An stel-dam, the real capital of Holland, on the Amstel, a branch of the Iy, or Y, which is an inlet of the Zuyder Zee, and constitutes its port. It communicates with the North Sea by the North Holland Canal, 50 miles in length; the most stupendous undertaking of the kind ever executed, which commences opposite Amsterdam, and extends to the Helder and the Texel. It required 6 years, and 12 million guilders to complete it; as, however, it is altogether inadequate to the necessities of modern commerce, it is about to be superseded by a shorter canal through the isthmus of Holland, at an expense of two millions sterling. This new canal (now nearly finished) will run through the Y, which will then be drained, and the connection with the Zuyder Zee will be kept up by a sluice. The circumference of the city walls is nine miles. It is entirely built upon piles driven into the sand beneath. Its numerous canals are spanned by nearly 300 bridges; the most beautiful is that of the Hooge Sluis, on the Amstel, from which the finest view of the town may be obtained. Here is St. Anthony's Gate, a heap of brick spires, now a medical school. The Palace is a vast stone structure built upon 13,695 piles; it cost the city two million and a half. It stands on the Dam, near the Memorial of 1831, the Exchange, Post Office, Nieuwe Kerk, and Seamen's Club, The Stadhuis or Town Hall has several portraits. There is a fine gallery of Dutch paintings in the Oude-mannen Huis, which belonged to the late Mr. Van der Hoop or Hope; open 10 to 4, by a small payment. There are about 200 paintings by Ruysdael, Rembrandt, Berghem, Cuyp, &c., at the national gallery in the Trippenhuis, called Rijk's Museum; among the principal paintings are Van der Helst's fine portrait, pictures of the City Guard and Archer's Guild, G. Douw's Evening School, P. Potter's Bear Hunt, Rembrandt's Night Watch: open daily; Saturdays by payment.

The Amsterdam Crystal Palace, a large and handsome pile near the Dutch Rhenish Railway Station, open at all times to the public, charge 25 cents. Day concerts (generally on Sunday morning), 50 cents: evening concerts), 1 guilder.

Concert in the Park two evenings in the week (Tuesday and Sunday), admission, 2½ guldcn. On Tuesday morning a band plays in the park, and ladies only are then admitted. It contains a statue of Vendel the Dutch poet.

The Zoological Gardens, (admission 75 cents.), and the gallery of modern paintings recently bequeathed to the city by the late Mr. Fodor, (admission 50 cents.), are well worth visiting. The celebrated Spinoza, and the painters Brandt, Van Eckout, Van Huysum, Vander Velde, Weenix, Ferdinand Bol, Rembrandt, Metsu, and Paul Potter were born in Amsterdam. Kalver Straat is the chief business street. Rembrandt's monument is in the Oude Kerk, in Warmoes Straat; it is a beautiful structure, and has a splendid organ, and fine chimes. The Nieuwe Kerk possesses a magnificent pulpit; the mausoleums of Admirals de Ruyter and Bentinck, and of Vondel.

Marine.—The Docks of the Royal Navy, the Entrepôt Dock, and the Dykes of the Port, with the Harbour and Quay, deserve inspection.

Squares.—The Dam, Botermarkt, Mlow Markt, and Visch Markt, near which is Rembrandt's statue. His house was behind the museum.

Other buildings are the Spin House for women; a large Cellular Prison; the Orphan Houses; Refuge for the Aged; De Ruyter's house on the Quay.

The diamond-cutting industry supports 10,000 workmen, of whom 9000 are Jews. At Koster's, the Kohinoor and other stones were cut; admittance (by order) 1 florin, for the sick fund. Much furniture is made at Amsterdam.

The show village of Broek, or Brook, is 5 miles distant from the landing place, to which the ferry goes constantly. At Zaandam, where Peter the Great wrought, his house is preserved, among hundreds of saw mills. Fish dinner here.

ENGLISH CONSUL.—J. G. Newenham, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—C. Mueller, Esq.

Arnhem, or Arnheim.—Stat.—Pop. (1673) 35,192—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE BELLE VUE; SUN; BEAR'S HEAD.

Arnheim, the residence of many Dutch nobility, is prettily situated on the Rhine; and the environs contain several old castles, of the Dukes of Guelderland, Roosendaal, Biljuen, and Doerwerth, which are all worth visiting. The ramparts are now transformed into promenades. The Cathedral is surmounted by a tower and one of the most remarkable carillons in Holland. The Town Hall is called De vil's House, from the faces on it. Here Sir Philip Sidney died after his wound at Zutphen, (28 m.) 1586. A fine iron girder bridge crosses the Yssel. Within a short distance are Saansbeck Castle; Bronbeek House (1 m.), for invalid soldiers from India, containing many pictures and other objects of notice; and Middagten Castle (6 m.) belonging to the well-known Bentinck family. Het Loo, or Loo, the king's country seat, is 20 m. distant, near the beautiful village of Aspeldoorn.

CONVEYANCES—Steamers to Cologne and Rotterdam. p. 328. Railway, pp. 112, 113, 115, 120, 151.

Breda.—Stat.—Pop. 15,000.—HOTELS:

DE FLANDER; GOUDEN LEEUW.

A strong fortress, surrounded by water and morasses. The Protestant Church is a noble building, with a spire 365 feet high, containing tombs of the lords of Breda and Counts of Nassau whose Castle is now a Military Academy. Notice the Church of St. John; and the Stadhuis or Town Hall. Prince Maurice took it by stratagem in a barge, 1590. Charles II. was here in exile. Cow hair Carpets made. Rail, see pp. 103, 108.

Brielle.—On the right-hand bank of the river Maas, ascending to Rotterdam. Here the Custom house officers come on board. Birthplace of Admiral Tromp, & De Witt; and the first place taken in the rising of 1572 against the Spaniards.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—A. Mos, Esq.

Delft.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 23,000. HOTELS: CASINO; HEERENLOGEMEN

The Stadhuis is a fine building in the Square, near the New Church, which contains an elaborate monument (with his faithful dog) erected by the States in memory of William I., Prince of Orange, who was assassinated here in 1584, in a convent, now the Prinzenhof barrack. Here also lie the remains of Grotius a native of Delft; his tomb, is very simple. In the Old Church, distinguished by its leaning tower, is the monument of Admiral Van Tromp. On an island near the entrance of the town is the State Arsenal, formerly the Dutch East India House. Here also are the East India Academy; and the Academy for Engineers and Canal works. A little coarse pottery is made: but the trade for which the town was famous, is for the most part transferred to Maastricht. A pleasant excursion may be made to the Hague, 4½ miles, on the Trekschuit. Van der Venne, Jan Steen, and Leeuwenhoek, the naturalist were born here; as well as Pensionary Heinsius.

Dordrecht (or Dort.)—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 25,577.—HOTELS:—

BELLE-VUE; WOLK; DES ARMES D'AMERIQUE.

One of the oldest towns in Holland, and the first place where an Assembly of the States was held 1572, after casting off the Spanish yoke. It is situated on an island of the Maas, formed by the inundation of 1421, which swallowed up 70 villages. Huge rafts of timber brought down by the Rhine from the Swiss and German forests come in here to be broken up and stored in hundreds of saw mills and ship yards. Here are a Town Hall and disused Mint. The famous Protestant Synod of 1618, which condemned Arminius was held in an old gothic edifice, now a public-house. There is a pulpit of white marble finely carved in the large Church, whose tall square tower is seen from a great distance; there are also numerous monuments, and its plate is of gold, the gift of an East-India merchant. Cuyp, Vossius, and the brothers De Witt were born here; with Ary Scheffer, to whom there is a statue.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—J. Mauritz, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 103 & 108.

Flushing, or Vlissingen.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000. H. DUKE OF WELLINGTON; DU COMMERCE.

A fortified port in Zeeland, on the south side of Walcheren, in the mouth of the West Scheldt; having deep water harbours, and new docks, opened 1873. It contains a Church, Dockyards, and Admiralty Board, with a Light-house, and Observatory, near which is a monument to the famous Admiral de Ruyter, who was born here. It was bombarded by the English in the disastrous Walcheren campaign of 1809, when many thousands of our troops died here of fever. The rail vid Middelburg and Goes, makes this one of the best starting points for the Rhine and Germany.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see p.p. 111, 112, 119.

There is a direct service between England, Germany, Belgium and Holland via Sheerness and Flushing, see page 112.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—P. de Bruyne, Esq.

AMERICAN C. AGENT.—J. Hector, Esq.

Rail to Middelburg, containing a good Church, and a fine Town-hall, with its 25 statues of the Counts of Zeeland.

Gouda.—Stat.—Pop. 15,776—HOTELS:—

DOELEN; DU SAUMON; HARTHUIS.

A town, about 13 English miles from Rotterdam, on the railway to Utrecht. Here is a large Square, with an old brick Town Hall and St. John's large Church containing 31 remarkably curious painted windows done 1560—1605, by the brothers Crabeth; entrance 3 stivers, one given by Philip and Mary of England, contains their portraits; another is the siege of Leyden. Gouda is the junction for the Hague and Rotterdam.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 113.

Haarlem.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 32,758 (10,500 Catholics)—HOTELS:—LION D'OR; THE CROWN. DES ARMES D'AMSTERDAM; LEEUWERYK. (Lark) LOGEMANT VAN HOUTMANN. Café Restaurant: Noord en Zuid Hollandsche.

Carriages to Bloemendaal, 4 fl.; to Velsen, 6 fl.; Zandvoort, 4 fl.

On the Spaarne, 18 miles from Leyden, near the former Lake of Haarlem (70,000 acres, drained since 1845). This part of the line is chiefly cut through the Dunes, or sandhills. The old walls are laid out in fine walks; two or three brick gates deserve notice. In the Market square are the picturesque Stadhuis, and butchery; the Groote Kerk of St. Bavon; and the statue of Coster a native, whom the Dutch claim as the inventor of printing; it faces his house. Other natives are Van der Heist, Wouvermanns, Van Ostade, Ruysdael, Berghem. The powerful organ in the Groote Kerk contains 5,000 pipes; performance three times a week; at other times, a fee of 12 guilders (£1) must be paid to the organist; this will, however, admit a party It was built by Christian Muller (1738) and played by Mozart, aged 10 years. The Church contains a monument of the poet Bilderdyk. A fine view from the tower; for a party 1½ fl.

The three straight lines of the railway, the high road, and along row of willows, give a strikingly singular effect to the prospect. Haarlem stood a tremendous siege against the Spaniards in 1572. The locality is famous for hyacinths, tulips, and other "Dutch bulbs." An excursion may be made to the country houses at Bloemendaal, among the sand hills, near the sea and Brederode Castle. Half-an-hour from the station, at the entrance to the beautiful Wood is a Gallery of modern paintings in the King's Palace, fee 50 cents. Here Napoleon III, was born 1808, when his father was King of Holland. A monument to Coster stands in the wood, where he formed his first notions of block printing.

HAGUE The—Stat.—Pop (1873) 94,895—(with Map in Special Edition.)—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DU VIEUX DOELEN, first-rate, cannot be too highly recommended. Mr. Van Santen, Prop.

HOTEL DE BELLE VUE will be found deserving our best recommendation.

HOTEL PAULEZ.—Capital house, well situated. Landlord, Mr. Paulez.

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, Lange Houtstraat. Large and well situated. H. J. Bougers, proprietor.

RIMMEL'S PERFUMERY, 25, Hoogstraat. Wholesale and export.

POST OFFICE,—Near the old Stadhuis (1564) and Groote Kerk, or St. James's. Theatre, in the Horse Market, for Dutch plays and French opera.

CABS from the station, 1—2 persons, 60 c., and 3—4 persons, 85 c. Omnibus 25c. To Scheveningen, from 1 to 4 persons, there and back, 2 florins. Or, tramway every half hour from the Kneuterdijk, 20c. morning, and 25c. evening.

The Hague, so called from the Dutch name, 's Gravenhage, the Count's Park, begun here 1250, by the Counts of Holland, is the residence of the Court and Government, 14 miles from Rotterdam, 5 miles from the sea. One attraction is a collection of Dutch Masters at the Museum, in the Maurits Huis, open daily, (free), except Sunday, from 9 till 3; on Saturday from 10 till 1. Among these may be mentioned Paul Potter's splendid Bull. Rembrandt's Anatomical Lesson, and Vandyck's portrait of Simon, the painter. In the lower apartments is the Royal Cabinet of Curiosities, (open from 11 to 1,) consisting of historical relics, and Chinese and Japanese costumes, &c. In the Museum of the Navy are the Barents relics, found in Nova Zembla, 1872.

Near the Voorhout and Vyverberg Square, the most open and best built parts, are the Vyver Lake, and the curious remains of the Old Palace, consisting of the Buitenhof, and Binnenhof, or Outer, and Inner Courts, of brick, both worth notice. The Dutch Parliament house (admittance free) is situated in the Buitenhof, opposite the statue of William II., king of the Netherlands, erected 1853. A bronze statue of William I., Prince of Orange, stands near the Museum; and a beautiful equestrian statue of the same opposite the King's new Palace, which is a Greek pile, with wings. It may be visited during the King's absence; fee expected, 1 guilder. Zoological Garden; admittance 50 cents, and Concert, Evening (Monday), 1 guilder. The New Church has a spire resting on arches.

Here is the house where Jan de Witt, the grand pensionary of Holland lived, near the spot where he and his brother were murdered, 1672. Huygens the inventor of the pendulum clock, and William III., of England, were born here, and here Charles II. of England passed the greater portion of his exile. The Palace in the Wood or Bosch (Bush,) stands at the end of a magnificent plantation of beeches and oaks, grouped round ornamental lakes of water. It is a plain building externally, but the interior is grand; here is Jordsen's chef d'œuvre, the Apotheosis of Prince Frederick Henry.

Leyden or Leiden, (pronounced Lyden.)—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 39,869—HOTELS:—

DU LION D'OR; DU SOLEIL D'OR; RYNLAND; BELLE VUE; VERHAAF. Café Zomerzorg.

Distance from the Hague, 10 miles, 23 from Rotterdam, and 30 from Amsterdam. It stands on 50 small islands made by the Rhine (here a mere canal) and its branches, and has some old ramparts, now planted; with a large brick Fort, on an artificial hill made by Drusus, the site of the Roman Lugdunum Batavorum, deserving a visit. The celebrated University ranks as the first in Holland. Boerhaave, Grotius, Descartes, Arminius, Linnæus, Goldsmith, and Scaliger, were professors and scholars. Its Museums, the Japanese Collection of Dr. Siebold, (open 9 to 5, 50 cents.) and the Botanical Garden, of 7 acres, form the chief objects of interest. Museum of Antiquities, (50 cents.) and Natural history, (12 to 3, 50 cents.) There are 100 portraits in the public Hall.

Hooglandsche Kerk of the 12th and 13th cent., has the monument of the Burgomaster, Van der Werf, heroic defender of Leyden, 1574, when the sea swept away the Spanish army and relieved the city. St. Peter's of the 12th to 14th cent., has monuments of Boerhaave, the Chinese Campfer, the botanist Clusius, and the philologist Scaliger. The Breede Straat is the longest and handsomest in Leyden, containing the Raadhuis (Red House,) Council-house, with a triptych of the Last Judgment by Lucas de Leyde, and paintings of the anabaptist leader Jan Beukeler, or John of Leyden. St. Pancras is 270 feet long.

Otto Venius, Gerard Douw, Van der Velde, Mieris, and the Elzevirs were born here; and Rembrandt was born at his father's mill, near Leyerdorf, on the Rhine, which discharges itself in the North Sea at Katwyk. Railway, see page 114

Moerdyck.—Stat.—Pop. 1,200. H. HOFMANN.

A ferry on the Hollands Deep, in a moory spot—hence the name. Here, when crossing the broad and rough ferry, Prince John William of Orange was drowned, 1711. A fine viaduct (for a single rail) on 14 spans of 100 metres each, making a length of 1½ mile now carries the rail over it to Dort and Rotterdam. (See p. 108.)

Railway to Breda and Antwerp, p. 104; Steamer to Dort (1 hour), and Rotterdam (2 hours.)

Nymegen or Nimeguen.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 22,721. HOTELS:—DES PAYS BAS; DE VILLE DE FRANCFORT; DE ROTTERDAM.

Nymegen, a frontier town, (the Roman Noviomagus,) situated on the left bank of the Waal, and strongly fortified. Chief buildings—Townhall, with its two rows of statues of German Emperors in front, containing some portraits, the Riddle of the Picture, a "Mantle" for Adulterers, the chains in which the patriot Schenk was hung by the Spaniards, 1569, and a few Roman antiquities; the Cathedral, of the 13th century, a gothic edifice of brick, with tombs of the Dukes of Guelderland, 1569, and the ruins of Schloss Falkenhof, on a height, including brick remains of heathen and Christian temples. The Belvidere, on the Hunerberg, commands a fine view over the Rhine, Waal, and Yssel, as they branch off at the delta, while the Maas is seen stretching to the south. Baldenbosch has old plantations. In 1799, the Rhine here rose 7 feet in one hour at the general thaw, and nearly overran the province. Beek on the Prussian frontier, reached by omnibus.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Cleves, &c. p. 120. Steamers daily to Rotterdam and the Rhine, 326.

Rotterdam.—Stat—Pop. 125,893.—HOTELS: HOTEL STADS HERBERG; Proprietor, H. Leygraaf, An exceedingly comfortable and good house.

VICTORIA HOTEL.—Newly opened in the centre of the New Town (West end), opposite the landing place, on the fashionable promenade.

NEW BATH HOTEL.—First-Class Hotel, well situated, newly restored—moderate charges.

ADLER'S HOTEL DES PAYS BAS, newly fitted up; can be highly recommended.

HOTEL DE L' EUROPE, conveniently situated. Recommended to English & American travellers.

HOTEL VERHAAREN (Spaansche Kade); good.

POST-OFFICE, in Wijn Straat, or Wine Street.

A large commercial city in South Holland, 14 m. from the Hague, the second in the kingdom for importance and extent, on the dam along the Rotte, (a branch of the Maas)—hence Rotterdam. The Maas here resembles an arm of the sea, although nearly 20 miles from its mouth The steam packets arrive and land their passengers at the Quay, and the shady walk called Boompjes, (j is sounded as i) from having been built of wooden piles (booms.) Here was the Dutch East India House, now turned into warehouses for coffee, sugar, and other colonial produce. Rotterdam is above a mile and a half in extent and is intersected, even more than other Dutch towns, by canals, which divide it into several insulated spots, connected by balance-bridges. These canals are almost all bordered with trees. Next to Hoogstraat or High-street, the principal thoroughfare, come the Haringvliet, and Willemsbad, a new quay, in continuation of the Boompjes. The other streets are in general long, but narrow. The red brick houses are four to five and six stories, many having mirrors outside of the windows.

CURIOSITIES.—The Groote Kerk or Cathedral of St. Lawrence, containing monuments of Admirals de Witt, Van Brakel, and Cortenaer; and a very fine organ. The Old Church, having a high square tower with a good prospect. The South Church; Town-House, near the New Church; a large and handsome Exchange; and sailors' Home. Cabinet of the Batavian Society of Experimental Philosophy; the Court of Justice; Botanical Gardens or Park, with the Statue of Tollens, a poet; and the Zoological Gardens, near the Delft gate, and the Station. House of Correction for young criminals. Boyman's Museum of Dutch paintings. House in which Erasmus was born (1467), in the Kerkstraat; and the statue of Erasmus, in the Groote-Markt. The Netherlands Steam Engine manufactory. A handsome yacht club. The annual Kermis, or fair, in the middle of August, lasts a week.

GRANDE HOTEL DES BAINS; in front of this hotel military music every evening, weather permitting.

A fishing town and chief watering place in Holland, much frequented; 3 miles from the Hague, by an avenue shaded with elms and oaks, leading from the front of the King's Palace. Tramway carriages every half hour; fare, 20 cents and 30 cents.

ENGLISH CONSULAR AGENT.—A Maas, Esq.

Schiedam.—Stat.—Pop. ('72) 20,778—HOTEL DORLEN. On the Schie, 3½ miles from Rotterdam, and noted for its Hollands gin, so called from being flavoured with genever or juniper berries. It has 200 distilleries, constantly enveloping it in smoke; swarming with millions of white beetles.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see p. 114.

Utrecht.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 63,140. HOTELS: PAYS BAS; BELLE VUE; KASTEEL V. ANTWERPEN.

The Roman Trajectum, capital of the province, and seat of many families of rank, 23 miles from Amsterdam, where the Vecht parts from the Old Rhine, which runs 20 feet below the road. The Cathedral Tower, 321 feet high, commands a fine view (25 cents), and has a good chime of 49 bells. It stands by itself, cut off from the other remnants of the Church, viz: A noble gothic choir or cloister. Here are a modern Stadhuis; Mint; Willems Barrack or Old Stadhuis, where the peace of 1713 was signed; Janseniste Church ("To God"); and the Governor's residence, near the Paushuizen or Pope's House, a curious pile built by Pope Adrian VI., who was born here. At the Vergulde Poortje Café, near the Neude, are remains of the Golden Gate. The University has 500 students; a library of 50,000 vols.; School of Veterinary Surgery; a fine wax anatomical museum; botanical gardens, and observatory.

The town-walks round the old fortifications, and an avenue of trees called the Maliebaan (Mall) a mile and a half long, are attractive.

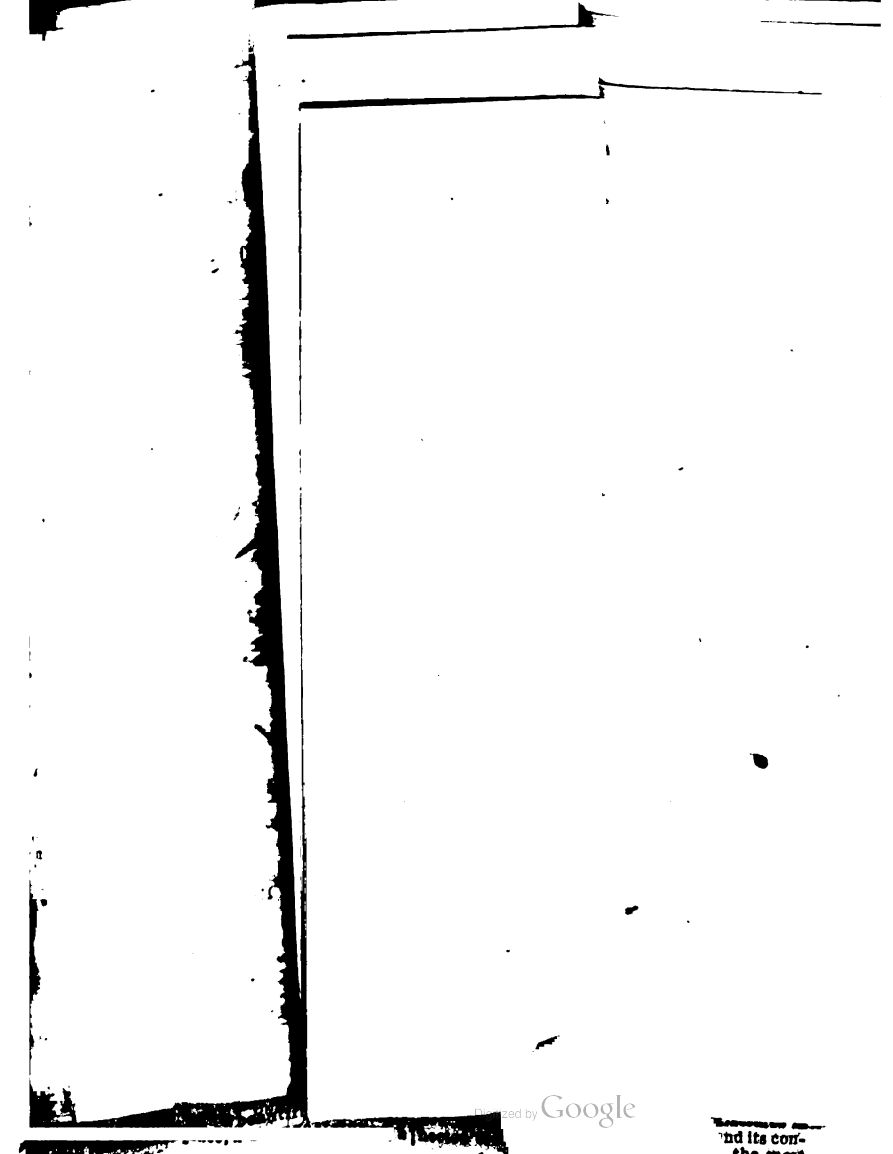
Steamers from Hull to Antwerp and Hull to Rotterdam; see pages 311, 312. The voyage down the Rhine, from Strasburg (Kehl), to London, may be performed by steamboat in 82 hours, for £2 17s. 10d.; and by railway and steam-boat in 42 hours. Grimsby to Antwerp, see page 309.

Travellers seldom make use of the Rhine Steamers below Cologne, as the scenery is flat and monotonous, and the expense of extra provisions and loss of time more than equals the extra expense of travelling by rail from Rotterdam. On the Rhine and in Germany the Railway is called Eisenbahn.

Steamers on the Rhine.—The new American boats lately put on, are very commodious and agreeable, besides being very swift. They are divided into three cabins—Pavilion, Chief cabin, and Fore cabin. Refreshments are provided on board at a moderate rate, by a printed tariff. The quickest boats go, in one day, down the Rhine, from Mannheim to Cologne and Dusseldorf; Mayence to Dusseldorf; Dusseldorf to Rotterdam. Up the stream, in one day, from Cologne to Mannheim in summer, and to Coblenz in winter. The following will be found the average time occupied on the voyage between:—

	MILES.	DOWN.	UP.
Rotterdam and Emmerich	111	8 hrs.	12hrs.
Emmerich and Düsseldorf	72½	.. ..	10 ,,
Düsseldorf and Cologne	31½	3 hrs.	5 hrs
Cologne and Mayence	127	9 ,,	12½ ,,
Mayence and Mannheim	46½	3½ ,,	5½ ,,
Mannheim and Strasburg	7½	,,	7 ,,



In addition to the above stations, there are 38 small Towns and 21 Landing-places at which the steamers touch, some at the most picturesque points. At any of them, without exception, the tourist may land, and continue his journey when he pleases, up or down the river, by any of the companies' steamers. He has only to take care to have his ticket marked by the conductor of the boat before leaving it, and to re-embark in a steamer belonging to the same company. For landing or embarking at any of these points the charge is three halfpence. Upon disembarking, a small charge is made for each article of baggage placed in care of the boatman. A tariff fixes the amount of charge, which is often doubled by the men of the boat; but the Conductor, who generally speaks English, if referred to, will rectify this imposition, and declare the real sums which ought to be paid. In dining on board, the best course to adopt is, to examine, before dinner, the Tariff hung up in the cabin, note the price of dinner and the wine you require, and pay that amount to the waiter without asking what you have to pay. Tickets must be taken before going on board. The Rhine Steamer Company issues Luggage Tickets (A, B, C,) which entitle the holder (in case his luggage is lost), to 30, 10, or 5 thalers compensation. The fee for these tickets between Cologne and Mannheim is A 2, B 2, C 1 groschen.

Money.—See pages lii and liii, and page 432.

Scenery.—Below Bonn, 18 miles from Cologne, or above Mayence, there is scarcely any object striking enough to merit admiration. About Bonn the scenery of the Rhine may be said to begin with the Seven Mountains, between which and Mayence the turreted towns, castellated ruins, and vine-terraced hills, succeed each other in picturesque profusion. The most appropriate starting place to explore the inland glories of the Rhine are Godesberg, Coblenz, St. Goar, Bingen, and Mayence.

The Sources of the Rhine (ancient Rhenus, and German Rhein,) are near those of the Rhône at Ticino, in the Rhein-thal, an elevated region of the Grisons, bordering on Mont St. Gothard, 86 miles from its mouth, 7700 feet above the sea. Passing through Lake Constance, it tumbles over the Falls of Schaffhausen, receives between it and Bale the influx of several Swiss rivers, and after a course of nearly 200 miles past Strassburg and Speyer, during which it is increased by the Neckar at Mannheim, and at Mayence by the Main, it enters, near Bingen, the gorge or Rheingau, of 110 or 12 miles, in which its greatest beauties lie. Some parts of the Dart and Tamar at home rival these, but they are on a smaller scale. Passing Cologne, Wesel, and Emmerich, to the Netherlands, it expands into a delta, and creeps by several mouths, into the North Sea, almost losing its identity. The Waal mouth goes to Rotterdam, the Yssel to the Zuyder Zee; and one mouth called Old Rhine, but not wider than a canal, passes by Utrecht and Leyden. The greatest breadth of the river is at Düsseldorf, 2000 feet. Steamers and barges can ascend to Bale. It flows through, and gives name to the Rhenish provinces of Prussia,—Bavaria, (called the Palatinate,) Hesse-Darmstadt, and Baden; and to the former French Departments of Haut and Bas Rhin, annexed as Elsass to Germany, 1871; so that the Rhine is now a German river. The States on the German side formed the Confederation of the Rhine under Napoleon I.

BREIDENBACHER HOF, or HOTEL DISCH, the nearest of the first class hotels to the Railway Station.

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, near the Railway stations Post-office, and landing place of the Rhine steamers; an excellent house and highly recommended. Madame Gœtzen, proprietress.

Düsseldorf is one of the nicest and most regular towns on the Rhine, with a beautiful public garden. In the Market place, a bronze statue on a pedestal of grey marble is erected to the Elector, John William, by Grepello, to whom Düsseldorf owes much of its splendour. The principal buildings are the barracks; churches of Lambert; of the Jesuits, and of the Cordeliers; the ancient Castle, the residence of the Electors; the Hotel de Ville, &c. The present gallery is a remnant of a celebrated one, the best pictures of which were removed to Munich, 1805; but the School of Painting here is very celebrated. Theatre here.

Travellers for Hanover, Berlin, cross the river by omnibus on a bridge of boats.

Elberfeld.—Stat.—HOTELS:—HOTEL ZUM WEIDENHOF, HOTEL HASENCLEVER.

Elberfeld, in the Wüpperthal, population (1871, 71,400, besides 74,500 in the adjoining town of Barmen; a considerable manufacturing town, the cotton capital of Germany. Two centuries since the population of Elberfeld was scarcely a thousand. The pure mountain stream of the Wüpper, particularly adapted for bleaching, first led to the establishment of linen works here. Undressed yarn comes from Hesse, Brunswick, Hildesheim, and Hanover. France, Italy, Spain, Russia, America, &c., consume vast quantities of these goods. Fringes, bed-tickings, thread, thread-lace, &c. also employ a large number of workmen. In fact Elberfeld proves by the quality and quantity of its productions that Prussia which already stands among the first for steel manufactures is not far behind in the article of cotton and its connected branches. The district is now the most populous in Germany. Dyeing with Turkish red has become another very important branch since 1780; and the silk manufacture, since 1760, has been of equal importance, large quantities being exported annually. View from the Belvidere.

AMERICAN C. AGENT.—E. Hoeckster, Esq.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE.—At the Missions Haus, Barmen, and five Colliery Stations in the Westphalia district adjoining; assistant Chaplain, Rev C. C. Campbell, M.A.

N.B.—Travellers proceeding from Cologne to London via Antwerp or Rotterdam per G.E.R., can Register their Luggage through to London via Harwich. Office: 12, Dombof. Travellers who intend proceeding to London by Steamer direct from Antwerp, should Register their Luggage only as far as Antwerp.

HOTEL DISCH, in Bridge street, (not the Restaurant of the same name,) very highly recommended. The Hotel Disch is centrally situated, and much frequented by English families and single gentlemen. The proprietors, Messrs. Disch & Capellan, have a large assortment of the best Rhine and Moselle wines for wholesale.

At Deutz, the HOTEL DE BELLE VUE, on the opposite side of the Rhine, facing Cologne, of which it commands a fine view. Reading-rooms, baths, concerts.

HOTEL DE HOLLANDE, facing the Quay, commands a view of the Rhine—very good house. Moderate charges.

HOTEL DU NORD.—Excellent Hotel, near the Central Station, the Cathedral, the Rhine, &c.

GRAND HOTEL VICTORIA.—Situated on the Haymarket, close to the Rhine—exceedingly good in every respect; capital Table d'Hôte.

HOTEL DU DOME, Dome Square, exactly opposite the cathedral, two minutes' walk from the Central Station. A good second-class hotel. Joseph Kupper (Cooper), courier and guide at the Hotel du Dome, is recommended to English visitors.

Hotel Ernst, Hotel Europe, Hotel Holgera, Friedrichs Hof, Wiener Hof, Kolnischer Hof. Cafés Restaurant:— Reichard, Hampshr, Café Kobele, Royal, La Bourse, Gertruden Hof, Brewery Restaurant, Wanscheidt and Leux.

BANK AND EXCHANGE OFFICE:—Mr. J. J. Niessen, 12, Cathedral Place.

CONVEYANCE AND GENERAL COMMISSION OFFICE.—W. Timms & Co., 4, Domkloster, opposite the Cathedral, may be entrusted with every commission business.

Cologne, a city and fortress of Prussia, on the Rhine' has 20 churches, 8,500 houses, 19 gates, 23 squares, 270 streets, is strongly fortified, and possesses a Bridge upon 39 boats across the Rhine, 1250 feet in length. (Passengers pay 2 pfennings each.) It carries on a brisk trade.

GUIDES may be hired at the Hotels.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Cathedral which is 511 ft. by 231 ft. merits the traveller's first notice, (within 50 yards from the Railway Station.) Entrance of the nave and transept free all the day. Choir open 6 to 10 and 3 to 3.30, but you can only walk about in it from 8 to 9. At other hours you must pay: to inspect the Cathedral, 10 sgr. each; to see the Choir, and the Treasury of the Three Kings, 15 silvergroschen each person. Or 25 silvergroschen each, to see everything, and ascend the tower without a guide. It was commenced in 1248, and is not yet finished, but its colossal proportions and magnificent architecture are calculated to inspire feelings of admiration. It is necessary to walk or drive round the area in which the cathedral stands, to see the full beauty of the structure. When it is entirely finished it will be the most splendid and perfect specimen of Gothic architecture in the world. The choir is especially remarkable. The nave is 160, and the aisles are 80 feet high. The height to the ridge of the roof is nearly 250 feet, and the two towers of the west front when finished (there is only one at present) will be more than 500 feet above the level of the square from which they rise. The painted glass in the triforium, clerestory, and aisle windows is very rich, a good deal of the modern work being by Munich artists. The building of the great front towers is in progress.

Notice the chapel of the Holy Three Kings, sepulchre of Maria of Medicis, of Conrad of Hochstetten, and of the Count of Schaumberg, &c.

The grandest church after the cathedral is the church of St. Martin, one of the finest specimens of Romanesque in Germany; it is very ancient, and has a magnificent tower. The great church of St. Maria-in-Capitolio, is famous for its size, antiquity, and rude grandeur; and those of St. Cunibert, and the Apostles are justly remarkable for their massive construction and elegant proportions. All the churches of Cologne are worth seeing; if possible, in the morning, as they are generally closed at mid-day.

St. Peter's church has the celebrated "Crucifixion of Peter," by Rubens, which is shown on all days, by paying a fixed fee. Church of St. Ursula, and the "Eleven Thousand Virgins;" their relics are to be seen in the walls of the church (fee 1 m. 50 pf. for 1 to 3 persons). At the Jesuits' church are the bells cast out of the cannons which Tilly took in Magdeburg. Other sights are—the houses in which Maria of Medicis died, and in which Rubens was born, 1577, in the Sternengasse, No. 10; the Apostles' church, in the new market, built 1200; the Senate House, with the Hansal room. At the Museum, in Wallraf Platz, there is a splendid collection of stained glass, removed from the Town Hall, which no one should leave Cologne without seeing; with a good collection of Roman antiquities. It is open daily on payment of 75 pf. ser., and contains some very fine ancient and modern paintings, and a collection of coins, besides several other objects worthy of a visit.

THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS are beautifully laid out, with fountains, grottos, &c.: and the collection of animals and waterfowls is unusually good. Concerts almost every evening attract the best society of Cologne.

DIVINE SERVICE at the English Church (Tempelhaus, No. 8 Rheingasse.) On Sundays, at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Holy Communion every Sunday. Chaplain, Rev. W. J. Löwenberg, appointed by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Sticker II., Herzogstr., 16. Speaks English well.

Mr. Eyssen, Bookseller, Domhof, 18, speaks English, has excellent photographs of the Rhine. Bradshaw's Guides and Hand-Books on sale.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—G. Holscher, Esq.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—W. Hellmers, Esq.

DECHEN GROTTO — Tourists passing Cologne should not omit to visit the Dechen Grotto, near Iserlohn, (p. 462) discovered in 1868 by a workman, whose tools suddenly disappeared in the depths below, while removing a stone on the top of one of the hills. Its interior presents many stalactites of astonishing beauty, caused by the dropping of water through the roof of this wonderful cavern. Special arrangements have been made by the Bergisch Maerkische Railway Company to carry passengers at cheap excursion fares from Cologne to the entrance of the Grotto. Tickets (including charge for admission to the Grotto) as well as description of the same, and full particulars can be had gratis on application to Mr. J. J. NIESSEN at Cologne, sole general Agent, appointed by the Company.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway from Cologne to Bonn, Neuwied, Coblenz, Bingen and Mayence.; to Neuss, Crefeld, and Cleve; to Berlin, Dusseldorf, &c., also to Aix-la-Chapelle, Antwerp, and Brussels; to St. Quentin, &c.; to Liege, Paris.

Sailing of the Rhine steamers, see p. 328. From the Cologne Bridge, Frederich Wilhelm Strasse, a steamer starts every quarter of an hour for Mulheim.

On leaving Cologne to sail up the Rhine, the traveller sees nothing as yet of that beauty, of which this river is so justly famed; still the banks, even here, are by no means devoid of interest, but enlivened by villages and well cultivated fields. As we approach Bonn the summits of the famous Siebengebirge (seven mountains) rise gradually into view, sometimes to the right sometimes to the left, with the windings of the stream. These with their rugged sides and ruined castle, on a nearer approach, produce an imposing effect, and mark, as it were, the entrance into the "Paradise of Germany," as that portion of the Rhine is called which lies between Bonn and Mayence.

GOLDEN STAR HOTEL, one of the best on the Continent in every respect, and worthy of the highest recommendation.

THE GRAND HOTEL ROYAL, situated on the banks of the Rhine; comfortable and clean; well recommended. Ermekiel, proprietor.

HOTEL DE BELLE VUE.—Agreeably situated. Kept by Mr. M. Stamm.

RHEINECK, on the Rhine, near the landing-place and the station.

[Prices have much increased at Bonn.]

Pop. (1871) 26,030, including the students and garrison. Here the best part, or gorge, of the Rhine begins, and extends nearly to Mayence. The river narrows, and grows more rapid; and above the towns and villages are hills, cut in terraces for the vine, and crowned with ruined castles. A university town in Rhenish-Prussia, of Roman origin (called Bonna), and formerly the residence of the Electors of Cologne. Its best edifices are the University, for 800 students, formerly the Electoral Palace, in which, besides lecture rooms, are a library of 150,000 volumes; the academical and Rhenish museums, a fine collection of Roman antiquities, including an altar to victory; and the aula, or academical hall, decorated with fresco paintings. The Minster, in which there is a bronze statue of the Empress Helena, mother of Constantine, by whom it was founded in 320, and built in the Byzantine style; the Collegiate Church; that of the Jesuits; St. Remi, in which is a fine painting by Spielberg; and the Schlosskirche. The house where Beethoven was born is pointed out in the Bonngasse, and his monument in the Münster-platz. In the Cemetery near the Sternenthor, is the monument of Niebuhr, the Roman historian, by Rauch; that of A. von Schlegel; of other professors, generals, &c. There are many beautiful walks, especially to the Hofgarten, with a fine terrace on the Rhine called "der alte Zoll," which gives a magnificent view of the river and the Siebengebirge; of greater extent is that by the Poppelsdorf avenue, with its double rows of chestnut trees, to the castle of Poppelsdorf, and to the Kreutzberg, with its picturesque grounds. Rolsdorf mineral water good.

RAILWAY TERMINUS, close to Popelsdorf avenue. Railways run along both sides of the river to Mayence; with stations at all the best points of view, see pp. 122 and 124. Steamers up and down the river, p. 328.

Fine view of the Seven Mountains on the opposite side of the river. Excursions to Godesberg, the Drachenfels, and the valley of the Ahr.

Godesberg. (right)—Stat.—HOTELS:—BLINZER'S and BELLE VUE.

An agreeable summer residence. Pop. 1200. Fine old Castle on the hill, commanding beautiful view of the Rhine. Mineral springs. Excursions to the volcanic hill of Roderberg; the Seven Mountains; by ferry boat to Königswinter; the Abbey of Heiterbach. Railway, see page 122.

Königswinter (left)—Pop. 2100. HOTELS:

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, kept by W. Kirch, Proprietor. First-class hotel, well situated; good accommodation.

HOTEL DE BERLIN, First class hotel, very good, and deservedly recommended.

The beauties of the Rhine increase at this town, situated at the foot of the "Castled crag of Drachenfels,"

(i.e. the Dragon Rock), the nearest of the Seven Mountains to the river. No traveller ought on any account to omit ascending this hill, even if he have to lose a day by doing so, as the view from its summit is one of the most lovely on the whole course of the Rhine. The walk from the pier to the top is not more than an hour, and mules are always in waiting at the foot of the ascent for those who prefer to ride; charge 10 sgr. A small Hotel at the top of the Drachenfels affords very fair sleeping accommodation, and the view at sunrise is splendid.

The best way of reaching Königswinter from Cologne is, not by the steamers, which occupy nearly four hours, but by rail to the Mehlem ferry opposite Königswinter, where boats are always waiting. By leaving Cologne by the first train, the traveller may easily reach Königswinter, ascend the Drachenfels, and proceed by steamer to Coblentz about noon. But should he be obliged to spend the day at Königswinter, he will not repent the delay, as he may find a delightful and picturesque walk, turn which way he will. Boat to Nonnenswerth and back, 2 marks. Railway, p. 124

Excursions from Königswinter to the Abbey of Heiterbach or to the summit of the Lowenberg, the view from which extends into Westphalia.

Here commences a region of castles and vineyards which extends up the river as far as Wallaf. From Königswinter by steamer or rail to

HOTEL ROLANDSECK; HOTEL BILLAU.

This is a delightful residence for a few days.

Visit the Castle and charming island of Nonnenwerth, celebrated in the legend of Roland, and Schiller's ballad of "Ritter Toggenburg."

Near at hand is the church of Apollinarisberg, with frescoes. See Remagen, below.

Oberwinter, (right), merely a village.

Rheinbreitbach, (left), is a large village, with castles and towers, at the entrance of a valley, in which are the copper mines of Birnberg and Marienberg, now no longer worked, the largest having been inundated by the river.

At Unkel (left) the cliffs encroach on the bed of the stream, so as to produce a slight rapid on one side. Just above this, and on the opposite bank, is Remagen. (right)—Stat.—HOTELS:—HOTEL FURSTENBERG; this hotel affords excellent accommodation at moderate prices; well recommended. The Hotel "Konig von Prussen" belongs to the same proprietor.

Remagen is a most agreeable place to pass a few days at. Ascend Victoriaberg to the Tempell for a panorama of the Rhine. The hill to the right is Apollinarisberg, with its splendid gothic Church, the property of Count Furstenberg; built by Zwirner (the restorer of the Dom of Cologne), and containing fine frescoes.

From Remagen excursions are made to the beautiful Valley of the Ahr, called the Rhenish Switzerland. Excursions of one day, in carriages of the hotel; tax prices. To Ahrweiler and Altenahr, the wild and picturesque scenery of which is well worth visiting. At Ahrweiler is the source of the Apollinaris Spring, a tonic water now well known in England. A day's excursion can be made to the Lake and Abbey of Laach, passing by the castle of Rheineck, through the beautiful valley of Brohl, and close by quarries of Nieder-Wendig, two miles S.E. of the Abbey.

Ascent of the Ahr—to Bad Neuenahr, up the picturesque valley of the Ahr; a very agreeable and healthy spa, near Remagen —Stat.

SINZIG:—HOTEL MARIEN SPRUDEL; HOF VON HOLLAND (English spoken); VICTORIA and other Hotels.

The way to Neuenahr is by Remagen, on the Rhine, distant 7 miles (carriages, 4 marks to 6 marks) Mail omnibus and carriages frequently. This watering place, which is similar to Vichy and Carlsbad, has warm alkali springs, good for the lungs, liver, gout, &c. It is full and dear in June and July, when beds should be secured beforehand. The air is highly salubrious. The gardens round the Mariensprudel well are beautifully laid out, and a band plays on the promenade. Walks and excursions to the Apollinaris Kirche; the Landskrone (500 feet above the Ahr; the Neuenahrberg (700 feet above) with a magnificent view of the Rhine; the Schnupp, past the Konigsfeld Cross, and the old town of Ahrweiler; the Calvariensberg Convent, over the Steinenthalskopf.

CONVEYANCES—Railway, see page 122.

Ahrweiler.—Pop. 3000. HOTELS:—HOTEL KRONE; STERN.

This town is the centre of the wine trade of the valley of the Ahr; very prettily situated. The Church is a fine gothic edifice. Further up the valley the Burgundy grape is cultivated on every accessible shelf of rock, and forming most singular but picturesque vineyards. Before reaching Altenahr the scenery becomes very fine—precipitous rocks crowned by the Castle—then a tunnel through the rock leads to the village of Altenahr.—INN; RHINE HOTEL, at the entrance of the town. Trout.

This village on the Ahr is surrounded by an amphitheatre of slate rocks—partly wooded and partly covered with vines, and on the highest peaks are seen the ruins of the Castle of Altenahr, the finest object in the whole valley. The view is magnificent.

A little below Erpel, on the left bank, is a basaltic mountain, 700 ft. high, called the Erpeler Ley. The vines planted on its slopes are rooted in baskets forced into the clefts of the rock.

Coming back to the Rhine, is Sinzig, (Stat.) a small old town on the road, about 1½ mile from the Rhine, well worth visiting. Close to the confluence of the Ahr is the village of Krippe, (right), communicating by a flying bridge with Linz. (left)—Stat.—Pop. 2330.—HOTEL NASSAU.

A commercial town, at which the steam vessels put in. Charles the Bold took this town in 1476; in 1632 it was taken by the Swedes, and in 1688 it was garrisoned by the French. The Castle, as well as the town walls of Linz, are built of basalt, and the streets are paved with the same material. The surrounding country produces copper, iron, lead, &c., which are exported from the town.

Andernach. (right)—Stat.—Pop. 3800.

HOTEL:—HACKENBRUCH HOTEL.

An ancient town, founded by the Romans, and in the middle ages, a free city of the empire. Enclosed with lofty old walls, it contrasts strikingly with Neuwied, further on, which lies quite open. Its Roman gate, and the ruins of the Pfalz or Episcopal palace, its ancient church and tower, with the town arms, at least 1000 years old, are well worthy of notice. Much tarrass (or trass) made hereabout, quarried and burnt; it is a mortar or cement which stands both water and heat; and is used in the dykes of Holland.

The Laacher See is a singular sheet of deep blue water, of almost circular form, occupying what would seem the crater of an extinct volcano, 666 feet above the Rhine, about 1½ mile long, and 1¼ broad, depth in the centre 250 feet, surrounded by hills richly wooded to the water's edge. A jet of carbonic acid gas issues from a little opening on the N.E. side, and this, together with the scoriæ, ashes, pumice, &c., found on the banks, gives evidence of its volcanic origin. The deserted Abbey of Laach, with its five towers, forms a picturesque object.

Beyond this town the mountains again approach the river, forming a magnificent defile, and having, at the water's edge on the left bank, the ruined Castle of Friedrichstein, the building of which was begun in the 17th century, but never finished. On the same side (left) lies the village of Irrlich, connected by an avenue of poplars with the town of

HOTEL ZUM GOLDENEN ANCHOR.—The best in the town, and deservedly recommended.

MORAVIAN HOTEL.

Population 7,300. Capital of the mediatized principality of Wied. Overlooking the river is the Prince's Palace, which contained a collection of very interesting Roman antiquities (chiefly from the buried city of Victoria, near Niederbiber, a village 2 miles to the N.), has been transferred to New York. The Museum of natural history is in the Pheasantry, (Fasanerie Gebaude,) and consists for the most part of collections made by Prince Maximilian of Neuwied, during his travels in Brazil and North America. A distinct quarter of the town is occupied by Moravian brethren, whose schools and workshops are worth visiting.

The chateau of Monrepos, with its park and gardens, 6 miles N.N.E., is the object of a very pleasant excursion. Neuwied has also a flying bridge over the Rhine.

The Castle of Altwied, at 3½ miles distance, is a magnificent ruin, and commands a splendid view. Carriage there and back 4 thalers.

Weissenthurm (White Tower), on the right bank, so called from the old watch-tower which stands at the extremity of the village; on an eminence to the left of which is the memorial to General Hoche, erected by the "Army of the Sambre and Meuse," 1797. Here it is asserted that Julius Cæsar constructed the famous Bridge described in his Commentaries; but this is very improbable, as he makes no mention of the island in mid-channel, of which Hoche availed himself in his passage.

Further on (to the left) is Muhlhofen, a village at the mouth of the Sayn, from which pleasant excursions may be made through the beautifully wooded valley traversed by that stream. Royal Iron-works here.

Kesselheim. (right)—Near this are the ruins of Schönbornlust, once a palace of the Elector of Treves; famous also as the residence of the exiled Bourbon princes, and head-quarters of the army of refugees during the Revolution.

Near the junction of the Moselle and Rhine stands the monument of General Marceau (1796).

Neuendorf.—Here the smaller timber-rafts from the Upper Rhine and its branches, as also from the Moselle, are formed into the great rafts which go down to Holland.

Long before the steamer approaches Coblenz, the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein is visible; while, as she reaches her moorings at that city, one of the most conspicuous objects is the stately Palace of the King of Prussia, formerly belonging to the Electors of Treves, stretching along the bank of the river.

Coblenz. (right)—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 33,405.

HOTEL BELLE VUE.—First-rate, and highly recommended. Mrs. Hoche, landlady.

HOTEL DU GRAND.—One of the best on the Rhine. Proprietors, Messrs. Ehrmann, Brothers.

HOTEL DE TREVES just opposite the Palace of the Empress. Proprietor, F. Mass.

HOTEL ZUR TRAUBE.

Coblenz possesses good Pensions, well adapted to a prolonged sojourn.

CAB FARES.—Inside the town. For 1 or 2 persons a fiacre or two-horse carriage, 7sgr. 6pf.; one-horse carriage or "Ein-Spänner," 5sgr. For 3 persons, two-horse carriage, 12sgr. 6pfg.; one-horse carriage, 10sgr. For 4 persons, two-horse carriage, 15sgr.; one-horse carriage, 12sgr. 6pfg. For 1—4 persons to Capellen, Niederlahnstein, and Ballendar or Metternich, two-horse carriage, 1th. 5sgr.; or thence back, with two hours' delay, 2th.; one-horse carriage, 25sgr., or there and back, with two hours' delay, 1th. 10sgr.; to Neuendorf, Ehrenbreitstein, Pfaffendorf, and Laubach, two-horse carriage, 20sgr.; or there and back, with two hours' delay, 1th. 15sgr.; one horse carriage, 15sgr.; or there and back, with two hours' delay, 1th. 5sgr.

Coblenz, the "Confluentia" of the Romans, is a strongly fortified town, on the left bank of the Rhine and right of the Moselle: capital and seat of government of the Rhine province, with a strong garrison. It occupies a large triangle, formed by the influx of the Moselle into the Rhine, and has an old stone bridge over the Moselle, from which a charming view is obtained. On the opposite bank of the river is the rocky fortress of EHRENBREITSTEIN, (the "broad stone of honour"), called the Gibraltar of the Rhine, with a little town at its foot, containing 2,800 inhabitants, and connected with Coblenz by a bridge of boats 486 paces in length. The view from the summit of the fortress extends as far as the mountains of Lorraine, and amply repays the ascent, (tickets, 5 groschen, issued at foot of fortress). The old Château, near the Moselle bridge, possesses historical interest, having been occupied by several Emperors. The venerable church of St. Castor, at the confluence of the two rivers, conspicuous by its four towers, dates from 836. Here the grandsons of Charlemagne met to divide amongst them their splendid inheritance into France, Germany, and Italy. There also, Edward III. of England was installed Vicar of the Empire by Lewis of Bavaria. In the open space before the church stands the celebrated Monument erected by the French in 1812, to commemorate their ill-fated expedition against the Russians. A sarcastic addition to the inscription by the Russian General St. Priest, records that it was "seen and approved" by him as Russian Commandant of the town, 1814. The fortifications of Coblenz are of vast extent, and rank amongst the strongest in Europe,—of these, Ehrenbreitstein is the most remarkable: it is said, the enormous sum of £1,800,000 has been expended on these stupendous works, of which 15,000,000 of francs was extracted from France after the Revolutionary war. A quarter of a mile from the Moselle bridge, on the road to Andernach, and sheltered by the lofty walls of Fort Franz, stands the pyramidical monument to the young Republican General, Marceau, who was killed at the battle of Altenkirchen in 1796. Additional interest attaches to this spot as the last resting place of a vast number of French soldiers who died during their captivity 1870-71.

Hood, in 1838-7, lived at Castor Hof and Altes Graben, and here wrote his "Up the Rhine." The beautiful Rhine Anlagen, or, as they are familiarly called, "the Queen's Gardens," owe their existence to the taste and liberality of the Empress Queen, who frequently resides in Coblenz; they extend from the town almost to the adjacent hydropathic establishment at Laubbach. A military band plays once a week on the Anlagen, opposite the "trinkhalle," where refreshments can be obtained.

Church of England Service, in the chapel of the Palais, by a resident Chaplain.

In the environs of Coblenz are Moselweiss, a pretty village buried in cherry orchards, and much resorted to; Lahnstein, on the left bank of the Rhine; Saya, with its ruin and modern chateau; the abbey of Rommersdorf; the Kühkopf, the highest hill near the town, and commanding a most magnificent view; the fine plateau of the Karthause, separating the Rhine from the Moselle, and on which many thousand French prisoners were encamped during the late war. More distant are the romantic castle of Eltz, to which a visit is strongly recommended; the abbey and lake of Laach; the castle of Marksburg, a well preserved stronghold of the middle ages; Ems and Nassau.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine, see first Time Tables of Belgian Railways.

Conveyances.—Ems may be reached in less than an hour by train, or by taking the 2.30 p.m. steamer to Lahnstein. Steamers several times daily to Biebrich (Wiesbaden), Mayence, and Mannheim, also to Bonn, Cologne, Emmerich, and Rotterdam. Steamers also ascend the Moselle as far as Treves and Metz daily at 7. 0 a.m. during the summer months. Numerous trains to Bonn, Cologne, Bingen, Mayence, &c. (See pp. 122, 124): Horchetm, on the left—the last village before entering the province of Nassau.

Stolzenfels, a fine castle of the middle ages, on a projecting rock overlooking the Rhine and the village of Capellen, (Stat) the property of the Dowager Queen of Prussia. It was presented as a ruin by the city of Coblenz to the late King William IV., when Crown Prince, by whom it was judiciously restored. Here Queen Victoria was entertained in 1845 by the King, and asked the question, "How do you like the Rhine?" Admission is readily granted. The view is magnificent, and embraces the lovely valley of the Lahn, and the confluence of that river with the Rhine, whilst down the stream the eye rests on Coblenz and its gigantic fortifications, with the mountains of Andernach in the distance.

There is a ferry from Stolzenfels to Lahnstein, and another over the mouth of the Lahn; up the right bank of which a railway runs to Ems, (see below "Friesel,"). On the summit of a rock at the mouth of the Lahn is the restored castle of Lahneck.

An old walled town, with a conspicuous red building at the edge of the Rhine, once a Castle of the electors of Mayence. Near it is a small white chapel among trees, where, in 1400, the deposition of the emperor Wenceslaus, and the election of Rupert, were pronounced by the Elector.

Railway to Ems and Nassau, and to Rudesheim and Wiesbaden, see pages 122, 124 and 129.

Rhense (right).—Hotel: Zum Königstuhl.—A very antique town, scarcely altered since the middle ages. Near it is the Königstuhl (King's seat), an open vaulted hall, with 7 stone seats for the 7 Electors, who met to discuss affairs of state.

Another ancient little town, at the entrance of the valley that winds round the Marksburg, with a fine old castle. Copper and silver mines in the neighbourhood; also a road to Ems from this place.

Marksburg, (left), a fortress of the middle ages, in perfect preservation, being the only one of the Rhine castles which has escaped destruction.

Boppard. (right)—Stat.—Hotels:—Rheinischer Hof; civil and moderate. Post.—An ancient walled town (pop. 4000), (a gloomy but interesting place, of Roman origin, having been one of the 50 castles of Drusus on the Rhine. The walls of the Roman castrum, a quadrangle of strong masonry, still exists in the heart of the town. In it are the remains of the Palace of the Frankish kings, and the ruins of a fine chapel. Behind the town is the ancient nunnery of Marienberg, now a water-cure. The Muhlbad is another. The situation of Boppard is remarkably beautiful. The Rhine here makes one of its most considerable curves, and at some distance further the mountains recede a little from the river, giving way to meadows and corn fields.

Salzig, (right), an agreeable village, with large plantations of cherry trees. Opposite (left), on the twin peaks of a lofty rock, are the ruins of Sternberg and Liebenstein, called the two brothers, and the subject of a legend. At the foot of the steep mountain, in a narrow valley, is the village and ancient convent of Bornhofen.

In Rhenthal (left) are silver, lead, and copper works, whose annual produce is 100,000 florins.

Welmich, (left), a little village with a fine old church, at the foot of the mountain on which stands the Castle of Thurnberg, called "the Monte," now fast falling into ruin; the walls are, however, still perfect. The Castle called "the Cat" is above St. Goarhausen (left).

St. Goar. (right)—Stat—Pop. 1808.—Hotels: Rheinfels; Istr. Sonnenmen; being enlarged.

English Church Service, twice every Sunday in the season at the Lutheran Chapel; Chaplain supplied by the Col. and Cont. Church society.

The position of St. Goar is eminently beautiful. On the hill are the ruins of Rheinfels, formerly one of the most extensive fortresses; now a picture of desolation. Opposite is the pretty village of St.

Goarhausen, and the ruins of "the Cat Castle." Above this point a narrow defile confines the river, where there used to be rapids, which have now almost disappeared. On the left is the precipitous rock of Lurlei, or the Lurleiberg, a good point of view, with an echo which repeats 15 times; and a little higher, in mid-channel, are discovered the rocks called the Seven Sisters (Sieben Jungfrauen), the subject of a legend.

This immense stronghold of Rheinfels was built in 1245 by a count of Katzenelenbogen. It became afterwards in the hands of the Landgrave of Hesse, a modern fortress which baffled the French in 1692, but was taken and blown up by them in 1794.

St. Goar is very desirable as a sojourn for the purpose of making excursions in the vicinity, as it lies in the midst of some of the finest of the Rhine scenery. There is also a salmon fishery near the rapids. On the opposite side of the river is

St. Goarhausen (left), (Stat.) in Nassau.—Pop. 800.—HOTEL ADLER.

Still partly surrounded with its old walls. Here begins the Forstbach, or Swiss valley, celebrated for its beauty, being traversed by a clear stream, forming numerous cascades between precipitous masses of rock. At the entrance of this valley stands the Cat Castle, a very picturesque object in the landscape. An excursion well worth taking is that to the ruined Castle of Reichenberg, at a distance of a mile and a half inland.

Oberwesel. (right) Stat.—HOTELS:—RHEINISCHER HOF; TRIERISCHER HOF.

The Vesalia of the Romans; a small town of 2500 inhabitants; very interesting to visit, and delightfully situated. The Church of Our Lady is considered a model of the gothic style; in St. Martin's is a "Descent from the Cross," by Diepenbrock. The picturesque appearance of this town is much increased by its turreted walls and the lofty round tower called the Ox Tower, by the water side. The village of Engehölle is well worth a visit as also the ruins of Schönberg Castle, known for the tradition of the Seven Sisters.

Caub, or Kaub (left)—HOTEL: NASSAUER HOF.

A small town, above which, on a steep rock, rise the ruins of the Castle of Gutenfels. In the middle of the river, between Caub and Bacharach, is a well-preserved old Castle, called the Pfalz, built by the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria for a toll-house. In the lateral valleys are extensive slate-quarries.

Bacharach. (right)—HOTEL FOST; Hotel Warum and Pension.

A busy town of 1800 inhabitants; formerly the entrepôt for the fine Rhenish wines, which were named on this account "the wines of Bacharach." In the Rhine, when the water is low, a large stone appears, called the Altar of Bacchus (Bacchi Ara)—hence the name. Here Blücher crossed, 1 Jan., 1814. Notice the Church of St. Peter, of the 13th century; the ruins of the Castle of Stahleck, with its truncated walls, on a high hill behind the town, from whence there is a fine view; and the town walls, with twelve towers of peculiar construction.

Lorch (left)—Stat.—Pop. 1800.—HOTEL SCHWAN.

One of the oldest towns on the Rhine, situated at the embouchure of the Wisperbach in the entrance of its picturesque valley, rich in legends of sprites, dwarfs, and giants; leading through Geroldstein and Langenseifen to Schwalbach, a walk of five hours. On the right bank of the Wisp is a rocky eminence called the Devil's Ladder, with the ruins of Nollingen Castle on its summit. Above the village of Rheindiebach stand the round tower and broken walls of Fürstenburg, devastated by the French in 1687. The Church is a handsome relic of the 12th century; in front of it is a carved stone cross dated 1491.

As we approach Bingen and Assmanshausen, the picturesque monuments of the old iron times become still more numerous.

One of them called the Rheinstein, which has been restored and fitted up in the antique style for a summer residence of Prince Frederick of Prussia, is well worth visiting. It stands upon a projecting cliff, rising almost perpendicularly from the water side. Opposite to this is the village of Assmanshausen (left), Stat., with a warm mineral spring. The fine red wine of that name is produced from the vines in the neighbourood, which are cultivated on such steep heights as to require baskets and other contrivances to secure them in their places. Some of the terraced heights are one thousand feet above the river.

One of the finest views in the whole course of the river may be obtained by ascending to the Rotsel, a little tower on the edge of the heights above Assmanshausen. From this village also may be made the ascent of the Niederwald.

The picturesque gorge of the Rhine, the commencement of which is above Boppart terminates near here. The Bingerloch obstructed for a long time the navigation of the Rhine; but the passage was widened to 210 feet—ten times its former breadth—by the Prussians, in 1830–32; and the fragments, taken from the river bed by blasting, were formed into a monument on the road side to commemorate the work. This channel is near the right bank, and overlooked by the ruins of the fortress of Ehrenfels.

On the right, and adjacent to the influx of the Nahe, is an islet, with a ruin, called the Mäusethurm (Mice tower), the scene of a strange tradition, which Southey gives in his ballad of Bishop Hatto.

Bingen (right)—Stat.—Pop. 7000.—HOTEL: VICTORIA.

In an angle of the beautiful valley of the Nahe; a considerable entrepôt for trade in corn and wine; much frequented by strangers. The Rhine here makes a considerable curve, and the scenery around is in the highest degree attractive. The ruins of Klopp, on the Drususberg (once a Roman castle) afford a favourite promenade and a view from the tower of the celebrated Nahethal, and the environs as far as the Donnersberg.

An agreeable tour may be made to the Rochusberg and its chapel, from whence there is a prospect of extraordinary beauty; as also up the Nahe to Kreuznach and Oberstein. Opposite Bingen, on the right of the Nahe, stands the Rupertsberg, and, about a mile and a half distant, the Ellisenhöhe, from the moss-house of which there is another magnificent view. An excursion to Rüdesheim (another wine place), and to the heights of the Niederwald is also recommended. From Rüdesheim, on the opposite bank of the Rhine, the railway is open to Wiesbaden, Castel, and Frankfort; see p. 131, also to Ems and Nassau see p. 129. Consult Time Tables before crossing per Steamer from Bingerbrücke to Rüdesheim. The trains do not await arrival of steamer, if 10 minutes behind time; it is safer and more agreeable every way to proceed by the left bank of the river to Kappel. From Bingen (Bingerbrücke) by rail to Kreuznach, see p. 125. To Coblenz, Bonn, and Cologne, p. 123. To Mayence, p. 126. Away from the Rhine to the right, is Kreuznach.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000. HOTELS: HOTEL DE HOLLANDE, kept by Mrs. Clauer; first-class Hotel, well situated near the Kurhaus. Fine Garden; moderate charges.

HOTEL ORANIENHOF.—Well situated, close to the Kurhaus; baths in the Hotel, large garden &c

PRIVATE HOTEL DEKEL SCHMIDT.—Well situated close to the Kurhaus and Railway Station. Large and beautiful gardens, comfortable and reasonable.

ADLER; PFALZER HOF; BERLINER HOF.

A Prussian town in a picturesque situation in the valley of the Nahe, and a fashionable watering place, on account of its Saline Spring which is situated on an island a quarter of a mile above the town, at BAD-KREUZNACH (with a Railway Station), now united to the older part of the town. The waters are highly beneficial in scrofulous diseases. There is a Kurhaus very prettily situated amidst beautiful gardens and fine old forest trees. A good band of music performs in the early morning, and again from 4 to 6 in the afternoon. Carriages, horses, donkeys, and boats to row on the river Nahe, including Grönlander, or Greenland, canoes, with double-blade paddles, can be had at price rather higher than those at Wiesbaden.

EXCURSIONS to the top of the Rheingrafenstein which commands a fine view of the two rivers. 1. At the foot of this fine rock and ruin is the picturesque village of MUNSTER-AM-STEIN, with an excellent Kurhaus (Herr Schmuck's) where visitors can stay en pension, and dine at the table d'hôte. Munster has other hotels and baths; is a quiet, charming spot, in a picturesque country, full of attraction, including the ruined Castle of Ebernberg (good hotel and wine), with beautiful views, where Luther stopped for a time; the Huttenthal, the very romantic ruins of Alten Baumburg, and many other points. The baths at Munster-am-Stein are very efficacious, especially in the case of children. They are chiefly saline. 2. To the salt works of Theodorshalle. 3. To the valley of the Alsenz, containing several picturesque scenes and ruined castles.

RESIDENT ENGLISH PHYSICIAN.—Henry Blumberg, M.D., and Extra Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians of England, Villa Blumberg.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, held at St. Paul's church, near the Nahe bridge, at 11 a. m. and 5 p. m., Chaplain supplied by Colonial and Continental Church Society.

RHEINSTEIN; BELLE VUE; DRAMSTADTER HOF; KRASS AND EHRARD.

Pop. 3000. Situated nearly opposite Bingen, at the foot of the mountain, which is covered with vineyards, and produces the best quality of the celebrated Rüdesheimer wine. The old tower and the Castles close to the water's edge are worthy of notice. Persons who have not seen the views from the Niederwald should land at Rüdesheim, and ascend the heights above, which command several of the finest views of the Rhine. On the left will be seen a beautiful panorama of the Rhine; the château and vineyards of Johannisberg, and the castle and park of Bieberich; further on, the town of Mayence, and opposite Bingen, at the junction of the Nahe with the Rhine, the view of the ruin of Ehrenfels; and lastly, the Bezauberte Höhle (magic cave), whence there are miniature views of three different landscapes, so exquisitely beautiful, as to elicit the greatest admiration. Returning from this excursion, a draught of the Rüdesheimer, Rottland, or Hinterhausen wines, will be found a luxury.

CONVEYANCES.—Rail to Wiesbaden, Frankfort, &c., see page 128. Steamers up and down the Rhine. Carriage drive to Schlangenbad in 2 hours.

Geisenheim. (left)—Stat.—Pop. 2,650.

HOTELS:—AUSSICHT AND STADT FRANKFORT.

Noted as well as Rüdesheim for its wines; and one of the most beautiful places in the Rheingau, situated at the widest part of the stream, which here is 2000 feet. There are many handsome country seats, among which the villa of Baron V. Zwierlein is worth visiting, for its collection of painted glass and its gardens, in which various modes of training fruit trees are practised.

The vineyards of Lade & Sons adjoining Rüdesheim and Johannisberg are worth a visit.

Professor Uihlein of the Real School.

Johannisberg, (left), on its celebrated vine-clad hill, is a prominent object there. The castle belongs to Prince Metternich, who has laid out the grounds with much taste. The vines cover a space of 65 acres; those most esteemed grow round the castle, and indeed partly over the cellars.

Mayence (the Roman Moguntiacum), since the campaign of 1866 has become one of the most important Prussian fortresses, with a powerful garrison. The Cathedral dates from 978, and has several good monuments; it is built of red sandstone, peculiar architecture, and very picturesque style. The interior has been magnificently restored, and is embellished with rich gilding and sumptuous frescoes. It contains a statue of Gutenberg. In the old Electoral Palace are the museum of Roman antiquities, the finest perhaps in Germany; paintings; large cabinet of natural history; coins and medals; model of a double bridge, seemingly very suitable for the Thames, intended to have been built by Napoleon over the Rhine; the astronomical clock by Alexius Johann one of the most scientific pieces of mechanism extant; also, the town Library, (open daily, excepting Saturday and Sunday) containing about 100,000 vols., manuscripts of 10th century downwards; the first psalter of Gutenberg, inventor of printing, who was born here, 1397. His bronze statue, after Thorwaldsen, stands before the theatre. The site of his house is now a literary club. For the Tomb of Drusus, in the Citadel, an order is requisite. On Wednesday afternoon from 2 o'clock, much company is attracted from Wiesbaden, &c., by the splendid performance of the regimental bands, in the public Gardens. A fine view is had here of the Rhine, with the Taunus mountains in the distance, and of the Main; on the right bank of which, about three miles off, is seen Hochheim with its vineyards producing the celebrated Hock. This river, which gives name to Mainz, divides N. and S. Germany.

Visitors desirous of tasting or obtaining the wines of the well-known Firm, J. Mayer & Co. (Messrs. Ludwig, Otto, and Stephen Mayer), should observe that the establishment of these gentlemen is situated at No. 7, Walpodenstrasse.

Visitors should also see "The Belvedere," the property of Messrs. Nassauer Brothers, 16, Mathilden Terrace, whence (independently of the beautiful internal architecture) the finest and loviest views of the Rhine can be obtained.

Messrs. H. and G. Hirsch, wine merchants, and exporters, supply German and French wines (all well selected, and of the best quality), 3, Walpodenstrasse.

Outside the Munster-Thor, beyond the cemetery, at Zahlbach, are very considerable remains of the Roman Aqueduct. This is reached more expeditiously by the Gau Thor than by the Munster Thor. The Ludwigsbahn crosses the Rhine to Frankfort by a fine new bridge, 1000 metres long.

HOTEL HARTMANN.—First class hotel, well situated, and deservedly recommended.

GASTHOF ZUM ALTEN KAISER.

Pop. 11,500, besides the garrison. A very old place, older than the Roman invasion of Germany, and an ancient imperial city, where the Parliamentary Diets of the Empire used to meet. The Cathedral is a venerable Romanesque monument of the 11th, 12th, and 13th centuries, completed in 1016, and inaugurated in the presence of the Emperor, Henry II. The memorable Diet at which Luther appeared was held here by Charles V, in 1521. Rosenwald, on an island where the valiant Siegfried killed the dragon, is the scene of the old German romantic poem, the Niebelungen Lied. NOTICE—the Markets, the Place St. Andre, St. Martin, and St. Paul, Hotel de Ville, &c. There existed a convent of Capucines, the Church of which is called the Liebfrau Kirche, erected in the 14th century. The edifice is constructed in the gothic style, and is very well worth a visit on account of its architectural merits. Immediately on the south and south-eastern sides of the church lie the celebrated vineyards, where the Liebfrauenmilch is grown, the best quality is produced nearest the walls, and the estate which is enclosed by a wall, and called the Garden of the Capucines, is the property of the house of P. J. Valckenberg. The grapes which yield this fine Rhine wine are of the Riesling kind. The new Monument to Luther Huss, Wickliffe, Philip the Magnanimous, Savonarola, Renchlin, &c., is one of the most considerable in bronze, consisting of 12 figures.

Try the Forster Kirchenstück, one of the best white wines in the Palatinate.

At the influx of the Neckar into the Rhine (1200 feet wide), in Baden. It is a clean and well built town, but monotonous on account of the regularity of the buildings. The largest building in the town is the Grand Duke's Palace, wherein is a picture gallery and a cabinet of natural history. The most pleasant walks are, the garden behind the palace and the Plankenstrasse. It has a good Lyceum, and one of the best theatres in the South of Germany, with a statue of Schiller facing it; holds 2,000; price of orchestra stall, 1 fl. 2 kr. In the neighbourhood of Heidelberg lies Schwetzingen, with its beautiful garden There is here a chain bridge.

BANK NOTES.—100, 200, 500 and 1000, Reichsmarks (see page 451.) From "The Merchant's Handbook of Money, Weights Measures."—By W. A BROWNE, LL.D.† London: Stanford.

Hotels.—Hotel charges throughout South Germany are moderate, and the accommodation is generally excellent. The Dinner hour (table d'hôte) is One o'clock, sometimes as early as Twelve. When travellers cannot dine at that hour they should order a dinner for 2 Reichsmarks 50 pf. including wine, if in a wine country; for which price a good dinner will be provided, except in the large towns and fashionable watering-places.

Luggage.—In Bavaria luggage is ½d. per mile for 100lbs., and so on in proportion. The rate in Würtemberg, and in North Germany, for excess luggage is considerably higher.

Railways.—The carriages are excellent, and superior to those of the corresponding classes in England. The fares are half those charged in England, and return tickets are issued on most of the important lines (non-smoking and ladies' carriages attached to all trains). Throughout Würtemburg the cars are on the American principle. Railways are called Eisenbahn; Express Trains, Schnellzug.

In Bavaria, prettily situated on the right bank of the Main, not far from the large forest of Spessart; the ancient Hercynia of Cæsar and Tacitus. Here was the station for the 10th and 22rd Roman Legions. The Frankish kings had a palace built on the ruins of a Roman castle. The ex-King of Bavaria, Ludwig, caused an exact model of a Roman villa to be built on the banks of the Main, after the plan of one in the ruins of Pompeii; the paintings on the walls are executed by the first artists. The present royal residence is a handsome Palace, built in 1606, by the Archbishop-Electors of Mayence, as a summer residence. The church is worthy of attention, built in 974. There is a monument in bronze of Cardinal Albert of Brandenburg, by Peter Vischer, a bronze Virgin by his son Hermann, and another monument in bronze, by Hack. It has boat yards and a transit trade. The other road to Kissingen recommended to travellers is by rail from Frankfort to Hanau, and by post to Schlichterne and Bruckenau.

Carlsruhe, romantically seated on the Oos, and among the hills of the Black Forest. It is chiefly built on the slope of a hill, owing to the narrowness of the valley, which consists, for the most part, of charming meadows, making a pleasant contrast to the dark fir trees on the surrounding hills. Numerous agreeable promenades. The season is at its height during July, August, and September, when there is a succession of concerts, dramatic performances, balls, &c., in the new Saloon, and the races and hunting take place; but from May to October visitors continue to arrive and depart. The time for assembling to drink the waters, is between 6½ and 7½ a.m., when the band plays from a pavilion. On the left bank of the Oosbach, are the Promenade and "Conversationshaus"—a magnificent building, and surrounded by gardens and pleasure-grounds.

The avenue leading to the Conversation House is filled with stalls of traders from Switzerland and the Tyrol, and even from Paris; and in the evening, the entire place is filled with chairs and tables, occupied by visitors sipping coffee, ices, &c., while listening to the music played by bands.

Baden-Baden, with the exception of Carlsbad in Bohemia, is the most aristocratic and fashionable lounge in Europe. It is a beautiful spot, situated in a delightful country, sheltered in summer, warm in winter, abounding in lovely walks and drives, with good fishing and shooting. Those whose appetite for balls and operas, a London season has failed to satiate, will find these amusements abundantly provided here, though deprived of the opportunity of trying their luck at the gaming table; a nuisance which was abolished in 1872, in common with those at Homburg, Ems, &c. Notice Villa Lombourg, which was occupied by Queen Victoria, 1872, on the occasion of her visit of condolence to her half-sister, who resided at Villa Friesenburg. She took the Vapour baths, and paid visits to the High Rocks, and other interesting spots. The High Rocks (Die Hohe Felsen), are within ten minutes' walk of the fine Old Castle (Das Alte Schloss), within an hour's easy walk or drive of the town: and, as there is an excellent road and path, and plenty of sign-posts to direct the pedestrian, no one can possibly mistake the way. Few scenes can surpass the grandeur of these wonderful rocks and the immense forests of gigantic pines above which they tower.

The most charming distant excursion near Baden Baden is to the Murg Thal or valley of the Murg, a river flowing down to the fortress of Rastadt. The scenery on the bank of the Murg is highly romantic, the torrent rushing along over a bed full of rocks and boulders, among precipitous heights covered with fir forests. Amalienberg Castle, commanding a fine prospect of the valley, is Dr. Hedler's educational establishment, for the sons of English and American families. It is under the patronage of the Grand Duchess, and was visited by Prince Leopold, 1872. Other excursions can be made to Eberstein Castle 3 hours, ancient arms, pictures, &c. To la Favorite, Maison de Chasse, and Auberge 1 hour; Staufenberg or Mercury 746 metres, with an altar to Mercury found here. Devil's Pulpit, Alley of Sighs, Road of the Echo, and Cross of Keller, 30 minutes.

The new Theatre is a chef-d'œuvre, and does honour to the munificence of Mr. Benazet, and the abilities of Mr. Couteau, the architect. The performances are in German, Italian, and French, by the best artists in Europe.

The ENGLISH CHURCH is beautiful, and has weekly celebrations and daily service throughout the year.—Chaplain, the Rev. T. A. S. White.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see page 133.

THE BLACK FOREST.

(SEE FREIBURG-IN-THE-BREISGAU, below.)

There are several entrances into that part of the Grand Duchy of Baden which goes under the name of the Black Forest, which may be justly called one of the most interesting districts of Southern Germany. The scenery is wild and romantic, and the views from its mountains extensive. The population has also many of the best qualities of the German race, and is remarkable for primitive manners, idiom, and costume. Accommodation, at once good and cheap, will be met with even in its most remote parts. The principal Railway Route is viâ Offenburg. Villingen, and Singen, one of the best and easiest routes through the district, (p. 136) That part of the line, between Hornberg and Sommerau, "doubles itself up again and again, in rising to the summit level, 2,000 feet above sea. Triberg, between the two stations first mentioned is an attractive little place and a very convenient centre, close to a fine waterfall, and surrounded by richly wooded hills. HOTELS—Ochsen; Poste; Löwe—all small but very fair."—W. A. P. Other routes are, as follows:—

N.B.—The time is calculated according to the rate of travelling in a private conveyance, the cost of which is—For a two-horse carriage, 10 fl. (16s. 8d.) per diem, and 48 kr. (1s. 4d.) for the driver is ample; total, 18s.—for a one-horse carriage, 6 fl. (10s.), and 30 kr. (10d.); total, 10s. 10d. Public conveyances may be had.

From Freiburg to Müllheim Station, 18½ miles, see page 132.

From Müllheim (SWAN HOTEL, good red wine) to Baden Weiler is 4 miles, 30 kr. (10d.) by Post omnibus, passing through Müllheim and Niederweiler; time occupied ½ hour.

Badenweiler,—(also in Baden.)—Pop. 2100.

HOTELS:—RÖMER BAD.—Large, close to castle, charges for an apartment, 1 Gulden.

STADT CARLSRUHE.—Smaller. Diligences meet the trains at Müllheim from both the hotels, (p. 132).

This is another of the Roman Aquæ, (in the Black Forest,) about an hour from Freiburg-in-Breisgau; now a fashionable watering-place, frequented by the Bale people, and the Germans. It has a warm spring, 22° Reaumur, 84° Fahrenheit, containing sulphur, kali natron, and chalk. Useful when cold water cannot be taken. The spring is not much used; goat's milk alone and the air are recommended for diseases of the chest and nerves.

The bath is useful for rheumatism, gout, abdominal plethora, and neuralgia.

PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Wever.

SIGHTS.—The Castle on a commanding eminence. fine view of Black Forest and Rhine Plain. Gardens and walks round the castle.

Some of the most perfect remains in Germany, of Roman baths. The key may be had of the gardener.

AMUSEMENTS.—Reading-rooms close to the Romer Bad Hotel. All the French and German papers, magazines, &c.

A Conversations haus, adjoining the reading-rooms. Balls twice a week in the season, i. e., from June till September.

MUSIC.—In castle gardens daily in the season.

LODGINGS.—In the village. Printed tariff for houses, &c., opposite the Römer Bad Hotel.

EXCURSIONS FROM BADENWEILER.—Sophienruhe immediately behind Badenweiler. A road leads to Sophienruhe, an open space on the borders of the forest; the view is more picturesque than from the castle, Badenweiler itself forming the foreground.

BURGELER (2338 feet).—Commonly called Bürgler Schloss, within an easy distance (on foot) from Badenweiler. Burgeler was formerly a Priory of the Benedictine Society, St. Blasien. View very fine and extensive. The interior contains portraits of benefactors.

BADENWEILER TO HOCH BLAUEN. — Ascent of Blauen, 3729 feet above sea. A good road for the first mile, after that good paths through the Black Forest. The ascent is steep, but no guide is needed. It is better to dispense with horses if possible; any tolerably good pedestrian can walk to the top in 2½ hours. The forest here is unusually black. There are hardly any openings till the summit is attained, and then the view is magnificent. The Alps stand out nobly; Strassburg Cathedral and Freiburg Minster are distinctly visible; while to the westward lie the Vosges Mountains. It is worth while waiting on the top for the sunset, as the Vosges and Rhine plain are at that time variegated with most exquisite tints of alternate light and shade. The descent can be made rapidly, and those who have their alpenstocks with them will find them useful in making a quick descent. A hut is erected on the top of Blauen for shelter, but as the view can only be enjoyed sub Jove frigido, travellers had better provide plaids as a protection against cold, after the close air of the forest, which has to be encountered in the ascent.

Todtnau.—

INN.—The Ox (ochs) near the church. From Todtnau to Schonan, through Wiesenthal, 2 stunden. INN at Schonan, Sonne.

The street winds through picturesque cliffs; at Neuenweg (½ stunden) is a road to Badenweiler, on the right, pass Ober Bollen on to some houses called Halden (2 stunden), whence the Belchen can be ascended.

Baireuth or Beyreuth.—Stat.—Pop. 19,208

HOTEL:—ANKER.

In Bavaria, and formerly a royal residence. Its two palaces are now public offices and barracks; in the one called Neue Schloss, there is a small collection of paintings and a large public garden. The town contains a bronze statue of Jean Paul Richter, and it is within an easy distance of the Franconian Switzerland. At the Hermitage, Frederick the II.'s sister wrote her Memoirs. An Inauguration festival was held June, 1872, at the laying of the first stone of a German National Theatre, by Wagner, the composer of Lohengrin, and a resident here.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Neumarket, en route to Frankfort, see pages 193 and 282. Omnibus to Müggerdorf and Streitberg, by Weischenfels.

HOTELS:—ERBPRINZ; ENGLISCHER HOF; PARISER HOF; GRUNER HOF; GOLDENER ADLER.

Carlsruhe, or "Charles' Rest," capital of the Grand Duchy of Baden, is built like a fan, the streets radiating from the Palace. Principal street the Lange Strasse. Amongst the edifices are the Palace; the Protestant and Catholic churches, built by Weinbrenner; the Palace of the Count Palatine of Baden, and the Polytechnic School the latter in the architectural style of the middle centuries. Palace library with 90,000 vols. under care of Dr. Mone; has some valuable palimpsests. The Academy or Kunsthalle is open Saturday from 11 to 1 and 2 to 4. Every day for 30 kr. Built in 1845 by Halbech; it has a good collection of paintings.

Before the castle is a bronze statue of the deceased Grand Duke of Baden by Schwanthaler; a pyramid of red sandstone in the interior of the town points out the grave of the founder and builder of the town. Botanic garden and promenades in Palace garden, all open. Magnificent new Theatre. Hospital built by Baron Stultz.

ENGLISH CHURCH.—Occasional Service, in the Aula of the Lyceum, at the Marktplatz.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 64, 74, 132, 133 and 137.

Chemnitz.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 68,230.

HOTELS:—ROEMISCHER KAISER; STADT BERLIN ENGEL.

47 m. S.W. of Dresden. The most considerable manufacturing town in Saxony, producing hosiery which rivals that of England. The condition of the factory-people here is superior to that in most other places, as they almost all possess freehold cottages, with gardens. Chemnitz is also noted for its manufactures of machinery for spinning. Its ancient fortifications, having been levelled, afford agreeable promenades. Outside the town is the former Schloss, once the residence of the Elector, but now an inn.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—Louis E. Croppey, Esq

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 153, 171, 172, 188 and 189.

Coburg.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 12,820. HOTELS: GOLDNER LÖWE; GRUN BAUM.

The capital of the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, on the river Itz or Itsch. The market-place is a fine square, and contains the government offices and town-house, with the statue of Prince Albert, inaugurated 1865, by the presence of the Queen, Prince of Wales, &c. Here is a celebrated Academy, founded in 1597, also the castle, or Ehrenberg Palace, and a good theatre. Leopold, who married Princess Charlotte of England, and afterwards became King of Belgium, was of the Coburg family, the Prince Consort was his nephew, of the same family. The line will be kept up by the Duke of Edinburgh; King Ferdinand of Portugal is another member of the family. The inhabitants carry on some traffic in wool.

Darmstadt.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 39,600.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway see pages 64, 123, 126, 127 and 137.

Donauwerth—Stat.—Pop. 3,600.—HOTEL KRONE—good.

A small town in Bavaria, on the Danube, where the Wernitz joins; easily reached from Munich, &c. Here, Marlborough defeated the Bavarians, 1704. The scenery along the Danube to Ratisbon is interesting as far as Neustadt; from there extremely grand. The steamers are very small, and not over comfortable, and the fares are high, (9 Rm. 1st class from Donauwerth to Ratisbon, less up the River. They run daily in summer, starting from Donauwerth about 9.0 a.m., and reaching Ratisbon about 5.0 p.m., in time to drive to the Walhalla (p. 447) before dark. Travellers may breakfast comfortably and reasonably on board, but should avoid dining if possible, the food being bad, and the charges exorbitant. Beyond Ratisbon to Passau, Linz, and Vienna, the Danube scenery is magnificent, and the steamers are good—Rail to Munich, see p. 198.

DRESDEN.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 177,100 including soldiers.—(Map in Special Edition.)

THEATRES, every day; begin at 6 or 6.30 p.m.

RAILWAY.—The Berlin Stations are distant about a mile from the principal Hotels. Passengers from Dresden vis Leipzig to Hof, must proceed at their own cost from the terminus to the Bavarian Station, a mile distant, except by some trains.

Droskeys, with one horse for three persons and baggage, 30 pf.

Between Dresden & Prague (at Bodenbach) passports are given up, examined, and reclaimed before departure of train. Baggage of travellers is scarcely looked at; the same formalities are observed in leaving the Austrian frontier. The buffet here is bad.

Capital of the kingdom of Saxony and a favourite residence of English people, by whom it is considered the "Florence" of the North; celebrated for cheap living, cheap good music, and works of art. It is situated on both banks of the Elbe, which are united by two beautiful bridges, 552 yards long, and consists of the Altstadt on the left bank, and Neustadt on the right bank. The terminus of the Leipsic and Dresden Railway is in the Neustadt. By way of Ostend and Cologne, Dresden may be reached in 38 hours. The traveller should, by all means, visit The Saxon Switzerland.

A week or fortnight may be most pleasantly passed in Dresden, and, unlike most continental towns, the principal places of resort are at easy walking distances. The abundance of cheap good music is remarkable; for 3d. an excellent concert may be heard; 16 or more musical selections are given at the Belvedere Café for the small sum above named. During the winter months, skating of the best kind is to be had on the Dresden waters.

The Museum, and other objects of curiosity should be visited mornings and afternoons, a drive before sunset in the charming environs; the opera and café concerts make up the day's amusements.

Exquisitely finished miniatures for brooches, bracelets, or pictures are taken here for moderate prices; also, copies on enamel of the celebrated pictures in the gallery. The prices of these latter range from 5*l.* upwards.

CHURCHES, &c.—Hofkirche. Ascension by Mengs, fine music, Sundays, 11.30 to 3 p.m. Frauenkirche, steeple 200 feet high.

PALACES.—Palace of Bruhl; Japanese palace; fine gardens.

Königsschloss, tower 250 feet high. Hof Theatre, one of the finest in Germany; statues of Göthe, Schiller, Mozart, Sophocles, Aristophanes, &c. Arsenal.

Nunes Museum, entrance for Sundays, 12 to 3; Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, 10 to 4; Monday and Wednesday, 10 to 4; fee 50 pfennigo. contains ancient sculpture, 250,000 engravings, some the richest that exist. On the first story is the celebrated Picture Gallery, containing 1882 paintings, and 2059 works, including pastels. The most noted pieces are Raphael's Virgin of St. Sixtus, Coreggio's Notte, Titian's Peter's Pence, &c., 50 landscapes of Canaletti. Catalogues to be had at the doors. The Grune Gewölbe, or Green Vaults, underneath contains treasures of art valued at three million thalers. The historical museum has a fine collection of arms (Sobieski's, worn at the siege of Vienna), tents (of Kara Mustapha) same siege, the sword of Charles XII., a fine collection of porcelain, an antiquity museum (Alterthumer museum,) rich in mediæval treasures, a library (300,000 vols), fee, 1 Reichsmark, a mineralogical collection, open 10 to 12 o'clock. Tickets for the Green Vaults, engravings, china, and armoury, are good for 6 persons. Royal Library, open daily for public use, till 1 o'clock.

Dresden was entered by the Prussians, 1866, on their way to Sadowa. Here, Napoleon defeated the allies, 1813.

WALKS.—The best are the gardens of the Japanese Palace, and the Gross Garten by the Elbe. Excursions—Monument to Moreau (red granite) on spot where he fell in battle. 1813. Baths of Linke, half hour. Hostenwitz, where Weber composed "Oberon" and the "Freyschütz;" Loschwitz, where the poet Kerner was born; and Schiller composed Don Carlos, &c.

Saxon Switzerland, (Hotel des Bains,) is a district of minature mountain scenery on both banks of the Elbe, consisting of green valleys, narrow ravines, panoramic views, and quaint basaltic rocks. Three days' walking will exhaust the country, which is over-rated.—1st day, Rail from Dresden to Potscha, 1 hour; Ottwalder Grund, curious narrow gorge, 1½ hour; ascend Bastei, 307 mètres, fine view, 1½ hour. Hochstein 300 mètres, fine view. At Hohnstein, 45 min. (Hotels, Sachsische, Schweiz, and Hirsch); 1100 inhabitants; old castle, 1½ hour. Brand, 324 metres from river, 2 hours. Schandau (Hotel Engel, Dampechiff), population, 2000; ascent of Lilienstein, 1½ hour.—2nd day, 2 hours from Schandau; Kuhstall cavern, 33 mètres deep, 2 hours. Gross Winterberg, 573 mètres, fine panorama, 1 hour. Prebischthor, splendid natural gallery in the rock, 1½ hour. Herrns Kretschen, hence by rail or boat to Bodenbach.—3rd day, ascend Schneeberg, 740 mètres. Konigstein Rock and its old fortress, Hotel, Blaser, Stern. Visit fortress, 4 Reichsmarks for 1 to 8 persons. Ascend Lilienstein, 409 mètres. Rail or boat to Dresden.

Railway travellers coming down from Prague will do well to leave the railway at Aussig, and to go from this place on the steamer, the trifling sacrifice of time being richly repaid by the charming beauty of the scenery on the river.

EXCURSIONS FROM FREIBURG.

Ascent of the Belchen.

Excursions, No. 1.—The ascent of this mountain is best performed by taking the Rail to Müllheim, and thence by Badenweiler, where guides and donkeys may be had; or from Freiburg in a carriage, by Staufen and Neumühle. The new road from Staufen to the Wiesenthal, (Schoonau) good and very picturesque. The Belchen is the second highest mountain of the Black Forest-chain (the Feldberg being higher) 4526 feet above the level of the sea. The tourist may then make for Freiburg or for Badenweiler, as described anon.

In ascending, the view is less interrupted by trees than from Blauen, and is very picturesque over the neighbouring valleys of Münsterthal and Wiesenthal—the distant view same as Blauen. Descending the same side the road must be followed from Halden to Sirnitz (1¼ stunden), where refreshments (and at need a bed) may be had. From Sirnitz follow the course of the Klemback on to Badenweiler (distance 2½ stunden) Belchen and Münsterthal. Ascend the Belchen from Halden (see Todtnau and Badenweiler) and descend the other side (north) to Neuhmuhl (1½ stunden.)

NEUHMUHL.—INN, KRONE.—Here a one-horse carriage (einspänner) can be taken to Krozingen railway station (3 stunden) for 2 Rm. 57 pf. passing Staufen. Most excellent beer may be had at Krozingen, close to railway station. From Krozingen to Müllheim Station, 9½ miles by rail (see Time Tables); from Müllheim to Badenweiler by diligence (see Müllheim to Badenweiler.)

Mullheim Station to Oberweiler, 4½ miles; one-horse voitures à deux places with luggage, 3 Reichsmarks 9 pfennige.

OBERWEILER, a charming village situated in a lovely valley south of the Black Forest, a quarter of an hour's walk from its more fashionable neighbour, Badenweiler; from Oberweiler all the excursions named above may be made as easily as from Baden Weiler. The air is warmer, and the village more sheltered than Badenweiler, INNS: - WILDEN MANN;-landlord, Ch. Baumann. French spoken. Baths in house. Charges moderate.

OCHS.—Unvisited, but similar in most respects.

LODGINGS may be obtained in the village. Pension, 5 francs a day; the Inn is cheaper.

Beautiful carved walking-sticks may be bought at No. 26. Fishing may be had in the neighbourhood, but leave must be obtained from the proprietor. A skilful horloger who can speak French lives in the village.

EXCURSIONS.—Neuenfels Castle, (2 miles,) situated on an eminence in the Black Forest; no guide necessary; sign-posts all the way. Good paths. Fine view of Black Forest, Freiburg, Vosges and Rhine plain,—pass lovely valleys (to the left.) Several ferns may be found on ascending Neuenfels.

No. 2.—The Hoellenthal—15 miles.

No. 3.—The Suggenthal (Badhaus) and Waldkirch (Post-house), 9 miles, where there is capital trout fishing. Apply to the landlord.

No. 4.—The Lake Titisee, by the Hoellenthal—21 miles.

No. 5.—St. Peter—9 miles.

No. 6.—The Mountain Kaiserstuhl, near the Rhine—12 miles. This is a curious volcanic construction.

No. 7.—The Schauinsland, 3930 feet, has a splendid view of the Alps—10 miles.

No. 8.—The Feldberg, 5,000 feet high, the highest mountain of the Black Forest range—24 miles. Near this is the lake Feldsee, where the largest trout of the Black Forest may be caught. A new Inn has been established on this mountain, with good accommodation; the landlord has hired the right of fishing and shooting in the neighbourhood, with which he accommodates his guests.

The above are some of the chief excursions to be made from Freiburg; but the whole country round abounds in beautiful walks and objects worth visiting.

Tourists who wish to explore the beautiful and wild scenery of the Black Forest on their road to Switzerland should take this route from FREIBURG as follows:—The Hoellenthal, Titi See, Lenzkirch (Post-house), a large village with clock and straw-hat manufactories, the Schluch See much frequented for its pure air (Stern), St. Blasien, with its fine church, built after the Pantheon at Rome, a Benedictine abbey, well worthy of a visit; thence through the wild and most picturesque valley of the Alb, hitherto unknown, to Albbruck Station (good Inn), hence by Rail, in two hours, to Schaffhausen, Zürich or Bale. The Swiss Guide writer calls this route "the new entrance into Switzerland." Carriages may be had at fixed prices; but agree beforehand, not forgetting the "trinkgeld."

Friedrichshafen.—Stat.—Pop. 1200.—

Droschken Tariff, by the course: From the Railway to the Town—taking in Meta's Museum (at Hausacker), Diemer Brewery, the gasworks, &c.—for 1 person, 12 kr.; 2 persons, 20 kr.; 3 to 4, each 12 kr. Boxes, 6 kr. each. Direct to the Castle (Schloss), 2 fr. For a round taking in Wolfsbrunnen, Molkenkur, Königstuhl, and the Castle, for 2 persons, 3 fl. 30 kr. Neckar-Steinach, the day, 8 fl.—Tariff, by time—½ hour, 1 or 2 persons, 18 kr. each; 3 or 4 persons, 12 kr. each. One hour, 1 or 2 persons, 1 fl. 12 kr. each; 3 or 4, 1 fl. 30 kr. Donkeys: to the castle, 24kr.; Wolfsbrunnen, 1 fl.; to Koenigstuhl, 1 fl. 45 kr. The little stream which supplies the fish-ponds is made use of for the propagation of trout. The innkeeper is the enterprising proprietor. The tourist should order some fried trout to be got ready by his return from the Castle.

An old and cheerful-looking town, on the Neckar, in Bavaria, and a pleasant place of sojourn in summer. The price of apartments is rather high. Education is excellent and very cheap. There is intellectual society and a good theatre. A pleasant walk called the Anlage is carried along the foot of the hills flanking the town on the left bank of the Neckar, clothed with vineyards and fine pleasant woods, and affording a variety of delightful views. The picturesque noble ruins of the Castle one of the most interesting objects in Europe formerly the residence of the Electors-Palatine, occupy the hill behind the town. The view is very fine, and there are charming promenades. In a cellar under the castle may be seen the celebrated "Tun of Heidelberg," the largest wine cask in the world. The University is attended by about 500 students, who wear fancy caps to distinguish their country, and are much given to duelling. It is noted for its excellent professors of chemistry (Bunsen), physical and medical science, and jurisprudence. The environs are a perfect garden, producing abundance of grain and fruit. Excursions are numberless. At hand is the delightful Philosophen Gang. The ascent of the Heiliger Berg; a row up the Neckar to Siecheihausen, &c.

A delightful excursion may be made to Neckar Steinach. The country around is very lovely; the castle (residence of Baron Dort) commands a fine view of the river and valley. The village lies close to the water's edge, and there is a picturesque running stream twice bridged over flowing through the village. There is an old ruined church in the castle grounds, and another ruin called the "Swallows' Nest," about half a mile from the village; perched half-way up the high hill side, with a beautiful view of the banks of the Neckar. The access is either by steamer from Heidelberg or by rail to Neckar-Gemund (a station about half an hour from Heidelberg), whence an omnibus takes you and will drop you close to the Harp, a small but comfortable inn; from Neckar-Gemund to Neckar-Steinach is a short hour's walk.

English Chaplain.—Rev. J. H. Hodges, M.A., 47, Anlage. Services: Sundays, 8, 10.30, and 6. Holy Communion, weekly. Wednesdays, Fridays, and Holy Days, at 11.

Church of Scotland.—A Minister officiates during the months of June, July, August, and September, in Heiliggeist Kirche.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 131, 132, 133, 135, 137, 150 and 198.

Steamers ascend the Neckar daily to Heilbronn.

Heilbronn.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 16,960.

Hotels: Falke; Rox.

Situated on the Neckar. Formerly a free city, and place of commerce in Würtemburg.

Homburg.—Stat.—Pop. 7000—Hotels:—

Hotel de Russie.—First-class Hotel, elegantly furnished apartments.

Hotel Victoria.—Very good hotel, excellent table d'hôte, moderate charges.

Hotel de l'Europe.—Old-established family hotel, nicely situated, opposite the Kursaal. Proprietor, Geo. Schmidt.

Digitized by Google

Hôtel des Quatre Saisons, kept by Mr. W. Schlotterbeck. Well situated; moderate charges.

Also the following: Stadt Frankfurt; Goldener Adler, good; table d'hote at 1 o'clock, 1 fl. 12 kr.; Badischer Hof; Rheinischer Hof; Goldene Rose.

Pension.—Louisen Strasse, No. 111.

Homburg, formerly in Hessen Homburg, but now belonging to Prussia, is 9 or 10 miles from Frankfort, has attained its present reputation with unexampled rapidity. The Kursaal is one of the most splendid in Germany; table d'hôte charges average from 1 fl. 12 kr. to 2 fl. N.B.—The gaming table was closed 1872.

It stands on a breezy table-land, where the climate is very healthy; for there is always a fine fresh current of air from the Taunus mountains; and even in the hottest weather no one experiences that feeling of languor so much complained of in the narrow valleys.

Principal Springs.—The Stahl or Steel, the Kaiser, and the Elisabeth, near which last the band plays. There are excellent baths of various sorts; and entertainments in the shape of balls, operas, fêtes-champêtres, etc., almost daily.

For twenty florins (little more than one guinea and a half) per week, you can have two excellent apartments in the best part of the town; and the hotel charges are, upon the whole, moderate, while the admittance to all the amusements is gratuitous. A through ticket can be taken at Mayence. Roman remains near Taunus, a few miles off.

English Church.—Rev. C. B. Brigstocke, M.A., Chaplain. Divine Service on Sundays at 11 a.m. and 3.30 p.m. Holy Communion every Sunday during summer months.

The handsome new Church near the Station, opened 1868, has sittings for 500 persons; but the interior is incomplete. Donations will be thankfully received by the Chaplain.

Church of Scotland.—A Minister officiates during the summer months.

Bank.—The Lund bank; Director, Herr Schules.

English Physician.—Dr. Lewis.

Several German Physicians.

Conveyances.—Omnibuses correspond with the trains to and from Frankfort almost every hour. For railway, see p. 136. 1 and 2 horse carriages by the quarter, the half, and the hour. Horses and donkeys the same. There is a tariff for each.

Konigs See, in Bavaria, see Berchtesgaden.

Ingolstadt.—Stat.—Pop. 20,000.—Hotels:—Munchner Hof; Goldener Adler.

A fortified town of Bavaria, on the Danube, and the principal place between Donauworth and Ratisbon. The new fortifications are very fine.

Conveyances:—Railway, see pages 195 and 196.

Jena.—In Saxe-Weimar.—Pop. 7000.—Hotel Deutschen Haus.

Jena is a very quaint university town, (400 students) beautifully situated on the river Saale, and surrounded by the wood-clad mountains of the Thuringer Wald. It is composed of ancient, narrow streets lined with houses, which are curious by their many-storied roofs, quaint archways, and antique mouldings. The great Church has a lofty tower and fine organ. The old city gates and the market place will repay a visit. Living and education very cheap. Beautiful walks and drives in the neighbourhood. It gives name to the memorable battle of October 14th, 1806, which laid Prussia at the foot of Napoleon I., and led to the gradual reconstruction of her military forces, which culminated in the great triumph of Sedan over Napoleon III., 1870. The traveller should ascend the Hausberg (the view from the summit being very extensive), and go round the Horseshoe Mountain to the ruins of the old castle on the Cunitsberg.

Conveyances—Railway, see page 171.

Kaiserslautern, a Stat. on the rail between Mannheim and Saarbrücken (p. 138). "Excellent beer brewed here."—R. C. S.

Kelheim.—Pop. 2000.—A small town in Bavaria beautifully situated on the Danube, where it issues from the precipices of the Lange Wand (long wall), one of the grandest of defiles. (The best Hotel is Ehrenthaler, clean and decent.) On the summit of the Michaelsberg, a mountain overhanging the town, is situated the Befreiungshalle, a rotunda. Temple of great magnificence, erected by the late king of Bavaria, to commemorate the War of Liberation. The caves and grottoes at Kelheim are very curious. In the neighbourhood is the "Schuller Loch," a grotto, thence over the bridge to the convent of Kloster-Weltenburg, (where bread, cheese and beer may be had) and thence by boat down to Kelheim. The Canal which joins the Rhine and the Danube starts from this place.

Steamers daily in summer to Ratisbon, and up the Danube to Ingolstadt and Donauwerth.

Kissingen.—In Bavaria. See Prussian Sec.

Kreuth.—A watering place in the Bavarian Tyrol, 40 miles from Munich, 3370 feet above sea; reached by post waggon from Holzkirchen Station, which makes the journey in 5 hours, giving time for lunch at Tegernsee, on the Tegern Lake. It is a healthy spot, among thick woods, and has sulphur and iron springs, vapour and douche baths, and a goats' whey cure. Excursions to the Soinder, Galtalp, and other fine points of view. The Schinder being nearly 6500 feet high.

Leipsic, or Leipzig.—Stat.—Pop (1871) 106,920 Hotels:—

Hotel de Prusse, Roosplatz.—First-class hotel, beautifully situated on a large square; newly and comfortably furnished.

Hotel Hauffe.—First-class hotel, well-situated, comfortable, and clean.

De Russie; De Baviere; Stadt Rom; Stadt Wien; Stadt Dresden, etc.

Omnibuses attend the Railway stations. Droschken, 1 horse under 20 minutes for 1 person, 3 ngr; 2 persons, 4 ngr.; 3 persons, 6 ngr.; by the hour, 8, 10, and 12 ngr. The Leipsic terminus is between the Halle and Grimma Gates.

Leipsic (Saxony) is of great historical note and commercial celebrity. At the fair-time, or "Leipziger Messe," hotels charge double. The number of visitors amounts to more than 60,000, and the market-wares to 80,000,000 dollars yearly. Leipsic is the centre of the German book-trade; has 200 booksellers' establishments, 100 steam-presses, and above 200 hand-presses; Booksellers' Exchange; University, founded 1409, containing three colleges, viz., the Augusteum, the Paulinum, with the museum of natural history and anatomy, and the Fürsten Collegium. Also, the town library, with a collection of eastern manuscripts; pictures in the Städtischen museum; the St. Nicolas' church; the large market-place, in which are the Town-hall and the so-called King's-hall (Konig's-haus). In the latter lived Napoleon during the battle near Leipsic; near it is Auerbach's Keller (cellar), celebrated in Göthe's Faust. There is now a good ordinary in it. Notice the Sternwarte (Observatory), on the Pleissenburg; Gerhard's garden, in which is placed the monument of Poniatowsky; Gellert's grave, in the Friedhof; besides many monuments to great men, such as Hunemann, Sebastian Bach, etc.; the Rosenthal (park). Round about the town are many public gardens. It is 1½ hours to the Battle-field; where the French army under Napoleon was defeated by the Allies, October 1813.

H. B. M.'s Consul General.—Baron Von Tauchnitz, the celebrated Publisher.

American Consul.—J. H. Steuart, Esq.

Wells, Whitford, M. A. Oxen. licensed Chaplain, Elisenstrasse, 17 B; who will receive subscriptions for a proposed New Church to cost £3,400. Messrs. Frühling and Göschen, of Austin Friars, London also receive subscriptions.

American Chapel.—(Evangelical Alliance.)—Hall of the First Bürgerschule. Sunday, as announced at Hotels. No pastor in charge. Caspar Rene Gregory, Chairman of committee.

Lenskirch.—Pop. 600.—Hotel: —Adler.—

A romantic town, about 10 hours from Schaffhausen, and 14½ hours from Constance. The inhabitants are clockmakers.

Liebenstein, (Baths of)—Pop. 1000.

Hotels: —Kurhause; Bellevue; Hotel Aschermann; H. Muller; H. Krchner.

An attractive and increasing bathing-place, in a fine part of the Thuringer-Wald, belonging to the Grand Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, whose summer residence is at Altenstein, 7 miles from Immelborn, the nearest station. Visited in 1871 by 1700 patients, and 4000 tourists. The three iron springs, with the Kurhause, Bath-house, theatre, &c., have been bought by a Company, who are building new lodging-houses.

Excursions—To the Burg Stein, (a good point of view), the ruined castle of the Ducal family; Erdfall grotto, and the Glücksbrunn cave and lake; the seat of Duke Bernhard, Queen Adelaide's brother; Wilhelmsthal, belonging to the Grand Duke of Weimar; Reinhardsbrunn, the residence of the Duke of Coburg, brother to the Prince Consort; Luther's Beech, on the Ruhla road; and the Trusenthal, or valley of the Truse or Druse, leading to the Inselberg, one of the highest peaks of the Thuringian Forest, 3060 feet above sea.

Limburg.—Stat.—Hotel Nassau.—

A little town, very prettily situated on the Lahn. The cathedral, though small, is interesting, from its great antiquity and rude grandeur; it is built upon a steep rock, rising above the river. The valley of the Lahn is perhaps as beautiful as any in Germany. The railway follows the course of the stream to Ems, amidst rocks and forests, which form the chief charms of this lovely country.

Conveyances—Railway, to Ems, Coblenz, and Cologne; and to Wetzlar, Giessen, and Deutz (Cologne), see page 130.

Lübeck.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 39,745. Hotels: Stadt Hamburg; Du Nord; Stadt London; Duffeke; Brockmuller; Funf Thurme.

One of the three great Hanse towns, on a ridge between the rivers Trave and Wackenitz, by whose waters it is completely surrounded. It bears unmistakable marks of former grandeur in the handsome citizens' houses, the fine old brick-built Rathhaus, and the noble specimens of Gothic brick architecture in the Cathedral and Marien-Kirche. Sir Godfrey Kneller and the brothers Van Ostade were born in Lübeck, where their houses are still shown. In the Rathhaus is the famous Hall of the Hanse, in which the deputies from 85 cities used to meet and hold council. Observe the bronze work on the outer door, the quaint seats, and the wood-carving on the council-chamber door.

The Holstein Gate is a good specimen of Norman brick architecture, with heavy towers. The Burg-gate, built at a later period, is a beautiful example of mediæval work. Cathedral.—Notice the ornamental gateway, the wood-work of the altar screen, curious clock, and, above all, Hans Hemling's fine triptich of the crucifixion, &c. The Marien-Kirche is a very interesting specimen of pointed Gothic. Notice Overbeck's painting, the Dance of Death. See the wood-carving in the house No. 800, Breite Strasse.

English Vice-Consul.—W. Behncke, Esq.

American C. Agent.—J. Meyer, Esq.

Conveyances.—Railways to Buchen, page 168, Eutin, page 169; and Hamburg, page 165; to Rostock, page 173. From Wismar a steamer to Stockholm, 50 hours. Fares, Chief Cabin, 40 ds. banco. Lubeck to Stralsund, about 110 Eng. miles. Lubeck to Copenhagen every evening.

25 miles from Lübeck, on the Schwerin road, is Gadebusch, an old town on an island in a picturesque lake, marked by a church with a tall brick tower. Near it is the battle-field where Theodore Körner, the poet, fell 26th August, 1813. An iron memorial stands on the spot.

Luxemburg.—See Belgian Section.

Marburg.—Stat.—Hotels:—

Hotel Pfeiffer, and Hotel Zum Ritter, both good, and very moderate.

A prettily situated University town on the rail from Frankfort to Cassel (page 146) worth seeing for its Cathedral.

Meiningen.—Stat.—Pop. 7300.—Hotels:—Sachsischer Hof; Hirsch.

Capital of the Saxo-Meiningen Duchy, among wooded hills on the Werra, 900 feet above sea. It has a Ducal Palace, picture gallery, and English garden, with a new gothic chapel in it. In 1874, a great fire burnt one half of the little town, and made 3,000 persons homeless.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 169.

Metz.—Stat.— Pop. about 40,000, i.e., 8,000 less since it was annexed to Germany, 1870.

HOTELS:—

GRAND HOTEL DE METZ.—Combining comfort with reasonable prices. Engelmann, proprietor.

GRAND HOTEL DE L'EUROPE.—First-class hotel, well situated. A. Moulet, Proprietor. English spoken.

Mr. Hamilton and L. Mankiewicz are guides to Gravelotte and other battle fields.

Buffet at the Station, half a mile from the town. Omnibuses convey passengers to the hotels.

198¼ English miles E. of Paris, 180 miles from Brussels, via Luxemburg. The ancient Divodurum, a strongly fortified town, at the confluence of the Seille and Moselle. Circumference of the fortifications between three and four miles. The rivers are bordered in some parts with quays, and crossed by a number of small bridges. An Esplanade planted with fine trees, separates the town from the old Citadel. The great Cathedral (forming one of the sides of the Place d'Armes), for size, elevation, and majestic beauty of design, is equal to any gothic building on the continent. Other principal buildings are the Governor's residence on the Esplanade; the Hospitals, a number of Churches and religious houses; extensive Barracks: and a public Library. The leather trade is considerable. There are remains of a Roman aqueduct.

On 28th July, 1870, the Emperor Napoleon here joined the army of the Rhine, issued a proclamation stating that the war would be long and serious, but the "God of battles will be with us," and then crossed the frontier to Saarbruck, which was taken in presence of the Prince Imperial, who here received his "baptism of fire." Further progress being arrested by the German victories at Weissenburg and Woerth, on 4th and 6th August, the army then concentrated on Metz; and on 14th, under Bazaine, began to retreat towards Châlons, to effect a junction with MacMahon. It was arrested however by the Germans who had got in front; and after desperate fighting, with the loss of tens of thousands on both sides, at Courcelles or Borney on 14th; at Mars la Tours, or Rezonville on the 16th, with P. Fred. Chas.; at Vionville or Doncourt—a battle in which the Germans lost 17,000 men, and had their left nearly turned; at Gravelotte or St. Privat on the 18th, with the King of Prussia, after nine hours' fighting; Bazaine was finally driven back to Metz, which was invested by the forces of Prince Frederick Charles. He tried to break through on several occasions, as 26th August, 1st, 23rd, and 27th September, and again on the 6th and 7th October, along the Thionville road, when the losses were 10,000 on each side Being at length exhausted, he sent General Boyer to the German head-quarters at Versailles, with proposals to capitulate; which took effect on the 28th October, when 3 Marshals, 66 Generals, 6000 Officers, and 173,000 men, surrendered as prisoners of war, and were transported to Germany.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Nancy, Forbach, and Thionville, &c., pp. 64, 67, 73, 74, 77, 125 and 128.

Mühlhausen or Mulhouse, (now German).—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 53,826. HOTELS.

295¼ English miles from Paris and 19 K. miles from Bale, situated between two arms of the river Ille, and on the canal of Monsieur. It is well built, and contains some fine edifices, of which the chief are the church of St. Stephen, belonging to the Reformed Church, the Catholic church, the town-hall, the college, hospital, &c. There are numerous manufactures of printed silks, cottons, ribbons, wool and cotton yarns, laces, watchwork, sugar from beet-root and chemical products. Among the manufacturing establishments, that of the brothers Koechlin is remarkable. Also the Naghelin Spinning Factory (95,000 spindles). In the neighbourhood at Dornach there are the works of the Messrs. Dolfus, Mies and Co. The trade consists of corn, wines, ardent spirits, and native manufactures. Here is a picture gallery.

BANKERS.—Merck, Christian, & Co., (Exchange Offices) Pfandhaus Strasse, No. 4.

Munich (München, German) on the Isar, is the capital of Bavaria, the head quarters of modern German art, and one of the most beautiful towns in Germany. The most important Churches are the Frauen-kirche, or Cathedral, built of brick in 1488; the Jesuit church, (or St. Michaels) corner of Werte and Neuhaus sts., a beautiful structure in the Italian style, with the tomb of Prince Eugene Beauharnois, by Thorwaldsen—on each Sunday is to be heard classical music; the St. Peter's church, the oldest in Munich. The Theatiner Kirche, in the cumbersome Italian style, with the vault of the royal family; the Ludwig's kirche, completed 1842, has admirable frescoes from designs of Cornelius; the All Saints' chapel, in the royal palace; the Mariahilfkirche, in the suburb, in pure gothic style, with nineteen beautifully painted glass windows, paintings after designs by H. Hess; the Basilica of St. Bonifacio, in the Carlstrasse, without exception the most beautiful church in Germany, in the Byzantine style,—adorned with frescoes by living artists.

The Royal Palace consists of two parts, the old and new, a beautiful edifice, after the model of the Pitti-palace in Florence. It is open on certain days to the public, by tickets obtained previously in the morning, at the palace. It is rich in fresco paintings. The Glyptothek, or sculpture gallery, is a very noble and classical building; admission gratis, on most days of the week, from 10 to 2, and from 2 to 4; but the particular days of admission to this and the other galleries in Munich are frequently varied, and the traveller should refer to the small daily German newspaper, called the "Taglicher Anzeiger," for all particulars relating to public exhibitions and amusements at Munich. When the king is not in town the gallery is only open on the Wednesday and Saturday. The two galleries of paintings called the Pinacothek, contain old paintings, and modern works. For catalogue, see page 571. It numbers six grand Salles, five small Salles, and eleven Cabinets, with 300 paintings, by Kaulbach, Schnorr, Schadow, Rottmann, and Oberbeck. Admission free; for times refer to the "Taglicher Anzeiger." The collection of painted glass, formerly belonging to Messrs. Boiserie and Bertran, is now in the Pinacothek. The Erzgiesserei or Royal Bronze Foundry, under F. Müller, is worth seeing; open 12 to 1. Among several fine works produced here, are the statue of Bavaria, and the beautiful Fountain at Cincinnati in America, dedicated to that town by two of its citizens, of which a description is published. The colossal Statue of Bavaria, and her Lion, half a mile from the Sendlinger Thor, is of copper, upwards of 60 feet high, on a pedestal of marble 40 feet high. A spiral staircase leads to the top; the head will hold eight persons, and there are holes to enable them to view the surrounding country. It is erected on a hill, with temple and colonnade behind, called the Hall of the Heroes—in German, Ruhmeshalle; admission 12 kr. each. Engraving from the Custodian, 24 kr.

Notice also the Jesuits' college, with the cabinet of coins and the natural history museum; the Royal Library, a superb edifice, in the Ludwigstrasse, with room enough to hold two millions of volumes, and in richness the second in the world; its reading-room is open Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 8 to 1 o'clock. The University, a new building, in the Ludwigstrasse, has also a good library, consisting of 500,000 volumes, the largest after Paris and London; the Isarthor, newly renovated by King Ludwig, and adorned with beautiful frescoes. The Odeon, a beautiful building allotted to musical soirées. The Hoftheater is adorned with frescoes by H. Hess.

New Town Hall (Rathhaus) in Marian Platz, a picturesque Gothic building of brick and stone, erected 1867-74. Close to it is the Marian Column dedicated to the Virgin 1638; with Knoll's Fischbrunnen or fountain. Underneath the Hall is Steidl's wine cellar (Rathskeller) containing two large rooms adorned with F. Wagner's numerous wall paintings and mottoes. Every kind of wine may be tasted here. The Old Town Hall, restored 1865, is on the east side of the Platz.

The Bavarian National Museum is a rich and well assorted collection.—Every day, Monday excepted.

HOTEL ZUM STRAUSS (Ostrich Hotel).—Excellent Hotel, centrally situated, entirely new, and furnished in the best style.

ROTHER HAHN; COMMERCIAL.

Cafés:—Lother, Leghitz, Noris.

Nürnberg, one of the oldest and most noted towns of Germany, and the centre of trade between South and North Germany. The toys called "Dutch," manufactured here, are of European repute. The appearance of St. Sebald's gothic church from the river is most romantic. This church and the ancient Castle, the residence of the emperors in the middle ages, and afterwards of the mayors of the town, are the most attractive of its public edifices. The church of St. Giles (rebuilt in 1718, and called the New Church) contains an altar-piece by Vandyck.

Its houses are remarkable for numerous oriel windows projecting into the street, many of which are beautifully sculptured.

OTHER OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Town-Hall, with paintings by Albrecht Dürer, and also the old prison-hole; the Reichsfeilte, where formerly the regalia were kept; Albrecht Dürer's house in the Dürerstrasse, No. 376; Dürer's statue in the Milk-market (Milch-markt); the Lindauer picture gallery; the Catholic church; the beautiful fountain; the Ganse-markt (Goose-market), with a singular statue in bronze of Labenwolf; the house of Hans Sachs; the church of St. Lawrence, built 1274, completed 1477; the German Haus kirche, in the new Italian style; the churchyard of St. John, about half a mile from the town, where are the tombs of Albrecht Dürer and Hans Sachs, the vaults of the family Behein and Holzschuher. Many private collections. Fine promenades. Rosenau Tea Gardens.

ENGLISH CHURCH.—Divine service every Sunday till October, in the Hotel de Baviere, at 11 a.m.

AMERICAN CONSUL, Colonel James M. Wilson. Americans proceeding direct from Cologne or Frankfort to Austria can have their passports visée at the Consulate, 21, Spittelerthor-Graben, near Rosenau.

LETTERS "POST RESTANTE" are delivered only at the Post-Office at the terminus, outside the town, distant ½ mile from the hotels.

OMNIBUSES run to and from the new Thor, Guttenhof in the suburbs, and the Lauferthor; they belong mostly to the Hotels, and they charge mostly about 6krs., (2d.) — The same fare from the railway station to any part of the town. CABS, ½ hour 1 person, 12 kreutzers; 2 persons, 18 kr.; 3 or 4 persons, 24 kr.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 130, 196, 198, 213, 223 and 232.

Passau.—Stat.—Pop. 13,500.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL ADLER AND WILDERMAN. The latter near the steam-boat pier.

Passau, in Bavaria, on the banks of the Danube, beautifully situated at the junction of the River Inn and Ilz. It is the Cobienz of the Danube, and a frontier station, near the Austrian border, where luggage is examined. The most remarkable objects are the Cathedral; Church of Mariahilf; castle of Oberhaus, from which there are charming views. Jesuits college; the convent of our Lady of Good Aid, from which there is a splendid view. The sands of the Inn are washed for gold, and pearls are obtained from mussels found in the Ilz.

The scenery along the river Danube from Passau to Linz, is magnificent; succession of defiles and mountain chasms covered with forests.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 201, 203, 210, 232 and 231. Steamers to Linz and Vienna; to Linz in 4 hours; from Linz to Passau in 9 hours.—See Linz.

Regensburg, (in French, Ratisbon,)—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 29,225. HOTEL GOLDENES KREUTZ.

A Bavarian town, and the Roman Regina, beautifully situated on the banks of the Danube, where it is joined by the river Regen. A considerable fortress in ruins, blown up in the Thirty Years' war, after a siege of two months, stands on the hill above. Here are a Rathhaus, with the dungeons of former days, the torture chamber, with the instruments of torture, as they were used as late as 1784; a Cathedral, restored in a magnificent manner; an old Church behind it, of great antiquity, in good preservation, Jacob's Kirche, or Scotch church, possessing a splendid restored perch of the 12th century. It is now the Episcopal Seminary. Omnibuses to the Walhalla once a-day; 2 p.m. return 6 p.m; fares 24 krs, time 1¼ hour. A hired carriage, 1 horse, there and back 2fl. 30krs. and 3fl. with 2 horses 3fl. 30krs. & 4fl.

The Walhalla, six miles north-east, near the village of Donaustauf, is among the finest modern classical buildings in Europe. It is a Grecian Doric temple, a copy of the celebrated "Parthenon," at Athens, the two buildings having the same proportions, 225 feet, by 104 feet. It is majestically seated on a hill overlooking the valley of the Danube, and surrounded by mountains covered by thick forests. Built 1830-42, for King Ludwig, by Klenze, as a "Temple of the Elect," i. e., of eminent Germans of all ages and classes; whose busts are collected here, from Heinrich der Flinker, (A.D. 926), down to Goethe and Radetsky. It is richly adorned with bas-reliefs, and ornaments in marble, bronze, and mosaic STEAMERS—Steamers daily in summer up the Danube (very slow and tedious) to Donauwerth in 1 or 2 days; scenery fine as far as Neustadt. Steamers to and from Ingolstadt, daily in summer. Pass from Weltenberg to Kelheim, literally a wall of rock, with sharp curves.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 195, 202 203.

Rostock.—Stat.—Pop (1871) 30,980.—INNS.—HOTEL DU NORD; RUSSIA and DU NORD.

The largest town in Mecklenburg, on the Warnow; and birth-place of Blücher, whose statue in bronze stands in the square called after him the Blücher-platz. The Marienkirche has a magnificent altar and altar-piece by Rhode, an astronomical clock behind the altar, and the tomb of the renowned Hugo Grotius. Peter's Church, in the Altstadt, is surmounted by a tower 380 feet high. This town altogether wears an aspect of antiquity. The famous Kepler was for a while professor in the University of Rostock. Its port and bathing-place is Warnemunde at 9 miles distance on the Baltic, and on the mouth of the Warnow, as the name implies.

CHURCH SERVICE at the English Chapel, 1 Munzhasse; supplied by Col. & Cont. Ch. Soc.

Strasbourg stands about a mile eastward of the Rhine, at the conflux of the small rivers Ill and Breusche. Until 1681 it was a free Imperial city during peace surprized and taken by the French to whom it was ceded by the Peace of Ryswick in 1697. The Fortifications of the city and citadel, which is a regular pentagon, are remarkably strong, and were constructed by Vauban in 1682, extending almost to the Rhine.

Strasbourg thus taken by treachery, 169 years before, from the Germans, was invested by them 10th August, 1870, (the bridge of Kehl having been blown up by them, on the 23rd of July, at the outbreak of the war), and the bombardment began on the 19th. The famous Library was set fire to on 30th August; and on 27nd September the Theatre was burnt with 200 persons in it. On 28th September, General Uhrich, its gallant defender, surrendered with 400 officers and 17,000 men.

The Cathedral perhaps the most remarkable in Europe, was fortunately spared; it is an admirable structure; its steeple, which you ascend by 725 steps, is the highest pyramidal building in the world, except the largest Egyptian pyramid, which is 30 feet higher. It is built of stone, cut with such delicacy as to give it a strong resemblance to lace. The tower was planned by Erwin of Steinbach, by whom it was commenced, but it was completed by his brother John, on the death of the former, in 1318. Promenade of Ruprechtsau. A remarkable clock connected with this Cathedral is a complete astronomical almanac, from which (when in good order) you can read the revolutions of the heavenly bodies. Strasbourg claims the honour of the discovery of the art of printing, by Gutenburg, in 1436. The Lycée is on the spot where he made his first attempts. The University, which was abolished 1794, was re-opened by the Germans, 1872; and the Library having been restored since 1870, now contains 200,000 volumes.

On Isle des Epis is a monument to General Desaix, who fell at Marengo.

Strasbourg is favourably situated for commerce. There is a cannon foundry.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 64, 71, 72, 74, 76 77, 125, 132, 137, 194, 200, and 201.

PRUSSIA.

PRUSSIA—formerly a duchy, now an extensive kingdom of first rank, and head of the German Empire—was formed on the ancient electoral possessions, as a nucleus, by means of successive territorial acquisitions, particularly in Poland, Westphalia, and the Rhine. It had for its original inhabitants the Slavi, or Sarmatiæ, on the E. and N.E.,—the Vandals on the shores of the Baltic, to the N. of Pomerania—and the Suevi in the remainder of the kingdom. Prussia has been engaged, during a succession of ages, in very many wars—the particulars of which do not require to be noticed here. Her part in the campaigns of the earlier portion of this century is well known, particularly in the campaigns of 1814 and 1815. At the Congress of Vienna (1814), Prussia had secured to her the restitution of the provinces formerly wrested from her, excepting part of Poland, united to the Duchy of Warsaw; and for this small sacrifice she was amply indemnified by the concession of such territories in Saxony and the Lower Rhine, as were deemed consistent with the stability and security of the balance of power in Europe. And thus, after experiencing violent shocks and vicissitudes, by which the kingdom had been broken into pieces, and little more than the name of the monarchy saved from the wreck, we behold Prussia, after a series of unparalleled changes in another direction, again taking her station among the first sovereign states of Europe, as firm and stable as in the days of Frederick the Great—and with a territory and population far exceeding any thing he could boast of. Her political supremacy as head of the German nation, under the leadership of Bismarck, was furthered by the victory of Sadowa or Königgratz, 3rd July 1866, against Austria; confirmed by the astonishing events of the war of 1870–1 against France (see p. 347); and consummated by the election of King William, as German Emperor, at Versailles, on 18th January, 1871.

William I., German Emperor and King of Prussia, was born 1797 (son of Frederic-William III.), married 1829; and has issue, Frederic-William, Prince Imperial and Royal, born 1831, and married, 1858, to Victoria, Princess Royal of England. The Government is a Constitutional Monarchy since 1850. The State Religion is called Evangelical; being a fusion of Lutheranism and Calvinism.

German Empire, as finally settled in May, 1871, comprises 26 States, in the order of precedence indicated by the numbers, and divided into North and South Germany by the River Main, as follows:—North German States.—1, Kingdom of Prussia. 3, Kingdom of Saxony. 7, Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. 8, Grand Duchy of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach. 9, Grand Duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz. 10, Grand Duchy of Oldenburg. 11, Duchy of Brunswick and Luneburg. 12, Duchy of Saxe-Meiningen and Hildburghausen. 13, Saxe-Altenburg. 14, Duchy of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. 15, Duchy of Anhalt. 16, Principality of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt. 17, Principality of Schwarzburg-Sonderhausen. 18, Principality of Waldeck and Pyrmont. 19. Principality of Reuss (Elder line). 20, Principality of Reuss (Younger line). 21, Principality of Schaumburg-Lippe. 22, Principality of Lippe-Detmold. 23, Free Town of Lübeck. 24, Free Town of Bremen. 25, Free Town of Hamburg. 26, Alsace-Lorraine, annexed to the Empire, 1871. South German States.—2, Kingdom of Bavaria. 4, Kingdom of Würtemburg. 5, Grand Duchy of Baden. 6, Grand Duchy of Hesse. The Imperial Parliament consists of a Bundesrath of 58 delegates from the respective States, and a Reichstag of 382 members elected by ballot. REVENUE (1873), 17½ millions sterling; no Debt. NAVY—76 steamers. ARMY—396,000 in peace; 1½ million in war. Railways, about 13,000 miles.

Population.—Total of the German Empire, (1871) 41,058,109; of whom 30½ millions are in North Germany; 24½ millions belong to Prussia, 1½ millions to Alsace-Lorraine, 25 millions are Protestants, and 14½ millions Catholics. This is exclusive of 10 million Germans in the Austro-Hungarian Empire, now shut out from the new political Germany.

The Kingdom of Prussia is situated in the northern part of Germany. It is bounded on the N. by the Baltic Sea, Denmark, and the Duchy of Mecklenburg; on the E. by Russia and Poland; on the S.E. by Austria; on the S. by Saxony and the Saxon Duchies; on the S.W. by Bavaria and part of France; and on the W. by France and the Netherlands. Previous to 1866, some parts of the kingdom were small detached portions, entirely insulated by the dominions of other powers. There was no communication between the eastern and western provinces, without passing through the States of other princes. It is now more consolidated; and is divided as follows:—Prussia, Posen, Brandenburg, Pomerania, Silesia, Saxony, and Westphalia. The Population is 24,693,066, and the area in English sq. miles is 107,627. Revenue, 31½ millions sterling; Debt, 67 millions. The surface of the Prussian States is generally flat, except a part of the Harz Mountains, in the province of Saxony. The volcanic districts in it are the Lower Rhine, and the Riesengebirge, on the S.W. confines of Silesia, and some other mountains in Westphalia. The quality of the soil is very various, and the country is, on the whole, well watered. Along the Baltic, and in Ducal Prussia especially, the winter is long. It is also severe in the south parts of Silesia, contiguous to the Carpathian Mountains.

Commerce.—Exports consist principally of corn, wool, timber, Westphalian hams, zinc, flax, bristles, salted provisions, and other articles of raw produce; with linen and woollen cloth, silk wares, iron and hardware, jewellery, watches, and wooden clocks; Prussian blue, spirits, beer, &c. The Imports are sugar, coffee, and other coloured products; raw cotton, and cotton twist and stuffs, indigo and other dye-stuffs, &c. Of late years the steel manufacture of Prussia has risen to high importance, besides the manufacture of locomotives; and the cotton manufactures of Elberfeld are far ahead of France, and almost equalling those of England. The steel works of Krupp, at Essen in Westphalia, are of world wide reputation. A Zollverein, or Customs Union, comprises the States of the Empire and Luxemburg. The imports and exports from and to England are 36½ millions sterling, and 20 millions, respectively.

Education.—In Prussia, the State imposes on all parents the strict obligation of sending their children to school, unless they can prove that they are giving them a competent education at home. Neglect of this duty exposes the parents or guardians to imprisonment or fine. German is spoken by all except some Polish peasants in Posen.

Custom-House.—(Zollhaus.)—The Officers are strict in their examination, but also unexceptionably civil. Every precaution is taken to prevent unnecessary delay.

MONEY. (See page 432, for New System.) Up to 1872 the Monetary System in North Germany (as above was as follows:—12 pfennige = 1 Silber groschen, = 1d. 1-5th.; 30 Silver groschen, = 1 Thaler, = 3s. In South Germany (as above) the system was as follows:—4 pfennige, = 1 kreuzer, = ¼d.; 60 kreuzers, = 1 florin, = 1s. 6d. In North Germany, the Old Bank Notes were for 1, 5, 10, 25, 50, and 100 thalers; and for 1, 2, 5, 10, 25, 50, and 100 florins, in South Germany.

Under the law of 30th January 1875, the New Imperial Bank Notes for the whole of Germany are for 100, 200, 500, and 1000 Reichsmarks, or a multiple of 1000 Reichsmarks.

See "The Merchant's Handbook of Money, Weights and Measures."—By W. A. Brownes, LL.D. London: Stanford.

Railways.—Admirably managed; the fares are low; the carriages perhaps the most elegant and convenient that exist; and the train service is excellent. The 1st class carriages are scarcely ever used; 2nd class throughout Prussia being fully equal to the best 1st class carriages in our own country. Those who object to smoking will find reserved compartments; and ladies have always carriages kept exclusively for them.

Post Diligences.—(Ethnogen.)—These are Mail Coaches, conducted by government officials. All the seats are numbered. Fares about 60 pf. per German mile. Rate of travelling 8 miles per hour; 30 lbs. of luggage may be taken free of charge, and 20 lbs. more if paid for. Every package must have name of owner, and place to which he is going. No outside passengers. Forwarding Luggage.—See pages xliii and xliv.

Electric Telegraph.—In operation throughout Prussia, Germany, and Austria.

Measure.—The German Mile is equal to 4 miles 1056 yards English, or 8096 yards; but railway distances in Germany and Austria are now measured by the kilometre of 1094 yards—6-10ths of an English mile.

Postage.—Letters vid Belgium to Prussia and Germany are charged 2½d. under ½ oz. Newspapers, 1d. for 4 oz. Books, 1d. for 2 oz. Money Orders issued at 9d. for £2. Letters above 50 grammes (1¾ oz.) containing any other enclosure than paper, are sent to the Custom House and charged freight.

Aix-la-Chapelle (German, Aachen).—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 74 350. Hotels.—

Hotel Du Grand Monarque, or Dremel's Hotel. first-rate in every respect, a splendid establishment admirably conducted, large airy rooms, and charges reasonable. A large new bath-house, supplied direct from the mineral springs, is attached to the Hotel, which is a great convenience and luxury for travellers. Mr. Dremel speaks English.

Hotel Nuellens—first-rate, fare excellent, charges moderate, in an airy and delightful situation, facing the Eliza Fountain, with its garden and public promenade. Mr Dremel is the proprietor of both these Hotels, and is enabled to offer families and gentlemen very superior accommodation. See advertisement.

Hoyer's Union Hotel.—See Advt.

Hotel du Dragon D'Or, close to the Kursaal and principal Bath Houses; prices reasonable.

NEW KAISERBAD, OR BAINS DE L'EMPEREUR—very superior establishment.

DUBICK'S old established and excellent family hotel is situated opposite the Baths.

HOTEL DE L'ELEPHANT, opposite the Eliza Fountain, comfortably furnished and prices reasonable.

OMNIBUSES convey travellers to and from the hotels; fare, including luggage, 10 pfennige. Vigilantes, 1 or 2 persons, with or without baggage. 50 pf.; 3 or 4 persons, 75 pfennige.

English newspapers at Mayer's library.

AIX-la-Chapelle, the Roman Aequis Granum, is celebrated for its warm mineral springs, containing large quantities of sulphur, efficacious in chronic cutaneous diseases, rheumatism, gout, &c.; but they are sometimes injurious if taken improperly.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Town Hall, an edifice no way remarkable, has undergone a thorough restoration, and is embellished with a number of fresco paintings, from scenes in the history of Charlemagne. The Cathedral, begun under Charlemagne in 796, is one of the most important in Germany, and here repose the remains of this great Emperor. The choir is now being restored. There is also a new Church built in the new part of the town, which is worth while seeing. The Eliza Fountain, and charming gardens. The Kurhaus or assembly rooms; for strangers subscription for the season, for one person, 10 Rm. 50 pf.; for two persons, if of the same family, 21 Rm. The new Government Building, in the court of which is deposited the ponderous Aerolite, said to weigh seven thousand pounds. The monument erected in memory of the Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1818. The Belvedere, in the Louisberg, and the hill itself. The new Hospital outside the towns between the Sandkam and Cologne gates.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—Emary P. Beauchamp, Esq.

ENGLISH CHURCH.—Anna Strasse, Rev. Charles de Coëlogon, licensed chaplain. Services on Sundays at 12 and 7; on holidays and seasons at 11. Holy communion 1st Sunday in month after morning service; 3rd Sunday at 8 a.m.

Dr. Diemer, who is well known by many of the English as the former Medical Director of Marienberg on the Rhine, has been in practice since 1854 as Physician in Aix-la-Chapelle. Dr. D. speaks English fluently.

Persons going to Hanover or Berlin will find the route vis Aix-la-Chapelle and Ruhrert cheaper and shorter. See p. 140. The route vis Cologne, will be prefered by some persons as the Express trains keep time admirably.

For Through Route from London to the Rhine, see first Time Tables of Belgian Railways.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Cologne, see page 87; also to Verviers, Brussels, Ostend, and Calais, see page 88. To Dusseldorf and Homberg (Ruhrort) see page 140, and to Maestricht, see page 105; see also pp. 16, 94, 116, 120, 122, 144, 153, 154, 158, 160, and 162.

Altenberg.—A few miles distant from Cologne is the magnificent Abbey of Altenberg. The church very much resembles the cathedral of Cologne, though on a smaller scale, and is said to have been designed by the same architect.

Altona.—See Special Edition.

Bad-Oeynhausen.—Stat.—HOTEL:—HOTEL VOGELER.

The origin of this place dates from 1845, when by boring rock salt to a depth of 2220 feet, a spring of hot saline water was opened; and it has since become the most delightful and fashionable bathing and watering-place in the north of Germany, with splendid bathing-houses of every description, maintained by the Prussian Government. The place already extends to Neusalzwerk, the site of very extensive salt works belonging to the Prussian Crown, forming a town one mile long, and presenting everywhere very charming views of the surrounding country, including the pleasant chain of the Weser Mountains. In addition to the baths there are manifold points of attraction, viz., the Porta Wesphalica (Gate of Westphalia), formed by the mountains Wittekind and St. Jacob; the delightful vale of the river Weser; with ruins and castles.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Minden, Bremen, Berlin, Hamm, Cologne, &c., see pages 116, 117.

Steamboats up the Weser to Plotho, Rinteln, Hameln, downwards to Minden and Bremen. Diligences and Omnibuses to all directions in the neighbourhood."

OPEN DROSKIES, drawn by one horse, stand in the streets. Fare:—One person, 50 pf. for quarter-of-an-hour, 25 pf. for each additional ten minutes for 1 person; 2 persons, 60 pfennige; 3 persons, 70 pf.; 4 persons, 80 pf.; one or two boxes, 25 pf.; per hour for 3 persons, 1 Rm. 50 pf.; and 4 persons, 2 Rm.; at night by the last train, or in the morning before o'clock, 75 pf. each course. The regulations, as to charges, are hung up in every vehicle.

First-class Droskies—charges about the double of the others. Omnibuses do not attend railway stations, but ply from end to end of the city, and also from the suburbs to places distant 3 or 4 miles. Fares averaging 25 to 30 pf. the whole distance divided into fares, 15, 20, 25 pfennige.

Capital of Prussia, and of the German Empire, situated on the river Spree, 127 feet above sea level, scattered over a sandy plain, with very wide streets, in 52° 31′ N. latitude, and 13° 24′ E. longitude. It has 20 bezirks and 4 suburbs, more than 500 streets, 58 squares, and 4000 houses; it is one of the largest and handsomest cities of Europe, being about 12 miles in circumference, with 60 churches, 37 bridges, &c., upwards of 100 public schools, and has many of a private description; its charitable and scientific institutions are very numerous. Its manufactures consist of locomotives, (Borsig's great works,) wool, cotton, silk, ribbons, porcelain and stone-ware, bronze, gold and silver ware, straw-hats, artificial flowers, &c. &c.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The street called Unter-den-Linden (Under the Linden-trees,) reaching in a direct line from the royal palace to the Brandenburg-gate, with many public and private edifices. The Sieges Denkmal, on the Konigsplatz, in memory of the war of 1870. Principal Squares:—Place de l'Opera; Place de l'Arsenal, with statues of Generals Scharnhorst, Bulow, Blucher, Gneisenau. The Lust Garten in the finest square in Berlin.

One of the finest monuments is the equestrian statue of Frederick the Great by Rauch.

The statue of Schiller, the new Town-hall, with the Rathskeller, &c. The passage, or Kaisergallerie, are also worth seeing.

The Royal Palace is one of the most imposing buildings of the kind in the world, with fine apartments; the Ritter-saal and chapel particularly grand. Several excellent pictures; grand collection of gold and silver plate.

The New Museum, a chaste edifice, by the architect Schinkel,—the foundation is laid upon stakes. Before the Museum stands a gigantic basin, cut out of one solid piece of granite, 22 feet in diameter; the fore colonnade is adorned with beautiful designs in fresco, by Cornelius. The interior of the Museum has some attractions. The Sculpture and Picture galleries are open daily to the public (Sundays excepted),—in the summer, from 10 to 4, in the winter season, from 10 to 3 o'clock. The collection of vases and bronzes can only be visited on the Wednesdays; the entrance is at the back part of the Museum. The King has lately added a new building to the Museum, in extent twice its size, and most beautifully decorated; the Treppenhaus, or Staircase Hall adorned with wall-paintings from designs by Kaulbach, is perhaps the finest in Europe. Amongst the bronzes there is a very beautiful antique found in the bed of the Tiber. It is a perfect work of art; the subject is a boy praying. The collection of paintings is very rich in early masters, of which a catalogue may be obtained.

The Royal Library is a very tasteless building, with 500,000 volumes and 500 manuscripts; the most interesting of which are an album with six beautiful miniature portraits, by Lucas Cranach, and Gutenberg's Bible, the first book printed with movable types. The reading-room is daily open; the apartments, however, in which are kept the periodical publications, are only open from 10 to 12, and admission by ticket from the principal librarian. The University is a large beautiful building, with the natural history museum, and zoological cabinet, open every Tuesday and Friday from 12 to 2; admission only by ticket, which is given out by the director;—the mineralogical cabinet; the anatomical museum, open every Wednesday and Saturday from 4 to 6 in the summer, and from 2 to 4 o'clock in the winter; admission by ticket only. The Arsenal, built 1695, by Schlueter, is considered a master-work, in the pure style; tickets of admission are to be procured at No. 1, Mollars-gasse. The new Schauspiel Haus on the Gendarmen Martel, is a very imposing building; the picture gallery of Prince Raczinsky is well worth visiting; the palace of Prince Charles, No. 9, Wilhelms-platz: palace of Prince Albert, 102, Wilhelms-strasse. built by Schinkel. The new Rath-Haus in the Königs Strasse deserves notice; Kroll's winter garden in the Thiergarten, a noble park of some 8000 acres, is also worthy a visit.

Besides the Opera-haus, Berlin has a Konigs Schauspiel-haus, built 1819, to accommodate 2500 persons; the Friedrich Wilhelmstaedter Theater, for 1600 persons, etc. Berlin has above 100 learned and artistic Vereine (Associations). The Thiergarten is the great public walk of Berlin, with a white marble statue of Frederic-William III. by Drake. The Kreuzberg, 1 English mile from the Botanic Garden, has a national monument to commemorate the battles of 1813 to 1815. Many fine statues on the streets, but all military. There is a horse railway from the Dorotheen Strasse, and past the Brandenburg Gate to Charlottenburg, fare 25 pfennige The grounds are good. The principal object is the Mausoleum in which are two beautiful recumbent figures of Frederick William III and his queen by Rauch. The drive thither is very pleasant. The court of the old Schloss has a fine bronze statue of "George and the Dragon," Kiss's last work, well worth visiting. Potsdam by rail. At Potsdam there is also a beautiful statue of the late queen. Newspapers of all countries at the principal confectioners.

Brunswick on the Ocker, seat of an hereditary Duchy, with clean streets, much picturesque architecture in the old buildings, and surrounded with walks and parks, beautifully laid out. It gave origin to the reigning house of England.

The Cathedral, or the church of the Holy Blasius in the Gothic-Norman style, was completed in the year 1194, by Heinrich der Löwe who lies buried here; also his wife Here, too, lie the Duke of Brunswick, who was slain at the battle of Jena; the Duke, his son, who fell at Quatre Bras; (on the coffin of the Duke may still be seen the withered garland spread by his people on his bier;) and the unfortunate wife of George IV., Caroline of Brunswick. Near the church stands a large bronze lion, which Heinrich der Löwe (Henry the Lion) brought from Constantinople. In the promenades is the large and beautiful monument erected to the memory of the two Dukes of Brunswick, who fell at Jena and Quatre Bras. Among other churches are Saint Moutier, 12th century; Saint Andrew, 13th, with fine sculptures; St. Catherine, 13th century, fine stained glass. The Museum open every day except Monday; in summer, 11 to 1; in winter, entrance fee, 1 to 6 persons, 6 Reichsmarks. It has a gallery of paintings, by Titiens, Van Dyck, Rembrandt. Before the gate Steinthor and Augustthor, is the monument of the valiant and unfortunate Schill, who was shot by the French in 1809. Very interesting are the lately restored Town Hall, Altstadt Rathaus, and the fountain at the Altstadt Market; also the Park before the Augustthor.

RESTAURANTS.—Adolph, Cimiotti, Meyer.

CAFES.—Belvedere, Luttebrandt.

Theatre shut Tuesday and Friday.

Hackney carriage fares, from the railway station to any part of the town, 50 pf; to Wilhelmshoehe, from 4½ to 6 Rm; to Loewenburg, 9 Rm; to Hercule, 12 Rm.; trinkgelt, 70 pf. to 1 Rm.

Cassel, formerly the seat of an Electorate, now annexed to Prussia, is situated on the Fulda, and divided into the Old Town, Lower New Town, and Upper New Town. It enjoys a fair manufacturing trade in linen, cloth, hats, porcelain. Its objects of attraction are rather few. In the Friedrich's Platz, 1000 by 450 feet, one of the largest squares in Germany, is the Elector's Palace, a building devoid of any imposing effect, and far surpassed by very many of the hotels inhabited by the bankers in Frankfort. Near it stands the Museum, one of the prettiest buildings in Cassel; and immediately to the rear are the Government offices. The Picture Gallery in the Château de Bellevue, can be seen any day for two Reichsmarks. A very fine view of the valley and windings of the Fulda, as also of the remote Mount Meissner, can be enjoyed from an open side of the square on the brow of the hill. In the middle of the square there is a statue of Frederick II., the founder and patron of the principal establishments and collections of art in Cassel.

THE MUSEUM is opendally, from 11 to 1: it contains a library of 100,000 volumes, a cabinet of curiosities well worth attention, the collection of natural philosophy, and the picture gallery, in which are some valuable paintings. Near the Museum, are the Karlsaue, much frequented public gardens.

The THEATRE is also worth notice; it was built by Jerome Buonaparte, when residing here as king of Westphalia.

The gardens of Wilhelmshohe, to which his nephew, the late Emperor Napoleon, was sent, 1870, after Sedan, are under the castle of Riesenschloss. Four hours to see them; guide, 1 Reichsmark. In them is the Elector's summer Palace, about three or four miles from Cassel. There are fine conservatories, and the fountains behind it throw water the highest in Europe, except those at Chatsworth. Water works play Wednesdays and Sundays at half-past two.

The Cascade of the Karlsburg is worth a visit. At the top is a colossal statue, over which falls, at intervals, a stream of water. The statue is led up to by a flight of stone steps 900 feet long. The hill can be ascended by means of a carriage road. An eight-sided figure, 1,312 feet over the Fulda, topped by a pyramid supporting the colossal figure of Hercules (31 feet high) manufactured of beaten copper, surmounts the Water-tanks: within the hollow of the club eight persons can be accommodated, and enjoy a very fine view of the surrounding country from a small window therein.

CONVEYANCES.—see pages 146, 151, 172, 176.

Cleves or Kleve.—Stat.—Pop. 10,000. HOTELS PRINCE MAURICE DE NASSAU, ZUM THIERGARTEN.

Capital of the former Duchy of Cleves, now belonging to Prussia, and connected with the Rhine by a canal about 2½ miles in length. It is situated upon gently sloping hills, in the midst of a fertile country, well diversified with hills, vales, and woodland. The ancient castle of Schwanenburg, formerly the residence of the Dukes of Cleves, was the birth-place of Anne, wife of Henry VIII., also the scene of a legend which is the subject of one of Southey's poems. Its tower, built on a rock, commands a view of the country; there is also a fine prospect from Clevesburg, near the Thiergarten, and another from the Prinzenhof.

The remains of Prince Maurice of Nassau lie in an iron sarcophagus, in a little wood half a mile from the town. Cleves is the birth-place of the celebrated Seydlitz; about five miles from the Emmerich Junction of the Dutch Rhenish and Cologne Minden Railways.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 120 and 144.

Dantsic or Danzig, (or Polish Gdansk.)—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 89,120.—HOTELS:—DE THORN; ENGLISCHER HOF; WALTER; BUJACK; SCHMELZER.

CAFÉS—Kaisemann and Sebastiani, in the Langgasse; Porta and Grensenberg, in the Langemarkt. Restaurants—Roesch, in the Schuffelmarkt; Raths Keller, in the Artushof; Lentholz, in the Langemarkt.

Droschken, 1 or 2 persons, 50 pf; 3 persons, 75 pf; 4 persons, 1 Rm.; with baggage, 25 pf. extra; for 1 hour, 1 Rm. 25 pf. and 1 Rm. 75 pf. according to the number of persons, for every subsequent hour, 1 Rm. 25 pf., and 1 Rm. 50 pf.; half a day, 6 Rm.

A fortified city on the Vistula, highly interesting for its quaint and picturesque architecture of the 16th and 17th century, especially in the fine old Langgasse, and the Langemarkt, where the houses are 7 stories high. It belonged to the Teutonic Knights, 1310—1454, and then became a leading member of the Hanseatic League. The French held it 1807—14; since which it has been strongly fortified. It is a principal port on the Baltic, close to the Gulf of Dantsic, (a shallow inlet 65 miles wide) and has a great corn trade, many iron-foundries, distilleries, sugar works, and factories for sweet-spruce beer, a tonic extract of fir. Amber is obtained here. Fahrenheit was a native.

ATTRACTIONS—The Marienkirche (14 to 15 cent.) 116 metres long, 46 broad, and 31 metres, having 50 chapels, founded by principal citizens; an astronomical clock, a picture of Memling (50 pf. to the sacristan), and a fine crucifix in wood. Hotel de Ville of the 14th century, with a tower 90 metres high. The Artushof or Junkerhof, of which the ground-floor, with statues and paintings, is used as an Exchange.

EXCURSIONS—Convent of Oliva, at foot of Karlsberg: convent (of 1580) contains 24 altars, fine organ, &c. Zappot, a village near Oliva, on the sea, frequented for sea-bathing. (Omnibus 50 pf.)

H. B. M.'s CONSUL.—W. White, Esq. AMERICAN CONSULAR AGENT, P. Collas, Esq.

ENGLISH CLERGYMAN, Rev. H. Lawrence.

BANKERS, Messrs. Gibson.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers daily in Summer to and from Konigsberg; to Stettin, three times a month. Passage, 28 hours; fare, 9 Reichsmarks. Railway to Dirschau, Stettin, Bromberg, Warsaw, Posen, and Berlin. see pages 174, 178, 180, 182.

Dessau.—Stat.—Pop. 16,400.—HOTELS: KING; HIRSCH; DER GOLDENE BEUTEL.

Capital of the Dukedom of Anhalt Dessau, situated on the Mulde, near its junction with the Elbe. Edifices are of modern date, the principal being the Ducal Palace, containing a library, cabinet of curiosities, and picture gallery. In the Schloskirche is the famous "Last Supper" by Cranach, in which he introduced portraits of some of the chief actors in the Reformation. Birth-place of Mendelssohn. The gardens in the neighbourhood are much admired especially the garden of Wörlitz, about six English miles from Dessau, and well worthy of a visit.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Cothen, Halle Leipsic, and Berlin. see pages 154, 176 and 177.

Elbing, (Polish Elbiag.)—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 31,170.

HOTELS:—KÖNIGLICHER HOF; HOTEL DE BERLIN

An old fortified Hanse town in West Prussia Proper, near the Frische Haff, on the Baltic founded 1229 by the Teutonic Knights. It has the Marienkirche and six other churches, a synagogue, museum a house of industry founded by an Englishman named Cowle, with ship yards and foundries. Sea-bathing at Kahlberg. Large ships stop at Pillau. At Frauenberg are the observatory and waterworks built by Copernicus.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway. see page 180.

Emden or Embden.—Stat.—Pop. 16,000.

HOTEL:—Post.—In the market place.

A fortified town and seaport of Friesland, on the Dollart, near the North Sea, surrounded by marshes, but having a very fertile country outside them. It has a most extensive trade in oats, cheese, butter, &c., exporting more oats than any other European port. The town possesses nothing of interest beyond its commerce.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—Y. Brens, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Linden, Osnabruck Minden, Hanover, &c. see pages 115, 148 155 & 183.

Ems.—Stat.—Pop. 4,000.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE RUSSIE.—Close to the Curhaal, kept by Ph. Durlinger.

HOTEL D' ANGLETERRE; HOTEL DES QUATRE SAISONS.

LODGINGS, on left bank of the Lahn are more comfortable than those on the right. Ems has its old and a new Kurhaus, the new being the best. Quite a modern town has lately risen on the left bank.

Horse hire:—From 1 fl. to 1 fl. 48 kr., to the many points for excursions, occupying 3 hours; ½ a day, 2 fl.; 1 day, 4 fl. Donkeys, from 24 kr. to 1 fl., if for 3 hours. Carriages, 2 horse, from 3 fl. for ½ a day, to 7 fl. for 1 day; the tariff only limits the prices from Ems to the towns around Ems.

Ems is, unquestionably, a very fashionable watering place, of a rather exclusive and aristocratic character, especially with the Russians and Germans, who resort to it on account of the curative properties of the springs, particularly when used as baths. It is situated in a very narrow valley, traversed by the river Lahn, with steep hills on either side; so that at midday, during the months of July and August, visitors are glad to effect an escape to the shade of the neighbouring forest. But many improvements have been made by the resident committee of the town. Trees have been planted; and water is now supplied in abundance to the houses, public gardens, fountains, &c., to the great comfort of visitors.

Towards evening the bands begin to play, and the promenade is soon crowded with visitors, eager to breathe a purer air, either on the borders of the river, or upon the tops of the neighbouring hills, whence they may enjoy the bracing breezes from the Rhine, or extend their walks or rides, with the assistance of the numerous donkeys, to the various beautiful and picturesque spots among the hills up the Bäderlei, to Schweitzer Haus, to the Lindenbach valley, by the silver-smelting furnace, to the ruined castle of Sporkenberg, or to Balduistein, all affording fine views.

The Waters, which have enjoyed a high reputation since ancient times, have a temperature of 22° to 59° cent., and are of a calcareous carbonate nature, are taken early in the morning, while yet there is some freshness in the air to invite the invalid abroad, and encourage him to take gentle exercise between the draughts of water he has been directed to take, and the quantity of which must be regulated by the power of digestion —from two to three glassesfull—taken at intervals of a quarter of an hour. The number of visitors taking the baths from May to September is estimated at 5000. Here the French Ambassador had his memorable interview with the King of Prussia before the war of 1870-1.

The Baths are mostly used in the morning, for which Tickets are obtained from the Badmeister. N.B.—The gaming table was closed 1872.

Excursions.—1. Up the Bäderlei, to the Schweitzer Haus, a Café. 2. To the Forsthaus. 3. To the Lindenbach Valley. 4. To the Castle of Sporkenberg. 5. To Balduistein; or a visit to the Castles of Nassau, higher up the Lahn Valley.

English Church Service twice on Sundays, from May to September. Chaplain, Rev. W. G. Palmister.

Conveyances.—Rail to Lahnstein, Rudesheim, Wiesbaden, Nassau, Wetzlar, &c., see pages 129, 150, and 154. Steamers up and down the Rhine.

Erfurt.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 43,620.—Hotel:—Sueer's Hotel, near the Station.

An important fortified town, situated on the great road leading from Frankfort-on-the-Main to the north of Germany, 2 miles west of Weimar. Erfurt, according to tradition, was founded as early as the fifth century, by a noble named Erpes. The inhabitants are partly employed in the manufacture of woollens and silks. The cathedral is a fine Gothic building, with a magnificent porch. Its chief object of attraction, the old Augustinian Convent in which Luther lived 1505-12, was burnt down with all its relics, his portrait, bible &c., in April, 1862. The town contains many scientific and other institutions. Promenades.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 149, 170, and 172.

Flensburg.—See Special Edition.

Frankfort-on-the-Main.—(German, Frankfurt-am-Main. —Stat.—Pop. (1871) 90,225.—(With Map in Special Edition.)—Hotels:

Few towns in Europe, Paris excepted, can boast of such magnificent hotels as are to be found at Frankfort. They are principally in the Zeil, or in the vicinity of the Theatre; and are in every way worthy of one of the largest capitals of the Continent. The charges are by no means extravagant (Room, 48kr. to 2fl. 36kr.), and the attendance is of the best description.

Union Hotel, formerly Weidenbusch.—Well-known, excellent, and reasonable family hotel. Mr. J. A. V. Collosena, Proprietor.

The Roman Emperor, kept by Messrs. Lohr and Alten, Proprietors.

Grand Hotel du Nord, in close proximity to the Railway Station.

Hotel de Hollande; Hotel de Russie, good. Hotel d'Angleterre; Hotel White Swan; and Hotel du Nord, the only Hotel where Cook's Tickets are taken.

Hotel prices of first class houses are about the same:—Room, 1fl 14kr. to 2fl. 48kr: candles 24 kr.; service, 30 kr.; coffee or tea, 36 kr.; dinner, 1 fl. 30 kr. to 2 fl. 24 kr

Cafe Frascate.—In Bockenheim; Concert every Sunday.

Theatre.—In Theatre platz, No. 14. Another in the Circus.

Zoological Garden.—In Pfingstweide, near the Hanau Station.

For sights, cab-fares, post, etc., see local papers.

Omnibuses from the railways and from station to station, 12 kr. per person; for each box or portmanteau, 6 kr.; from any part of the town to the railway, 6 kr. per person; all the stations are close to the town. Hackney carriages from the railway stations to any part of the town, or from station to station, 2 persons, 24 kr.; 3 persons, 30 kr.; for every box, 6 kr. One horse droschken, 2 persons, ½ hour, 12 kr.; 3 or 4 persons, 18 kr. Valet de place, 1fl. 45kr. per day: during fair time, 2fl. 20kr.

Tramways.—Cars run between Bockenheim and the Zeil.

Frankfort is one of the most important cities of Prussia since its annexation, in 1866, doing honour by its fame to the spirit of commerce. It has been greatly improved and embellished: its shops, streets, and public buildings, all exhibit the progress of industry, activity, and invention. Frankfort is one of the pleasantest of continental residences. Promenades extensive, and suburbs fine. There is a good Casino or club, also a good Post-Office. Amid a great variety of objects to interest the traveller in this place may be mentioned as worthy of inspection the Hotel de Ville or Römer. It is a building of the 15th century, less remarkable for its architectural appearance than for its historical note. Here is the Electors' room, recently the Hall of the Senate, where the electors or their deputies used to assemble: the Kaisersaal, with the portraits of all the Emperors, from Conrad I. to Francis II. In it is also preserved the original Golden Bull. There are several paintings in the Hall which has been re-decorated in the ancient style. On the end wall is the Judgement of Solomon, by Steinc. The Kaisersaal is open to the public every day.

The Domkirche or Cathedral, is remarkable for its antiquity; also, as having been the place where, for many years, the Emperors of Germany were crowned. It is considered the last specimen of the ancient German architecture. A great part of it was destroyed by fire in Aug. 1867. The Town Library with more than 60,000 vols., is open every Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 to 12, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 2 to 4 o'clock. Gallery of Paintings, with more than 900 original pictures, is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 11 to 12 o'clock. Städel Museum of Paintings, open daily, (except Saturdays) from 10 to 1. Natural History museum, open every Wednesday, from 2 to 4 o'clock, on Fridays, from 11 to 1. Bethmann museum, with Danneker's Ariadne, open daily from 11 to 1 o'clock. The new Cemetery, has several beautiful monuments. Göthe was born here, 1769, in the House marked No. 23, in the Grosser Hirschgraben; open from 9 a.m.; charge, 36 kr. or 10 sgr. each person. On the front is his father's coat-of-arms, bearing the poetical device of three lyres. His monument in the Allée, facing the theatre and close to Gutenberg's, is by Schwanthaler, of Munich. The figure and pedestal are of bronze. A Latin inscription and his bust mark the house in which Luther resided in the Domplatz. The inscription is as follows:—"In silentio et spe erit fortitudo vestra."—"In quietness and confidence shall be your strength." Palm Gardens (Palmen Gärten) purchased from the Duke of Nassau for 80,000 florins (the plants), and transplanted from Biebrich to Frankfort. These plants are celebrated throughout Germany. A new Opera House, to cost one million florins (private subscription) is building.

The Taunus Mountains can be reached by railway as far as Höchst and Soden, a mineral spa; thence by carriage to Königstein, a ruined fortress of great extent and interest. A fine view of Frankfort and the surrounding country may be obtained from the hilly spot called Hainerweg, on which also the extensive cellars of Messrs. Feist Brothers and Sons, have been excavated deep in the rocks for their sparkling wines. They are well worth visiting. Apply at their office, 40, New Mainzer Street.

At No. 12 Schöne Aussicht, are the establishment and cellars of Messrs. Manskopf Behrends & Sons, the well-known wine merchants and bankers. By applying at the above offices, connoisseurs obtain permission to view the extensive cellars, and may taste and select the finest wines grown in Germany.

It will interest the visitor to inspect the ancient Jewish quarter, and the cradle of the Rothschild family, now the arbiters of peace and war by their loans. On the old Sachsenhäuser Brücke is a modern Statue in stone of Charles I., the Saxon Emperor (Charlemagne).

Two large fairs or Messe, are held here, in spring and autumn.

Staghorn Cameos, fine and moderate. Good baths, 45, J. Main Kay.

H. B. M.'s CONSUL, Theodore Kuchen, Esq., Grossen Gallusgasse.

UNITED STATES CONSUL-GENERAL.—W. Prentiss Webster, Esq., 19, Gallusgasse.

ENGLISH CHAPLAIN.—Rev. J. C. Flood, M.A. English church service twice on every Sunday throughout the year, at half-past 11 and half-past 3 o'clock, in the Church in the Göthe Platz.

Frankfort-on-the-Oder.—(German Frankfurt-an-der-Oder. — Stat.— Pop. (1871) 43,125.

HOTELS:—DEUTSCHES HAUS, in the Grand Place; ADLER.

A wooden bridge laden with stones, so that the stream may not carry it away, joins the old town on the left shore of the Oder, with the suburbs on the right. The prosperity of the town is owing to its being situated on the principal road or thoroughfare to Silesia. In the neighbourhood of the town is the battle-field of Kunnersdorf where Frederick the Great was beaten, in the year 1759, by the combined armies of Russia and Austria.

CONVEYANCES.—Railways to Berlin and Breslau, see pages 174, 180, 182, 183, and 186.

Fulda.— Stat.—Pop. 14,000.—HOTELS:—KURFURST; POST.

A walled town in Hesse-Cassel, (annexed to Prussia, 1866), and former seat of a Prince-Bishop, near the Rhöngebirge Hills. Here are a University; St. Michael's Old Round Church; and a Cathedral 315 feet long, with the tomb of St. Boniface, a native of Devonshire, murdered by the pagans, A.D 755. His statue is close by it. At Adolfseck Hill is the Elector's country seat.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 130 and 147.

Glogau.—Stat.—Pop. 18,000.—INNS:—DEUTSCHES HAUS.

A strongly fortified town in Silesia, on the left bank of the Oder. The Cathedral stands on an island, on the right bank of the river, called the Dominsel, and is well worth seeing; as also the former ducal castle, the two gymnasia, the town-hall, two sugar refineries, &c. The Citadel and Brückenkopf are deserving of notice. Its promenades are much admired; and among the places in the vicinity, Friedensthal, Lindenruh, Rauschwitz, Zarkau, Brostau, and Hermsdorf are most frequented.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Hansdorf Frankfurt, Berlin, and Breslau, see pages 151, 152, 181, 183, 186.

Görlitz—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 42,295.

The capital of Prussian Upper Lusatia, on the Neisse, 50 miles from Dresden, noted for its woollen and linen manufactures. It is a walled town, with eleven gates, containing six churches, the chief of which has an excellent organ: another has a spire of great height. The lofty railway bridge over the Neisse at this place is worthy of notice.

CONVEYANCE.—Railway to Kolhfurt, see pages 152, 174, 183, 184, 186, 190, 229.

Goslar.—Stat.—Pop. 5,000.—HOTELS:—KAISERWORTH, formerly the Guild of the Drapers.

An old Hanse town under the Rammelsberg in the Hartz district. It has remains of the Kaiserberg, or Emperor's Palace; a Gothic Church; part of a Romanesque Cathedral. Here are salt springs, and the Rammelsberg mines of lead, copper, zinc, sulphur, &c. Open to visitors at half a thaler a head.

CONVEYANCES—Rail, see pp. 149, 158, 162, 166.

Gottingen.—Stat.—Pop. 12,700.—HOTELS: HOTEL KRONE; STADT LONDON.

Under the Hainberg on the Leine, in Hanover distant from Cassel about 38 miles. The University, founded 1734, by George II., is attended by about 700 students, and is the chief point of attraction. Library contains 400,000 vols. 5000 MSS., and collections of almost every branch of natural science and observatory, &c. Blumenbach, Gaus, the Grimms, Ewald, Heyne, and many other European names have been professors here. It is conveniently situated for visiting the Hartz mountains.

CONVEYANCES—Railway, see pp. 150, 156, 162.

Halberstadt. — Stat.—Pop. (1873) 25,425

INNS:—HOTEL VON PREUSSEN, PRINS EUGEN.

An old town in Prussian Saxony, on an arm of the Holzemme, 25 miles west of Magdeburg. The Cathedral is a remarkable gothic edifice, erected in the middle of the 13th century; the western front is however of more ancient date. The ancient church of Our Dear Lady, after the Byzantine style, was finished in 1005. Notice, too, the Rolandssäule; the Lägenstein; and many houses curiously adorned with wood. In the neighbourhood are worth visiting, the Spiegelberg Langenstein, Bullenberg, from whence you have the best prospect of the town; Strübeck, notorious for its chessplayer. A tour can be made from Halberstadt to Rosstrappe in the Hartz.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Oschersleben & Magdeburg, &c., see pages 146, 148, 154, 158, 160, 163, 166

Halle.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 52,640 —HOTELS: —STADT HAMBURG, the principal hotel.

STADT ZURICH, EISERBAHN.

A large mining town, in Prussian Saxony, in the form of an irregular square, on the river Sale Many eminent men have been professors in its university, including Gesenius, and Tholuck; and it is celebrated as the birthplace of Handel and Michaelis. In the immediate vicinity are two interesting institutions—an Orphan Asylum, or Waisenhaus, founded by Franke, 1698, and an establishment for printing the Scriptures, erected in 1712, which has issued since its foundation many millions of Bibles, and New Testaments. Halle contains two public libraries, that of the University and that of the Town, besides a number of other institutions. Manufactures are woollens, stockings, silk, leather, buttons, hardware, and starch. Coal and salt-springs yielding 20,000 tons a year, are worked in the neighbourhood Carraway seeds much grown here. The ruins of the Castle, as well as the Haupé Kirche Unser lieben Frauen, which is a beautiful gothic building, with a superb painting by Lucas Cranach, are worth seeing Also the Red Tower in the market place, near Handel's statue.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 149, 150, 157, 158, 166, 166, 170, 172, 174, 176, 177.

COFFEE-HOUSES:—Alster-Pavillon, Alster-Halle, Zingg's. Beerhouses in all directions, many with gardens.

A free city in Lower Saxony, on the North bank of the river Elbe, about 70 miles from its mouth, consisting of the old and new town and St. George, and intersected by a number of canals. At the great fire of 1842, 61 streets and 1747 houses were destroyed, all since rebuilt in a very superior style. The Commerce of Hamburg is very great, it being the chief port for the transit trade of Germany. The imports are valued at 60 millions sterling: and about 500,000 cattle are annually shiped for England. Established religion, Lutheran but all denominations are tolerated. Principal shops on the Neuer Wall, Jungfernstieg, and adjoining streets and all round the Alster Basin, a beautiful sheet of water, forming the principal promenade in the town. Amongst the churches may be mentioned St. Michael, the tower is 456 feet high. Magnificent view from the top. St Nicholas, a very beautiful specimen of pure gothic, restored by Heligoland, a small island and British possession in the North Sea, near the mouth of the Elbe, six hours by steam-boat from Hamburg, and five from Bremerhafen. It is one of the most curious and unique spots in Europe. Population, 2000; and during the bathing season an average of 1000 visitors. Length and breadth, 1 m. by 1-3rd m. including Sandy Island. It was taken from Denmark 1807, and used as a dépôt for goods in the war with Napoleon I. There is a Lower and an Upper town. In the Lower town stand the Theatre, Conversations House, and shops. The lodging-houses, hotels, and restaurants, which are numerous, are equally distributed above and below. The Church, and the Governor's House, (Lieut. Col. Haxo, Governor,) are in the Oberland, commanding views of the sea on all sides and reached by a flight of easy though numerous steps. No horse has been seen upon the Island within the memory of man. It is chiefly celebrated for its fine sands and sea-bathing. Boats leave Hamburg and Bremerhafen, for the Island, three times a week in the season, which lasts from June 1 to the end of September.

Hamm.—Stat.—Pop. 14,000.—HOTEL:—GRABEN VON DER MARK.

Capital of the earldom of Mark in Westphalia, on the plain of the Lippe; it has a trade in hams and some manufactories in metals. It possesses two Evangelical and one Catholic church.

There is a Court of Appeal (Appellhof), an Assize Court (Assisenhof), a High School (Gymnasium Illustre), a garrison of Cuirassiers, and excellent wave and river Baths. The water of the river Lippe has medicinal qualities for the cure of inflammation in the eyes.

Farther to the westward, upon the Lippe, there are still to be seen remains of Roman encampments. In the year 1790, during their banishment, the French Princes of Bourbon resided at Hamm.

The town is the point of intersection of four lines of railway, viz.:—To Cologne, Minden, Munster, Cassel. Distance from Hanover 115, and from Cologne 92 English miles.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 115, 116, 141, 144, 160.

Hanau.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 20,280—HOTELS: ADLER, CARLSBERG.

A handsome town at the junction of the Main and Kinzig. Annexed with Hesse Cassel, 1866. Notice the Electoral Castle, and Theatre, in the old town; and the Town Hall in the new town; a quarter built by the refugee Walloons and Huguenots, with two or three churches. Stocking and woollen manufactures. On the river is the watering place of Wilhelmsbad. Here Napoleon was defeated by General Wrede, 1813.

Hanover, on the Leine, is a fine specimen of an old German town, with its quaint architecture. It was with the Kingdom, annexed to Prussia, 1866 since which the blind ex-king has resided at Vienna. The modern part, near the railway, has very much increased in beauty. On leaving the station, the traveller may remark the fine statue of Ernest Augustus I., Duke of Cumberland. There is a splendid Theatre, and the performances are reputed as being equal to, if not the best, in Germany. A very fine Zoological Garden, which is worth seeing. The best streets are the George, Frederick, and Adolph streets. The old royal Palace, outwardly pretty, has its interior adorned in a moderately sumptuous manner; its Rittersaal contains a large collection of family portraits, amongst which the most remarkable is that of Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia; open daily, except Sundays, 10 to 1, admission 6d. The old gothic Town-hall is perhaps the most remarkable building in the city: and the Kaserne on the Waterloo Platz, the new Barracks near the station, the Polytechnical School, the Royal Riding School, and the Marstall (Royal Stables) are all worthy of inspection. Museum open daily 10 to 1, admission 6d. The public Library has 120,000 vols., and 2000 MSS.; many of the latter from the pen of Leibnitz. Leibnitz's house is in the Schmiedestrasse; and on the Waterloo Platz also the monument, a column of Victory raised to the Hanoverian troops who fought and fell at Waterloo. The Schloss kirche, the prettiest in the town, contains relics which were brought from Italy by Heinrich der Löwe. Herschel, the astronomer, was born here; he was originally a musician in the military service. In the neighbourhood is the Lindenberg, with a beautiful prospect. The establishment containing the royal stud (admission to which is free) is well worthy a visit. Herrenhausen, fare 10, 12, or 15 gr., and the Guelfs' Palace of Montbrilliant are favourite excursions.

Capital of Westphalia; and a well-built and flourishing town, antique and curious, with some gothic buildings of great beauty, among which is conspicuous the Rath-haus, where the Peace of Westphalia was signed, 1648, after the Thirty Years' war. In the Frieden Saal, as it is called, are preserved the portraits of the great contracting parties, with the seats on which they sat. Notice the Cathedral, with the tomb of Bishop Galen, famous for his warlike tastes, his immense standing army, with which he bombarded his own town when in a fit of ill-humour, and for the citadel he built; Oberwasser Kirche; St. Lambert's church, with its tower, on which are still hanging the three iron cages wherein John of Leyden and his two friends were tortured with red-hot pincers previous to their execution; the Ludgeri Kirche, a peculiarly fine specimen of the Romanesque; the Schloss, formerly the Bishop's palace, a handsome but somewhat ruinous building, with its gardens on the site of the ancient citadel. The old fortifications have been converted into promenades. John of Leyden's house in the market place is marked with quaint carving. In the Anabaptist rising of 1534-5, he called himself King of Munster. The main street is remarkable for its arcades along the ground floor. Trade in Westphalia hams, &c.

CONVEYANCES. — Railway to Hamm, Rheine, Paderborn, Hanover, Cologne, &c., see pages 115, 118, 144, 158, 163.

Nordhausen – Stat.—Pop. (1871) 21,275 — INNS: RÖMISCHER KAISER; BERLINER HOF. DEUTSCHES HAUSE.

In Prussian Saxony, 39 miles N. of Erfurt, in a fertile country south of the Hartz mountains. The church of St. Blasius has two pictures by Luke Cranach. In the neighbourhood are the ruins of Hohenstein and Ebersburg; there are many beautiful walks and points of view, such as the Kohnstein, Geiersberg and the alabaster grotto. Many distilleries.

CONVEYANCES.–Railway, see pp. 149, 150, 156, 172.

Droschken for course within the town, 3 sgr. without the town, 5 sgr.

A fortified town, on the Warta and Lowna, on the Russian frontier, formerly the capital of Poland. A fourth part of the population are Jews. One of its 23 Churches, that of St. Stanislaus, is a masterpiece of Italian architecture. The Cathedral in the Wallischei, across the Warta, is remarkable for a noble simplicity of style; the Golden Chapel, painted in the byzantine style, contains two bronze statutes of Polish kings. The Rath-haus is a splendid gothic edifice, with a tower which is the loftiest in the town. What was a Jesuits' College is now the seat of government; there is also a magnificent Palace, with a library of 20,000 volumes, presented to the town by Count Raczynski; and many other good buildings. Trade in corn, cloth, linen, leather, and tobacco; a wool fair in June. Places of public amusement—theatre, casino, coffee-houses with gardens, promenades, &c.

This Prussian Versailles lies on the right shore of the Havel, which, at this part, flows into a lake. It was founded by the Electoral Prince of Brandenburg and was, when Fortune began to favour the royal house, the residence of the Prussian princes; it owes, however, its prosperity to Frederick the Great. Principal buildings are: the Garnison kirche, with the tomb of Frederick the Great the St. Nicolas Church; the Royal Palace, with the rooms of Frederick the Great, Frederick William 3, and Louisa, containing many relics; the House on the Basin, where Frederick's father used to hold his tobacco lectures; Friedenskirche, or Church of the Prince of Peace, founded 1850, with a fine Pieta by Rauch, surrounded by the Lustgarten, bronze busts by Rauch, and statuary; Rathaus, built 1754, like that at Amsterdam, and fronted by an obelisk 76 feet high; Kiss's statue of Frederick William III. in Wilhelmsplatz; Cadet Academy, &c. A. Von Humboldt was born here. Outside the Brandenburg gate going to Sans Souci, the grave of Frederick William IV. (1861). Englishmen will take interest in visiting the pretty Palace of Babelsberg, the home of our Princess Royal. There is no difficulty in obtaining admission. Very fine views may be obtained from the grounds, and from various points along the drive. The gardens of Sans Souci are laid out in the French style, with fountains statuary, temples, &c. Here are Frederick II.'s Palace, with the room in which he died, and Voltaire's room; the New Palace, built 1763-9, in the renaissance style, containing the Maschei Saal (or Shell Room); Marble Hall, and 200 other rooms, 400 windows, and 440 statues on the roof; Frederick William IV's orangery and country seat, Charlottenhof, and the Marble Palace began by Frederick Will am II. 1786; the Pfingtsberg, &c. The tomb of Queen Louise has some exquisite sculptures by Rauch. Notice the Russian colony of Alexandrowka; the Pompeian House; and the Pfaueninsel, a pretty spot on the Havel.

Schleswig.—Stat.—Pop. 12,300.—HOTELS:

RAVEN; STADT HAMBURG; STERN.

A town and port, on the Schlei, 2½ miles from the Baltic, in a Danish-speaking district, annexed to Prussia 1866. It is the capital of the Schleswig-Holstein Duchy, and has a Cathedral and other churches, a large Hospital, and a port for small vessels. Near it is the castle of Gottorp, the former residence of the Dukes, and not far are the works called Dannewerke, taken and destroyed by the Prussians in 1864, after a brave defence by the Danes. Rail to Hamburg by the Altona line, see page 168.

Schlangenbad.—Stat.—10,000.—HOTELS

HESSISCHER HOF and NASSAUER HOF.

One of the Brunnens, till 1866 belonging to Nassau, but now in Prussia; buried in a sequestered little valley, amongst wooded hills annually visited by the most fashionable classes of Germany and Russia. The Baths possess wonderful cosmetic properties, and are said to tranquilize the nervous system, to soothe all inflammation and invigorate the system. Persons who have taken the ferruginous waters of Schwalbach, usually resort hither afterwards to undergo a course of bathing at the Serpents Spring, as the name signifies.

Schlangenbad is 6 miles from Wiesbaden, within a few miles of the Eltville station near Bieberich, and of some of the most picturesque scenery of the Rhine. It is generally unnoticed by the travellers, who content themselves with going up or down the river.

EXCURSIONS.—1. To Georgenborn, whence there is a magnificent view over the Rhine and the Main, thence to the castle of Frauenstein. 2. To the Monastery of Eberach, in a singularly beautiful situation, passing en route a magnificent view at the Chapel of Dubenhausen. The view from the height called the Boss, is one of the finest in the Rheingau. 3. To the Niederwald, above Rudesheim, whence there is one of the finest views of the Rhine. Within a very short distance of each other, the tourist will perceive three views or vistas cut through the trees, disclosing three beautiful landscapes of the Rhine, having the effect of a diorama.

About 4 miles beyond Schlangenbad, by a good macadamised road is Schwalbach or Langen Schwalbach, 900 feet above the level of the sea, and 670 feet above the level of the Rhine.

Carriages, horses, and asses are to be hired. Prices of Droschken, one horse, the course, 18 kr; two horse, the turn, 24 kr. There is a tariff of prices for carriages, horses, and asses

Wiesbaden, the former capital of the Duchy of Nassau (annexed to Prussia, 1866), and one of the oldest and most attractive watering places on the Rhine, lies in the beautiful valley of the Taunus, 6 miles from Mayence, and 27 miles from Frankfort. It shares with Ems the disadvantage of being far too close and stifling in summer, but in early spring, and in advanced autumn, it is a delightful place, even to the end of September. The Kursaal is the great attraction, as it contains banquet and ball-rooms, and reading rooms of the most splendid description, all filled with visitors, and forming a tout ensemble of gaiety and recreation not exceeded by any in Germany. N.B.—The gaming table was closed 1872.

On each side of the Kursaal are colonnades of handsome shops, serving as a promenade in wet weather, and a bazaar during the whole season. Behind is a beautiful garden, where the band entertains visitors, while they sip their coffee, or indulge in a cigar. There are numerous springs (known to the Romans as Aquae Mattiaci) all over the town; the principal one, the Kochbrunen (boiling spring, temp 156°), is frequented by the water-drinkers between 5 and 6 o'clock in the morning, and it then forms a peculiar and characteristic scene.

The great square, containing the Assembly room, is very handsome. Here are the Ducal Palace, in the Moorish style; a Museum and Library; an English Church, built 1860; and a Greek Church, having a double cross 183 feet high, and a statue. The statue of the late Duchess of Nassau, a Russian princess. There is a good theatre, with performance five times a week in the season.

The ENVIRONS are exceedingly beautiful, affording pleasant rides and excursions to points which command the finest views of the Rhine, and the charming valley of the Rheingau.

Refreshment Rooms at Station.

A fortified town in Prussian Saxony, on he Elbe. In the Schlosskirche, which contains the tombs of Luther, Melancthon, Frederick the Wise, and John the Steadfast, Luther's 95 theses against the doctrine of Indulgences were posted up on the 31st October, 1517, being the commencement of the Reformation. This church was much damaged in the siege of 1814. On the market place stands the great bronze Statue of Luther by Schadow, with the rhyme,—

"Ist's Gottes werk so wird's bestehen;
"Ist's menschenwerk, wird's untergehen."
(If it be God's work it will endure;
If man's it will perish.)

An Oak tree protected by railing is shown as the place where, on the 10th December, 1520, he burned the Papal bulls. Numerous objects are carefully preserved in this place connected with the memory not only of Luther, but of his friends Melancthon and the painter Cranach. Melancthon's house is here. The ancient and renowned University of Wittenberg was in 1817 removed, and united with that of Halle. Hamlet says, "And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?"

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY

(Austria, from the German Oesterreich, the East).

A widely-extended country in Central Europe, watered by the Danube, styled the Austria-Hungarian Empire, since Hungary was allowed self-government, 1867; lying between lat. 42° and 51° N., and long. 8° and 26½° E. Bounded by Prussia and Saxony on the North; Turkey, the Adriatic, and Italy on the South; Turkey and Russia on the East; Switzerland and Italy on the West. Politically divided into two parts—the Cis-Leithan and Trans-Leithan Provinces—by the small river Leitha, or Leytha, which runs along the border (below Vienna). The Cis-Leithan Division, with Vienna for its capital, comprises Upper and Lower Austria Proper, Tyrol and Vorarlberg, Salzburg, Styria, Carinthia, Carniola, Trieste and Istria, Dalmatia, the Bukovina, Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia and Galicia. The Trans-Leithan Division (capital Buda Pest), comprises the Crown lands of Hungary, Transylvania, Croatia, Sclavonia, and the city of Fiume.

Area.—250,000 English square miles, one-half to three-fourths being hilly. Population (1869) 36 millions, of mixed races; of which 20½ millions were Cis-Leithans, 15½ Trans-Leithan. 9 millions were German speaking, 16 Sclavonian, 5½ Hungarian or Magyar, 3½ Roumain; 24 millions were Roman Catholic, 7 Greek Church, 3½ Protestant, 1½ Jews. Vienna has a population of 834,800; Buda-Pest, 270,430; Prague, 189,950; Lemberg, 87,100. About 4½ millions of population were lost to the Empire by the cession of Lombardy and Venetia to Italy.

Reigning Sovereign.—Francis Joseph I., born 1830, succeeded his uncle in the revolutionary year 1848, married 1854. His son Archduke Rudolph, born 1858, is heir-apparent. His ancestors of the Habsburg line were Emperors of Germany, from Maximilian I. 1493, till Francis II., in 1804, renounced the title and became Francis I. Emperor of Austria; remaining however the nominal heads of Germany down to the battle of Sadowa, 1866; since which Prussia has assumed the leadership, to the entire exclusion of Austria from Germany, as now constituted.

The Cis-Leithan Legislature consists of a Chamber of Lords and a Chamber of Members elected by the people; the Trans-Leithan, of a Table of Magnates and a Table of Deputies similarly returned; both Ministries being directed by the supreme government of the Emperor-King, presided over by his Chancellor at Vienna Revenue.—About 66 millions sterling (1873) of which the Cis-Leithan contribution is 7-10th, and the Trans-Leithan 3-10th. Debt about 330 millions.

Army.—243,000; or 816,000 on the war establishment Service is compulsory. There are 25 fortresses. Navy.—68 Steamers of 106,000 tons and 536 guns, with 5700 seamen (11,600 in war time) stationed at Pola, in the Adriatic.

Mountains and Passes.—Some of the finest are in the western part of the Empire, in Tyrol, &c. The Ortler Spitze in the Rhetic Alps, near the Engadine, is 12,840 feet above sea, with glaciers down to 8000 feet, and not far from the Stelvio Pass, on the borders of Italy and Switzerland, which has a carriage road across it from Glurns to Bormio, 9,40 feet above sea, the highest road in Europe. Gross Glockner, above the Pinzgau, 12,400 feet high, and Gross Gulling, 9380 feet high, are in the Noric Alps. The three-headed Terglou, 9370 feet high, in the Julian Alps, is near Wurzen, on the road from Villach to Laibach, Brenner Pass between Innsbrück and Botzen, on the German route to Brindisi, 4600 feet high, traversed by a rail with 23 tunnels, 100 feet below the road; the peak above being 6800 feet. Botzen is a starting point for the Dolomite region. The Dinaric Alps on the Dalmatian coast, are 7000 feet high Other Passes in Tryol, Styria, &c. are the Katschberg, 3062 feet high, from Untertauern to Gmund, near the Gross Glockner; the Loibl, or Leobel, 4440 feet, in the Carnic Alps, from Klagenfurt to Villach; the Prebühl, 4015 feet high, over the Hochschwab; the Predil, 3830 feet high, from Villach to Görz; and the Semmering a fine winding pass, with thirty tunnels and viaducts, 2890 feet high at the rail (the mountain being 4420 feet), between Gloggnitz and Mürzzuschlag, on the line from Vienna to Trieste In the N and E. provinces are the Böhmerwald, the Erz (or metal) the Riesen (Giant), or Sudeten mountains, in a continuous chain, rising 5520 feet high, at the Schneekoppe, near Hohenelbe, in the Riesen section. These are connected with the Carpathian or Krapack Mountains, which are 9530 feet high at Mount Bucsecs or Butschetje, Transylvania, and 8750 feet at M. Lomnitzni, in the Tatra group, and embrace Hungary in a semicircle.

Rivers.—Next to the magnificent Danube are the Theiss, Marosch or Maros, Drau or Drave, Sau or Save, Adige in Tyrol; Moldau, a feeder of the Elbe, in Bohemia; the upper part of the Dniester, in Galicia; and the Waag or Hungarian Rhine.

Baths.—Baden (near Vienna), Carlsbad, Franzensbad, Gastein, Ischl, Marienbad, Teplitz, Salzbrunn, Warmbrunn. The two latter are in Prussian Silesia.

Products.—The country especially Hungary, is rich in grain, sheep, cattle, and finest timber, over one-third of the whole surface It yields iron, copper, lead, silver and other metals; coal, rice, potatoes, beet-root, wine, silk, and wool; but salt and tobacco are government monopolies. The eagle, wild boar, deer, and heron are found Commerce.—Value of Exports and Imports, 103 millions sterling, of which only 2½ is with England. At Trieste, the chief port, 16,000 vessels of two million tons, cleared in and out in 1870. Fiume, further down the Adriatic, is the chief port of Hungary (Croatia).

Routes.—London to Vienna and Trieste, see Through Routes, p. 7; See pages 205 and 253 for the Innsbruck and Brenner Route. For Routes through the Tyrol, see pp 11 and 454. London to Vienna, via Munich, Salzburg Ischl, Gmunden; and Linz, a beautiful Route, taking in the Salzkammergut Tour.—For this, leaving the main line at Lambach, proceed by branch to Gmunden by steamer on the Traunsee to Ebensee; thence to Ischl, Hallstadt, &c. For Vienna, through the North of Europe and Berlin, the Harwich, Grimsby, and Hull boats to Rotterdam, Antwerp, or Hamburg, may be taken. See Advertisements.

Railways.—About 7,800 mls. (1872) a great extension having taken place of late years. Even the Alpine districts and the provinces of Salzburg, Styria, and Tyrol are well provided for; and the tourist in search of the picturesque will find either on or within a few miles of the iron road, scenes of the grandest scenery in Austria. The lines over the Brenner, from Salzburg or Hallein; from Vienna by the Semmering Pass to Trieste; from Brixen viâ Villach to Bruck, Marburg and Laibach; from Karlstadt to St. Peter; from St. Michael to St Valentin; and the route from Gmunden to Ebensee (by steamer), are surpassed by none for magn ficence of scenery.

The 2nd-class carriages in Austria are like those of Germany, sup rior to those in England. fares for the 4 classes per English mile being 1 8d.; 0.35d.; 0.9d.; 0.4½d. On many of the newly opened lines, and by the slow trains on some of the old lines, the fares are very much less. There is a government tax of 2 per cent on all railway tickets, but this tax can never exceed 15 kreuzers (3d. sterling).

Postage.—To any part of Austria or Germany, 5 kreuzers; to England, 7½ kreuzers, per ½ oz. From England to Austria, 2½d. under ½ oz.

Hotels.—Rather inferior to, and more expensive than those of Germany. A table d'hôte is almost unknown, and at Vienna meals are generally paid for at the time, and not included in the Bill.

Passports—See pages XLIX to LII.

Money.—100 new kreuzers = 1 new florin 1s. 11½d. Paper the chief medium of payment. Average value of paper florin, 1s. 10d. sterling, or 11 florins to the £1 sterling. GOLD COINS: 8 and 4 florins respectively 20 and 10 fr., or 15s. 10d. and 7s. 11d. sterling. SILVER COINS: 2, 1, ½ florins respectively 3s. 11½d., 1s. 11½d., and 5½d. sterling; also silver pieces of 20 and 10 kreuzers. COPPER COINS: 1 and 4 kreuzers = respectively 4-5d. and 2-5d. sterling. BANK NOTES: 1, 5, 10, 50, 100, and 1000 florins. Bank notes pass current in all the Austrian dominions, and are very convenient. —[See The Merchant's Handbook. By W. A. Browne, LL.D. London: Stanford.]

Navigation of the Danube.—The Steamers of the Imperial Austrian Danube Steam Navigation Company, descend the Danube, from Donauwörth to Regensburg in one day; from Passau to Linz, in four hours. From Linz to Vienna, in seven hours. From Vienna to Galatz and Constantinople, in about 5 days. That part between Galatz and Constantinople is done by the Austrian Lloyd boats. The ascent takes much longer time, and ought not to be attempted. The Steamers are good. See Advertisement, page 728. The River Danube (German. Donau; ancient Danubius and Ister), the largest river of Central Europe, drains parts of Germany, the Austro-Hungarian Empire, Turkey and Roumania. It rises above Donaueschingen, near Tuttlingen, among the Swabian Hills of the Black Forest, 24 miles from the source of the Rhine, 3000 feet above the level of the Black Sea, and 1800 miles from its middle mouth at Sulina. The best parts for scenery, above Vienna, are the defiles at Weltenburg near Regensburg; at Passau where the Inn joins; the bends called Strudelard Wirbel, near the Haustein; Mölk Conventand Aggstein Castle; and Dürrenstein Castle, or Tyrnstein (belonging to Prince Stahrenberg), where Richard Cœur de Lion was confined. Above Passau are Donaustauf and the Walhalla; and above Donauwerth is Blenheim. Tuttlingen to Reidingen is compared to the lower Wye. Below Vienna, the scenery is for the most part flat and uninteresting; except about Komorn, where the Waag or Hungarian Rhine comes in; and at Buda-Pest, the capital of Hungary; also, the mouth of the Drave at Peterwardein; and the defiles and rapids about Moldova, Kazan, the Iron Gate, and Trajan's Bridge, between Basiasch and Widdin, under the Little Carpathians. Direct Railway communication from the west ends at Basiasch. Ice is seen from November to May. The mouth in the Black Sea is kept clear by a mixed Commission.

At Trieste are the Docks and head-quarters of the Austrian Lloyd Boats, to the Levant.

Adelsberg.—Stat.—Pop. 1,500—HOTELS:—UNGARISCHE KRONE, EISENBAHN.

In Illyria, 23 miles from Trieste. Every one passing between Vienna and Trieste, should stop to see the splendid "Grotto of Adelsberg" in a mountain, about three quarters of a mile from the Hotel. It is, without exception, the grandest natural excavation in Germany; and the startling effect of a river, the Polk here named the Uns, suddenly appearing in the dark bowels of the mountain, with the lights reflected from the narrow bridge in the roaring waters beneath, will never be forgotten. The cost of seeing this beautiful Cave thoroughly is £1 2s 5d. (11 florins 17 soldi) for two persons; that is, 70 soldi for each person, 80 soldi for each guide (three required); same for each lighter (two required); the rest is for candles. It takes about two hours. Grosse Dom Calvarienberg. Noah's Ark, 2150 mètres from the entrance; Black Grotto and Madelin Grotto are principal spots. The waters contain the rare Proteus anguinus, a minute indigenous fish-lizard, almost blind.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 211 and 235.

Agram, or Zagrab.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 30,640.

The ancient Thermæ Cetiæ, &c., a much frequented watering place, on the Schwechat, at the base of the Styrian Alps, 15½ m. from Vienna. The waters are sulphurous, impregnated with carbonic acid gas; temp. 93° to 99° Fahr. They are efficacious for cutaneous diseases, gout, or rheumatism. Numerous delightful Excursions in the neighbourhood; those in the valley of Helen being particularly beautiful.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Vienna, Oedenburg, Gratz, Trieste, &c. see pages 211 and 215.

Bad-Gastein, or Wildbad-Gastein.—HOTEL: STRAUBINGERS; MOSER'S HOTEL, good.

A watering place in Upper Austria, 50 m. from Salsburg, 3000 ft. above sea, and reached by carriage from Salsburg. Invalids are warned that the journey is very fatiguing and over a mountain pass.

Has a hot mineral spring of 118 deg. Fahr., a powerful remedy in cases of apoplexy. Here a Convention with Prussia was signed in 1865. The surrounding scenery is of exceedingly grand. The Klamm Pass, above mentioned, between Hof Gastein and Lend, on the road to Salsburg, may rank with the finest in Tyrol.

Botzen, (Italian, Bolzano.)—Stat.—Pop. 10,200—HOTELS:—

KAISER KRONE; VICTORIA, at the Station.

A city in Tyrol, the old Pons Drusic beautifully situated at the junction of the Talfer with the Eisack, 27 m. south of Brixen, 79 m. south of Innsbruck, and 42 m. north of Trent. It is one of the most flourishing commercial towns in the Tyrol, having four large Fairs held annually. Long arcades or piazzas; with a flood dyke 2 m. Terlaner and some other wines good and cheap here. This is the best Stat. for the Dolomite Mountains (see below).

BUDA-PEST (or PESTH), the name of the now united Capital of Hungary.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 270,480. HOTELS—

HOTELS:—HOTEL NATIONAL; HUNGARIAN HOTEL; ERSZERSOE STEPHAN; TILEGER; STADT PARIS; HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, on the Pesth side; KONIG VON UNGERN; QUEEN OF ENGLAND.

Fine view of Buda from Pesth, and of both cities from the Blocksberg. Observatory, 2?0 yards high.

Pesth, or Buda-Pest, the Hungarian capital, consists of Pesth, walled round in the 18th century, standing on the east side of the Danube, in the plain of Rakosfeld, opposite Buda, the site of the Roman Transacincum, to which it is joined by a fine suspension Bridge, 1,220 feet long, erected in 1849, by Mr. B. Clark, architect of the Hammersmith Bridge. Pesth lies low and flat; but has wide clean streets and good; several churches, including the parish church (Hauptpfarrkirche), once a mosque, a Moorish looking synagogue; handsome Rathhaus, with a good view from the square tower; exchange; national museum, and picture gallery, containing Nelson's stick, cut after the battle of the Nile; university, richly endowed, having 1000 students, 50 professors, and 70,000 books and manuscripts; the Ludoviceum, now a military hospital; Neugebäude, a large pile, built 1786, by Emperor Joseph, now an artillery depot; National or Hungarian theatre, and a German theatre.

The old town Buda, called Budin in Sclavonian and Ofen by the Germans, was a Roman colony, down to the 4th century, and was held by the Turks from 1527 to 1686. It covers a long ridge (which was walled round in 13th century), and the neighbouring valleys, near the Blocksberg and Spieasberg. Here, among old houses, are the royal Palace, with the Hungarian insignia, Citadel, and cannon foundry, with the monument to General Hentzi; the Stadthaus; garrison church or cathedral, marked by a tower; large timber yards; and the hot sulphur springs at Bruckbad and Kaiserbad, from which the place derives its German name of Ofen (oven). Kaiserbad is near a Turkish mosque. Good wine, silk, velvet, and meerschaum pipes are produced here.

Carlsbad.—Stat.—Pop. 3,400.—HOTELS:

ANGERS HOTEL, clean and comfortable; charges moderate. Proprietor speaks English; recommended.

KONIGSVILLE — quite new, and beautifully situated.

GOLDENE SCHILD; DE RUSSIE; DE HANNOVER.

Lodging Rooms cost by the week from 2 to 10fls., and apartments 20 to 30fls., according to size and the season of the year. A floor, with kitchen, 40 to 50fls. Service is paid in proportion. English people should be careful when engaging private lodgings, as there is a law which compels visitors to pay for 14 days certain. A compulsory tax of 14fl. 1st class, and 9fl. 2nd class, must be paid by visitors who stay longer than eight days. Carriages ½ a day, 8fls.; one day, 5fls. Asses, ½ a day, 1fl.; if drawing a char, 1fl. 36krs.; the guide, 15 krs.

Carlsbad, or "Charles's Bath," in Bohemia, is picturesquely situated in a narrow valley along the banks of the river Tepel, near the Eger, and surrounded by lofty granite hills, clothed to their summits with fine forests. The town consists entirely of lodging-houses, hotels, café, and shops. It has a theatre, hospital, and granite bridge; with large public buildings, including baths, a museum, library, concert rooms, restaurant &c., erected by the Municipality in 1868. Season from 22nd April to 22nd September.

The nearest way from England is by Frankfort, Hof, and Eger; but there is a fast and easy route by through tickets via Leipsic, and from thence to Swartzenberg and Carlsbad—72 hours (sleeping at Leipsic), cost about £8. Another route is from Cologne, via Mayence, Darmstadt, to Nürnberg; thence to Eger, and Carlsbad sleeping at Nürnberg. A beautiful route is via Dresden, and up the Elbe to Bodenbach or Aussig; taking through tickets at Hanover for Madgeburg and Dresden.

In the Season when the place is crowded it is necessary to secure loogings by writing beforehand, also to telegraph to Swartzenberg for carriage conveyance to Carlsbad. The springs are hot sulphur and alkaline, of different temperatures, from 116° to 165° Fahr., and useful in dyspepsia, gout, rheumatism, liver complaint, gravel, stone, hypochondriasis, and constipation; the course occupies about six weeks. The Sprudel and Muhlbrunnen are the most remarkable. It is necessary to see a medical man every third day, who orders the number of cups, and watches the effects of the water. Bands of music play during the hours for taking the waters. Living is plain and wholesome. The Walks on the banks of the river, and amongst the pine forests, are beautiful, the scenery from some spots magnificent. The Environs of Carlsbad are interesting: Elbogen and the Hans Heiling rocks are well worth seeing. Early and late in the season thick top-coats and strong boots are indispensable.

ENGLISH SERVICE at the Kurhaus (the church having been pulled down) on Sundays, at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Chaplain, appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

MEDICAL MEN.—Dr. Gans, Dr. Seegan, Dr. G. Porges, and Dr. Krauss—all speak English.

CONVEYANCES.—Rail. see p. 188, 196, 208, 223.

Cortina.—See Dolomite Region.

Cracow (German and Polish, Krakau) —Stat.—Pop. (1869) 43,835.—HOTELS: DE LONDRES; DE DRESDEN; GOLDEN ANCHOR.

An old capital city of Poland, and sometime a Republic till the insurrection of 1846; on the Vistula, joined by a bridge to the suburb of Podgorze.

CHIEF BUILDINGS—K. Casimir's Castle, on the Wawel Hill, near the Cathedral, founded by him 1359, containing 20 Chapels, with the graves of John Sobieski, Poniatowski, Kosciusko, Potocki, &c., with monuments by Thorwaldsen; monument of Copernicus, in St. Anne's church; St. Mary's gothic church, and 35 other churches; Town House, in the Market Place; Florian Gate, built 1498, when the Turks besieged the town; Bishop's Palace; old University, including a library of 30,000 vols; Academy of Painting; Observatory; and Botanical Garden. The memorial to Kosciusko (1824), 120 feet high, outside the town, is a truncated cone, and a fine point of view.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 184, 187, 2 5—208, 212, 216, 217, 224, 291.

Debreczyn.—Stat.—Pop. (1869) 43,520.

HOTEL WEISSES ROSS.

A populous and important manufacturing town in Hungary, which with its unpaved streets and one-storied houses resembles a collection of villages rather than a town. Most of the inhabitants are Magyar Calvinists. It has a Town Hall, large Calvinistic College, Churches, Convent, &c. There are extensive manufactures of boots, pottery, soap coarse cloth, pipes, prepared sheep skins, &c. Four Fairs yearly draw together vast crowds of strangers.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 207, 214, 219, 225, 227.

Dolomite Region, in Tyrol, near the Ampezzo and Fassa Valleys; accessible vid the Botzen Station, on the Brenner line. Brunnecken, Cortina, and Caprile are good centres for the mountains in this striking district; the highest peaks being Marmolette and Monte Civita 11,050 ft. and 10,440 ft. high. They are named a Dolomites, the French geologist, and consist of soft, yellowish, slaty limestone, without a tree rising into fantastic peaks and spires, and threaded by narrow, deep cracks or passes. Church service at Hotel Aquila Nera, at Cortina, in Val d'Ampezzo; supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.—Cadore, the birthplace of Titian, is 9 miles from Cortina. A fine drive may be had by taking the rail from Franzensfeste (on the Brenner line) to Toblach; thence drive by Landro, Cortina, Cadore to Conegliano on the Venice and Trieste rail.

Ebensee.—HOTEL POSTE.—Pop. 2,300, with Langbath.

It stands near Traunstein Station (page 200) on the Salzburg line, close to the beautiful Traunsee or Lake; and has a trade in salt brine brought from Ischland Hallstadt. On Kranabitsattel (1731 mètres), ascended in four hours, there is a grand panoramic view. Pine timber is floated from here for descending the Danube.

Eger.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000.—HOTELS: WELZEL, GOLDENE SONNE, ZWEI ERSHERZOGE.

A garrison town of Bohemia, on the way to Carlsbad from England; on the Eger, and called Cheb in the provincial language. Here is the Burgmeister's house where Wallenstein was assassinated 1634, after his friends had been killed in the old Burg or Castle.

Railway to Carlsbad, &c., see pages 188, 196, 202, 208, 212, 221, 222, 223.

Feldkirch.—Pop. 3,000—Stat.—HOTELS: KRONE (POST); ENGEL GABRIEL; and LOEWE, the Diligence office. FELDKIRCHER HOF.

A small town in Vorarlberg, on the Ill, 20 miles S.E. of Bregenz; possessing cotton manufactures and oil-mills. Rail to Bludenz, past Lindau, p. 192.

Fiume, (Illyrian Rika)—Stat.—Pop. 14,000 HOTEL—RE D'UNGHERIA.

A free port belonging to Hungary (though divided from that inland kingdom by Croatia), 35 miles S.E. of Trieste by land, but much longer by sea round the Istrian peninsula. It stands in the mouth of the Fiumara, where the Julian Alps end, at the head of the gulf of Quernaro in the Adriatic, and has a college, theatre, shipyards, and lazaretto, with a good trade. Marshal Nugent's seat, Tersato castle, is near an old pilgrimage church.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—C. T. Hill, Esq
AMERICAN C. AGENT.—L. Francovitch, Esq.
CONVEYANCES.—Rail, see pages 211, 213, 231.

Franzensbad or Franzbad—Stat.—Pop 1200.—HOTELS: POST; KAISER VON OESTERREICH.

A modern Bath (named after its founder, the Emperor Francis I.); and a much-frequented resort of Austrian princes and nobility in Bohemia, about 3 miles from Eger, on the way to Hof. The town is a fresh, handsome, cleanly, and well laid out, although built in a plain, and on a moist, boggy soil, in a tame country. The best houses are in the Morgenzeile; large, handsome lodging houses, forming a square, with a central Well, planted promenade, gardens of several acres in extent, and statue of Francis I. Franzbad has been called "cooled Carlsbad," because of the similarity of the waters. They are of four kinds—saline chalybeate, saline aperient, saline, and acidulous—thus adapted to almost every kind of ailment; inferior to Carlsbad because cold, but superior because not so exciting, nor so penetrating. The "Mud Baths," however, are the great attraction of Franzbad, upon which part of its reputation has been made. There are three establishments; the charge 1 florin 40 kreutzer each bath. The system of living, regimen, diet exercise, &c., precisely that of Carlsbad.

There is a Club; with Newspapers. Living is reasonable.

PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Boschan.

CONVEYANCE.—Rail, see pp. 188, 196, 209, 223.

Fured (Baths of), on Lake Balaton, in Hungary. May be reached from Stuhlweissenburg and Sio Fok, and thence by steamer.

Gleichenberg.—HOTELS:—VEREINS-HAUS; GRAZER-HAUS; STADT FRANKFURT; WIENER-HOF; BERLINER HOF; VILLA D'ORSAY; BRUNNERHAUS

This ancient bath-place, which was known to the Romans, may be reached from Spielfeld, a little beyond Gratz, on the Trieste line. It lies in a wooded valley, near an old Castle and Brunsee, the Duchess de Berri's seat. The springs are acidulous, alkaline, and ferruginous.

CONVEYANCE.—By post carriage to Spielfeld station, 28. See page 211.

Gmunden.—Stat.—Pop. 5,000.—HOTELS: AUSTRIA, at the head of the Traunsee; BELLE VUE; GOLDENE BRUNNEN; GOLDENER HIRSCH; STADT GMUNDEN; GOLDENER SCHIFF; AUSTERLITZ.

Gmunden stands on the Traunsee, or Lake Gmunden, in Upper Austria, near the finest part of the Salzkammergut Here the salt from the surrounding mines is shipped. The prospects are splendid, taking in the lake, the Alps of Salzburg and Dachstein, the tops of which are covered with snow. Falls of the Traun; view from Calvarienberg.

The Traunsee 11,700 mètres long, 2900 wide, the finest lake in Austria. At the top, towards Ebensee it has rather a severe character, owing to its rocky banks and dark waters. But at Gmunden it has a more cheerful aspect, resembling the lake of Zurich. It is surrounded by high mountains, especially the Traunstein (1730 mètres) which does not offer such fine views as some points in the Salzkammergut (see under that name.)

To see Falls of the Traun give notice to the guard at Lambach, and get out at the Station for the Falls, 2.50; twenty minutes walk through fine woods; train calls at 5.2, arriving at Gmunden at 6.; well worth staying one or two days. The Fall-barges go down the river from the lake in about 2 hours; very beautiful scenery; they descend many shoots, the last being about 1200 feet long; no danger. Walk up to the Falls; luncheon of crayfish, trout, bread and butter, can be had at the inn. Hire a carriage from Gmunden to wait above the Falls to take you back, about nine miles of lovely drive. The master of the Belle Vue, will arrange everything; very fine echo on the Lake.

Beautiful drive through the Salzkammergut sleeping at Ischl, Gosau, Golling, Berchtesgaden, and Salsburg; on by rail to Innsbruck. Hotel de l'Europe very good clean, and moderate.

The excursion down the river Traun for the lake of Gmunden we much recommend; there is no danger and it is very curious; fee, one gulden a head, and a little more for drink money.

Carriage to Falls of the Traun, 4 florins.

The Station is three-quarters of a mile from the Steamboat Pier. No conveyances unless previously engaged by telegraph. On the Steamer arriving at Ebensee, there is often confusion arising from the influx of tourists. There are generally conveyances enough for Ischl, where, unless apartments have been engaged, it will be difficult to procure them.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Linz and Budweis, see pages 201, 210. Steamers, in summer, several times daily, to Ebensee, on the opposite end of the Lake en route for Ischl. Fare, 50 kreutzers.

Gran.—Stat.—Pop. 9,800—HOTELS:—STADT TRIEST, ENGLISCHER HOF.

The ecclesiastical metropolis of Hungary, the ancient Strigonium, in the picturesque vale of the Gran (Sclavonian, Garam or Hron), on the right bank of the Danube, 25 miles north west of Buda. It is noted for its Baths, and the magnificent but still unfinished Cathedral, built on the Castle Hill, commenced in 1821, in the Italian style, surmounted by a dome 65 feet in diameter, and faced by a splendid portico. This Cathedral is built chiefly at the expense of the Prince-Archbishop Romantic excursions in the neighbourhood.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Presburg, Vienna, Temesvar, Basiasch, &c. see page 214

Gratz.—(Sclavonian, Niemetzki-Gradetz).—Stat.—Pop (1869) 87,120—HOTELS HOTEL DE L'ELEPHANT; ARCHDUKE JOHANN; GRADETZ.

GOLDENES ROSS, near the Bridge.

Restaurant at Station.

Capital of Steyermark (Styria,) on the Mur, crossed by a chain bridge 318 feet long) 1,900 feet above sea, and one of the most pleasant towns of the Austrian monarchy, on account of its situation and environs, and cheapness of provisions. View from the Schlossberg.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Cathedral with an altar painting by Tintoretto, and tomb of Ferdinand II. the Arsenal; Townhall; Convent of the Jesuits; Castle, with a beautiful prospect, in which the crown of Steyermark is kept; the theatre; the palace of Attenis, the colossal statue of the Emperor Francis; the University; the Joanneum, a technical institute founded by Archduke Johann (John), 1812, including museums library, lecture and reading rooms; laboratory, &c. The suburb of Jacominiberg is the most beautiful quarter of the town; the most noted coffee-house is in the Jacominiberg haus. Many beautiful walks to the castle or palace of Eggenberg, with a collection of paintings and park; castle and ruin of Gösting; St. John and St. Paul's churches,

CONVEYANCE.—Railway, see pages 211, 220, 221, 222, 225, and 233.

Hallstadt.—Pop. 1,300.—HOTELS:—DAUBLER'S WEISSE TRAUBE; SCHRAUER; POSTE; GRUNER BAUM.

A small town in Upper Austria, on the Lake of Hallstadt or Halstadtersee, in the Salzkammergut, built on the side of a hill almost a precipice. This Lake, and the neighbouring Gosau Thal, may compare with any part of Switzerland. It is 8000 mètres long, 2000 broad, and 200 deep (650 feet); and is surrounded by a circle of Glaciers, above which rise the Dachstein, the Thorstein, and the Saarstein of 2250 mètres, from which a splendid view can be obtained.

Near Hallstadt are the pretty lakes of Gosau, Zwieselberg, and the Traunwand Near St. Wolfgang (Hotel—Hirsch. Zum Weissen Rose) is the Schaafberg of 1819 mètres (3½ hours ascent) with a fine panoramic view.

There are salt works, and several Protestant congregations in the neighbourhood. Gmunden is the nearest station. See pages 201, 210.

This is the Roman Tergeste, in Illyria, on a gulf of the Adriatic, at the foot of a ridge called the Karst hills, now a free port, and the first seaport town of the Austrian monarchy. It is by far the most thriving commercial place in the Adriatic; and consists of an old and new town, the latter (called the Theresienstad, &c.), divided by the Corso, or main street, on which stands the statue of the Emperor Charles VI. A mole incloses the harbour. Here is the depôt of the Austrian Lloyd Steamers, about 70 in all. The main population is Italian, which language is spoken generally, and used in all the newspapers, except one, which is in German. The country people are of the Illyrian race. Cyprus wine, Rosoglio, Maraschino, and a variety of fine fish to be had here.

If the traveller is going to Adelsberg Grotto (see page 459), Vienna, or Hungary, he must get the paper money; if he is going into Venetia, or anywhere else, let him get Napoleons. Gold, especially the English sovereign, bears a high premium. The prices are published daily at any money changers.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Cathedral, an old building in the Byzantine style, in which is the tomb of Winkelman, the antiquary, who was murdered in Trieste, the Piazzetta of Ricardo, a small square, with a triumphal arch of Roman origin; the Exchange, a beautiful building, near the Casino club, into which a stranger may be introduced. The Hotel de Ville is a fine building. The Teatro Grande was built by Selva in 1800; other theatres are the Mauroner, Filodrammatico, and Armonia—a beautiful building. The Corti is now a riding school. There is a new Public Garden (Giardino Pubblico), with a Botanical Garden. Also the Nautical Academy; the Grande Lazaretto, or hospital; and the ship Docks. Visit the Tergesteum, with noble conversazion rooms, and reading rooms for the journals. The Castle of Miramar, was the summer residence of the unfortunate Emperor Maximilliar, who's statue was uncovered by the Emperor, 1875.

SECRETARY OF EMBASSY.—F. C. Ford, Esq. VICE-CONSUL.—S. B. Welkersheim, Esq.

AMERICAN MINISTER.—His Excellency Hon. J. Jay. CONSUL.—F. S. Post, Esq.

Vienna (the Emperor's city, "Kaiserstadt" as it is called in Germany,) lies on the right bank of the Danube (Donau). The canal of the Danube divides the city from the suburb Leopoldstadt. The little river Wien, from which the city receives its name, separates it from the suburbs Landstrasse, Wieden, &c. It contains 10,000 houses; and its principal trade consists in gold, silver, jewellery, and silk manufactures, pianofortes and furniture. The best points of view are, the steeple of St. Stephen's, the Spinnerinn am Kreuz (female spinner at the cross,) the terrace in front of the Upper Belvedere, the Turk's Bulwark, the Gloriette at Schönbrunn, the top of Leopold and Kahlen hills the Krapfenwaldchen, the Himmel and Gallizienberg.

The city has been greatly altered and improved within the last few years, especially by the creation of new hotels, monuments, fine houses, public buildings, and gardens, in the Ring, on what used to be open ground, separating the old town from the Faubourgs. It is well lighted.

Objects of Attraction.—CHURCHES—The Cathedral of St. Stephen's, built in 1114: the steeple, the giant gate, and the pulpit. It is undergoing a thorough restoration, to be completed 1875. The entrance into the steeple, 436 feet high, leads from a small house, No. 873, Stephen's-platz. It was begun in 1359 and completed in 1433. The largest bell is cast out of 180 Turkish cannon, and weighs 357 cwt. There is to be seen, in the interior of the church, the chapel of the cross (Kreuzkapelle) where lies buried the celebrated Prince Eugene. Church of the Capuchins in the New-market, with the vault and tomb of the royal family, and the sarcophagus of the Emperor Frederick III., and also the sarcophagus of young Napoleon, Duke of Reichstadt. Church of St. Augustin, with a noble marble monument to the memory of the Duchess Christiania, of Sax-Teschen, a most beautiful work by Canova. There is to be seen here likewise, the grave-chapel of the Emperor Leopold II., of the distinguished General Daun, and of Professor van Swieten; in the Loretto Chapel, the hearts of the members of the Emperor's family are preserved in silver urns. St. Michael's Church, with the burial place of Metastasio. A church well worth seeing in the suburbs is the St. Carlo Borommeo built (in fulfilment of a vow which the Emperor Charles VI. made when the plague raged in Vienna) after a drawing by Fisher of Erlach, 1737; also the Scotch church in the north-west of the inner city. Other Churches worth notice are the Minorite; St. Maria Stiegen; St. Ruprecht's, the oldest in the city; University Church; the votive church of St. Salvator (commemorating the Emperor's escape from murder, 1855); and the modern Churches of St. John (with some good frescoes), Altercherchenfeld, Hellandskirche.

PALACES—Imperial Palace, or Hofburg, or Burg, an extensive pile, partly as old as the 13th century. It contains the library of 300,000 vols., 20,000 manuscripts, 300,000 engravings; the Redoutensaal or Ball-room the large winter Riding-school; Court Theatre and Chapel; Museums, with various rich scientific collections, such as the Cabinets of Natural History, Mineralogy, Coins; also the Treasury or Schatzkammer, in the Schweizerhof or Swiss Court, including the regalia of Charles V, and other relics. In the Upper Belvedere, built by Prince Eugene, is the Imperial Picture Gallery containing about 1500 pictures, classed under the Italian school—Titian, Paolo Veronese, Giorgione, Caravaggio, &c.; Flemish school—with Vandyck, Teniers, Rubens, Dow, &c.; Spanish school—Velasques; French school—Poussin; German—Dürer, Holbein, &c. It also contains a permanent exhibition of works of modern painters. (Open Tuesday and Friday, 10 to 4; other days, fee 20 kr. Shut in October and April, from 11th to 24th.) In the Lower Belvidere are the Ambras museum, Egyptian museum and collection of antiquities. Other Palaces are those of Archduke Charles, Archduke Albert, Archduke Louis Victor, and Archduke William, a modern one, built 1866. At the Palace of the States in Herrengasse the revolution of 1848 broke out. The Modena Palace is now a Government office. The Picture Galleries of Prince Liechtenstein, Prince Esterhazy, Count Czernin, and Count Schönborn, are at their several Palaces: as are the Schönfield museum of Baron Dietrich and the collection of Count Harrach.

GOVERNMENT AND PUBLIC OFFICES.—Imperial Arsenal or Zeughaus, near the Belvedere Palace. Like a fortress built 1849. It contains 150,000 stand of arms, a gun and cannon factory, and target range. Civil or Town Arsenal and Armoury; Mint, a large building in New Markt, with a fine collection of Coins; several large Barracks; Exchange (a temporary one in the Boerse-ring facing a permanent building, which is rising up). National Bank, Herren-gasse; General Post-office, Postgasse; Telegraph Office, Renngasse; Francis-Joseph and other Barracks.

ACADEMIES, MUSEUMS &c.—University, in Postgasse; Kunstverein or Society of Arts; Academy of Fine Arts; Oriental Academy; Polytechnic Institute at Wieden; Theresianum founded by Maria Theresa; Josephinum or Academy of Medicine, with its rich collection of preparations by Fontana, and Botanical Garden; Academy of Sciences, founded by Francis I.; Geological Institution, founded by Francis-Joseph, 1849; Geographical Institution, Alser Vorstadt; Veterinary Institute; Museum of Zoology, in Josephplatz; Museum of Botany, at the Botanical Gardens.

HOSPITALS AND ASYLUMS.—General Hospital, in Alserstrasse, founded 1783; 2,500 beds in 104 rooms, with 50 physicians and 400 nurses. Lunatic Asylum, 250 beds, in Alsergrund; Lying-in Hospital; Hotel des Invalides, near the Custom-house; Joseph II's Poor-house; Foundling Hospital; Rudolph, Elizabeth and other Hospitals; Asylum for Incurables; Deaf and Dumb Institution; Institution for the Blind.

STATUES AND MONUMENTS.—Francis I. in the Emperor's Palace; Archduke Charles, near the Burgthor or Palace gate; Joseph II; The column of the Trinity, in the Graben; and the Virgin's Pillar, in Hof Square; Theseus, and the Minotaur, by Canova, in the Volksgarten.

The grand sight in Vienna is on the day of Corpus Christi, when the Emperor and all the court parade on foot, with the Archbishop and Clergy, through the principal streets, which are lined with soldiers.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SERVICE.—At the British Ambassador's residence. On Sundays at 11.30 a.m. Chaplain, Rev. G. L. Johnston. Swiss Protestant Church, Dorothea Strasse.

IRISH PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Service all the year round, at 11, Eschenbach Gasse, at 11 a.m. Minister—The Rev. William Johnson, B.A.

THEATRES. — Burgtheater, for the regular drama. New Opera House, for operas and ballets. City or Stadttheater, for the drama in the Seilerstätte, opened September 1872. Comedies in the Viennese dialect, are performed in the Strampfer Theatre, a small new building in the Tuchlauben, Inner City.

GARDENS AND WALKS.—The Prater, the Hyde Park of [illegible], thickly studded with lime and chesnut trees, and containing the site of the International Exhibition of 1873.—As erected by Scott Russell, it occupied a space of four English square miles, including the grounds. The Palace of Industry was 3000 feet by 670 feet, with an immense Rotunda, 300 feet diameter and 250 feet high. The Machinery Hall was 3690 feet long. The Art Gallery (a permanent building), comprises Annexes for amateur and public collections, a conservatory and pavilions. A new international Theatre stands in the gardens, and a branch of the Danube has been turned through the grounds. The other gardens are—the Imperial Garden, or Burggarten, near the Palace, open on application; Stadtpark, or City Park, on the Wien; Botanical or University Garden, Rennweg; Belvedere Garden, Rennweg Horticultural Society's Garden; Zoological Garden (Thiergarten); Prince Schwarzenberg Garden, open to the public. The Volk's garden near the Bourg; much frequented, and contains the famous statue of Theseus, by Canova. Military band daily. The Brigittenau is now a part of the town; Leopoldstadt and its meadows have disappeared.

TELEGRAPH OFFICE.—Central Renngasse, 50, Leopoldstadt; Hotel National.

POST-OFFICES.—Alte Post Gasse, 10—9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Letter-boxes in every street. Letters received till 6 in the evening. Postage for the whole Empire, 5 kr.; for England, 9½ kr. for a single letter of half an-ounce. A letter can be insured as to delivery for a small charge. The post-office authorities have the sole privilege of carrying small parcels. Money, if sent, must not be sealed up at the office; but can be sealed (with 5 seals) at home. The sender must write his name and address on the outside. Letters for all parts of the Continent are in time till 3 at the small offices, and till 4 at the General Post-office.

SHOPS—The best shops are in the Kohlmarkt, Graben, Karnthnerstrasse, and Stephansplatz.

COFFEE HOUSES—The first coffee house in Europe is said to have been established at Vienna, 1684, by a certain Koltschitzky, a Polish spy, who received permission to open it, as a recompense for his services. Most of them have a billiard table, smoking room, and an ordinary supply of newspapers. A cup of coffee without milk, (called black coffee,) costs 16 kr.; a cup with milk is called a mixture (mélange) 20 kr. Principal Cafés: Daum's, Del'Europe, Opera Café Schlegel's, Fuchs's, Walch's, Grunsteidl's, Berner's, Hochleitner's, Frei's in the Wieden, Orsan's, in Praterstrasse, and many others.

CLUB-HOUSES—Access to the aristocratic and mercantile Club-houses can be most easily secured by means of a banker.

BEER HOUSES.—These are well worthy of a visit There are 700 in the city and its suburbs. They are much frequented by foreigners.

BATHS. — Swimming Baths in the Danube, reached by Tram way and Omnibus

PASSPORTS.—Formerly the police were very strict throughout Austria. By a late regulation passports are no longer necessary.

LUGGAGE—The inspection of luggage takes place immediately upon arrival, and the traveller must be cautious not to carry upon his person, or to smuggle anything that pays a duty; amongst which may be particularly noticed tobacco, playing cards, and books,—forbidden books are placed in the Central Inspection Office, and remain in official custody until his departure.

Sights.—Days and hours for visiting the most remarkable establishments and curiosities in Vienna:—

MONDAY.—The royal mint and cabinet of antiquities, 10 o'clock A.M.

TUESDAY.—Royal cabinet of Egyptian antiquities (Landstrasse, No. 641), from the end of April to the end of September from 9 to 12, A.M., and from 3 to 6, P.M.; from the end of September to the end of April, from 9 A.M. to 2 P.M. The royal Ambras collection (in the same building and at the same hours).— The royal gallery of paintings, in Upper Belvedere, in the summer from 9 to 12 o'clock and from 3 to 5 o'clock; in the winter from 9 to 2 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY.—The royal cabinet of mineralogy from 9 to 1 o'clock.—Technical collection of his Majesty the Emperor in the Polytechnic Institute, at 10 A.M.

THURSDAY.—The royal cabinet of curiosities Joseph's-platz), 10 o'clock. — Blind Institute, Joseph's-platz, No. 188); there is a public examination of the children every Thursday, which every visitor will find very interesting.

FRIDAY.—The royal mint and cabinet of curiosities (same as Monday). Royal cabinet of Egyptian antiquities (ditto). Royal Ambras museum (same as Tuesdays). Royal gallery of paintings (ditto). Schatzkammer, (very fine) by Ticket, at 10, A.M., and only in the summer season.

SUNDAY.—The royal cabinet of minerals (same as Wednesday). Schatzkammer (same as Friday). Josephine academy (Währingergasse, No. 221), in the summer months every week, in the winter every fortnight. Royal collection of pictures of the royal academy of plastic arts (city, No. 980). Royal Polytechnic Institute, only in the summer. Royal Deaf and Dumb Institution (Wieden, No. 162); public examination from 10 to 12 o'clock. As these days are liable to alteration, the tourist should consult the porter of the hotel. A ticket for seeing the new Arsenal can be obtained by applying to the hotel commissioner.

Environs of Vienna.—The three finest general views of Vienna are from the Kahlenberg, the Gloriette at Schönbrunn, and the Eselberg, near Dornbach. To Schonbrunn, omnibuses every half-hour, from Am Peter, on the Mehlmarkt, and on St. Stephen's Platz, or by tramway (Pferdebahn) from Praterstern to the Schönbrunn bridge. Schönbrunn, the summer residence of the Emperor of Austria, was begun under the superintendence of Fisher, in the reign of the Emperor Mathias, and completed in the reign of Maria Theresa. The Duke of Reichstadt, son of Napoleon I, died here (1832). Its garden is well attended on Sunday. Stapps, the German student who made an attempt upon the life of Napoleon, was shot and buried here. The beautiful spring, from which the castle derives its name; the Gloriette, with a view of Vienna, the flower garden with the palm-house, and a menagerie, are worthy of attention. The Hetzendorf, or Emperor's summer palace, is behind Schönbrunn. At Hütteldorf, further up the Wien is the Emperor's deer park, containing 3000 wild boars.—Lainzburg (a Station) to the South. Notice the Castle, with its beautiful park; Temple of Diana, the little Prater, Temple of the Eintracht, Dorfchen, artificial waterfall—the Ringelspiel, the Holzstoss, the Meierei; above all, the Knight's Castle (Ritterschloss) a correct imitation of a stronghold of the middle ages.—Liesing, (a Station) noted for its beer.—Mödling, (a Station) in the Bruhl Valley. If you take the road to it you pass the Spinner at the Cross (Spinnerin am Kreuz), a gothic cross, erected by Crispinus Pellitzer, 1547, with the statues of Crispinus and Crispinianus. At Mödling are the old Knight-Templar church of S. Ottmar, the castle and the park of Prince Liechtenstein; the ruins of the old family castle of the Babenberg; numerous pleasant walks and eating-houses.—Another road on the Vienna Wald leads through Dornbach, where Prince Schwarzenberg possesses a villa, with a park. From this part you can reach the Upper Wald, and from thence you descend to Hainbach, Steinbach, and Mauerbach, where refreshment can be had; thence, through a lovely valley, to the Passauer Hütten; and in half an hour to the Tulbinger Kogel, a hill, from the top of which there is a most a beautiful prospect.

The Kahlenberg, or Josephsberg, (Mons Citius), above 1000 feet high. The way to it is over Döbling, (where Baron Anselm de Rothschild died, 1874), near the observatory, affording the best view around the neighbourhood of the city. The Kahlenberg, on the N. W. of the city, near the Danube, has a view, taking in the Alps on one side, and the Carpathians on the other, it is accessible by a chean rail on the Fell system. Near this is the Leopoldsberg, with an old castle. From this point may be taken pleasant walks on the Cobenzelberg, to the Krapfenwaldchen, to Sievering, to the Himmel, to Grinzing and Heiligenstadt; and to Nussdorf and Klosterneuberg adjoining, one mile from which are the ruins of Greifenstein, where Richard, the Lion hearted lay in prison.

Richenau, under the Schneeberg.

For Voslau see below.

CEMETERIES.—Beethoven and Schubert are buried at Währing. Mozart is buried at St. Mary's; Glück, at Matzleinsdorf. Haydn was interred at Gumpendorf, after the battle of Austerlitz, 1809.

Voslau.—Stat.—Pop. 2000.

HOTEL-BACK; a large well furnished house, above the swimming Baths; Schweizerhof, good red wine is got.

This town is a summer resort the of Viennese, who come here great numbers in on Sundays to enjoy the fine air, and beautiful scenery. It stands among pine woods, on the top of a hill, near Baden, and its sulphur springs, on the main line from Vienna to Gratz. Some visitors prefer this place to Baden. There is a capital bath here, in Count Fries's park. the water being of a natural warmth, and perfectly transparent. When the cholera was raging in Austria some years ago, and Baden suffered in common with other places, Voslau excepted, and the towns people erected a small chapel in memory of their deliverance. Several delightful excursions can be made, especially to the castle of Merkenstein, belonging to an Austrian Baron; it is a ruin, but is well worth seeing.—(A.P.)

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 211, 215.

Waag River, the "Hungarian Rhine," is the most westerly of Carpathian streams, and the finest in Hungary, rising in the Tatra Mountains, and following the Little Carpathians to the Danube, at Komorn, below Vienna. It is accessible by the rail from Oderberg (Silesia) to Kaschau; and runs among thickly wooded hills, past many old castles and interesting sites; one of which is Tyrnau, or "Little Rome," where the Primate of Hungary formerly resided. The finest part begins at Jobo and Szomolany Castles. Then come the Platjan Baths of hot sulphur and mud, with an old church built by St. Stephen, the patron saint of Hungary, near the Maiden Well. At Mount Csejtje are four old Castles, once the seat of the cruel Countess Nadasdy, who sacrificed 70 young girls to restore her own vigour by bathing in their blood. Temetring Castle, and Betzko, or Fools Castle, are followed by Trencsin Castle, the largest of all on this river.

Waitzen (Hung., Vacz).—Pop. 11,350.

About 21 English miles from Pesth, on the Danube. This is one of the oldest settlements of the Magyars. Principal buildings, the Cathedral and Deaf and Dumb Asylum.

Railway to Pressburg and Vienna, and to Pesth and Szegedin, see page 214.

Warasdin (Hung., Varasd)—Pop 9200.

INNS:—Hirsch; and Goldenes Lamm.

The frontier town of Croatia, on the Drave.

There are sulphur baths, and good vineyards in the neighbourhood. Distance to Agram, 30 miles.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Vienna, Trieste, Stuhlweissenberg, and Ofen.

Wiener-Neustadt.—Stat.—Pop. 18,000.—HOTEL, HIRSCH.

An ancient town of Lower Austria, 27 miles south of Vienna, and one of the finest in the Archduchy. Principal objects the Military Academy in the old Ducal Castle, which contains a beautiful Chapel in the Gothic style with some fine stained-glass windows; the Cathedral; and the Cistertian Abbey.

Considerable manufactures of velvet and silk, and a great trade in iron.

A Canal 33 miles long runs to the Danube. From here it is about 40 miles, to the fine scenery about the Sömmering Tunnel, beyond Gloggnitz, on the Trieste Line, where some fine examples of engineering in the Tunnels, Viaducts, &c. are seen, as the line winds up and down the Sommering Pass, which is 4,415 feet above sea. The Tunnel by which it is penetrated is 4,518 feet long. The whole length of the line from Gloggnitz to Mürzzuschlag is 23½ English miles. From Gloggnitz to the Tunnel, 18 miles, the ascent is 461½ metres; and from the Tunnel down to Mürzzuschlag, 7½ miles, the descent is 216¾ mètres. According'y, the respective gradients are 1 in 63 and 1 in 55½. The maximum incline at each end is about 1 in 40.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Baden, Modling Vienna, Raab, Oedenburg, Gloggnitz, Gratz, Trieste, &c. see pages 195, 202, 211, 215, 220.

Zara or Jadara.—Pop. 9,000—HOTELS:—

The capital of Dalmatia, on the Adriatic, opposite Ancona; with a view of the islands in front, and of the mountains behind. The Empe or was here 1875. Its old Venetian walls have been converted into promenade. It has a fine Cathedral in the Byzantine style, and 6 other Churches; Arsenal; Theatre, on the site of a Roman building; and a small harbour inside Uglisno Island. Trade in silk and maraschino. Old Zara is 17 miles south east; Spalato or Spolatro with its extensive remains of Diocletian's Palace, is 50 miles further down the coast. Ragusa (pop. 4,000), another old Venetian town, under Mont Sergio, is 70 miles beyond; followed by Cattaro, 40 miles; the last place on Austrian ground up a picturesque gulf or Bocche, under the steep Montenegrin Hills. Cettigne, the capital of Montenegro (belonging to Turkey), is about 15 miles up the country.

CONVEYANCES.—Austrian Lloyd Steamers.

TYROL AND STYRIA.

The following Tour of six or eight weeks in the Tyrol, &c., can be recommended only to pedestrians who are prepared to rough it, and can speak German and Italian. If unacquainted with with these languages, they should procure a competent guide, by writing from Munich to Innsbruck, to any of the innkeepers.

Munich to Innsbruck, Solstein, Schonberg, Ambras, Zirl, Martinswand, Umhausen, the Oetzthal and its glaciers, Meran, Hofer's Haus, Meran, Finstermunz, Wormserjoch (Monte Stelvio,) Bormio, Tonal Pass, Cles in Val di Non, Trent, Riva and Lago di Garda, Roveredo, return to Trent, Botzen, Castelruth, Groden (Val di Gardena), Enneberg, or Gaderthal, Brunecken, Pusterthal, Taufers, Antlhoz, Tefferecksenthal, Windisch-Matray, Pass of St. Ruprecht, Heiligenblut, Rauriser Tauern, Bad Gastein, Werfen, Pass Lueg, Abtenau, Gosau, and thence to Hallstädter-See, Ischl, Aussee, Gmunden, Traunfall and Salzburg. From Botzen the Dolomite region about Caprile and Cortina, may be reached, see p. 444. The languages spoken are German in North Tyrol, and Italian in the South. French not understood except at the large hotels in Innsbruck, Botzen, &c. The Ellwagen are good, and a separate carriage may be had on all the high roads, by paying beforehand the fare for four persons. Fare by Stellwagen is about 1d. per mile. Mayr's Map of the Tyrol is the best.

Money.—The best is the Austrian bank-notes.

BADSHAW'S Notes for Travellers in Tyrol and Vorarlberg, price 2s. 6d.

SWITZERLAND.

(With Map in Special Edition.)

Switzerland (the land of the Switzers; Germ. Schweitz; Fr. La Suisse; Ital. La Svizzera); the culminating ridge of the mountains bordering on France, Germany, Austria, and Italy; including the head water-systems of the Rhône, Rhine, Aar, and Inn. To these all the rest run; except the Ticino, which runs to Lake Maggiore and the Po. Surface—about 220 m. by 110 m., or an area of 15720 sq m.; equal to about half of Scotland. From Bâle to Monte Rosa (about 100 m.) there is a total rise of 14,000 feet—a rise divided by naturalists into seven Regions, or more generally into four: 1.—The Jura region, mostly on the W. and N.W. or French border, extending in parallel ridges through Neuchâtel and Soleure to Bâle and Aargau, about 150 miles. They are clothed with pine and other timber. 2.—The Plain, so called, though covered with hills, 150 m. by 50 m., extending from the Lake of Geneva through Fribourg and Bern, to the river Aar. 3.—The Hilly region of N. and central Switzerland having the Rigi and Lakes for its centre. 4.—The Alpine or Mountain region, S. of Interlaken and Briens. The great ridge of the High Alps in Switzerland extending to the Italian frontier, has its middle at St. Gothard, near the sources of the Rhône and Rhine. Here the Lower Alps of the Oberland strike off W. past the Jungfrau, etc., along the N. side of the Rhone; while the main ridge passes E. through the Grisons, into Tyrol. Wheat and oats grow to the height of 4,300 feet; barley grows to 5,100 feet; oaks grow to 2,500 feet; pine to 6,500 feet; pasture is found to 6,000 feet; snow line at 8,000 to 8,500 feet. Timber forests are estimated to cover 1-6th of the surface. Among the Animals are good mountain horses and mules, the chamois and lamergeyer.

The Swiss Alps are distinguished into—1st, Pennine Alps from Mont Blanc to the Matterhorn and Monte Rosa, including the Passes of Great St. Bernard and Mt. Théodule. 2nd, Helvetic Alps from Monte Rosa to the Bernardhin, or Bernardino Pass in the Grisons; taking in the Passes of the Simplon,

Digitized by Google

St. Gothard, and Lukmanier. 3rd, Rhætic Alps from the Bernhardin, eastward; taking in the Passes of the Splügen, Septimer, Maloya, Julier, Albula, Fluela, and Stelvio, or Wormser Joch, near the Order Spitze in the Tyrol. Highest points are Matterhorn on Mont Cervin and Monte Rosa on the Italian border line. Mont Blanc is outside Switzerland, on the border line of French Savoy and Italy. The highest point of the Alps actually within Swiss territory is Mont Fée or Mischabe, near Monte Rosa, 13,330 feet high. Rhododendrons are seen in summer on the Col de Balme 6,000 feet high. Glaciers.—About 1-14th of the surface is covered with snow, and glaciers to the number of 400; the largest of which, the Aletsch Glacier near Æggishorn, is 5 leagues long. They form an icy sea of 1,000 sq. m. and are the great feeders of the rivers.

Switzerland is also pre-eminently a land of Lakes, the principal of which are the Lake of Constance Lake of Geneva, or Lake Leman, 54 m. long, Lake of Zurich, Lake of Vierwaldstätten or Lucerne, and the Lake of Neuchâtel, with the Lakes of Bienne, Thun, Briens, Zug, Wallenstadt, and some smaller ones, as Morat, Sempach, Sarnen, Egeri, Greiffen, Pfäffikon, etc. On the Italian side are Lakes Maggiore, Lugano, and Como. Most of them are traversed by steamboats (see p 327); and also present traces of ancient Lake Habitations. Specimens in the museums at Geneva, Bern, Zurich, etc., include articles in stone, and bones of the bison and elk, for example. Remains of pile houses have been discovered at Concise, in Lake Neuchâtel; Nidau, in Lake Bienne; Guévaux in Lake Morat, Morges and Hermance, in Lake Geneva, and also opposite the city; Bauschanz, Lake of Zurich; Robenhausne, Lake Pfäffikon; Nussdorf and Wangen, in Lake Constance.—See J. E. Lee's Lake Dwellings of Switzerland, 1866. Waterfalls.—Some of the most striking are, the Rhine, at Schaffhausen, 80 feet down, and 300 feet broad; Aar, at Handeck; Staubbach (bach is a stream) and Pissenbach, at Lauterbrunnen; Reichenbach, at Meyringen; Giessbach, at Briens; Seerenbach and Baienbach, in Lake Wallenstadt; Schmitt and Schreyenbach, near Stachelberg; Saane, near Gateig; Pèrolina, in Bossons Glacier, near Chamouni; Pissevache, near Martigny; Pianazzo, near the Splügen; Toccia or Tosa, in Val Formazza, near the Simplon. Points of View.—For distant prospects of Alpine Peaks—Col de la Faucille, near M. Reculets and M. Dôle, above St Cergue; both near Geneva Chaumont above Neuchatel. The Weissenstein, above Soleure. The Hauenstein, above Olten. The Albis between Zurich and Zug. Rigi between Zug and Lucerne. Faulhorn and Rothhorn near Brienz Stockhorn, near Thun. Monte Salvatore, near Lake of Lugano. The Kamor or Stoss, near Gais, in Appenzell. From the Observatory at Turin; and many other points.

Average Cost of Living.—In Switzerland the traveller can manage to live for from 10 francs to 12 francs per day, excluding all charges for conveyances, horses guides, &c. A pedestrian tourist can travel for about 8 francs, provided he knows German and French. Hotel Expenses.—2nd and 1st class—Breakfast or Tea, in eating room 1½ to 2 fr. Table d'hôte Dinner, 3, 4, 5 fr. Bed, 1, 3, 4 fr. Service (servants), per day, ½ to 1 fr. Pensions (boarding houses) 4 to 8 fr. a day. If possible tourists should travel in parties (two or four are the best numbers, as they exactly fill either a one-horse or two-horse voiture), and make all their arrangements over night.

TOUR IN SWITZERLAND.

The most common approaches are through Germany, by way of Bale and Schaffhausen, for Switzerland; and Geneva or Neuchatel, coming from France. The Round should begin with Geneva, etc.; thence to Zurich, Lucerne, and the Oberland, etc., ending with Mont Blanc and Geneva, as the scale of magnitude increases to the end; whereas, if you begin with Mont Blanc, all the rest is dwarfed by him.

London to Rotterdam, Ostend, or Antwerp, thence to Cologne, Frankfort, Freiburg Innerthal and Bâle; and from thence to Schaffhausen, Constance, Rorschach, St. Gall, Appenzell and Gontis, Weissbad, Seenewald, Wendenberg, Ragatz, Baths of Pfäffers, Wallenstadt, Coire the Via Mala, St Moritz, and the Engadin; Chiavenna and Lake Como, Bellinzona and Lake Maggiore.) Wesen, Rapperschwyl, Zurich, Zug, Goldau, Rigi, Lucerne and Altorf; Fluelen, Altorf and the Tödi, Devil's Bridge, Andermatt, Geschinen Gorge, St Gothard, Airolo (for Lake Maggiore and Milan), Furca, and Grids Passes, at the heads of the Rhône and Aar: Grimsel Hospice, Joch Pass and Meyringen, Brunig Pass (to Sarnen and Lucerne), Brienz and Giessbach, Sheidegg Pass, Faulhorn, Grindelwald Lauterbrunnen the Jungfrau, Mönch, &c; Thun in the Oberland Gemmi Pass and Baths of Leuk, Brieg and the Simplon (for Domo d'Ossola and Maggiore); Visp (for Zermatt, Monte Rosa, the Matterhorn, &c.); Sierre, Rawyl Pass, Leuk, Simmenthal, Interlachen, Thun, Bern, Soiothurn (Soleure), Weissenstein, Bienne, Neufchâtel, Morat, Avenches (ancient, Aventicum, Fribourg, Lausanne, Geneva, Vevey, Bex, Martigny (for Great St. Bernard and Aosta), Tête Noire, Col de Balme, Chamouni, and Mont Blanc; Montanvert, Sallenches (for Chambery and Annecy) Geneva, for M. Reculets, in the Jura; Lyons Paris, and London.

Time for Travelling.—The latter part of June, July, August, September, and October, are the best months for a tour; but even May is a delightful month.

Hints.—Cold water, &c., should not be taken in large quantities by tourists when heated, and particularly when much fatigued. No traveller should attempt to cross a glacier without a guide, having a stout rope tied round the waist; in all cases he should take the lead. Take paper, pens, ink, and soap, as they are articles difficult to be met with. A strong alpenstock is indispensable upon a mountain journey. Take as little luggage as possible, but do not omit a good water-proof coat or a plaid, and a pair of strong shoes to walk in.

A small phial of glycerine is useful for rubbing the face and hands when sunburnt, or for the feet when blistered. Rowland's Kalydor is also good. Homœopathic Tincture of Arnica is a most valuable remedy for any sprain or bruise and a small bottle is a most desirable addition to the tourist's equipments. Cold tea and chocolate cakes are useful to the traveller. For sore feet rub in a little brandy mixed with a few drops of grease; or put a bit of greased paper next the skin.

Transport of Luggage.—Luggage conveyed to any part of Switzerland or the neighbouring countries. All luggage is charged for; the charge is by weight, at a low rate. This mode of transit is the safest and speediest. Heavy articles should be sent, if time be no object, by "Tarif commerce" on Railways.

Conveyances.—In Canton Berne all prices of conveyances, &c., are regulated by tariff, which may always be demanded; elsewhere more precaution is required. Tariff placed in every hotel. Diligences, generally belonging to Government and carrying the mail, traverse all the chief roads. They have room for 12; average day's journey, 10 to 12 hours. The fare is, however, high, and three or four travelling together will find it more convenient to hire a private conveyance (voiture, vettura); charge, with 1 horse (2 persons) is 12 francs a day; 2 horses (5 persons) 20 francs, besides 1 franc per horse to driver. Return fare must also be paid. The traveller should ascertain whether a return carriage may not be in the town before hiring one belonging to the place; but in the height of the season return carriages are charged higher. Usual prices for a horse or mule, 6 fr., and half-pay for the return journey. Muleteers, 3 fr. a day; same for the return. Steamers navigate all the chief lakes.

Railways.—The country is now well provided with Railways (945 miles, or 1575 kilomètres in 1874.) The carriages are excellent, with the exception of those in the three French Cantons, on the American principle. The 1st class carriages are most luxuriously fitted up with tables, looking-glasses, foot-stools, and other conveniences; and the 2nd class are roomy, and admirably adapted to enable the traveller to view with ease and comfort the scenery of the country. Geneva time is 20 minutes before French time; Berne time, 26 minutes. A short line runs from Vitanau, on Lake Lucerne, to the summit of the Rigi (Rigi Kulm—see tables at p. 249). There is a branch line from the Rigi Kaltbad to Rigi Schiedeck which will be ready for traffic in the Summer season of 1875. An extension is projected from Interlaken to Brienz, and over the Brunig, down to Lucerne. A line for Italy is in progress from Altorf, through the St. Gothard, by a tunnel of 9½ miles.

Guides.—As a general rule, they are absolutely necessary in mountain excursion at any other times than the months named for a tour, since the paths are liable to be obliterated by snow. Their almost invariable honesty and good temper render them on all occasions useful. Travellers should always make their bargain beforehand with guides for such excursions; the hiring should be made through the landlord. Pay, 6 fr. a-day, and half-pay for the return journey. They will carry 25 lbs. luggage.

Money.—Same name and values as French. English sovereigns are taken at the Swiss towns at a value of 25 francs. English circular notes are exchanged at all the chief places of resort in the country. S. German florin = 2s. = 2 fr. 20 c.; kreutzer = 2 c.

Weights and Measures.—Kilomètre = 3-5ths mile = nearly 5 furlongs. Stunde, or hour's journey = 2½ to 3 mls. = a league; Post = 3 stunden.

Wines.—"The best vin ordinaire is the Veltliner. It is generally to be had in North Switzerland. Have it drawn from the cask."—R. S. C.

Telegraphic Lines almost universal. Tariff, 50 centimes. In 1873 there were 3560 miles (5965 kilomètres), with 800 stations. Money can be sent by Telegraph.

Post-Office Orders can be sent, up to 500 fr. (£20), for a small commission. Orders in the form of Coupons may be got beforehand and used as required. The Coupons may be written on. Postage to England, 25c. the ½ oz.

Cantons.—Twenty-two; three being divided into two sections each. Bern, Valais, Grisons, are by far the largest; Valais, Geneva, Vaud, Neuchatel, Bern, Bâle, are on the French border; Bâle, Aarau, Zurich, Schaffhausen, Thurgau, on the German borders of Baden, Wurtemberg, and Bavaria; St. Gall, and Grisons, on the borders of Austrian Tyrol; Valais, Ticino (or Tessin), and Grisons, on the Italian border.

The Provinces or Cantons now constituting the Federation were formerly held by the neighbouring Sovereigns of Austria, Germany, Burgundy, &c. In 1307, three Forest Cantons, under Tell and others, rose against Austria, and after defeating her at Morgarten, 1315, were joined by 10 other Cantons. They defeated Charles the Bold, 1476–7, and the Duke of Savoy, 1602; and were finally declared independent by the Treaty of Westphalia, 1648. In 1815, the Confederation was revised, and the Cantons increased to their present number.

Population (1870) 2,679,095, being an increase of 6 per cent. in 10 years. Of these, 1,566,000 were Protestants, mostly in the Cantons of Zurich, Vaud, Schaffhausen, Glaris, Bale, Appenzell, and Thurgau; 1,064,655 Catholics, mostly in the remaining Cantons; and 94 per cent. were Swiss-born As respects Language 1,848,000 were German-speaking in 14 Cantons on the North and North-East; 640,000 in the French-speaking Cantons on the West, (viz., Bern, Valais, Fribourg, Neuchatel, Geneva, Vaud); 144,000 Italian-speaking (in Ticino or Tessin) South of the Alps; 42,000 Romansch-speaking in Grisons, next to Tyrol. The Romansch is a curious remnant of provincial Latin; a newspaper in this dialect is published at Coire. Some of the most populous Towns are—Geneva, 66,165; Zurich, 36 695; Bâle, 44,834; Bern, 34,000; Lausanne, 26,530.

Government.—A Federal Assembly, or Legislative body, consisting of a National Council of 128 members (1 for 20,000 pop.); and a Council of States, of 44 members—2 for each Canton. A Federal Council or Executive, of 7 members, is nominated by the Assembly for three years, under a President and Vice-President, elected annually, seated at Bern, where the Foreign Ministers reside; a Federal Tribunal, or Judicial body, is nominated for three years.——Army (1873) 201,780, of whom 83,530 were regulars, from 20 to 30 years of age; 80,420 reserve, 30 to 40 years of age; 67,000 Landwehr, above 44 years. There were 159,000 infantry, 14,100 riflemen, 19,000 artillery, 4,690 cavalry. A Federal Polytechnic School at Bern.——Navy—represented by 86 mercantile steamers, of 3,500 horse-power, on the lakes.——Universities.—Four, at Bern, Bâle, Zurich, and Geneva. A plan for bringing the army and public instruction more within the control of the central authority, is under consideration. A Tir Federal, or Swiss "Wimbledon," is held every two years. Wrestling matches or Schwingfeste, are also held at Meyringen, &c.

Commerce.—Among Swiss productions are silk, lace linen and cotton, embroidered curtains, watches, clocks, jewellery, cheese, wooden toys, charcoal, preserved milk, fruits, Kirschwasser. The Federal Revenue is about 1½ million sterling. Cantonal Expenditure, about 2 millions.

Mountains and Passes.—Heights above sea level:—

DESCRIPTIONS, &c., OF TOWNS.

Aarau.—Stat.—Pop. 5100.—HOTELS: WILDERMAN, OCHS, LA CIGOGNE

The principal town of the Canton Argau, situated on the right bank of the Aar, at the south base of the Jura—here partly covered with vineyards. The baths of Schintznach are about 10 miles distant. The road along the right bank of the Aar passes several castles. The footpath along the left bank is recommended. It leads over the Gisli-Flue, easy ascent) which commands a beautiful view of several lakes. The celebrated Zschokke lived at Aarau many years. The town is also noted for its good mathematical instruments, and the canton of Aargau for its fine breed of cows.

CONVEYANCES.—Rail to Olten, Bâle, Bern, Biel Lucerne, &c. See pages 239, 240, 243, 244, 245.

Aggischorn, or Eggishorn.

JUNGFRAU HOTEL and PENSION.

A favourite centre for excursions in Canton Valais, under a peak 9000 feet high, 3 hours' from Visoch. See Visoch. This spot, with the Riffelhaus in the Visp valley, is one of the best centres of ascents in the Alps. Among these may be enumerated the Jungfrau, the Mönch, the Aletschhorn, &c. Close to it is the Marjelen Lake, the waters of which burst 2nd August, 1872, from the fall of a glacier into it, and flowed down to the Rieder Alp, 10 miles.

CHURCH SERVICE, at the Hotel, supplied by the Col. and Con. Church Society.

Aigle—Stat.—Pop. 2600.

HOTEL AND PENSION VICTORIA.—Kept by X. Roy, well situate opposite the landing-place, large garden commanding a splendid view.

GRAND HOTEL DES BAINS.—Hydropathic establishment, Baths, &c., see advertisement.

A pretty town (formerly called Aquila, in Canton Vaud, on the W. Swiss line, at the mouth of the picturesque Ormond Valley, near the Lake of Geneva; with houses of black marble. Good wine. The Grand Eau passes it down to the Rhone.

CHURCH SERVICE, at Hotel des Bains, supplied by the Col. and Con. Church Society.

Altorf—Pop. 2430.—HOTELS: ADLER; KRONE; BAKE; POST.

Capital of Canton Uri, on the Reuss, near the S. end of Lake of Lucerne under the St. Gothard Pass. A tower marks the spot where says tradition, Tell shot the apple from his son's head. Burglen, where he was born, is near. Tell's Chapel is on the Lake, above Fluelen. Horses can be hired over the Pass.

Amphion (Baths of).—A fine little spot on the S. borders of the Lake of Geneva, 4 miles from Thonon, in French Savoy (not Switzerland). The waters are alkaline, like those of Evian.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, at Grand Hotel des Bains. Chaplain supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Andermatt—See Route 11 (Switzerland) in Special Edition.

Arth, or Art—Stat.—HOTELS:—BLACK EAGLE.

A village in Canton Schwytz, at the foot of the Rigi, situated at the head of the Lake of Zug, and in the vicinity of Goldau (Stat.) the scene of the fall of the Rossberg in 1806, when three villages and 450 persons were overwhelmed. The ascent of the Rigi is easy for pedestrians; but it may now be done (1½ hrs.) by a new rail, part Oberarth, Goldau, and Krübel. There is a descent on the other side to Weggis, on the Lake of Lucerne.

Steamer from Arth to Zug and Horgen, on the Lake of Zurich; see page 329

Baden—Stat.—Pop. 2930.—HOTELS:

WAAGE, LÖWE, STADHOF, & SCHIFF at the Baths.

A bathing place in Canton Aargau, on the Limmat, noted for its hot sulphur springs, called by the Romans. Thermæ Helveticæ, or Vicus Thermarum. Here are an old Austrian castle, or STEIN, with an hospital and theatre, at the baths, 20 minutes from the town. They are excellent in scrofula and diseases of the skin and glands.

Bâle, or Basle (German, Basel).—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 44,385.—HOTELS:

HOTEL DES TROIS ROIS.—First class hotel, well situated, highly recommended. C. Fluck, proprietor

HOTEL EULER, large and well situated Hotel near the French and Swiss Railway Station.

HOTEL SUISSE, E. Merian, proprietor.—Situated near the springs on the Promenade, opposite the French and Swiss Railway stations.

HOTEL KRAFT.—First-class hotel, well situated. Recommended to English and American travellers. See advt.

HOTEL SCHREIDER, near the German Railway St.

HOTEL DE LA CROIX BLANCHE, kept by Mr. A. Gubler. Fine situation on the banks of the Rhine, and close to the German Railway Station.

HOTEL DE LA CIGOGNE, situate near the Rhine; moderate charges. Mr J. Klein Weber, proprietor.

HOTEL DU SAUVAGE (Wild Man) the nearest to the Cathedral. Diligence Office, and the Swiss, French, and German Railway Terminus.

HOTEL DE LA COURONNE.—(Crown Hotel), A. Kubler, proprietor; good situation: English spoken.

RAILWAY TERMINI.—The German to the northern half of the town; the Swiss in the southern half, near St. Elizabeth Church.

Bâle, or Basel, the Roman Basilica, is situated at the north-western corner of Switzerland, on the north side of the Jura, 900 feet above sea. It is the capital of Bâle Ville division (14 sq. mls.); the rest of the Canton, called Bâle Campagne, having Liesthal for its capital; and is placed on the Rhine at the point where it verges northward. It is a well-built and large city, consisting of two towns, divided by the Rhine, and spanned by a bridge near the middle of the town. Basle is the most commercial place in Switzerland, especially noted for its ribbon manufactures. It is also a great centre of Missionary enterprise, and its University, which has had many eminent professors has some interesting ethnological and other collections. A fine Cathedral, built in the Gothic style of architecture, on the site of the Roman town, possesses two spires 220 feet high. The view from the terrace is very beautiful. The Council Chamber is the Hall where the famous Ecclesiastical Council was held between 1431 and 1438: it has some old frescoes, said to be by Holbein, of the 'Dance of Death.' The picture gallery at the museum (open Sunday and Wednesday) near the minster, contains several Holbeins, with pictures by Teniers, Canaccci, etc., and drawings by Dürer; also a collection of antiquities and the university library. The town hall and arsenal deserve notice. The magnificent new church of St. Elizabeth (Protestant) is now completed. It was erected at a cost of nearly a quarter of a million sterling; one gentleman, a merchant of Basle, having left that sum by will. Holbein, the painter, and Bernoulli and Euler, the mathematicians, were natives of Bâle. Erasmus died here 1536.

For Itinerary from Bâle, see following page.

The road to Biennethrough the Val Moutier and Munster Thal, is one of the finest in Switzerland daily traversed by diligences to Berne, etc.

Beatenberg.—See Interlaken.

Bellalp, or Bel Alp, near Brieg, in the Valais. The HOTEL has a fine view over the Aletsch glacier and Bernese chain. Good centre for excursions.

Bern, or Berne—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 36,000.—BERNERHOF HOTEL—first-class hotel, delightfully situated, commands a full view of the Alps.

HOTEL DU FAUCON, situated in the finest part of the town. A very good house; excellent cuisine; moderate charges.

HOTEL VICTORIA.—On the Schaenzli. First class.

SCHWEIZERHOF, DU MAURE, SINGY, CROOONE, BAER, DERM ARSCHAUX. RESTAURANTS: Schwenzli, Boulevard, Schweitenmattel. CAFES: Engl, Casino, Commerce, Schoenzli.

HACKNEY CARRIAGES.—The course of ½-hour (viertel stunde), 1 or 2 persons, 80 c.; 3 or 4 persons, 1 fr. 20 c.; 1 hour for 1 or 2 persons, 2 fr.; 3 or 4 persons, 3 fr.; 1 coll, 20 c.; for every further ½-hour, for 1 or 2 persons, 40 c.; for 3 or 4 persons, 60 c.; for the whole day, i.e., over 6 hours, for 1 or 2 persons 12 fr.; 3 or 4 persons 18 fr. These prices are for 1-horse carriages; the charges for 2-horse carriages would be the same as those put down for 3 or 4 persons.

Berne, or Bern (from Barën, bears), the capital of the canton, and the seat of the Swiss Federal Council, is 1910 feet above the sea, and is considered one of the finest towns in Switzerland. Its old fortifications were removed 1835. The streets are regular and sometimes arcarded; and the prospects are very beautiful, particularly from the terrace (Platteforme) near the Cathedral. It is situated on the top of a rock, surrounded on three sides by the river Aar. The Cathedral is a fine Gothic building, with some handsome windows and well carved figures. The streets are embellished with a profusion of fountains. The University, Veterinary School, Military Academy, Theological College, and Museum are interesting. Valuable national manuscripts in the public library. The town takes name from a bear, but the public Bear-pit by the bridge, is not worth notice. View from Observatory. The new Catholic church is a handsome building.

Berne is the general starting place for excursions into the Bernese Oberland, the fine peaks of which, including the Finster Aar-horn and the Jungfrau, are best seen at sunset from the Platteforme, the Enge and other points. Travellers will do well to leave their superfluous luggage here, but engage Guides at the last place of starting for mountain excursions. Ministers for England, France, Austria, and Italy, reside at Berne.

Berne is celebrated for the beautiful musical boxes, Swiss clocks, wood carvings, and sculptures. A visit to the establishment of J. H. Heller, where this branch of Swiss industry may be seen in every variety, will be found interesting.

BRITISH ENVOY.—His Excellency E. Corbett. Secretary of Legation, G. Jennet, Esq.

AMERICAN MINISTER, His Excellency H. Rublee. POST-OFFICE—Boulevard Exterieur Haupt Strasse. Telegraph at Post-office. Railway stat. in the town.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE throughout the year; Rev. James Rathbone, M.A., chaplain, appointed by H.M. Minister.

PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Denme.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see pages 239—246.

Bex (pron. "Bay.")—Stat.—Pop. 3550.—GRAND HOTEL DE SALINES, recommended.

HOTEL ET PENSION DES BAINS, exceedingly well situated and clean; moderate prices. Recommended. H. PENSION DE L'UNION; BELLEVUE.

A well-known centre, near the end of the lake of Geneva, in Canton Vaud, on the Rhone, and the high-road to the Simplon, famous for its salt-mines, sulphur baths, and delightful walks. It is situated at the foot of the Dents de Morcles and Midi; 2 miles from St. Maurice, and half an hour's ride by railway to the Lake of Geneva. A pension is kept at the Hotel des Bains, where there is a salt-water bathing establishment, and the grape and whey cure (Molkenkur) is also practised. A new iron bridge connects Bex with Massongex and Monthey (Valais).

The valley Des Ormonts, behind Bex and Aigle, is a charming idyllic country, leading by the Col de Pillon and other passes to the Simmenthal and Thun. Bex is surrounded with cheap and agreeable pensions at Grionne, Villard, &c.

ENGLISH SERVICE at the Swiss church and at Hotel des Salines, at 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, see page 246.

Bienne (or Biel in German).—Stat.—Pop. 6,000.—H. OU JURA; CROIX BLANCHE; COURONNE. Hotel accommodation is better at Neufchatel.

Bienne, in Canton Berne, is an old fashioned walled town, at the foot of the Jura mountains at a short distance from the Lake of Bienne, which is 10 m. long. In this lake is the island of St. Peter, once the residence Rousseau. Watch trade carried on. The collection of lacustrine antiquities belonging to Colonel Schwab, deserves attention.

CONVEYANCES:—Railway, pp. 239, 240, 242, 246.

Brienz.—Pop 2300.—HOTEL CROIX BLANCHE—L'OURS—both good.

Brienz, in Canton Berne, under the Brienzergrat range, on the Lake of Brienz, and the Hasli valley, above Interlaken. The Lake, 8 m. long, is surrounded by mountains, and by the Giessbach and other cascades.

The Falls of the Giessbach are, by steamer, 15 min. from Brienz, and 45 min. from Interlaken; communication during the season every two hours. The Cascade, justly considered to be one of the finest in Switzerland, derives its source from the elevated Lakes of Hagel and Hexen, and during its rapid descent to the Lake of Brienz, it numbers no less than 14 falls, dashing over huge rocks, and struggling amidst dark forests of pine and beautiful green pasturage.

An excellent walk conducts from the landing place to the Kienholz, hotel and pension. Beyond are the majestic Bernese Alps, a fine panorama of which is seen from the Rothhorn (7915 ft.)

It will repay the traveller to pass the night at the Giessbach Hotel, to witness the beautiful ef-feet of an illuminated waterfall, dashing headlong into the lake.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 240, 241.

Brenig Pass.—See Meyrinzen.

Brunnen.—HOTEL WALDSTATTERHOF. First class hotel, commanding a splendid view. Large and small apartments. F. Fassbind, proprietor. Recommended. English Divine Service in hotel

A little port in Canton Schwytz, on Lake of Lucerne, at the Muotta's mouth, 4 m. from Schwytz, which is seen above it. Here the three Forest Cantons, Uri, Schwytz, and Unterwalden, began the Confederacy, 1315. Tell's Chapel is near. The mountains are 7,000 to 8,000 ft. high.

Brunnen and its environs form one of the most picturesque and most charming spots in Switzerland, and travellers will always feel gratified.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 289.

Champéry, in Canton Valais, in the Val d'Illier, near Bex, with excellent pensions, much frequented in summer. Charming excursions to Dent du Midi, Sixt, Chamouni, &c. Large grottoes.

ENGLISH CHURCH service, in the Hotel du Dent du Midi, 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Sundays, in summer.

Trois Torrents, on the road to this place, is a pleasant village, having a large new Hotel and Pension.

Chamouni, Chamouny, or Chamounix (the x not sounded).—Pop. 2,300.

HOTEL PENSION DES ALPES.—Good house, well managed.

In French Savoy, in the valley of the Arve, under Mont Blanc, 3,430 ft. above sea, 22 m. from Martigny stat., and 50 m. from Geneva. This may be reached from England in 24 hrs. of railway travelling, for £6. Thence by diligence, in the season, 20 to 25 fr. From Martigny by mule or chaise à porteur. Chamouni is almost a new place since the fire of 1855; and has a museum, baths, and a spire church, where a priory was founded in the 11th century. Several days may be well devoted to explore this celebrated region. Mont Blanc, its great attraction, is 15,780 ft. above sea. The ascent, now an annual thing, was first made by Dr. Paccard, 1786. One resting-place, Grands Mulets, is 10,640 ft. high. In 1870, eight persons lost their lives. A French lady ascended 1872. The Montanvert, which can be ascended on mules, and commands a view of the Mer de Glace, ought to be the first excursion. It is an elevated pasture on the summit of a mountain under the Aiguilles de Charmos, and 2,565 ft. above the valley. From this are seen to advantage the heights of the Brevent and of the Aiguilles Rouges. At the summit, beds and refreshments may be had. The Glacier de Bossons, which may be seen the same day, at the other end of the valley, is remarkable for the purity of the ice, and for the picturesque formation of its ice needles and obelisks. The Brevent, on the opposite side of the valley, 8,000 feet above sea, affords the magnificent view of the whole range of Mont Blanc, with its numerous snow peaks and 9 glaciers. The Flégère, on the same side, commands the same view at a less elevation, and may be accomplished in half a day. An active mountaineer would be well repaid by a day's excursion across the Mer de Glace to the Jardin, 9,100 feet above the sea—a small portion of green earth, covered with flowers in full bloom, in a region of snow and ice, commanding a view of the recesses of this wonderful range. From Chamouni to Martigny, by the passes of the Tête Noire or the Col de Balme, about nine hours would be required; these roads are practicable for mules. To the Jardin is a fatiguing and severe excursion for ladies. They are sometimes deceived by guides, who take them to another spot. The Tête Noire is one of the most picturesque passes in Switzerland, the rocks frequently overhanging. Excursions to Col du Géant (11,080 ft.) and Col de Forclaz or Trient (4980 ft.)

ENGLISH SERVICE held in the ENGLISH church at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.; Chaplain supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Baths of St. Gervais, in a beautiful valley about six miles from Servoz on the road to Geneva; where excellent accommodation may be had en pension for about 5 francs. Delightful walks for the convalescent. To the north is the Aiguille de Varens (7200 feet above sea); to the east the pavilion Belle Vue, commanding the most magnificent view of the valley of Chamouni; to the west Mount Joli (8200 feet); and to the south the Col du Bonhomme.

Board, lodging and baths, &c., included, 12 frs. per day. The diligence of the French Messageries starting from Geneva at 7.30 a.m., put you down at the Baths in about 5½ hours.

Chateau d'Oex (Germ. Oesch). Pop. 600. HOTELS: BERTHOD; OURS; several Pensions.

A pastoral spot, 3,260 feet above sea, in Canton Vaud in the Upper Saane (Saanenthal), on the diligence road between Gessenay and Aigle. Church Service at the Swiss Church; supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Excursions to Col de Pillon, M. Moléson, &c.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 246.

Chaumont.—

HOTEL ET PENSION DE CHAUMONT.—Beautiful situation; magnificent views. Church service in the season. See NEUCHATEL.

Chaux-de-Fonds.—Stat.—Pop. 19,930.—

HOTELS:—FLEUR DE LYS; STRUVER; GUILLAUME TELL; LION D'OR.

A thriving town for watch and clock making. (Canton Neuchâtel) 9 m. from Neuchâtel, in a gorge of the Juras, 3070 ft. above sea, near the Doubs and the French border. About 120,000 watches a year are made here by the usual division of labour, as at Clerkenwell. The trade was begun 1679. Watch chains are made at Chaux de Miller, 9 m. distant. Lace is made by the women. Here are an oval church, theatres, a club, casino, gas works, &c. About 4 m. west of it, with houses nearly all the way, is Locle (a Stat; pop. 10 580; Hotel, Grand Frederic another prosperous seat of the watch and lace trade, on the river Bied, close to the French border. The river runs through a tunnel and over a fall of 100 ft. Excursion (3 m.) to the Saut de Doubs (there and back, 6 fr. for 4). a fine fall of the river, in a picturesque spot.

CONVEYANCES—Railways, see pages 239, 249.

Chexbres—Station for Vevey, to which there is an Omnibus (3 m., 1 fr.), with a fine view, on the road, of the Lake of Geneva. There is another from the HOTEL DU SIGNAL, ¼ a-mile from the station; where Church Service is supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Clarens (Vaud).—Only three miles from Vevey, on borders of the Lake of Geneva (p. 246).

HOTEL ROY (Ancient Villa Mirabeau) beautifully situated. Recomn ended.

HOTEL AND PENSION CLOS DU LAC.

Coire—(Chur. German).—Stat.—Pop. 7,400

HOTEL CAPRIORNE—A very good house for families or single travellers. Prices moderate.

HOTEL LUKMANIER, near the Post-office and the Rail. Stat. Well recommended. CROIX BLANCHE; RED LION; SONNE. CAFE.—D'Este; Poste.

Coire, capital of the Grisons (i. e. Grey Coats), the Roman Curia Rhaterum, called Quera in the modern Romansch. It stands 2000 ft. above sea, near the Rothhorn (9,440 ft. high), occupying a a picturesque site on the Plessur, about 2 m. from its confluence with the Rhine, and on the great road to Italy by the Spliigen and Bernardino passes, which tend to this centre, along with the Lukmanier, Julier, and Albula passes. Population mostly Protestant, who have churches and a high school here. The R. C. Church, outside the city gates, is remarkable from its antiquity, part dating from the seventh century, and is also interesting from its quaint architecture, and the valuable treasures it contains; such as a Roman mosaic, fine sculpture in wood, metal reliquaries (8th century), vestments as old as Justinian, &c. The Romansch, a dialect of the Latin, is still spoken in this vicinity, and a Romansch newspaper is published here. Notice too the MSS. of its library, its collections of natural history, (Professor Theobald, &c). The views from the Galanda, as well as of the mountains on the valley of the Rhine. Excursions to the cascade, the baths of Lurli, the fountain of Aroschka, and the valley of the Albula. See Bradshaw's "Handbook to Switzerland."

CONVEYANCES.—Diligences daily to Chiavenna over the Spliigen, and from Spliigen over the Bernardin to Bellinzona; and to Samaden in the Engadine over the Julier Pass. Railway, pp. 192, 198, 240, 243-4. To Como in 36 hours.

HOTEL DE L'ISLE. (Insel Hotel.) First-class hotel in the Dominican convent, on the Isle Macaire.

HOTEL DU BROCHET (Hecht Hotel.)—First-class establishment; deservedly recommended.

Constance, a town of the Grand Duchy of Baden since 1805, and should be Swiss, from its natural position. It is pleasantly situated at the point where the Rhine issues from the Lake of Constance to enter the Lake of Zell. In the council-hall (Concilliums Saal) by the Steam Pier, was pronounced the sentence against John Huss, who as well as Jerome of Prague, was burnt alive by a decree of the famous council of Constance, which assembled here 1414-8. The serge mantle worn by Huss, as he went to the pile, is still seen. Notice the Church of St. Maurice; the Dominican convent where Huss was imprisoned, in which is seen the epitaph of Chrystolora (now the Hotel de l'Isle), the former college of the Jesuits; the episcopal palace; the arsenal; and the chancery house, containing some rare and valuable manuscripts.

CONVEYANCES—Railway, see pp. 133, 136, 245.

HOTEL DES MERCIERS. CAFE Muller.

Fribourg, Freiburg, or Freyburg, the capital of Canton Fribourg, 17 miles S. W. of Bern, on the Sarine, 2080 feet above the sea. It consists of an Upper or French town, and a Lower or German town; partly built upon the bank of the Sarine, and partly upon the declivity of a rock, in a striking, picturesque position. The principal buildings are the Cathedral of St. Nicholas, containing a rich-toned organ; it also possesses the finest bells in Switzerland, and has a magnificent steeple. Over the principal entrance is a beautifully executed piece of carving, representing the Day of Judgment. The Hotel de Ville, built on the site of the castle of the Duke of Zähringen; the College des Jésuites, (now the Cantonal School); the Hôpital; the Maison de Travail et de Bienfaisance. The wire Suspension Bridge thrown across the Sarine is remarkable for its length and height above the river; it stretches across a gorge 167 feet deep, and has a span of 970 feet. The Place des Tilleuls, or Limes, so called from a lime or linden planted here in 1476, the day on which Charles the Bold was defeated at Morat. The valley of Gotteron, a suburb of the city, contains another Suspension Bridge, 767 feet long. There is an old wooden bridge; besides a long viaduct for the rail. The village of Guggisberg and the baths of Gurnige may be visited from Freiburg; as may also the Hermitage de la Madeleine, on the banks of the Sarine—being a very curious excavation 400 feet in height. MORAT, or Murten, on Lake Morat, is 11 miles distant, and 6 miles from AVENCHES, the Roman Aventicum, formerly the capital of Helvetia.

The celebrated organ is to be heard every day, at eight o'clock in the evening, Saturdays excepted.

Geneva is a small canton at the S.W. corner of Switzerland, almost entirely separated from the other cantons by the territories of France, and of Savoy, now annexed to France. Its capital Geneva, 1335 feet above sea, is on the slopes of two hills, divided by the Rhone, where it issues from the lake, forming in its course two islands, on one of which stands part of the town; and the other contains a fine promenade planted with trees and ornamented with a statue of Jean Jacques Rousseau. The two banks of the river and the island are now connected by a suspension Bridge, and a handsome quay, studded with fine buildings, lines the river. Those latterly erected at Geneva are, however, too stiff and uniform to harmonize well with the scenery. The city has lately laid out a Jardin Anglais close to the Lake, with beautiful walks and fountains, immediately in front of the Hotel de la Metropole. The streets are in general wide and commodious. Its climate is hot and relaxing in summer. Principal buildings are the Hotel de Ville, where the Arbitration Court on the Alabama Claims sat, 1872; with an Arsenal and Armoury opposite. The venerable Cathedral Church of St. Peter, where Calvin preached; Church of Madelaine, dating from the 10th century. New Roman Catholic Cathedral of Nôtre Dame; St. Gervais' Protestant Temple, the Russian Church. Palais de Justice, formerly an hospital; Rath Museum; and the Penitentiary. At the Academy, founded by Calvin, now raised to the dignity of a University, is a Reading Room, with 30,000 volumes; also a Museum, and Botanical Gardens adjoining. Jewellery, watches, and musical boxes are made.

The environs of Geneva are delightful, particularly Chenes, Cologny, Carouge (to which place a tramway has been laid down, distance 2 miles, and the fare 10 centimes), Versoix, Ferney, the residence of Voltaire. About 45 miles southeast of Geneva is Mont Blanc, the first view of which, coming from France is obtained at La Faucille, near the Reculets (5630 feet high) or St. Cergues, near M. Dôle—a view never to be forgotten by the traveller. Both Geneva and its immediate vicinity are celebrated as being the retreats of very many illustrious characters.

HOTEL BEAU RIVAGE.—A first-class hotel, admirably situated between Lausanne and Ouchy.

Furnished houses are numerous; but the prices are so extortionate, and out of proportion with the accommodation offered, that it is much better in order to avoid imposition to arrange with the Hotel Keepers, or with the proprietors of respectable pensions

The Capital of the Canton de Vaud, beautifully placed in the centre of the Jorat Hills, and at a short distance from the northern shore of the Lake of Geneva, where there is a small port or landing-place, called Ouchy, about 30 m. from Geneva. It stands 1600 fee above the sea, on three hills, and the intervening valleys. The entrance of the city from the Genevese side is through the line de Grand Chêne; which leads to the Place de St. François, the chief seat of resort in Lausanne. Some of the streets are ill-paved, up and down, and crooked. Indeed it a disgrace, that a rich city like Lausanne hardly possesses one good footpath, the Trottoirs being formed of rough stones like the carriageways. In the Place de la Riponn, where there is a corn-market, stands the Musée Arland, or Picture Gallery, containing a small, but interesting collection of pictures by old and modern masters. Near the corn-market is a pretty Methodist Church; and a short distance behind is the Roman Catholic Church. On the opposite side of this square a flight of steps leads to the Cathedral of Nôtre Dame, founded about the year 1000, and consecrated in 1275 by Pope Gregory X., it is a very fine gothic building, with an imposing interior, fine porch and handsome Byzantine capitals and apsed chapels. It contains some remarkable tombs of Popes, of St Bernard, &c., and from its terrace a very fine view may be had of the City and Lake, and the ranges of the Alps and the Jura. Near the Cathedral is the Museum, contiguous to the Academy and its valuable Library; to which resident strangers have access on producing proper testimonials. The Masonic Temple is in this part of the City. Lausanne is rich in charitable and benevolent institutions; one is the Blind Asylum near the Place de Chaudron, which contains a variety of articles made by the blind, and on sale.

The environs of Lausanne are much frequented. Pully on the road to Vevey has a splendid prospect from the terrace of the very ancient church. On the other side of Lausanne is Prilly, with its celebrated Lime Tree, said to be a 1000 years old. It is more than 14 yards round the trunk, its immense boughs are covered with misletoe. Near the church is the CAFE DE MONT BLANC, so called because of the view it enjoys of that mountain. The old church of St. Sulpice, (Byzantine) merits the notice of the Archæologist. Not far from it on the road to Geneva, is a mansion that was inhabited by Napoleon the First. One of the chief attractions in the environs, is the Signal, two miles distant. It is on the summit of a slight elevation, and commands a panorama of great extent, including nearly the whole of the lake, the Alps of Vaud, Valais, and Savoy, the Jura, and the green pastoral hills of the Jorat, dotted with villages and country houses, &c. The Signal is backed by the forest of Sauve Bellin, through which is a carriage road into the Berne road, a pleasant walk to Lausanne. About half way on the road to Lausanne is the old Cemetery in which the tragedian, John Philip Kemble, is buried. His tomb is in a state of utter neg'ect. There are numerous other points of attraction, such as the Grand Roches. The Hotel Proprietors can be consulted with advantage, also, as to Photographers, Bazaars, Shops, &c., &c. Lausanne being at the junction of several railroads, is conveniently placed for short excursions The Lake is also close at hand, and has numerous steam boats which start from Onchy to Vevey, Geneva, the Valais, and Savoy, &c., &c.

The climate is mild, and Lausanne, is safe from the damp found in less elevated places on the LAKE.

There are places of worship (in addition to the four native churches,) for the Catholics, Germans, Church of England, Wesleyans, Plymouth Brethren, Free Church, Scotch Presbyterian, (Service at Musée Industriel at 11 and 3.30); Pastor A. F. Buscarlet), and the Jews.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE in the morning, at the SWISS CHURCH, near Ouchy, at ½ past 11; in the afternoon at the Church of St. François, Lausanne, at 4 o'clock. Chaplain, Rev. Robert Eden, M.A., Oriel College, Oxon. The Organ at St. François is a fine instrument.

For Railway and Steamers, see pp. 52, 239, 240, 244—247 and 329.

Lauterbrunnen.—Pop. 1760.—HOTEL: THE STEINBOCK; PENSION OF THE STAUBBACH.

In the Oberland of Canton Bern, 10 m. from Interlaken, 757 mètres above sea, in the picturesque gorge of the White Lütchine. The sun does not show till near noon in winter. It is close to the Staubbach, the highest waterfall in Switzerland. Another is the Pletschbach; indeed, no valley is so favoured with waterfalls. Visits should be paid to the Upper Staubbach and Schmadribach. Mürren (with hotel) above Lauterbrunnen, commands a superb view of the Jungfrau. Many fine excursions from this centre.

Lenk, or An der Lenk.—HOTEL:—BAD HAUS, well situated.

A fine pastoral valley, 3560 ft. above sea, 3 hours from Zweisimmen, near the head of the Simmenthal, and the Wildstrübel (10,720 feet high) and other glaciers. There is an old Church, which the women by custom enter before the men. Chamois hunting. It is 1½ hour to Simmen Falls, 2 hours to the Sept Fontaines of the Rawil, 6 hours to the Gsteig over the Trüllisberg, and 8 hours over the Rawyl Pass to Sion in the Valais.

Les Avents.—See Montreux.

Leukerbad (Loèche-les-Bains), or Baths of Leuk.—Pop. 500.—HOTELS:—ALPES, BELLE-VUE, MAISON BLANCHE, FRANCE, and RHUBNER, at the Baths. HOTEL ET PENSION DE L'UNION.

In Canton Valais, in the ravine of the Dala under the Gemmi Pass, 5,000 feet above sea; 9 miles north of the village of Leuk or Loeche, (Hotel Couronne; pop. 1125) which stands on the Simplon road, close to the Rhône, 4 miles from Sierre Station. The warm baths of Leukerbad are frequented chiefly by the natives, and are held in great repute. There are 23 hot springs, up to a temperature of 144°, in which the patients, dressed for the occasion, sit for several hours, men and women together, with little tables before them for holding work, chess, etc. The Echelles or ladders up the face of a precipiece, are also very remarkable. The Pass of the Gemmi is in many respects the most wonderful in Switzerland, the road winding down a precipitous rock, and often projecting over the path immediately below. Its height is 7,555 feet.

A new Carriage Road, constructed in 1846, leads from Leuk to the Baths, and is wonderfully romantic. Horses may trott the whole distance. Horse road from the Baths to Sierre Station, 12 mls. From the summit of the vast precipices of the Gemmi, a path practicable for mules and chaises-à-porteur conducts the traveller through a wild and desolate region for several miles northward, and, after descending through a forest, overlooking the wild valley called the Gasteren Thal, the hamlet of Kandersteg is reached. At Kandersteg, Hotel Victoria, supplies respectable accommodation, the charges reasonable, but the hotel Ours is one mile nearer the foot of the pass. From Kandersteg the journey is continued through the beautiful valley and village of FRUTIGEN, with a good inn, the latter being about half-way to the Lake of Thun.

SUSTEN, just underneath the town of Leuk, has a clean, quiet, and comfortable Hotel, called the Hotel de la Souste about 100 yards away, which is the only one of the kind along the Rhone Valley from Sion to Simplon; the rest of the way from Simplon to Domo d'Ossola being destitute of a decent Hotel.

Locarno.—Stat.—Pop. 2840.—HOTELS:—HOTEL DE LA COURONNE, recommended.

GRAND HOTEL LOCARNO.—First-rate hotel; comfortable and good; moderate charges

A pretty little Italian town in Canton Ticino, the Italian "Switzerland," beautifully situated near the north end of Lago Maggiore, 8 miles from Bellinzona. The silk trade was carried by some expelled Protestants from here to Zurich 1553. It is the starting place of the projected International Railroad over the St. Gothard, see page 240.

Diligence to Bellinzona and St. Gothard, twice a-day, also to Maggia, &c.

Lucerne.—(German, Luzern)—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 14,535.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE.—Proprietor, J. Beutler. This first-class hotel was opened on 15th May.

GRAND HOTEL NATIONAL.—New hotel, one of the finest in Switzerland, fifty balconies overlooking the Lake of the Four Cantons; comfort combined with moderate charges; recommended.

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE, Mr. Reber, proprietor, Admirably conducted, well recommended.

HOTEL BEAU RIVAGE.—A newly-established hotel, fitted up with comfort.

HOTEL DU RIGI, G. Regli, proprietor. A very good hotel, moderate charges

HOTEL ST. GOTHARD, close to the station and landing place.

HOTEL DES BALANCES, near the Post Office, and the old Bridge.

ADLER, HIRSCH, POST, KREUS, BELLE VUE.

PENSIONS.—Christen, a modern house, with good view. The New Schweizerhaus and the Beau Rivage good and conveniently situated. The Felsberg. The Seeburg is in that village, on the lake, a little way from Lucerne. The Sonnenburg is on that hill, an hour's walk from Lucerne; and The Wallis is on the summit of the Gütsch. There are also numerous other Pensions. Terms, from May to October, vary according to room, from 5 to 8 fr., and from October to May they average 5 fr. for the best rooms, wine and lights not included.

THEATRE, at the foot of Kapell Bridge; prices of admission, from 2½ francs to 60 centimes.

HACKNEY CARRIAGES.—By time. ½-hour (¼-stunde), inside the town, in a one-horse carriage, for one or two persons, 80 centimes; for three or four persons, 1 franc 20 centimes. Drives to fixed places as under:—Gütsch, 3 francs; Sonnenberg, 3 francs; Pensions Christen, 1 franc 20 centimes; New Schweizerhaus, 2 francs; Felsberg, 2 francs.

The Capital (chiefly Roman Catholic) of Canton Lucerne, on the fine Lake of Lucerne, 33 miles (by rail) from Zurich, 55 miles from Bâle, 66 miles from Bern, at the centre of Switzerland. It is situated at the western extremity of the lake, on the Reuss, which divides it into two parts, at the foot of Mount Pilate. Its most remarkable objects are the old town Walls and towers; the covered Bridges over the Reuss, decorated with historic and legendary paintings (that near Hotel des Balances has the Dance of Death on it); and the wounded colossal Lion, (from a model by Thorwaldsen,) in memory of the Swiss guards, at Paris, in 1792. It is near the Collegiate Church.

The Kapellbrücke is decorated with 154 paintings, representing scenes from the lives of St. Leodegar, or St. Leger, and St. Maurice (the patron saints of the town), and events recorded in Swiss history. It is about to be removed, and will be replaced by a bridge for Vehicles. The Wasserthurm, close to the bridge, contains the town archives; and was formerly a light-house or "lucerna," giving name to the town. At the Cathedral of St. Leger, are good sculpture, paintings, and stained glass, and a fine organ. Several Churches and Convents. The Arsenal contains arms and trophies connected with Swiss history, including the coat of mail, of Leopold II. of Austria, killed at the battle of Sempach in 1386; ring of Charles le Temeraire of Burgundy, and relics of William Tell. A College or Lyceum Stadthaus. A "Glacier Garden," containing objects found in lake Huts is worth notice.

It is a good starting-place for the Rigi, distant about 10 miles; steam-boat to Vitznau.

The Lake of Lucerne, called in German, Vierwaldstättersee, or "Lake of the Four Forest Cantons," is perhaps the grandest for mountain scenery in all Switzerland; 24 miles long, and 300 to 900 ft. deep; the finest part being the Bay of Uri, at the east end. For the Bernese-Oberland the steamer should be taken to Stanstad, thence through the vale of Sarnen to Lungern, whence over the Brunig to either Meyringen or Brienz; a diligence daily. Or steamer to Flueles, whence by diligence over the Devil's Bridge to Hospenthal, on the road to the St. Gothard, thence to Grimsel-Hospice over the Furka Pass, and by the glacier and source of the Rhône, a day's journey on foot or with mules. Hence Meyringen or Reichenbach is an easy day, past the wonderful fall of the Aar at Handeck.

LOCAL EXCURSIONS.—1. By steamer to Stanstad row boat (half an hour), to the Rotzloch—a defile little known. 2. By steamer to Küssnacht; thence by omnibus to Immensee, on lake Zug; steamer to Arth, and up the Rigi; or by carriage from Arth (2 horses, tariff 20 francs) past Lake Lowerz to Goldau and Brunnen, on lake of Lucerne. 3, By steamer to Stanstad; thence by carriage (tariff 20 francs) to Engelberg, at the base of the snowy Titlis, 10,620 feet above the sea. 4. The ascent of Mount Pilatus now very accessible; carriage to Hergeswyl, thence by a good road, but practicable on foot only towards the top. Near the summit are two hotels; superb panorama, superior except in lake scenery to the Rigi. Drive to Wäggis on the lake, 1 hour.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, during the season in the Swiss Protestant Church, and at the Kaltbad Hotel, on the Rigi; appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—Divine Service on Sundays, in the Maria Hilf Chapel; forenoon and evening, during the season.

AMERICAN CHAPEL.—(Evangelical Alliance), Hotel National. Service at 11 a.m.

BANK AND EXCHANGE OFFICE.—Messrs. Frederic Knörr and Fils.

PHYSICIANS.—Dr. Steiger; Dr. G. Naeger, No. 367, near the Reuss Bridge.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway see p. 52, 74, 239—246.

Lugano.—Stat.—Population, 5,400.—HOTEL: HOTEL ET BELVEDERE DU PARC, kept by M. Beha first-class hotel with 150 sleeping rooms and saloons, all elegantly furnished. The hotel is very conveniently situated for the two seasons. Church Service held every Sunday at 11 and 3.

HOTEL WASHINGTON, near the landing place.

HOTEL BELLE VUE, new.—Kept by Etienne Porzi.

Capital of Canton Ticino, beautifully situated on the north shore of Lake Lugano—the old Lacus Ceresius—a narrow, winding, piece of water, between Lakes Como and Maggiore, 20 miles long. The end towards Porlezza is the most mountainous. A steamer plies regularly twice a day between Lugano and the two extremities of the lake; and there are diligences twice a day to Bellinzona and Como; and once a day to Luino. (2 hours drive) on the Lago Maggiore, where the steamers touch regularly four times a day, in ascending and descending. The views from Monte Salvadore (near the new hotel) and Monte Brè are remarkably grand. Another from Monte Generoso, 5,560 feet above sea, at the New Hotel Monte Generoso, where Church Service is supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

N B.—Italian paper money not current here.

BANK OF ITALIAN SWITZERLAND.—Money changers.

CONVEYANCES—Railway, see page 240.

Martigny. — (German, Martinach.)—Stat.—Pop. 2,600.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL LA TOUR.—Old established Hotel, newly refurnished, kept by Joseph Tairras.

GRAND MAISON (Poste): CLERC; CUISINE good.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, at the Hotel Clerc, twice every Sunday.

A small town in Canton Valais, 24 miles from Villeneuve, on the Simplon road, and a bend of the Rhône, where the Dranse joins, 1,500 ft. above the sea; at the foot of the passes of the Tête Noire and the Col de Balme, leading to Chamounix, and also near the foot of the Great St. Bernard. It is divided into La Ville and Le Bourg, and has the mother Convent which supplies the dozen monks who take their turn of duty at the Pass.

The road from Martigny to the lake of Geneva runs down the valley of the Rhône, past the the singular gorge of the Trient, and the fine waterfall of the Pissevache. The Dent du Midi and the Dent de Morcles are conspicuous objects on each side of the Rhône valley. Up the valley from Martigny to Brieg, under the Simplon Pass, is about 65 miles by rail and road, through Sion, Sierre, etc. Of the three ways to Chamouni, one is by the fine bridle-path of Trient, through the Gorge opposite the New Hotel at Vernayaz. The ascent begins with 52 zigzags; then comes Finshaute, at the Col de Trient or Forclaz, among fir woods, with a view of Tête Noire. At Châtelard, the paths from Tête Noire and Col de Balme join, and a sudden splendid view of Mont Blanc opens.

The Great St. Bernard, the Roman Mons Jovis, 22 miles above Martigny, takes its modern name from Bernard de Menthon, who, in 962, founded or rebuilt a monastery on the Pass, near a Pagan temple, 8,130 ft. above sea, the neighbouring mountains being 3,000 ft. higher. The monastery erected here has existed under 34 superiors for more than 9 centuries. Strangers with their mules or horses, are gratuitously entertained for three days. Tourists ought to leave in the Convent box at least as much money as they would pay at an hotel, as poor travellers are lodged and fed gratuitously summer and winter. The bodies of those who have died on the mountains are to be seen in the Morgue in a state free from decomposition They have a piano, given by the Prince of Wales at his visit. The Pass was one of the high routes for pilgrims to Rome; and was traversed by the armies of the Romans, Charlemagne, Fred. Barbarossa, etc., and in the year 1800 by Napoleon, before the battle of Marengo.

CONVEYANCES—Railway, see page 247.

Meyringen.—Pop. 2,750.—HOTELS:

HOTEL ET PENSION DU SAUVAGE, opposite the cascades of Reichenbach and Alpbach; moderate charges and excellent accommodation.

HOTEL AND PENSION REICHENBACH.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE, with early and mid-day celebration of Holy Communion every Sunday during the season, at the beautiful little Gothic Church, opened 1868, in the gardens adjoining the Hotel du Sauvage, the proprietor of which gave the land, besides a contribution in money. The Chaplaincy, the oldest in Switzerland, is entirely maintained by offerings of visitors; and the Chaplain, Rev. T. W. Bull, M.A., is licensed by the Bishop of London. The Queen gave £50 towards the building.

Meyringen, amidst splendid scenery, exceeds most other places as head-quarters from which to make excursions into the Oberland. It stands on the river Aar, among wooded slopes, and foaming waterfalls, overtopped by glaciers and fields of ice and snow; and is the chief place of the Hasli valley, in a spot, remarkable for the purity and freshness of the air. A carriage road leads from it to Brienz (8 miles) along the beautiful vale of Meyringen, where there is communication with Interlaken by steamer; and a fine diligence road leads over the Brunig to Lucerne. Here also the passes of Joch, Susten, Grimsel, and Scheidegk or Scheideck meet. The picturesque houses of the village present a scene which few other Swiss places can rival. An old Castle of the Counts von Hasli remains. Near it is the double fall of the "dreaded Alpbach," pouring down upon an enormous bank of moraine, heaped higher than the neighbouring Church spire. In early morning it frequently displays a perfectly circular rainbow. On the opposite side of the valley descend the magnificent Falls of the Reichenbach; the upper of which is 600 ft. in height. The thunder of its waters can be heard at all times. Meyringen possesses a resident President and Council, but no public buildings of importance. The plain Church, beneath the Hasliberg, has on the wall a line drawn 17 ft. from the floor, with an inscription stating that in the great inundation of the Alpbach torrent on July 9, 1762, the Church was filled with moraine and mud to that height. Adjoining it is a smaller building dated 1486. The watch tower of the former Counts contains 3 bells of the fourteenth century. It is a chief centre of the wood carving trade; carvings may be bought here on very reasonable terms; the best at J. Baud's, opposite Hotel du Sauvage. The most noted Schwingfest or wrestling match between the different Cantons is held at Meyringen annually, on the first Monday in August. Beautiful walks as well as peaks for climbers abound. GUIDES.—Melchior and Jacob Anderegg, Melchior and Jacob Blatter, John von Bergen, John Tänneler, Caspar Moor, &c.

EXCURSIONS.—(A) To Grindelwald, over the Scheideck, in 7 to 8 hours, passing the Glacier of Rosenlaui. A good Inn at Rosenlaui, convenient for the ascent of the Faulhorn. (B) Ascent of the Hohenstollen, in 4 to 5 hours; by a good horse path to within an hour of the summit. The panorama is thought to surpass that from the Faulhorn. (C) By the Joch pass to Engelberg, in 10 hours; halting at the Engstlen Thal, at a comfortable little hotel, in the centre of magnificent scenery. This is the best starting place for ascending Mount Titlis. Trustworthy Guides may be obtained at the Hotel at a less cost than from Engelberg, and the expense of porters carrying up provisions, &c., is saved. (D) By the Susten Pass to Wasen, and thence to the St. Gotthard, passing the Stein Glacier. Good, homely Hotel at Stein. (E) To the Hospice of the Grimsel, in about 5 hours, by the splendid Falls of the Aar at Handeck; where is a hut for refreshments. Inn at the Grimsel clean and comfortable. The source of the Rhône and the Furca Pass, are 2 hours farther. (F) The Lake of Lucerne may be reached in one day from Meyringen, over the Pass of the Brunig to Lungern, and thence along the lovely pastoral vale of Sarren, past its lakes to Stanstad or Beckenried, on the Lake of Lucerne. A rail is projected connecting Meyringen with Lucerne by this route.

Conveyances.—Diligence over the Brunig to Lucerne; Omnibuses to Brienz meet the Steamer to Interlaken.

Mont Blanc, see Chamouni.

Montreux.—Stat.—Pop. 2,300.

Langrein's Hotel and Pension Beau Sejour au Lac.—First-class hotel; beautifully situated.

Hotel des Alpes, a new large first-class hotel, well situated close to the lake, between Vevey and Villeneuve. Kept by Mr. A. Chessex.

Pension Vautier. Pension Beau Regard.

A village in canton Vaud, in a beautiful spot, near the eastern end of the Lake of Geneva, about half way between Clarens and the Castle of Chillon, completely sheltered from the north and east winds. It is much sought after as a winter residence by invalids; and houses are now rising fast. Hotel du Cygne, and Hotel Suisse, at Vernes Montreux are newly built. Among the Pensions, are de Bellevue, de la Rottaz, Moser, Genton. In fact, the whole bank of this Bout du Lac, from Clarens to Chillon, is covered with flourishing villages, offering a choice of pensions, with delightful views.

Church of England Service—Chaplain, the Rev. John Bennett. Divine service is held at Montreux Church in summer, at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m., at Glion, Hotel Rigi Vaudois, in summer at 7 p.m.; and at the large Hotel at Les Avents Supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Free Church of Scotland.—Divine service every Sunday at 11 and 4, regularly, (except the very hot months), in the Presbyterian Church, opened 1872, between the New College and the Station. Bible reading every Friday at 11 a.m., in Maison Mellet (Misses Harley), Montreux.

Railway to Lausanne, Geneva, Vevey, &c.

Moutiers.—Hotels:—Maison de Commerce. Hotel de la Couronne, good & moderate. A good resting-place in Canton Bern, between Bâle and Bienne, at the mouth of a fine gorge, called Val Moutiers, or Munster Thal; the scenery of which is very magnificent.

Mürren.—Pop. 400.

Hotel and Pension, Mürren,—(with a dependance, formerly Hotel Silberhorn); delightfully situated, commanding a fine view of the Oberland mountains. See Advt.

A village consisting of a few chalets 5,100 ft. above sea level, 2 hours walk from Lauterbrunnen; and now a favourite resort, on account of its pure air, beautiful scenery, and fine panorama of the Oberland.

Excursions.—Up the Schilthorn (9 800 ft.) 3 to 4 hours from the Hotel; an excellent point of view. The Almendhubel, 1 hour; with a view which beats that from Mürren. To the Schmadribach Fall, and Sefinen valley, past the Bidicke, a fine point above Grindelwald.

Neuchâtel, (German, Neuenburg).—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 12,320.—Hotels:

Hotel de Belle Vue.—A new Hotel, admirably situated on the banks of the lake.

Grand Hotel du Lac—Newly re-built and refurnished. Omnibuses to and from every train.

Grand Hotel du Mont Blanc.—Large new first-class hotel, on the borders of the Lake, view of the mountain and the Mont Blanc.

Faucon; Du Vaisseau.

Neuchâtel is a small canton among the ridges of the Jura, between the Lake to which it gives name and the borders of France; and is composed of six or seven valleys, the principal of which are Val de Travers, Val de Sagne, and Val de Ruz. It joined the Confederation only in 1857. Neuchâtel, the capital, on the N. side of the Lake, is a well-built and thriving town on the slope of a hill, at the mouth of the Seyon; containing several remarkable buildings, particularly the Château (the ancient residence of the princes of Neuchatel) —and the newly-restored Cathedral, a Gothic building, erected in 1161, adjoining the Chateau.

The environs are well worth visiting, especially Chaumont on the summit of the Jura, two hours distant, and easily accessible with carriages. Here is to be had the finest general view of the whole chain of the Alps in Switzerland, the prominent feature in the landscape being the Lakes of Neuchatel, Morat, and Bienne, and the snowy masses of the Bernese Oberland. Mont Blanc, 80 miles distant, seems but a few miles off. Excursion to Valangin, and the magnificent gorge of the Seyon; distance 3 to 4 miles.

The Lake of Neuchâtel is surrounded with remains of the ancient lake habitations of the Age of Stone and Bronze. It is 24 miles by 4 miles in extent, and 480 feet deep. Concise, a station on the Rail to Yverdun is the most important locality: St. Aubin is also interesting.

English Church, Service twice every Sunday, in the season, at the Oratoire des Berolle; supplied by the Col. and Cont. Church Society.

Manufacturers of Watches and Jewellery.—JEANJAQUET and CO., on ground floor of the Grand Hotel du Lac, a first-class reliable house. Good Watches can be purchased here at a lower price than at Geneva, being manufactured at a less expense.

BANKERS.—Messrs. Pury & Co.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Bienne, Yverdon, Lausanne, Morges, and Geneva: NEUCHATEL and PONTARLIER, pp. 239–246. Change carriages at Pontarlier, and if travelling to Dijon from Neuchatel, change carriages again at Dôle, (see pp. 52 & 248.)

Ouchy.—HOTEL.—BEAU RIVAGE; see Advt. under Lausanne. HOTEL DU PORT, moderate.

HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE, (formerly de l'Ancre.)

The port to Lausanne, (Canton Vaud,) below that town, on the Lake of Geneva. At the Hotel de l'Ancre (now d'Angleterre), Byron wrote his 'Prisoner of Chillon," in June 1816, when detained by rainy weather. Steamers land passengers here for Lausanne. Omnibuses to and from Lausanne, in connection fare ½ fr.

Pfaffers-bad, or Baths of Pfäffers. HOTEL and BATH-HOUSE.

In the narrow deep gorge of the Tamina, 3 miles from Ragatz station, (Canton St. Gall,) 2240 feet above sea. The hot sulphur springs (temp. 98°) are reached by steps in the rocks, through the gorge, which is just wide enough for the Bath-house. Pipes bring the water from the old Bath-house at the source, higher up. Old Pfäffers Dorf Abbey is now an asylum. The Kalfeuser Thal behind Pfäffer's Baths is one of the finest in the Alps. Winding path; requiring caution, as fatal accidents have recently occurred here. Voitures, 5 frs.

A few hours further lie Coire, Reichenau, and the Via Mala, one of the most traversed of all the Alpine passes, by a superb road, totally free from danger, but carried through a surprising mountain fissure above the Rhine.

Pontresina.—Pop. 300.—HOTELS & PENSIONS CROIX BLANCHE; HOTEL DU GLACIER; COURONNE; HOTEL ROSEG.

A village in Canton Grisons, 5600 feet above sea in a valley out of the Upper Engadine, under the Bernina Pass. It is a growing rival, (with Silva-plane). to St. Moritz; and many English visitors come here. Fine excursions up mountains 10,000 to 13,000 feet high. Path to the Stelvio. The Bernina Pass, 7,800 feet, leads by two lakes to Poschiavo, and the Adda, over the Italian frontier

Colani, the Chamois King, inhabited this place, where his son unites the professions of Chamois hunter, Guide, and Naturalist.

Rosegg Glacier at hand, a superb trip; also Glacier of Mortiratsch, and view from Piz Languard, 10,715 feet; ascent 4 hours.

Prese, Le, on Lago di Poschiavo.—Hotel and Baths.

A watering place, with an Italian climate, in the Grisons, 3,215 feet above sea, between the Valtellina and the Engadine, 3 hours from the Lombardy frontier, 5 hours from Bernina Pass, on the road to Sondrio. Church Service at the Hotel, supplied by the Col. and Con. Church Society

Ragatz.—Stat.—Pop. 1600.—Hotels:—

Hotel Hof Ragatz; where Church Service is supplied in the season, by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Hotel et Pension Tamina.—Baths establishment attached to it. Good situation; excellent accommodation, and moderate charges.

In Canton St. Gall, on the Splugen road, and the Rhine, where the Tamina joins it from the romantic gorge of Pfäffers. Baths here supplied by pipes from the hot springs at Pfäffers.

Railway to Coire, Zurich, Lake of Constance. St. Gall, &c., see pages 243, 244.

Reichenau, Hotel Aigle, comfortable.

A village in Canton Grisons, on the Splugen road, 6 miles from Coire, where the two heads of the Rhine join,—the Hinter Rhein (blue), from the Bernardin, the Vorder Rhein, (white) from the St. Gothard. Opposite the Hotel is the old Château, in which Louis Philippe acted as usher in a school, after the French revolution, 1793-4. Excursions to the Via Mala, the Splugen, the Julier Pass, &c.

Rhône Glacier.—Hotel du Glacier du Rhône. Church service is held in the season; supplied by the Col. and Con. Church Society.

A glacier 10 miles long, at the source of the Rhône, 5,740 feet above sea, under the Galenstock (11,955 feet), half way (6 hours) between Brieg and Hospenthal. It is near the Furca Pass, (7990 ft.), Grimsel Pass (4 hours), St. Gothard (6 hours), and other Passes in the heart of Switzerland.

Riffelberg, in Canton Valais.

Here on a plateau 7910 feet above sea, 2900 feet above Zermatt (5 miles distant), is an Hotel, built 1854, surrounded by the Matterhorn, Monte Rosa, the Gorner, and Findelen Glacier, &c., near the finest mountain view in the Alps, and in the midst of the best botanical district in Switzerland. Church Service at the hotel, supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Rigi, or Righi.—Stat.—Hotels:—

Hotel Rigi Kulm, the most ancient and universally known Hotel, established at the summit of Rigi-Kulm. First class and moderate.—See Advt.

Rigi Culm, Hotel Schreiber, beautiful establishment, built by the proprietors of the hotel and pension Rigi Staffel, open from the 1st June, 1875.

Rigi Staffel Hotel and Pension, situated between Kulmann and Rothstock, kept by Messrs. Schreiber, brothers, proprietors. See Advt.

Hotel and Pension, Rigi.—First Magnificent establishment, situated at the Station of Scheideck, near Kaltbad.—See Advt.

Hotel and Pension, Rigi Scheideck.—At the extremity of the line of Scheideck, splendid situation.—See Advt.

Kaltbad Hotel good. Many other Hotels and Pensions in beautiful situations.

The Rigi, or Righi Culm, the old Mons Regius, in Canton Schwyz, is a well-known mountain range between the lakes of Lucerne and Zug, with a pilgrim's chapel, and inns and milk cures on the top and sides. The View from the summit (5905 feet above sea) is unrivalled for extent and grandeur. The horizon has a circumference of 300 miles, and includes in the prospect 13 lakes, the whole range of the mountains of the Black Forest of Germany, and the range of the Jura from Geneva to Basle. The most favourable ascent (3 hours) is from Arth; the best descent (2 hours) is upon Weggis. The ascent is easily accomplished; chairs are ready for invalids, horses are also to be had. Sun-set is generally far more beautiful than sun-rise, and is best seen from the Rothstock; sun-rise from the Kulm.

The new Rigi Railway, opened 1871, from Vitznau on the Lake of Lucerne, up to Staffelhöhe, 5000 feet high, near the top of Kulm, runs on an incline (supported by iron pillars), five miles long, watched by a man to each mile. It is a single line of three rails, the middle one fitted for cog-wheels. Only one carriage for 24 people is provided. It passes through an inclined tunnel 225 feet long, and over a girder bridge, across the Schnurtobel gorge. A junction line has been opened, starting from Kaltbad, and running a distance of 6.75 kilom. along the ridge of the mountain as far as Scheideck, 1,600 metres above the level of the sea. Along the whole line travellers are astonished by the magnificence of the panorama. Another line is now opened from Arth. (p. 488), see pages 239, 240, and advt. 805.

Rosenlaui Baths, and Hotel, near Meyringen, and the Reichenbach Falls, in Canton Bern, 4800 feet above sea. The blue of its Glaciers is proverbial.

Rossinières. — Grand Chalet and other Pensions. Church Service, at the Grand Chalet (a large farm, with 115 windows) supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

About 2 miles from Château d'Oex, in Canton Vaud, near a fine gorge, and the beautiful Dent de Jaman Pass. Excursions to Le Cray (6,705 feet high), and Le Pras (7,400 feet).

Saas-im-Grund.—Hotels:—Monte Moro; Monte Rosa.

A village in the valley of the Saaser Visp, in Canton Valais, 6 hours from Visp; a centre for excursions to the Fée Glaciers and by way of the Mattmark Lake, over the Moro Pass (9000 feet high), to Macugnaga in Val Anzasca, with Monte Rosa behind, 15,200 ft. high.

Samaden.—Pop. 525. HOTELS: BERNINA; ENGADINER HOF.

Chief place in the Upper Engadine, 5,610 feet above sea, 3 miles from St Moritz, near the Muottas, or Mittelberg, the Piz Padella (9,460 ft.), and Piz Ot (10,660 feet). At St. Peter's old church are graves of the Planta, Salis, and other resident families of ancient standing.

Church Service at Emmanuel Church, supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Sarnen.—Pop. 3300.—HOTELS:—SCHLUSSEL; ADLER; and AIGLE D'OR

Capital of Canton Unterwalden, and of its Ob-Wald, or Upper Section, 4½ hours from Lucerne, where the Aa falls into Lake Sarnen (3 m. long), under the old Castle or arsenal, on the Landenberg. Here are chambers, hospital, college theatre, and a town house, with portraits of Landsaemmans. The Canton is a district of pastoral hills and valleys of attractive character. Excursions to Brünig Pass (4½ hrs.) and Briens, past Lake Lungern; to Stans (10 m.), the capital of the Lower Section; to Engelberg and the Titlis; to Giswyl and the Entlibach, in Emme-thal, between M. Pilate and M. Napf.

Sarraz (La).—Stat.—A village in Canton de Vaud, at a short distance from Lausanne, having one of the oldest castles in Switzerland, the seat of the ancient family of Glugins, who have been there for 1000 years. Visitors are permitted to inspect the chateau, its chapel, and grounds. Two good hotels in the village. At Chevilley, near it, is the tomb of Gleyre, the historical painter. For La Sarraz take the rail to Cossonay, and there change carriages.

Schaffhausen.—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 10,305—(N.B.—At the Fall, near Neuhausen Station, not at the town.)—HOTEL DE LA COURONNE, (near the Town), beautiful situation, J. Hirt, proprietor, recommended to English and American travellers. BELLE VUE, close to Rail; SCHWEITZERHOF.

Capital of the Canton, on the N. bank of the Rhine, near the Baden frontier, near the meeting of 5 rails, 60 m. from Bâle, 32 m. from Constance, 3 m. above the celebrated Falls. At the old picturesque walled town, are many gabled houses, a citadel, college, and a library and museum, containing the books of J. Müller, the historian, who was born here. An inscription on the bell of All Saints gave rise to Schiller's "Lied von der Glocke." Here the descending river barges stopped—hence the name, "boat-houses." Its chief attraction, the Falls of Schaffhausen, are below the town; and visitors coming by rail from Basle should stop at Neuhausen, close to the Falls, and within a few hundred yards of Hotel Belle Vue and the Schweitzer Hof. Travellers from Zurich will find omnibuses from these hotels at the station.

The Fall is 300 feet wide, with a descent of 50 to 80 feet. The points of view have been so admirably cut out of the rocks beneath that the spectator is able to stand quite under the fall and within reach of the cloud of spray, without getting wet. The rock in the middle of the fall is reached easily in a small boat at a trifling cost, and in no way attended with danger. Salmon abound.

ENGLISH SERVICE in the "Schweitzer Hof" every Sunday, at 11 and 3.30.

CONVEYANCES.—Railways, see pp. 132, 136, 211, 245. Steamers on the Rhine, see page 328.

Schwytz.—Pop. 5750. — HOTELS.—ROMSIL and PENSION JUTZ.

Capital of the Canton, in Muottathal, under the double-headed Mythen, or Mitre mountain (6245 feet above sea). 8 miles from Brunnen, on Lake of Lucerne. It gave name to the country (Switzerland, the Land of the Switzers, or Schweits in German), having been the largest of the three cantons which first rose against Austria. Here are St Martin's Church, with its tomb of Aloys Reding, the patriot; Council House and paintings; arsenal and trophies; and college.

Seelisburg.—Charming little place, only two hours (by steamer) from Lucerne. HOTELS. SONNENBURG, good. HOTEL TROTMANN.

Sepey, good cheap PENSIONS; Rustic INN.

A quaint, picturesque old Swiss village, in Canton Vaud, 3500 feet above sea, in the Ormont Valley 8 miles from Aigle.

ENGLISH DIVINE SERVICE in the Hotel de Mont d'Or, every Sunday during the season; supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society. Also in Hotel de la Couronne, at Comballaz.

Sheideck.—Another charming spot, 6118 ft. above the sea. HOTELS: BELLE VUE; KLEINE SHEIDECK, good.

Sion (German Sitten.)—Stat.—Pop. 4200.—HOTEL:—POSTE.

The ancient Sidunum, capital of Canton Valais, on the Rhône, 17 m. from Martigny, up the Simplon road. This old, decayed walled town has remains of three castles perched on the heights, once the residence of bishops, who lived in feudal splendour. There is a curious ancient as well as modern Cathedral, a "Maison de Force," containing the condemned cells, and a place of execution called Rue du Château. Opposite Sion is the fine valley of Herens, up to Evolena, 5½ leagues, 4,520 feet above sea (Church service in the season); a good centre for excursions among high Glacier Passes; one leading to Zermatt (13 hrs.), under the Matterhorn; another to Aosta. The rail ends at Sierre, 10 m. above Sion, with a good hotel at the opening of another fine valley, Val l'Anniviers, or Einfisch, leading up to Zermatt, etc., past or near to St. Luc and Zinal, both good centres, with PENSIONS. Guides at Sierre for the Leukerbad and the Gemmi Pass.

For Railway to Sierre, &c., see page 247.

Sixt.—In French Savoy. (See French section.)

Soleure, or Solothurn (in German)—Stat.—Pop. 5920.—H., COURONNE, good; TOUR ROUGE

Capital of the Canton, an ancient place on the Aar, under the Jura hills; and has two bridges, a council house, arsenal, theatre, a cathedral and an interesting museum of Roman antiquities and Jura fossils. Koskiusko died here, 1817. Grand view from the Weissenstein, 4210 feet above sea, 8 m. distant; with a cheap Pension and milk cure on the top, taking in a panorama of the whole Alpine chain. Railway, see page 242.

Splugen.—Pop. 500. HOTEL BODENHAUS.

A village in Canton Grisons, near the source of the Rhine, 4700 feet above the sea; where the roads from Bellinzona, by the Bernardine Pass, and from Milan and Chiavenna, by the Spluigen Pass, unite. The Pass, 4 m. S., in the Rhaetian Alps, 6945 ft. above sea (the mountain being 2400 ft. higher), was opened by a road in 1823, protected by long galleries. Going down to Coire you thread the celebrated Via Mala, one of the most striking chasms in the Alps, where the bridges are carried over depths through which the Rhine thunders without being seen, and the rocks are 1600 feet above the river.

CONVEYANCES.—Diligences to Coire, also to Chiavenna (for Como), whence there are diligences to Colico and Bormio, also over the Bernardin to Bellinzona, see page 244.

Stachelberg—HOTEL and large Baths,

A fine spot (Canton Glarus), in the deep Lint Valley, 12 m. above Glarus, and as many from the Tödi Glacier at the top (11,500 ft. high). Greatly admired for its beauty and retirement.

CHURCH SERVICE, supplied by Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Stelvio Pass, or Wermser Joch, a magnificent road, at the further end of Canton Grisons, on the borders of Tyrol and Italy, near the Ortler Spitz. See Special Edition.

St. Cergues, 7 miles N. of Nyon Station, on Lake of Geneva. HOTEL L'OBSERVATOIRE.

Under Mont Dôle, 300 ft. above sea, 2300 ft. below the top, commanding a splendid view of the Lake, Mont Blanc, and the Bernese Alps.

St. Gall, or St. Gallen.—Stat.—Pop. 16,675.

HOTEL ST. GALL, newly established, first class hotel. G. A. ROSER, manager. HOTEL HECHT.

Capital of the Canton, and a considerable town upon the Steinach, very industrious and commercial, noted for its Swiss curtains and other figured muslins and cotton prints. Its Abbey, founded in the seventh century, contains many curiosities. St. Gall, an Irishman, who journeyed into Helvetia, became its patron. The colleges, libraries, museum, and benevolent societies are worth attention. A number of very agreeable excursions may be made in the vicinity of St. Gall to the Convent of Nothersack, the Bridge of St. Martin, Lake of Constance, &c. This Canton entirely surrounds the Canton of Appenzell.

CONVEYANCES—Railway, see pages 240 and 244.

St. Gervais.—See Chamouni.

St. Gothard, or Gotthard, Pass—6935 feet above sea, on the Alpine road from Lake Lucerne, Altorf, and Andermatt, to Airolo, Lago Maggiore, and Milan; at the junction of three cantons, 10 m. from Andermatt, 8 m. from Airolo, near the sources of the Rhine, Rhone, Reuss, and Ticino. A good, well kept diligence road ascends the Reuss, to Wasen, Goeschenen, and the Devil's Bridge (Teufelsbrücke)—a scene of much fighting, 1799, between the French, Austrians, and Russians—thence by Andermatt, to the hospice for travellers on the top, and so down to Airolo and Bellinzona, on Lago Maggiore. Mean summer temperature 40 above that of the North Cape; but the rest of the year is colder. The ridge through which the road winds is 8700 ft. to 11,000 ft. high. At Andermatt paths may be taken to the Vorder Rhein, and the Furca and Grimsel Passes. The St. Gothard Rail, now in progress, from Zug and Altorf into Italy, will pass this way through a Tunnel 9½ miles long; having its north end at Goeschenen, 109 mètres above sea; its south end at Airolo, 1145 mètres above sea, and a slope from the middle for drainage, see pages 240 and 241. Diligences over the Pass three times a day from Fluelen, on Lake Lucerne, to Bellinzona, 15 hours.

St. Maurice.—Stat.—Pop. 1,100. HOTELS: HOTEL DES ALPES; HOTEL DE L'UNION.

Here are a very old Abbey; the Hermitage of Nôtre Dame de Saxe; the Grotto des Fées (or Fairies' Cave); and the camp where Maximian decimated the Theban Legion in A.D. 286.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pp. 242, 245, 247.

St. Moritz.—Pop. 500.—HOTELS:—

BADRUTT'S; ENGADINE CULM; PENSION SUISSE; POST; several PENSIONS; but being limited, they are difficult to obtain and expensive. Little reliance can be placed on the mere promises of the proprietors of the Hotels or Pensions. At a Pension they only find breakfast and tea; luncheon and dinner must be taken at an hotel. Bread, butter, milk, and spring water are excellent. As this place stands high, warm clothing is required; though the days are hot, the evenings are cold. Snow sometimes falls in the middle of summer.

Medical men: two resident, and highly spoken of. DILIGENCES to and from Coire, daily. POST OFFICE and telegraph station. Letters (via Belgium), above 3 days from England; 3d. under 15 grammes.

ENGLISH CHURCH, opened 1871; Chaplain, Rev. A. Shettell.

A watering place, in Canton Grisons, on the Inn, in the Upper Engadine near the Julier and other Passes, 40 m. from Coire, 300 feet above a Lake, and 6100 feet above sea, with five snowy peaks in view. It consists of one street, has a small English Church, and a bank; and is becoming of great repute on account of its situation, mineral springs, and the bracing qualities of the air. The Springs are at the Kurhaus, 1½ m. off, in the valley (omnibuses every ½ hour, 40 cents.); they are used for drinking and bathing; are pleasant, and highly tonic, being in fact some of the strongest iron springs in Switzerland. Baths should not be taken without advice. The Kurhaus, containing 90 rooms, was built in 1853. There are delightful Excursions, both for walking and driving; also boating and trout-fishing in the Lake.

ACCESS TO ST. MORITZ by the beautiful Albula and Schyn Passes. Leave Zurich at 10.20 a.m., sending servants and luggage on to Coire. Leave the train at Ragatz at 1 29, and drive over to the old Pfaffers Bath, an extraordinary spot, 2½ m. up the gorge of the Tamina. Return to dine at the Hotel Tamina, at Ragatz, see Adv. Leave by 6 17 train, arriving at Coire at 7.0 p.m. Sleep at Hotel Steinboch (clean, and fairly comfortable). It is as well to write from Zurich to the Steinboch, to engage a good driver and carriage, stating the number of the Party and the luggage; and also to see the drivre the night before, and settle the route to St. Moritz, viz., via Thusis, and the Schyn and Albula Passes. Shou d there be much luggage, keep the night bags separate, and show the driver before packing what will be required on the road. It saves time and trouble. Also, it is necessary to telegraph to order the rooms, &c., at all the inns. Prices are high, and where the charge is not made by head the carte should be examined. Leave at 7 a.m., in a two, three, or four-horse veturino, according to circumstances. A printed tariff is hung in all the hotels. Arriving at Thusis, take a carriage (10 fr. and 2 fr. the driver) to the Via Mala. 3rd bridge (Hotel—good, clean, and fine view.) Return to Thusis, join your own carriage, and take the Schyn Pass to Tiefenkasten, and, if possible, push on to Bergun (clean and fair Inn) to dine and sleep. Next day leave at 9 0 a.m., and proceed over the Albula Pass (7600 ft. above sea) to St. Moritz, arriving about 2.30. On the return, the diligence takes the Julier Pass, about 11 to 12 hours, down to Coire, the distance being nearly the same either way. It is 10 hours by the Maloia Pass to Chiavenna, over the Italian frontier; and about 17 hours down the Engadine to Finstermunz, in Tyrol. Should Pfäffers Bath not be visited, take the 10.20 train on to Coire, due at 2 0; have the carriage ready; dine at 3.30 (table d'hôte); go on, and sleep at Thusis.—(Hon. A P.)

Tarasp.—Hotel and Bath; large new establishment for 300 guests; band and concerts.

A village in Canton Grisons, on the Nairs, in the Lower Engadin, 4270 feet above sea, 11 hours from St. Moritz; with saline and chalybeate waters in high repute. Capuchin convent here. Centre for excursions in the neighbouring mountains and glaciers; the Lischauna Gletcher being one of the finest of the higher glaciers in Switzerland.

English Church Service in the chapel of the Kurhaus, on Sundays at 11 and 3.30—Holy Communion after morning service.

Conveyances.—Diligence, Morning and noon daily, to Samaden and St. Moritz, in the Upper Engadine and Italy, and by Fluela Pass to Landquart and Zurich. Afternoon, to Austrian Tyrol, and the Stelvio route.

Thonon, in French Savoy. See French Section

Thun.—Stat.—Pop. 5000.—Hotels:—

Hotel Belle Vue.

Hotel and Pension Baumgarten.

Falken, Crown, Croix Blanche, Freyenhof. Pensions: Itten, 5 fr.; Rupenacht, 6 fr. Boats, two men, 1 hour, 3 fr.; 2 hours, 5 fr.; the day, 10 fr.

Railway Station outside the town, in the opposite direction to the Steamboat station on the lake. Omnibuses and fiacres at the station.

A picturesque place, in the Canton Bern, chief town of the Oberland, on the Aar, at the bottom of Lake of Thun, 18 m. from Interlaken, 18 m. from Bern. It contains the Military School of the Confederation, a mediæval castle; and a good Swiss Bazaar. Fine view from the picturesque church yard celebrated by Byron. The Lake, 10 m. by 2 m., is 1900 feet above sea, and has good cliffs and pretty villas, with the Niesen and Stockhorn, 7765 ft. and 7195 ft. high, on the south side, at the mouth of the Simmenthal; both fine points for a panoramic view

English Service, in the English church (Hotel Belle Vue) at 10.30 a.m. and 3.30 p.m.; supplied by Colonial & Continental Church Society.

Resident Physician.—Dr. Fredrich R.s; recommended. The doctor speaks English

Conveyances.—See pages 240, 241, 245; for Steamboats, see page 329. Passengers for the boat to Interlaken take it at Scherzlingen, the station beyond Thun.

Thusis or Tosana.—Pop. 870.—Hotels:

Hotel et Pension Viamala.

Hotel et Pension Rathia.

A village in Canton Grisons, 16 miles from Coire, on the Splugen road and the Hinter Rhein, in the valley of Domlesegh, at the foot of Mont Heizenberg. Extra post and telegraph offices. Carriage to the romantic gap of Via Mala, 3rd bridge, 10 fr. and 2 fr. the driver. This gap of the Rhine is 5 miles long. to Zillis, between narrow cliffs, 1500 ft. high, out of which the road is cut.

Church Service at Hotel Via Mala; supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Conveyances—Railway, see page 244.

Tourtemagne (German Turtmann).—Pop. 500.—Hotel:—Lion d'Or

In Canton Valais, on the Rhône, above Lenk, and so called from the old tower (turris magna) of a chapel here. It stands at the mouth of the romantic Turtmannthal, leading up past a waterfall to grand scenery at the back of the Weisshorn and Zermatt.

Vernayaz (Valais).—Stat.—Hotels:

Grand Hotel des Gorges du Trient; Hotel de Vernayaz, opposite the road to Chamonnix.

In the valley of the Rhone, between St. Maurice and Martigny, near the Col de Trient, the Pissevache Fall, gorge of the Tête Noire, &c

Conveyances—Railway, see page 247.

Vevey (German. Vivis). — Stat. — Pop. 6500.—Hotels:—

Grand Hotel du Lac—Ed. Delajorn, proprietor. 1st class hotel, well situated, good accommodation.

Hotel Monnet, or Hotel des Trois Couronnes.—Kept by J. Schott and Co., close to the lake; one of the best inns in Switzerland.

Grand Hotel.—A first-class establishment, beautifully situated.

Hotel du Pont, near the Gare; and Hotel de Croix Blanche, in the town, both commercial houses. Hotel de la Poste, a German house.

Hotel d'Angleterre.

Vevey, in Canton Vaud, 12 m. from Lausanne, 1230 ft. above sea, on the north shore of the Lake of Geneva. Is picturesquely situated at the mouth of the Gorge of the Vevayse, and is a delightful place for a stay of any length. N.B.—The station for Vevey, on the Lausanne and Berne line, is Chexbres, which see, page 245.

St. Martin's, built above the town, among orchards and vineyards, is of the fifteenth century, and surrounded by a planted terrace, commanding a magnificent view. In this church are buried Ludlow, the regicide, and Broughton, who read

The way from Viesch is up a good but steep horse road Time to the Inn, on Æggischhorn, 2½ hours, and 2 hours more to the top

Villars, or Villard.—HOTEL: GRAND MOUVERAN; CHEMILLARD and other Pensions.

On a fine point of view, in Canton Vaud, 10 m. east of Aigle, 4,025 feet above sea, looking on the Rhône Valley, the Grand Moureran, Dent du Midi, Dent de Morcles, &c.

Excursions to the Chamossaire, Col de la Croix, Diablerets, &c.

Church Service at Hotel Grand Monveran, supplied by the Colonial and Cont. Church Society.

Villeneuve.—Stat.—Pop. 1,624.—HOTEL:

HOTEL LORD BYRON (between the Castle of Chillon and Villeneuve), a charming situation; highly recommended in every respect; central.

In Canton Vaud, 7 miles from Vevey, at the east end of Lake of Geneva, beautifully placed in view of Byron's "little Isle," and a quarter of an hour's walk from the Castle of Chillon.

Church of England services every Sunday, at 10½ and 3 o'clock at the Hotel Lord Byron. The British Chaplaincy is supported by the voluntary contributions of the congregation.

For Rail, see p. 246; for Steamers, see p. 331.

Visp.—HOTEL DU SOLEIL.

A small village in Canton Valais, in a marshy part of the Rhone, where horses are taken to visit Zermatt, 10 hours journey, for the Matterhorn, &c. A good road the whole way. Here are strong marks of the terrible earthquake in 1855, which left only seven houses in Visp habitable.

Weissenstein.—See Soleure.

Winterthur.—Stat.—Pop. 8,530.—HOTELS: KRONE, SONNE.

Prettily seated on the Töss, in Canton Zurich, 12 miles from Zurich, and so called from the Roman Vitodurum, the site of which is at Upper Winterthur. It is an industrious town, with some of the best cotton manufactures in Switzerland.

CONVEYANCES.—Rail., see pages 133, 239, 244, 245

Yverdun.—(German Iferten, anciently Ebrodunum)—Stat.—Pop. 4,100.—HOTELS:

DE LONDRES is the best; it is both comfortable and reasonable.

CROIX FEDERALE.

A town of Roman origin in Canton Vaud, 18 miles from Lausanne, under the Jura hills, at the top of Neuchatel Lake, where the Orbe or Thiele falls in. It has Churches, a Town-house, Library, and Museum of Antiquities, and an old Cast'e, built in 1135, in which Pestalozzi carried on his school system, 1805-25. Hot springs at a short distance.

Zermatt.—Pop. 369.—HOTELS:

MONTE ROSA, MONT CERVIN.

This secluded village in Visp thal (Canton Valais), may be reached from the Rhone Valley by the side paths from Sierre, Tourtmagne, or Visp (10 hours; or from the Italian side, viâ Chatillon (13 hours). It is much frequented in consequence of its glaciers, and splendid views of Mont Cervin, or the Matterhorn, and Monte Rosa, 14,705 feet to 15,215 feet high. The Pass of St. Theodule to Chatillon 11,000 feet, is practicable on foot with good guides, in fine weather; the chalet at Breuil, 2 hours from the summit, giving excellent accommodation. It is necessary to start from Zermatt at 3.30 a.m. The journey from Visp, will occupy 10 hours on horseback, with a good narrow road the whole way. Inns at Stalden, and St. Nicholas, just half way. The two finest excursions from Zermatt are to the Gürnergrat (10,000 feet), a little beyond the Riffelberg, and to the Cima di Jassi (12,525 feet); both easy of access to all but bad walkers, and free from danger. The inn on the Riffelberg, (8000 feet), commands a superb view. The Mountain is 9,615 feet high.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE.—St. Peter's memorial Church, at the entrance of the village, dedicated to those of Mr. Whymper's party, who were lost on the Matterhorn, 13th July, 1865, was opened in August, 1871, by Bishop Parry. Service at 11 and 3, by a Chaplain appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

Zug.—Stat.—Pop. 3,860.—HOTELS—HIRSCH (the Stag; OCHS (Ox.)

This small capital of the smallest canton of the Confederation is at the north east corner of the Lake of Zug, under the Zugerberg (marked by the Capuchin Church), with the Rigi at the further end. Its chief edifices and institutions are the Cathedral, the Town Hall, Library, and the Arsenal. St. Michael's remarkable churchyard here should be visited by the traveller; manufactures of kirschenwasser, cider, and paper.

The Lake of Zug is 4 leagues in length by 1 in breadth, abounding in a species of fish called "rotheli," much prized. Excursions to the village of Cham, where the works of the Anglo-Swiss Milk Company may be seen; the Castle of Hunenberg, the Convent of Frauenthal, the Gubel, the Egeri See, and the battle-field of Morgarten, the most interesting of them all, where the Austrians were first defeated, 1315.

During summer the steamboat on the Lake runs three times a day in connection with the omnibuses from the steamboats on the Lake of Zurich, and once daily on the Lake of Lucerne, for tourists to the foot of the Rigi, the Bernese Oberland, and Lucerne.

Guides may be hired at Zug. Casper Schell particularly recommended.

Zurich.—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 21,260; or 86,700, with neighbouring communes.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL BAUR (en ville), Bahnhofstrasse. First class establishment, deservedly recommended.

HOTEL DU LAC, New First Class Hotel for families and single Gentlemen, exceedingly well situated See Advt.

HOTEL DE L'EPEE.—Well situated; view on the lake and environs; Recommended.

HOTEL DE BELLE VUE AU LAC.—One of the best situated hotels in Switzerland; kept by Messrs. Ermell and Pohl.

HOTEL BAUER AU LAC; ZURICHERHOF; SCHWEIZERHOF.

READING-ROOM, with English and foreign papers. The landlord of the hotel will give an introduction.

Zurich Canton is a country of great extent, beautiful, and fertile, with a dense population, Protestant and manufacturing. Zurich or Zurch (ancient Turicum)—the capital, stands at the north-west end of the beautiful and extensive Zuricher-See, where the Limmat issues from it with a broad and impetuous current, and is crossed by 5 bridges, large and small. The old walls have been cleared away. It is built along both banks of the river in a valley hemmed in by mountains. Grosse Stadt on the right bank of the river extends to the foot of the Zurichberg and the Sussenberg, and contains a great number of sloping streets; Kleine Stadt on the left bank, is built on the hill of Lindenhoff and St. Peter's.

OBJECTS OF ATTRACTION.—The Cathedral; St. Peter's Church; Town House; Arsenal and Armoury; University founded 1832; Federal Polytechnic School, (1855); Orphan and Blind Asylums; Weltenberg Tower or Prison; Reading Room and Museum, with remains of ancient Lake habitations; Platz promenade, and its monument of Gessner, author of the "Death of Abel." The Library founded in 1620, in the old Wasserkirchie, contains about 40,000 vols., many Roman antiquities, rare MSS., and 4000 medals. Among other treasures are Lady Jane Grey's Letters; Zwingli's Greek Bible, with his portrait and statue; a bust of Lavater (born here), and Muller's model of part of Switzerland. Coverdale printed his English Bible at Zurich, 1535, or 13 years after the Reformation began. Here Massena defeated the Russians, 1799. Silk and cotton prints are manufactured.

The Uetliberg, the highest point of the Albis range, is about 4½ miles from Zurich. It is 3000 feet above sea level, and may be reached on foot in two hours walking; or by rail to the top, opened 1875. It affords a most lovely view of the lake of Zurich, and of a part of the Alpine range. An Inn on the summit is enlarged by the addition of a Restaurant. Fine general view from the Albis, at a point eight miles on the road to Zug, four miles from Keppel, where Zwingli is buried. Another fine view from the Zurichberg, within three-quarters of an hour's easy walking, on the opposite side of the city.

The Zurichberg, a hill to the East of Zurich, and within a short distance of it, affording a very fine general view of the lake, the town, and mountains. Sunset, as seen from the Zurichberg, is very fine.

THE Lake of Zurich consists of a lower and upper basin; and is 10 leagues in length by 1½ in breadth. The tour of the Lake is very delightful and may be made either by land or water. Perhaps the most agreeable mode would be to proceed in a carriage to Rapperschwyl Bridge where the two basins unite, along the south-western shore, (which is so elevated as to command delightful views, and leads through several very fine villages), and return to Zurich along the north-eastern shore. A road leads from Rapperschwyl to Uznach, a little farther than the south-eastern extremity of the lake. In 3 hours and another to Zurich in 6 hours. Vineyards are planted on the Lower Lake; the Upper freezes in winter.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE is held in St. Anne's church twice every Sunday. Chaplain, Rev. Dr. Heidenheim, appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

PRESBYTERIAN WORSHIP.—A Minister of the Church of Scotland officiates from July to Sept.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—S. Byers, Esq. AGENT FOR BRADSHAW'S GUIDE, C. Schmidt, Libraire Schabelitz; and at the Railway Station where the London Daily Papers may be obtained.

POST OFFICE.—The new General Post Office, is in the Bahnhof Strasse.

EXCHANGE OFFICES.—One in the Poste Strasse, and one in the Römi Strasse

HACKNEY CARRIAGES.—To or from the Railway Station, or for ½ hour, (stande) within the town, for 1 or 2 persons, 80 centimes, 3 or 4 persons, 1fr. 20c., each portmanteau, 20c. For ½ hour for 1 or 2 persons. 1fr. 40c, for more than 2 persons, 1fr. 80c. For ¾ hour, 1 or 2 persons, 1fr. 60c., for more than 2 persons, 2fr. 40c. For 1 hour, for 1 or 2 persons, 2fr., more than 2 persons, 3fr.

CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST.—MR. J. H. KERR.

CONVEYANCES.—See p. 243; Steamers, see p. 329. Travellers for the Rigi reach Horgen in an hour; and a diligence takes them to Zug, p. 329, whence a steamer takes them down the lake to the Arth at foot of the Rigi by 2 o'clock. Total fare, 5 francs. The Rigi may be ascended in the same day; the view from the summit (where there is a very good Hotel) is one of the sights of Switzerland. The next day, by descending to Weggis, the best views may be obtained, and thence is a steamer to Lucerne.

Zweisimmen.—Pop. 1,200.—HOTELS: BAR; COURONNE; several Pensions.

A charming spot, 11 miles from Thun, 3,121 feet above sea, in the Simmenthal, where the Great and Little Simmen unite near Blankenburg Castle.

Excursions to the pleasant Sianen Möser Valley, the Dent de Chamois (7,570 feet), Grunfluh (7,070 feet), Gelten and Sanetsch Glaciers, &c.

Church Service at H. Couronne, supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

For description of the ALPINE PASSES and the LAKES, see SPECIAL EDITION.

ITALY.

Books.—See BRADSHAW'S Illustrated Handbook to North and South Italy—including a Special Guide to Rome and its Environs, Sicily and Sardinia—forming a complete Guide to the whole country, with Maps and Plans, &c. Price, 7s. 6d. For an excellent description of the country, and the war with Austria, the traveller is recommended to consult Count Arrivabene's Italy under Victor Emmanuel, in 2 vols., 1862. Its author is a distinguished native of Italy, and a member of the Italian Parliament. See also, J. Ball's three Guides to the Eastern, Central, and Western Alps.

Italy consists of two distinct portions—the continental and the insular. The latter includes the two large Islands of Sicily, and Sardinia, with the smaller ones of Elba, Capri, Gozo, Lipari Islands, etc. See the "Islands" section. The continental portion forms a long narrow peninsula, extending from N. W. to S. E., the greatest length of which measures about 695 or 700 miles from the sources of the river Tosa to Cape Cimiti in Calabria, or Cape Lucca in Otranto. The breadth is various, its northerly measurement being 365 miles; it is about 275 miles from Mount Genèvre to the mouth of the Po, through the middle of Lombardy; 166 miles from Plombino to Ancona; and only 20 miles in some parts of Calabria and straits. The superficial Area, including the Islands is 122,167 English square miles. The northern border of Italy is formed by the stupendous range of the Alps, extending in a long curve line from the shores of the Mediterranean Sea, near Genoa, to the head of the Adriatic. The Alps are connected with the Apennines, a lower but still important range, which stretches in an uninterrupted line, parallel to the shores of the Gulf of Genoa, and then through the peninsular part of Italy to the Strait of Messina, dividing the country into two narrow sections of lowland, which run along from the mountains to the adjacent seas. The great Plain of Lombardy, between the Alps and the Apennines in Northern Italy, traversed by the Po, is about 250 miles from east to west; its average breadth being 50 miles.

Principal Mountains.—M. Blanc (on the borders of French Savoy), 15,780 ft. above sea; M. Rosa (on the Swiss border), 15,215 ft.; M. Viso (in the W. Alps) 12,640 ft.; Grand Paradis (in the Graian Alps), 13,300 ft.; M. Corno (in the Apennines), 10 200 ft. Passes.—M Cenis or Cenisio, 6280 ft.; Great St. Bernard, 8130 ft.; The Stelvio, 9,175 ft.; Simplon, 6,595 ft. Volcanoes.—M. Etna (in Sicily), 10,874 ft. high; M. Vesuvius (at Naples), 4,000 ft.; Stromboli (in the Lipari group), 2,650 ft. Lakes—Maggiore, Orta, Lugano, Como, Garda, and smaller ones, all under the Alps, and noted for beautiful scenery. Rivers.—The largest are the Po, with a course of 160 leagues; Tiber, 80 leagues; and Arno, 25 leagues.

The States of the Church having been annexed by decree of 9th Oct., 1870, Victor Emmannuel is now King of United Italy; with Rome for its capital; and a total Population (census of 1871) of 26,801,154, distributed over 15 Territories and 69 Provinces. Of these 38,700 were Protestants, and 32,420 Jews. Population of the largest towns—Rome, 244,500; Naples, 448,335; Palermo, 219,400; Turin, 19,400. Victor Emmanuel II. was born 1820; succeeded his father, Charles Albert, 1849, and took the title of King of Italy 1861. His Queen died 1865. His eldest son Humbert, Prince Royal, was born 1844. His second son, Amadeo, was King of Spain, 1870–3. Senate—numbers, 270 members; Chamber of Deputies, 508. Army (1873), 204,000; Navy—76 vessels, of 653 guns. Commerce—chiefly with England, France, and Austria; employing 29,000 ships (118 being steamers), of 1 million tons, with 184,000 sailors. Among the Products are iron, lead, sulphur, glass, marble, rice, oil, fruits, wine, cotton, sugar, silk and silkworms, pottery, straw hats, pictures, mosiacs. Exports and imports to and from England (1873), 3¾ millions sterling, and 8¼ millions, respectively. Public Revenue (1873), 51¼ millions, against 55¼ expenditure. Debt 333¼ millions.

London to Italy, through France.—Travellers visiting Italy for the first time, may proceed, by rail and steam, all the way from London to Florence, via,—London to Dover or Folkestone, rail; Folkestone to Boulogne, steamboat; Boulogne to Paris, Chalons, Lyons, Avignon, and Marseilles, by rail; from Marseilles, steamboat to Leghorn, and rail to Florence. Those preferring a land journey to Italy, instead of taking the boat at Marseilles, should proceed thence to Toulon, Frejus, Antibes, Nice, and along the coast of the Mediterranean to Genoa and Lucca; passing over the two finest roads in Italy—the Riviera di Ponente or Cornice Pass, from Nice to Genoa; and the Riviera di Levante, from Genoa to Lucca, both now traversed by rail. Railway communication also through Switzerland to Chur, thence by diligence across the Spliigen pass to the lake of Como, and the soft Italian scenery on the southern slope of the Alps; this is replete with interest to the tourist: passing by Zurich and its beautiful lake, Wallenstadt, Sargans, the Via Mala, etc.

Brindisi Route.—There are two ways; 1st, through France, viâ Mont Cenis Tunnel; 2nd, through Germany, viâ the Brenner Pass.—The French and Mont Cenis Route follows the Lyons rail to Dijon, Châlons-sur-Saône, Mâcon, Amberieu, Culoz, Chambéry St. Michel, to Modane (17 hrs.

from Paris). Then through the Great Tunnel, viâ Upper Italian rail, to Turin (24 hours from Paris) Alessandria, Parma, and Bologna, in 7 hours.—The German and Brenner Route passes Brussels, Cologne, Mayence (or Mainz), Aschaffenburg, Munich, Innsbrück, the Brenner, Verona, Padua, to Bologna, as above. Thence, by South Italian rail, to Brindisi. A traveller leaving London Thursday, 8.45 p.m., reaches Brindisi on Monday, 4 a.m.

Money —The moneys of account and currency are as follows:—100 centimes = 1 lira = 9½d. English. GOLD COINS—100, 50, 20, 10, and 5 lire. SILVER COINS—5, 2, and 1 lire, and 50 and 20 centime pieces. COPPER COINS - 1, 2, 5, and 10 centimes. BANK NOTES—Paper Money or Bank Notes from 1000 lire down as low as 2 lire, and 1, ½, and ¼ lire together with Copper Coins form now (1873), almost the only currency—Gold and Silver are very scarce, and are at a premium of about 8 per cent., or about 27 lire (paper) for £1 sterling. (See Moneys, Weights, and Measures of all Nations, by W. A. Browne, L.L.D., London, Stanford.) Travellers are cautioned against taking local paper except so much as they can pay away before leaving for another Italian town. The local 1 lire and ½ lire notes of the leading provincial Banks are however current in most parts of Italy.

Railways.—Italy is now pretty well provided with Railways. In the North there is scarcely one town of any importance without Railway Communication. The fares vary; those on the Great Southern Railway, "Ferrovie Meridionale" being the lowest, viz:—1½d.; 1d.; ½d.; 3-10d. per English mile for the four classes. Return Tickets are now issued between almost all stations and at moderate rates to 1st, 2nd, and 3rd class passengers. The 2nd class are generally comfortable and well cushioned; but English travellers are not recommended to travel 3rd class. The 2nd class is the cheapest in proportion. There is a government tax of 5 c. on all tickets, and in the ex Papal States a special tax of 10 per cent. No free allowance of luggage, and 20 per cent extra charge for Express trains on most lines. Travellers should always pay in paper, and thus effect a great saving. The Railway is called "Strada Ferrata," or "Ferrovia." Steamers are called "Piroscafi." In 1872, there were 6,780 kilom. of Railways open; and 19.460 kilom. of Telegraphs.

Luggage—May now be forwarded from city to city, without difficulty, by Railway. There is a Railway office in all large towns; deliver it, and have a receipt. It must be declared as Passenger's Luggage, "Effetti di Viaggiatori."—Prepay and address it to some Hotel; this ensures a bed on arrival, and saves trouble and expense; or, write to the Hotel-keeper to receive it.

Hotels.—In Italy, it is well to bargain before-hand for chamber, &c., and know the price of table d'hôte. This is especially necessary in small towns and road-side Inns,—where there is no table d'hôte, ask for a dinner for 3 francs, including wine, (Vino ordinario.) The best Hotels (kept by Swiss and German proprietors in most cases) are very comfortable, and English tastes are consulted: their charges are high, but the travelling public should nevertheless choose them in preference to the native Inns, which although much more reasonable in their charges, are not at all suitable to English tourists, and are frequently very dirty and uncomfortable. A knowledge of the French language is invaluable in Italy; in the native inns English is never spoken. (See Vocabulary in Special Edition.) It is customary in this country to breakfast or take tea and coffee at a caffè: the saving is great, and, except in the case of families it is often a great convenience. "As a rule the Traveller will find English Boarding Houses in Italy very uncomfortable and straight-laced quarters."—R.S.C.

Servants are now charged for in the bills throughout Italy, 1 franc. The Waiter is called "Cameriére." At a Caffè, "Bottega" (shop) is called out. Wines.—"In North Italy, try Val Pomicella, or Poticella, Gallinaca, Barolo, Brollo."—R.S.C.

Postage to England —25 cents the ½ oz.

Passports.—The liberal arrangements in respect to Passports, hitherto afforded to British and American Travellers in Italy is now extended to Rome, and throughout the late Papal Dominions. Foreign Office Passports now require no visa for any portion of the Kingdom of Italy.

Churches.—Italy is famous for the number and extraordinary magnificence of its Churches, and many of the small and unknown provincial towns possess monuments of the highest architectural interest. What renders the Churches so extremely interesting is the costliness of their internal decorations—the silver, gilding, rich marbles, precious stones, paintings, mosaics, and sculpture, with which they are profusely adorned. Travellers should not be deterred by the exteriors of many of the churches from entering the building, the exteriors of some of the most magnificent edifices in Italy being shapeless masses of brick or rubble. The prevailing church and domestic Architecture of Italy is classical, the pure Gothic of France and England being almost unknown. Venice and a few of the larger towns in the north of Italy are, however, exceptions; and have produced a style of architecture which has long been known as Venetian or Italian Gothic. For the Schools of Art, with Lists of the Popes, etc., see BRADSHAW'S Hand Book to Italy

NOTE—The churches are generally closed from 12 to 3 or 4, and travellers will do well to rise early and visit the public buildings of a town before noon. Some of the churches are only open in the morning.

VAUDOIS, or Waldensian Church (Italian Protestant).—Their places of worship at the principal towns are inserted from a list furnished by D. Matheson, Esq., Hon. Sec. to the Waldensian Missions, 32, Queen's Gate, W.

Public Security.—Throughout Sicily and in many parts of South Italy, the roads in the interior are so unsafe, that no journey ought to be undertaken without advice, or first consulting the British Consul of the nearest town. They are generally extremely courteous and well informed.

Acqui.—Stat.—Pop. 10,000.

An ancient city situated on the right bank of the Bormida, and celebrated for its warm springs, which are efficacious in the cure of gout, rheumatism, paralysis, contractions of the limbs, &c. The Duomo, or Cathedral, is the only building worthy of notice; it is a noble edifice of the 12th century. There are numerous Roman antiquities here, among which are the remains of an aqueduct, several reservoirs, &c. Railway, page 259.

Alagna.—A village at the head of Val Sesia, in the midst of very lovely and sublime scenery, near the Grissonay, Macugnaga, the Turto Pass, the Pite Alpe, and other noted points. It has a fair inn.

Alessandria.—Stat. Pop. (1871) about 24,000

ALBERGO NUOVO, L'UNIVERSO, L'ITALIA.

A city near the confluence of the Tanaro and the Bormida, built 1168, by the Lombard League, and named after Pope Alexander III. Its very strong and modern Citadel is the most prominent and interesting object to be visited. The Cathedral is wall worth notice. Distant about 2½ English miles, is Marengo, on the plains of which Napoleon defeated the Austrians, 1800. There is a large building erected as a Conservatory, where every object of interest found on the battle field is carefully preserved.

Railway, see pages 248, 250, 254, 256, and 259.

Amalfi.—Pop. 3000.—HOTELS:—LA LUNA, DES ETRANGERS, DEI CAPPUCINI.

On the Gulf of Salerno, behind Sorrento; a very interesting town on account of its superb position and historical associations. One of its mariners—Flavio Gioja, in the days of its commercial prosperity (13th century), is said to have discovered the Compass. The Cathedral and Capuchin Convent are the most interesting objects here.

Ancona.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) about 30,000.—

HOTELS: DE LA PAIX; L'EUROPA; LA VICTORIA; ROYAL; LA FENICE, small; DELLA FERROVIA, opposite the station.

A city and a free port, and an episcopal see, built in the form of an amphitheatre, on the slope of two hills rising from the shores of the Adriatic, strengthened by a citadel. 132 miles north-east of Rome. It is a busy commercial town, possessing a harbour and quay; formed by a pier or mole, 1500 feet in length and 60 in breadth. The city contains some fine buildings, badly arranged. The cathedral is curious, so is its crypt. S. Agostino, and the Exchange. The famous arch, by Trajan, on the mole is worth attention.

Aosta—(a corruption of Augusta). Pop. 7000.

HOTEL DU MONT BLANC

In a delicious valley at the foot of the Alps, in the midst of a population afflicted with cretinism. The Cathedral, St. Ours, a Roman arch, and Prætorian gate, besides numerous Roman remains, deserve a visit. The ex-king of Spain is Duke of Aosta. It is on the road from Great St. Bernard.

VAUDOIS CHURCH.—Rue Croix de Ville—Sr. Revel.

The diligence between Ivrea station and Cormayeur (16 hours), through the Valley of Aosta, passes the Baths of St. Vincent (7 hours from Ivrea), near Châtillon, and through Aosta. St. Vincent, 17 m. from Aosta, and about 1,000 feet above sea level, is hot in summer, but is much frequented by the Piedomtese for its mineral springs, which is of great virtue in diseases of the liver. HOTEL LION D'OR.

Arona.—Stat.—Pop. 4,500.—HOTEL D'ITALIA.

Travellers sleeping at Arona, and intending to start by the early morning boat, should settle their accounts over night, and drink wine, as 3 francs 50c. per bottle is charged for Allsopps' beer.

It is a small but well-built commercial town, on the Lake Maggiore, and possesses a ruinous castle; but is more particularly renowned for a large statue of San Carlo Borromeo, raised by the inhabitants of Milan in 1697. Height, including pedestal, 112 feet. It is 2½ miles from the town of Arona. Opposite Arona is the picturesque castle of Angiera.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Alessandria, Milan, and Turin, see p 255; also by steamer across Lake Maggiore to Sesto Calende, and thence by rail.

Assisi.—Pop. 4500.—INNS, FEMINA, LEPRI.

This is an interesting old town a short distance from Perugia, remarkable for three superb churches, built one above the other, over the remains of St. Francis, founder of the Franciscan order, and a native of this place. Railway, p. 260.

Assisi is a treasury of early Italian art; the church of San Francisco containing valuable Giottos.

Asti—Stat—Pop. (1871) 31,035—INN: ALBERGO REALE

A city of ancient celebrity, situated near the confluence of the Borlore and Tanaro, surrounded by picturesque risings and hills. It has many churches, none of which are particularly remarkable. Truffles are found in the neighbourhood of excellent quality. Railway, see pages 250—255.

Bassano.—Pop. 14,000.—HOTEL LA LUNA and ST. ANTONIO.

Here are manufactured fine Italian straw-hats; there is a very good bridge over the Brenta. In the house of the great sculptor Canova, are preserved many treasures of art, and his birth-place, Possagno, about five leagues distant by Solagna, Pove, and Crepano, is seldom left unvisited. Many pictures here by Bassano, in the Museum are Canova's casts, &c. Beautiful environs.

Baveno.—HOTELS:

GRAND HOTEL DE BELLE VUE, delightfully situated, with the landing place in front of the house. English Divine service in the hotel.

HOTEL ZANOLI; BEAU RIVAGE ET PENSION.

A small village on Lake Maggiore, and a posting station on the road to Milan, in a charming position opposite to the Borromean Islands.

The Isola Bella is about half an hour's row from Baveno. On this island the Palace and Gardens of the Count Borromeo are situated, and liberally shown to strangers. The gardens are raised on terraces cut out of the solid rock, and, at immense cost and labour, transformed into a prolific soil, teeming with aromatic odours of oranges, citrons, and tropical plants in the open air. The Isola Madre is also well worth visiting. Stresa is a delightful place to stop at for visiting the Borromean Islands. After visiting them take either of the steamers up or down the lake, as they call regularly for passengers. A boat with two rowers to Isola Bella and back, 2 to 2½ hours, 4 frs. and 1 fr. buonomano.

Travellers returning to Switzerland can procure tickets on board the steamer in correspondence with the diligences from Bellinzona, by the St. Gothard Pass, as far as Flueln and Lucerne, or by the Bernardino Pass and through the Via Mala, as far as Zurich. Passengers are landed at Magadino, and conveyed at once to Bellinzona, to await the arrival of the diligences from Milan. Passengers from Lugano proceed direct, to Bellinzona. The two roads join at CADENAZZO. Daily diligence over the Simplon to Brieg and Sion. Observe the covered bridge, cathedral, and the old walls.

Bergamo.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) about 24,000.—HOTELS:—L'ITALIA, LA FENICE.

Chief town of the province of the same name and divided into an upper and lower town, the latter, called the Borgo of Santo Leonardo, being the city proper. Its situation is remarkably beautiful, and the surrounding country furnishes some of the most delightful excursions to be found in Venetian Lombardy. The buildings worthy of notice are the Cathedral, which is a well built edifice, with a fine cupola, and contains a number of fine Bergamasc paintings; the Palazzo Vecchio, or Town Hall, with the statue of Tasso; the church of Santa Grazia, rich in decorations; the church of Santa Maria Maggiore, built of black and white marble, with a beautiful porch in red and white marble; the interior is very elaborate, and adorned with medallions and statues of Roman emperors. The Colleoni Chapel.

There is a large Fair held here, which attracts crowds from all parts of Italy. Commencing on St. Bartholomew's Day, it continues a fortnight A short distance in the Lago d'Iseo, for which see Itinerary of the Italian Lakes, in Special Edition.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Milan, Camerlata Verona, Padua, Venice, Lecco, &c., see page 256.—Steamer from Colico to Lecco, see page 330. Fiacri (uncovered carriages) closed broughams. 1 horse the course 75 cents; the hour 1 fr. 50 cents.

BOLOGNA is a city of two miles in length by one in breadth, and is divided into four quarters. It is entered by twelve Gates, connected by picturesque grass-covered walls and moat, and is now the nucleus of a strong entrenched camp, and an important railway junction. The aspect of the town is gloomy and antique, though most of the buildings are kept fresh whitewashed, and a deserted air is given to many of the long irregular streets from the houses overhanging the footpaths, and forming arcades which conceal the passers-by. On festas and market days, is rather a bustling town.

In 270 it was an Episcopal see, and was afterwards raised, by Gregory XIII., to the dignity of an Archiepiscopal See. It has given six Popes to Rome, and nearly 100 cardinals. The School of Bologna has also given many illustrious names to the arts, among whom is Oderigi di Gubbio, immortalised by Dante; it also produced the two Francias, three Caraccis, Guarcino, Domenichino, Albani, Guido, Lanfranco, Pasinelli, and Cignani. The Accademia delle Belle Arte is a noble institution, and well worth a visit, as it contains many superb pictures of the Bolognese school.

Bologna is celebrated on account of its University, founded in 1119 by Wernerus, called "Luvena Juris;" it will well repay a visit, particularly the museum of Anatomy, and Cabinet of Natural Philosophy, and the University Library, which contains many very valuable manuscripts.

CHURCHES.—This city contains 100 Churches, all remarkable for their noble architecture and magnificent paintings, now very much decayed and faded; almost defaced by time and violence. Prominent among these, on account of its being a Gothic building, stands the venerable church of St. Petronio, the patron and first bishop of Bologna. The exterior, in red brick, is very interesting, and the interior of fine proportions, but whitewashed S. Gracomo, S. Francesco La Carita, dei Mendicanti, S. Giovanni, S. Lucia, La Santa Notre Dame di Gallera. S Martino, S. Bartolomeo, S. Domenico, S. Procolo. S. Anunziata, S Michele in Bosco, and the adjoining Palace S. Maria dei Servi, especially S. Stefano a cluster of six different churches, of which one a model of the Holy Sepulchre. Notice the Piazza and Fontana del Gigante; the Palazzo Publico; the Palazzo del Podesta; the Bacciochi Palace (by Palladio), Zampieri Palace; and several other private Palaces; also, Toro dei Mercanti, Theatre dei Corse; the house in which Rossini lived; Caracci's frescoes in the palace Mignami; the Monte della Guardia; and the old Campo Santo, containing some good statuary, all under cover. Its Piazzas are remarkably beautiful. At the old Archiginnasio is a museum of antiquities found in an Etruscan Necropolis near the city.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE at Hotel Brun, during the season.

Bordighera.—Stat.—Pop. 1,480.—HOTELS: HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE, comfortable and moderate, opposite the station.

A small town on the Corniche road, about an hour and a half distant from Mentone, on a hill overlooking the Mediterranean, among groves of olives, palms, oranges and lemons, with numberless beautiful walks in the neighbouring woods and ravines. The palm groves, with those of San Remo, supply Rome with palms for the Easter ceremonies. It is here that Rufini lays the scene of his novel, "Dr. Antonio." "The climate is almost perfect; warm and genial, without the depressing influence sometimes experienced in other parts of the Riviera; and is admirably suited for invalids."

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 249.

Bormio (German, Worms.) INNS:—LA POSTA; DAS LAMM.

The Railway station is about ¾ of a mile from the town; omnibuses, 1 fr.; carriages, 1 horse, 1 fr. 50 cents., 2 horses, 2 fr. 50 cents.

A large and flourishing city, capital of the province of the same name, situated in a fertile valley. It is rich in Roman antiquities; and within the walls of an ancient Temple dedicated to Vespasian, a Museum has been established for the reception of the precious remains. Among objects of attraction are the Palazzo della Loggia, or Town Hall, entirely built of marble of the richest description, and covered with sculpture; the interior has some fine paintings. The Duomo Vecchio, containing some fine paintings. The Duomo Nuovo, or new Cathedral, is a noble building entirely of marble, and contains some very fair pictures. The church of Sta. Afra, built upon the site of a Temple of Saturn, is very rich in paintings, containing some of the best work of Titian, Paolo Veronese, Tintoretto, Bassano, and others of less note; there are also some fine frescoes. In addition to the churches above mentioned the following contain works of great merit, and are all worth visiting:—San Francesco, SS. Nazario e Celso, San Domenico, San Barnabo, Santa Agata, San Giuseppe, San Giovanni Evangelista, San Faustino Maggiore, San Pietro in Oliveto, San Clemente, San Faustino in Riposo, Santa Julia, San Carlone, La Misericordia, Santa Agnese, Santa Croce, La Madonna al Mercato di Lino. There are some excellent private collections of pictures which should be visited; the principal are the Gallerla Averoldi, Galleria Lecchi, and Galleria Tosi. The traveller should not neglect to visit the Corso del Teatro; as the whole of the houses in the street are painted with a series of mythological and historical subjects.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Bergamo, Milan, Camerlata (station for Como) Verona, Mantua, Padua, Venice, Pavia, &c., see pp. 256, 259. By diligence to EDOLO (pretty good inn), 55 miles in 15 hours, by a beautiful road, past Lago Iseo. From Edolo to Tirano (no good inn), Bormio, and Pontresina, by a good road, through splendid scenery. THE GREAT EAST INDIA HOTEL.
HOTEL D' ANGLETERRE, opposite the port.

The ancient Brundusium, and a walled town on a good Harbour, (a perfect mass of Roman remains,) whose importance as the nearest port to Alexandria, on the European system of railways, seems likely to revive. The opening railway from Ancona has brought it within 64 hours of London. The Port is perfectly sheltered, and has been so much improved that the mail steamers berth alongside the quays, to which there is now a clear depth of 8 mètres. Since 1866 two quays in the inner harbour, 466 to 490 mètres long, have been made; also, a boundary wall in the Canal d'Ingresso (a channel connecting the outer and inner harbour); a Breakwater, 380 mètres long, close to the Bocca de Puglie, between the Island of St. Andrea and the mainland; and a Mole, 280 mètres, from Forta di Mare. It has a good light-house. The P. & O. Company (carrying the Indian mails), and the Italian Co.'s steamers run to Alexandria in 3 days. The P. & O. steamers run also to Ancona and Venice. A line from Bari, to meet a continuation of that from Naples to Eboli, when completed, will give ready access to the west coast of Italy.

Capua.—Stat.—Pop. 16,000.—Hotels:—

A fortified archiepiscopal city of Naples, in the Terra di Lavoro, situated about a mile and a half from the ancient Capua, and built from its ruins. No town in Italy, with the exception of Rome, is so rich in Roman inscriptions. The Cathedral, and the Church of the Annunciation are worthy of attention. At ancient Capua, once the rival of Rome, there are the remains of an amphitheatre, built of brick and white marble, and of four orders of architecture, in very tolerable preservation. From the summit there is a delightful view extending to Vesuvius. The Railway station is close to the town; omnibuses, 50 cents.

Hotel Orlando. very bad.

A Refreshment-room has been established at the Railway Station where Breakfast, &c., can be had at moderate charges. Travellers are advised to take advantage of this accommodation on the score of economy and comfort. There is an omnibus attends the station, outside the ramparts, to convey passengers to the town, ½ fr. to 1 fr. Boat hire, embarking or disembarking in the harbour, ½ fr., and 1 fr. for a box. All Steamers enter the harbour.

The sea capital of Rome, formerly of the Papal states, and the portal through which the generality of travellers enter into Southern Italy; steam navigation has raised it from insignificance to importance as a seaport. The fine line of steamers plying between Marseilles and Naples regularly touch here, and contribute greatly to its importance and prosperity. Exports from the interior are here shipped for England and other countries. Travellers are not permitted to land here until the passports and ship's papers are shown and examined. The porters, boats, &c., are regularly organised at a fixed rate. In the Town Hall is a small gallery of Etruscan antiquities, viz., sarcophagi, female heads, &c. Several ancient Etrurian cities can be easily visited from this port.

Hotel Volta—newly opened by Mr. C. Galli, formerly proprietor of the Hotel d'Italie.

Hotel de l'Ange; L'Italia; La Corona.

Hotel de Florence, 2nd class house, good.

An ancient city, on the beautiful Lake of Como, two miles from Camerlata, enjoying a considerable trade in silks, woollens, cotton yarn, and soap. Its objects of attraction are the fine Cathedral, the Broletto or Town Hall, the Theatre, the Piazza Volta, and the Gateways of the city. The Plinlana, with its intermittent spring on the site of Pliny the younger's Villa, and Barbarossa's tower, deserve a visit; close to it, at Cernobbio, is the Villa d'Este, once the residence of Queen Caroline, and now the Hotel Regina d'Inghilterra—a magnificent house in a beautiful situation about three miles from the town of Como, where Church Service is held; Chaplain appointed by the Colonial and Continental Church Society.

The Lake of Como is exquisitely lovely, surrounded (except at the southern extremity) by lofty mountains, that run down from the Alps. Bellaggio, a promontory at the junction of the two arms of the lake, is perhaps the most charming spot on the Italian lakes, having a chapel at the hotel (Grande Bretagne), where CHURCH OF ENGLAND service during the season is supplied by the Colonial and Continental Church Society; Hotel Villa Giulia. Cadenabbia.—This place is rising into repute. There is also an English chaplaincy established here. The villas in this part of the lake (Serbelloni, Metzi, and Carlotta especially) with their magnificent gardens and tropical vegetation, should be visited.

VAUDOIS CHURCH.—5, Via Raimondi—Sr. Gay.

Steamers run up and down the lake twice a day, and to Lecco and back daily. Fares, 4 frs. and 2 fr. 10 ct. Boatmen and boat per day, 4 and 5 fr.; by the hour, 1½ to 2 fr. see page 332.

Railway to Milan (from Camerlata) see pp. 243, 244, 252.

Corniche Road (The), from Genoa to Nice, along the Riviera di Ponente, one of the most beautiful drives in Europe. Rail open throughout. See page 249.

Principal towns on the road, Voltri, Savona, Noli, Oneglia, San Remo, Ventimiglia, and Mentone; the two last being in France. For Savona and S. Remo, see those names; nearly all are stations on the rail.

Carriage road good, sometimes stopped by ravages of torrents; rises at times to 1,600 feet above the sea. Views present a succession of ports, gulfs, villages, rich vegetation, and beautiful prospects.

The road itself is narrow, so that two carriages can with difficulty pass; the space being a mere ledge or cornice (hence the name.) Almost all the towns and villages are built with straight very narrow streets, accounted for by the heat of the climate. In many are vast towers, first erected by the population as a protection from the Barbary pirates before 1830. Along the road cactus and aloes are seen with bunches in flower 6 or 7 feet feet high. At Cogoletto, a village near Voltri, is shown a house which an uncertain tradition assigns as that in which Columbus was born. Near Zinolea you cross the Tragenda torrent, leave Vado on the ridge of a mountain, pass through Porto di Vado, and Spatorno, and reach Noli (Hotel de la Post) an ancient republic, the Nolum of the Romans, with 2000 inhabitants.

Near it is Albenga (4000 inhabitants), also a former republic in a broader valley, with a tropical climate, (Hotel d'Italia) 115 mètres above the sea. Gothic cathedral and Roman bath. At Borghetto San Spirito, a curious grotto.

At Ponto Longo are Roman remains; the bridge of solid granite over the Ortovero seems likely to last till the crack of doom. Oneglia (6,439 inhabitants.) Hotel Victoria Di Londra. A fortified town and good port. Its riches consists in its olive orchards. The trees grow in terraces; many are of venerable antiquity. Oneglia oil is noted. Porto S. Maurizio, between Oneglia and S. Remo. For Bordighera, see that name.

Ferrara—Stat.—Pop. (1871) about 20 000.—HOTELS: STELLA D'ORO, DE L'EUROPE, TRE MORI, TRE CORONE.

This city was once the residence of a court celebrated throughout Europe; but its importance has greatly declined; though since its union with the kingdom of Italy it has begun to revive. The chief interest of Ferrara arises from its connexion with the House of D'Este, the House of Brunswick, and the royal family of England. Ferrara was famous for its University. It stands in 100 square miles of marshy soil.

The School of Ferrara, founded and patronised by the D'Este family, boasts of many illustrious names in the arts and sciences, from Ariosto and Bojardo down to our times.

Public buildings—Cathedral, and Churches of S. Francesco, S. Benedetto, S. Paolo, S. Domenico, S. Andrea, Campo Santo and others; its Castle, formerly the Ducal Palace, sometime the residence of the Cardinal Legate; its Gallery of Pictures, lately transferred to the "Pinacotheca," one of the most beautiful palaces of Ferrara. This gallery contains many excellent paintings worth the traveller's notice, particularly Garofalo's Agony in the Garden: the Nativity, by Bastianino; Dosso Dossi's Noah's Ark; and the Fall of Man, by Agostino Caracci. Notice the house of Ariosto; the Palazzo del Magistrato, in a hall of which is the Ariostean Academy; the Studio Publico, or Schools of Medicine and Jurisprudence, containing a rich cabinet of Medals, and a collection of Grecian and Roman inscriptions and antiquities; amongst which is the celebrated Sarcophagus, dedicated by Aurelia Eutychia to her husband. Its chief interest is in the public library, containing 80,000 volumes, and 900 M.S., among which are the Greek Palimpsests of Gregory and St. Chrysostom: some manuscript of Ariosto and Tasso; together with the former's arm-chair of walnut wood, the beautifully executed medal bearing his profile, which was found in his tomb, and his bronze ink-stand. One most interesting object is the Cell in the hospital of St. Anna, shown as the Prison of Tasso. It is below the ground floor, and lighted by a grated window from the yard. On the walls of Tasso's prison are the names of Lord Byron, Lamartine, &c. Observe the Theatre and Citadel.

Florence, sometime the capital of the kingdom of Italy, was formerly the capital of Tuscany, and is remarkable for the beauty of its site. The picturesque grandeur of its buildings can be seen to great advantage from the Boboli gardens, from the Church of San Miniato, and from the Bello Sguardo, a hill whence a fine view may be obtained. Galileo's villa is at some little distance, near the hill of Arcetri. In general, the streets are narrow; its palaces are noble in their architectural beauty, grand design, and exquisite execution. The quays along the Arno, called Lung l'Arno (Lungarno), have been lengthened out, and extend on the right bank as far as the Cascine Gardens. There are seven bridges, including two suspension bridges. Principal Squares: of the Signoria, with its statues, of the Duomo, of Santa Croce, of the Annunziata, the Piazza Vecchia and its statues, and those of Santa Maria Novella and San Spirito.

Modern Florence is built like a pentagon. It contains a very fine Cathedral, called Santa Maria del Fiore, commenced in 1298 by Arnolfo di Lapo, whose design may be seen in Muro's fresco, on the east wall of the chapter-house of Santa Maria Novella. The walls of the cathedral are almost entirely cased with marble. It is 454 feet long and 387 feet high; the transept is nearly 334 feet long, the height of the nave 152 feet, and that of the side aisles 96½ feet. Many architects of great talent were employed in carrying out the erection, among whom were Giotto, Taddeo Gaddi, Andrea Orgagna, Lorenzo di Filippo, and Brunelleschi, to whom its completion was entrusted. In 1558 what was completed of the facade was destroyed by the Provveditore Benedetto Ungucionio, who so defaced it, that not a slab or a column was left entire; and the traveller may now see Giotto's façade in the back ground of a lunette in the outer cloister of St. Marco. The re-building was commenced in 1420, and entrusted to Brunelleschi, who, before his death in 1446, saw the Cupola all but finished. This cupola is octagonal in the plan, and is 138 feet 6 inches in diameter. It served Michel Angelo as a model for St. Peter's. The best view of it is obtained from the south-east; and the traveller should go up the campanile, as a good view can be obtained by his doing so. Over the first door on the north side there are statues attributed to Jacopo della Quercia: d'Anton di Banco, called La Mandorla; beneath, are two small statues by Donatello; and in the lunette is an "Annunciation," by Doni Ghirlandajo; on the south side, the Madonna over the door is attributable to Niccolo Aretino, and that over the other door to Gio Pisano. The reader's particular attention is directed to the Baptistery by the Cathedral, of which the Bronze Gates were called by Michel Angelo, Le Porte del Paradiso.

The small dimensions of the windows, and the rich colours of the glass, cause the interior to look sombre and gloomy. The arches, though pointed, are not truly gothic. The pavement is tesselated with red, blue, and white marble. The stained glass is said to have been executed by a Florentine artist, Domenico Lisi di Gambrasin, in 1434. Above the side door in the west, to the north of the principal entrance, is the monumental fresco painting of Sir John Hawkwood. The tomb of Balthasar Cossa (John XXIII., 1419) is in the Baptistery, and deserves notice. The White Marble Tabernacle, in the Church of Or'San Michele constructed for holding the miracle-working picture by Orgagna, and surmounted by the statue of St. Michael, is worth the traveller's inspection.

The church of Santa Croce, with its monuments of Dante, M. Angelo, Gallileo, &c., will repay a visit. The principal other churches worth notice are, Santa Maria Novella, San Lorenzo, which contains the Laurentian Library, designed by Michael Angelo; and Michael Angelo's Sacristy, being the tombs of the Medici, and the celebrated Statues of Day and Night; the church of San Marco, the Annunciation, and Santo Spirito. The Florentine Palaces will also interest the traveller, among which is the Palazzo Vecchio. There are two markets, the Mercato Vecchio, and the Mercato Nuove. Among the houses are, Casa Buonarotti, the house of Michael Angelo, in Via Ghibellina, one of the most interesting objects in Florence, The Galleria Reale, on the upper floor of the Uffizi, is open to the public every day, except holidays, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. The Gallery of the Palazzo Pitti is open to the public every day except holidays, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. The two galleries contain perhaps the richest and most celebrated collection of statues and pictures in the world, including the Venus de Medici, and works of Raphael. On the first floor of the Uffizi is the Magliabechian Library, so called from its founder, Antonio Magliabecchi. This library, contains 150,000 volumes, besides 12,000 manuscripts, including one of Tasso, with several of Machiavelli, and of Gallileo. The Laurentian Library contains 9,000 manuscripts, including the Pandects, a manuscript of Virgil, two of Tacitus, one of Plutarch, the Decamerone, and several by Dante. The Riccardi Library contains 23,000 volumes and 3,500 manuscripts. The Marucelli contains 45,000 volumes.

ENVIRONS.—Among the places worth a visit are Bellosguardo and Fiesole, Poggio Imperiale, La Certosa, and the Sanctuaries of Vallombrosa, which are 18½ English miles from Florence You can go 28 kilometres to Rigano by rail on the road to Vallombrosa. Alvernia, the sanctuary of St. Francis, also deserves a visit, as well as the Camaldoli Convent, seven hours from Lalvernia, over the mountains among fir forests.

POST OFFICE.—Place della Signora. A letter to London takes 57 hours in transmission.

GENOA, called "La Superba," or the Proud, is one of the chief ports of Italy; and, like Bath, is very up and down. The universal stone here is marble. The three principal streets, Balbi, Nuova, and Nuovissima, are bordered by a noble succession of palaces. Its shops are now better lighted. It is remarkable for its palaces, making it look like a city of kings. Among these, all more or less noticeable for their architecture or paintings, are Palazzo Doria Tursi, in the Strada Nuova, late residence of the Queen Dowager, and afterwards the Jesuits' College; Palazzo Leira, Palazzo Spinola, and the Palazzo Palavicino, No. 327, Strade Carlo, called Palavicino, or "Strip my neighbour," from the family name. Others are the Pallazzi Rosso (or Brignole-Sale), Ducale, Doria, Serra, and Balbi; with the vast Palazzo Durazzo, a Royal Palace since 1815, and splendidly gilt. The floor of the Salle du Trone is red mosaic, mixed with blue. This palace possesses a great number of excellent paintings of all the Italian Schools.

The Cathedral of St. Lorenzo is a noble pile, built in the eleventh century, and restored several times, but especially in 1550, by Galeasso Alessi. The columns of its portals were taken from Almeria as part of the spoils won at the capture of the city. The curious pilasters of the door on the north side of the church, are worth attention. The richest portion of the church is the chapel of St. John the Baptist, into which no female was formerly permitted to enter except on one day of the year, an exclusion imposed by Pope Innocent VIII. The treasures in the Sacristy are well worth inspecting.

The Churches best worth visiting after the Cathedral, are the Annunziata, Saint Ambrogio, with a celebrated assumption by Guido Reni; Filippo-Nere, San Siro, with fine gilt statues of angels; S. Matteo; Santa Maria di Carignano (1552), by Galeasso Alessi a perfect piece of architecture, with remarkable paintings, by Procaccini. From the summit of the last there is a good view of the town, the picturesque port, with its fortifications and lighthouse, and of the Mediterranean sea. Notice also the Municipal Palace; Old Exchange; Compera, or Bank of St. George; and the Academy of Fine Arts, with its Library. It is situated in the Piazzo Carlo Felice, close to that theatre. Other Theatres are the Paganini, Apollo, Andrea Doria, Nazionale, Diseine. The Public Gardens deserve a visit.

Genoa, and the numerous beautiful Villas covering the hills about it, are seen to the greatest advantage from the entrance to the harbour. There is a wonderful arched promenade along the Quay.

The circuit of the city is strongly fortified and protected by 40 bastions.

The beautiful Cemetery about 2 miles out is worthy of a visit, covering a vast area; its cloisters are really magnificent and rich in sculptural tombs, and some of the finest statues to be seen out of Rome and Florence.

Genoa manufactures filagree silver peculiar to itself. The climate, except at one time of the year, is bad for invalids, on account of the rapid changes.

Leghorn was the commercial capital of Tuscany and is still the emporium of the foreign goods and manufactures required for the consumption of this part of Italy. The squares are spacious, the streets regular, well paved, and lighted with gas, with wide and convenient foot-paths on either side. The air is pure, the heat of summer and the winter cold being tempered by the sea-breeze. Leghorn is a favourite resort of people from Rome, Florence, Bologna, Siena, &c.;—in the summer season, the influx of strangers frequently amounting to 10,000 persons. The Government are now enlarging the port to accommodate the increasing trade of the place. The marble group on the quay is a good piece of statuary.

The Old English Cemetery contains the graves of Smollet, Francis Horner, &c. The New Cemetery is 1½ m. distant.

Travellers will do well to provide themselves here with whatever specie they are likely to require. The foreign goods for the supply of all Tuscany are imported by Leghorn.

This city was the capital of the late Duchy, and has the appearance of considerable commercial and manufactural activity. Situated on the banks of the river Serchio in a fertile plain and beautiful valley, it is encompassed by an amphitheatre of hills, which are covered with olive trees. The town is surrounded with ramparts, laid out in pleasant walks, planted with trees, whence some of the finest views may be obtained of the city, the exquisite valley of Serchio, and of the Apennines.

Principal objects are — remains of a Roman amphitheatre, and theatre; the Duomo, or cathedral; the inlaid work of the fine façade and portico. Inside, the painted roof and frescoes; the mosaic pavement representing the judgment of Solomon; the stained glass windows and lastly, the several fine paintings and beautiful works of art. The most remarkable of the churches is that of San Romano, containing the magnificent picture by Fra Bartolommeo, called the "Madonna della Misericordia," an exquisite and wonderful painting; and also the "St. Mary Magdalene," by the same master: both of these paintings are masterpieces.

VAUDOIS CHURCH. — Via S. Pellegrino — Sr. Pistocchi (Evangelist).

Baths of Lucca.—Hotels: D'Europe and D'Amerique. This locality is one of the coolest summer residences in Italy. It was the favourite summer residence of the ex-Dukes. The apartments for the use of visitors are comfortable, and are let on moderate terms. There are very pretty drives. The road now opened up to meet the railway from Bologna to Florence is excellent. Time required between the Baths of Lucca and the railway at Prachia, five hours. The road passes along the river Lima, and runs for a great part through a deep gorge, overhanging which are several romantic villages. Good carriages to Prachia for 30 to 40 francs. Persons going northward from Rome or Florence would be well compensated by taking this route.

ENGLISH CHURCH open from 15th of May to 15th of October. Chaplain, Rev. Rothwell Johnson. Service at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.; Holy Communion on first and third Sundays in the month. Milan, the ancient Mediolanum, founded by the Insubrian Gauls, is the chief city of Lombardy. It was sacked by Attila, A.D. 452 but its destruction was not effected until its surrender to Frederick I., 1162. Its restoration was effected, 1167, by the combined forces of Cremona, Brescia, Bergamo, Mantua and Verona. Milan fell again in 1535, under the power of Charles the Fifth, who fixed the succession of the Duchy in his nephew. The Treaty of Utrecht, in 1713, handed Milan over to Austria: In 1859 it was restored to the new kingdom of Italy.

The city has 10 Gates, all identified with some traditionary recollection, and remarkable for their massive proportions and architectural designs. Notice particularly the Porta della Pace. The Duomo, begun 1386, is one of the finest cathedrals in Italy; and, after St. Peter's at Rome, is considered to be the largest church in Europe. It is built entirely of white marble from the Simplon: and, although architecturally defective, will not fail to strike the traveller with admiration for elaborate detail and richness of decoration. It has 135 spires or pinnacles. The statues outside amount to 1923; in the interior to 670. The magnificent Virgin's Chapel defies all description. Among its relics may be enumerated —three nails from the Crucifixion, the Virgin's shroud, a seamless coat of our Lord, &c. It should be ascended to the top.

Leonardo da Vinci's celebrated picture of the Last Supper, in the refectory of the Dominican Church of Santa Maria delle Grazie, is worth visiting. Note, also, the Churches of St. Ambrose, (very ancient), and S. Lorenzo (octagonal), and the Columns of S. Lorenzo. The rich Ambrosian Library contains some rare volumes and manuscripts. The Monasterio Maggiore, and the Church of S. Eustorgio, are especially worth seeing. The Ospedale Maggiore is a grand establishment for the sick, founded by Francesco Sforza in 1456.

The great Theatre of La Scala, opened 1778, can hold 4000 persons, and has six rows of boxes, The pit, with the orchestra, holds 1100 places. General entrance for 3½ fr., Extra—Reserved seats: two first rows near Orchestra 8 fr., arm-chair, fauteuil, 5 fr. The four first rows of boxes are purchased by the Milanese nobility. A box of the first row costs 2000 fr. for the season of six months. A fine statue of Leonardo da Vinci, in the Piazza opposite, was uncovered in September 1872. Teatro del Verme s a new one (1872,) for grand operas. The town of Milan and proprietors of boxes subscribe since the withdrawal of grant by the Government. The orchestra consists of 100 musicians. Modern Amphitheatre built by Napoleon. The Brera, one of the finest picture galleries in Italy, containing a masterpiece of Guercino, and another of Dominichino. The best promenade is the Viale dei Colli.

The climate is somewhat cold and damp, though drier than the average of English climates during the winter.

The traveller will find the rail from Milan to the Lakes of Como, Maggiore, and Garda, very pleasant and agreeable, the country along being beautifully fertile, and embellished with villas. Three miles distant from Milan is the famous Abbey of Chiaravelle—a large, and richly decorated church. This, and the cathedral of Monza (also within an easy drive), should be visited. One of the most pleasant excursions from Milan is to the Monastery of La Certosa—(see Pavia). "Try the wine called Gattinara." B. S. C.

Naples is the chief city of Southern Italy, and has a south-eastern aspect. There are five principal entrances; that by the Bridge della Maddalena, near the Bay, is the most striking. Most of the houses are lofty and the streets narrow; there are however several open spaces or squares; as, Piazza del Municipo, Piazza del Plebiscito, in front of the Royal Palace, Piazza Dante, extremity of Via Roma; Piazza Cavour, near the Museum &c. The aqueduct water is bad for drinking, but that of the city springs is good. The number of Churches at Naples is about 330, and those best worth a visit are the Gesu Nuovo, in the style of St. Peter's at Rome; the San Severo a private chapel, (good statues of Christ, of Modesty, and Christ on the Cross); San Francesco da Paola: the Cathedral; the San Martino, (extremely rich in paintings and precious marbles); the Santa Chiara or Second Cathedral, one of the finest in Naples; St. Domenico Maggiore, containing the tomb of the Anjouin and Aragonese monarchs, and many precious objects of art Also, San Severino e Soggio; La Incoronata, remarkable for the afresco of Giotto; San Filippo Neri; San Lorenzo Maggiore; St. Maria del Carmine; all of them adorned with pictures, &c., of the first masters.

Permissions to see nearly all the Palaces are given gratis. The Royal Palaces of Naples, Caserta, Capo di Monte, &c., may be viewed gratis by special permission. The Museo Nazionale (formerly Borbonico) will repay a good many visits, it possessing, besides a picture gallery, the fresco paintings, mosaics, gold and silver ornaments, etruscan vases, &c., discovered in the excavations of Pompeii and Herculaneum. Indeed this Museum is in some points unique, especially in its treasures of ancient art. The building is divided into the following departments:—Ground Floor, 1. Mural paintings and frescoes; 2. Ancient marble sculpture; 3. Egyptian and Oscan antiquities; 4. Ancient bronze statues; 5. Inscriptions and the Farnese Hercules staircase; 6. Mediæval antiquities, stained glass, terra cotta; 7. Papyrus; 8. Libraries; 9. Gems; 10. Medals; 11. Small bronzes; 12. Vases; 13. Suret cabinet; 14. Picture gallery. Open every day from 9 to 3; on Sundays from 10 to 1, free. Entrance Fee other days, 1 fr. The Royal Library is annexed to the Museo Nazionale and contains 250,000 volumes, besides more than 1700 papyri, found in Herculaneum! The Brancacciana Library contains 50,000 volumes.

The Albergo dei Poveri is also a fine establishment for paupers and orphans. An institution called the Monte de Misericordia, founded by Charles III. It affords fixed relief to about 5000 poor, and pays the debts of deserving individuals.

THE ENVIRONS abound with beauty and delightful reminiscences; including Virgil's Tomb, the grotto of Pausilippo; the ruins of Pozzuoli; Lake Avernus, and the classic shores of Baiæ and Misenum; the islands of ISCHIA, Procida, and Capri; the coast to Castellamare, the orange groves of Sorrento; Vesuvius, and the fields of Ava; the streets of Pompeii, and the excavations of Herculaneum.

Ascent of Vesuvius—occupies about 8 hours; it is advisable to take refreshments with you, and to ride as far as horses can go. The Guide Office is at Resina (p 523); Fixed Tariff: guide 6 fr., horse 5 fr., donkey 4 fr. Punta del Nasone, on Monte Somma, is 3747 ft. above the sea; but the highest point, Punta del Palo, is nearly 4000 ft.

A grand eruption broke out on 25th April, 1872, in the Atrio de Cavallo, near the Observatory; the lava pouring from four new mouths, down to Torre del Greco, Camaldoli, Resina, &c. Columns of dense white smoke like fleeces of wool ascended to a height of 5000 ft., attended by earthquake shocks, and a deafening roar, "like millions of claps of thunder"; while clouds of ashes, dust, and stones were carried a distance of 10 or 20 miles. This magnificent sight lasted till 2nd May. About 60 deaths were recorded; and two villages were overwhelmed, viz., Massa and S. Sebastiano.

The ruins of Pæstum may be visited in a day. The best way is to go by evening train to Salerno and make arrangements for carriage and lunch before retiring to rest, have an early start in the morning, and return to Naples in evening. A most interesting excursion; the three magnificent ruined temples of Neptune, Vesta or Ceres, and Basilica, being in a very fine state of preservation; they are supposed to be 2500 years old. Another delightful excursion is by railway to Castellamare (1 hour) and from thence to Sorrento, by carriage along the side of the Bay (1¾h); one of the most beautiful rides in the world.

FESTIVALS.—The 8th of September (the Nativity of the Virgin) is the greatest festival in the year. Another great feast is that of St. Januarius the martyr, whose blood is said to liquify on that occasion, 19th Sept., as well as on the first Saturday of May and December 16th. The body of the saint is in the crypt of the cathedral of San Genuaro. Festival of the Constitution, first Sunday in June; there is usually a grand review of Military and the National Guard, Ravenna.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 58,905.—HOTELS:—LA SPADA, D'ORO, EUROPA.

Formerly the capital of a Legation, now the seat of a very ancient bishopric, founded, they say, by St. Peter's disciple, Apollinaris, A.D., 44. Here the Exarchs of Italy and the Lombard Kings were once seated. The city is about three miles in circumference. By means of a canal, a communication is maintained with the Adriatic and its port, which is the great outlet of Romagna, and the means of carrying on a trade with Lombardo-Venetian Italy. The Cathedral contains, in the Chapel of the SS. Sacramento, Guido's celebrated paintings—the Fall of the Manna, and the lunette representing the meeting of Melchizedek and Abraham. The other pictures worth notice are the Grand Banquet of Ahasuerus, by Carlo Bononi, and Camuccini's Consecration of the Church, by St. Orso. On the high altar is a Greek marble urn containing the remains of nine bishops of that see, and the silver crucifix is exquisitely wrought with sculptures of the 6th century. The Chapel of the Madonna del Sudore, contains a marble urn in which repose the ashes of St. Barbatian; and in the vestibule of the sanctuary is the Paschal Calendar, remarkable as a specimen of astronomical knowledge in the early times of Christianity. In this place we also see Guido's beautiful painting,—the Angel offering Bread and Wine to Elijah. In the sacristy is the pastoral chair of St. Maximian. Some fragments of its celebrated door of vine wood are still preserved behind the grand door. The ancient baptistery, called "S. Giovanni in Fonte," is an octagonal building with a cupola adorned with mosaics.

The magnificent Basilica of San Vitale, built in the reign of Justinian, by St. Ecclesius, furnished to Charlemagne a model for his church at Aix-la-Chapelle. It contains excellent mosaics. In the Chapel SS. Sacramento is a gilded ciborium, said to be by Michael Angelo; a picture of St. Benedict, by Francesco Gersi; and the Assumption of St. Gertrude, by Andrea Barbiani. In the vestibule of the sacristy is a superb bass-relief of Greek marble, representing the "Apotheosis of Augustus," as also many paintings of considerable merit. Notice especially, the Tomb of the Exarch Isaac, the great ornament of Armenia, erected to his memory by his wife Susanna. He was the 8th Exarch of Ravenna, and died A.D., 644.

The other Churches worth visiting are the Basilica of S. Giovanni Evangelista, the church of S. Giovanni Battista, of San Vittore, of San Domenico, of S. Appollinare Nuovo, of S. Francesco, of Sta. Agatha, of Sta. Maria in Porto, and of SS. Nazario e Celso, also called, Mausoleum of Galla Placidia, daughter of Theodocius the great.

The Tomb of Dante, rebuilt 1784, near the Church of S. Francesco, and the house (No. 293), in which Byron lived, 1819. Few monuments in Italy excite so profound an interest as the tomb of Dante.

ROME, the capital of the Kingdom of Italy, the city of the Popes, and once of the Cæsars, is situate on the Tiber, partly on a plain, and partly on ow hills with their intersecting valleys, about sixteen miles from the mouth of the river. The Tiber divides the city into two unequal parts. The smaller, on the right bank is called the Leonine city, and Trastevere. Walls of 15 miles in circuit surround the entire city. The modern city is built upon the Campus Martius of the ancient Romans, lying along the banks of the Tiber, to the north of the Seven Hills which formed the site of ancient Rome. Four of these hills, once the scene of so many exciting events, are now almost entirely deserted, or covered by gardens, vineyards, broken buildings, or ruins. The streets, though spacious, are winding, and have been lighted with gas for many years.

Rome is entered on the high road from Florence by the Porta del Popolo, built by Vignola, from designs by Michael Angelo, in 1561. The gate opens upon the spacious Piazza del Popolo, a rather broken area at the foot of Monte Pincio. In the centre stands the fine obelisk of Rameses I.

Some of the streets are re-named; thus V. Porta Pia is V. del Venti di Settembre (when the Italian troops occupied Rome, 1871). The new Senate House is at the Palazzo Madama; a House for the Deputies, is in the former Police Office on Monte Citori.

CHURCHES.—They are 364 in number, seven of which are called Basilicæ; the principal ones are as follows:—St. Peter's, St. John Lateran, Santa Maria Maggiore, and Santa Croce in Gerusalemme, within the city; and St. Paolo, San Lorenzo, and San Sebastian, extra muros.

The largest, St. Peter's, stands on a slight acclivity, in the Leonine city, in the N.W. corner of Rome. It is built in the form of a Latin cross, the nave being in length 607 feet and the transept 444 feet. The east front is 396 feet wide and 160 feet high, whilst the pillars composing it are each 88 feet high and 8½ in diameter. The height of the Dome, from the pavement to the top of the cross, is 448 feet. In front of the church there is a large piazza. It is erected on the site of Nero's Circus. It occupied a period of 176 years in building, and required 350 years to perfect it. It cost £10,000,000; covers eight English acres, and is kept in repair at a cost of £6,300 per annum.

The English traveller cannot fail to be interested by a visit to the Chapel of the Presentazione, in which is the tomb of Maria Clementina Sobieski wife of the Pretender, James III.; she died at Rome in 1745. Opposite to this is Canova's celebrated "Monument of the Stuarts." The expense of this monument was defrayed by George IV.

San Giovanni in Laterano, St. John Lateran, is the Pope's Metropolitan Church, he being its official minister. It is in this church, also, that the Popes are crowned. It contains the famous chapel of the Corsini, reckoned the finest in the world, and stated to have cost £400,000. The Lateran Palace and Museum should be visited.

The other basilicæ, particularly St. Maria Maggiore and Saint Paolo, are equally interesting to the traveller, especially the latter, which is outside the Walls on the site of a former basilica, as old as Constantine, burnt about 30 years ago, except some valuable pictures. The new church now replacing it, is a superb building. San Luigi de Francesi, the splendid marble Jesuit church of the Greek and a multitude of others, deserve close attention.

We must not omit among the sacred sights of Rome the Catacombs, especially of St. Calixtus The best guide to these interesting memorials of the early christians, will be found in Cavaliere Rossi's Roma Sotterranea.

PALACES — The Vatican stands prominent among the palaces here, as invested with the greatest interest, whether we regard its identification with all ecclesiastical history, or the influence it exercised over christendom for 400 years. Its existence dates from the eighth century; being dilapidated, it was rebuilt by Innocent III. in the twelfth century. It is the winter palace of the Pope, and stands over the Vatican hill, near to St. Peter's. It covers a large space, and is 1,151 English feet long, and 767 feet broad. It contains 4,422 chambers, and has eight grand staircases and two hundred smaller ones, and twenty courts In it are the Proclementine and Chiaramonti Museums, both filled with masterpieces of art, including besides others the Transfiguration of Raphael, the Apollo Belvidere and the Etruscan Museum, collected by Popes Gregory 16th and Pius 9th. Here are also the Capella Sistina, or Sistine Chapel built in 1473, and the Vatican Library, containing the richest collection of manuscripts and pictures in the world.

The Quirinal, or Palace of Monte Cavallo, on the Quirinal hill, is the residence of the King of Italy, and Prince Umberto.

The Capitol now occupies the square of the Capitoline hill, under the name of the Piazza del Campidoglio, the site of the ancient Capitol and contains the palaces of the Senator and Municpal Magistrates of Rome. The Collegio della Sapienza, a University of Rome, founded by Innocent IV. in 244, is one of the oldest in Europe. The Royal Lyceum, formerly the Roman College, and the College de Propaganda Fide, are likewise worth visiting.

No one should omit to visit the lakes of Albano & Nemi, & the ruins of Tusculum, in the environs.

The subterranean church of St. Peter's should on no account be passed by; there are many tombs of Popes, Emperors, and Kings, including the Stuarts. Orders to be obtained of Cardinal Monaco, Palazzo Altiemps. Also the Scala Regia and Grand Entrance to the Vatican, the north of the Basilica.

Antiquities (Pagan):—These are legion, and must be looked for in a Special Guide (see Bradshaw's Italy) we can only enumerate; 1 the Colosseum Amphitheatre; 2, the ruins in the Forum, including Temples of Vespasian, Concord, and Saturn; the Arches of Constantine and Titus; the Palace of The Cæsars on the Palatine; the Baths of Caracalla and Diocletian; the Circus Maximus; the Cloaca Maxima; the Aqueducts; the Tombs of Cecilia Metella, and of the Scipios, &c., &c.

PROTESTANT BURIAL GROUND, near the Porta San Paolo, adjoining the Pyramid of Caius Cestius. There are buried the poets Shelley and Keats, Gibson and Wyatt the sculptors and Bell the anatomist.

VILLA TORLONIA.—On Wednesdays, from 1 to 3.

VILLA MELLINI.—Daily, by paying half-a-lira.

Note.—Those who are unable to devote more than a week to Rome, may perhaps find the following suggestions useful. By carrying out these directions, they will be able to see Rome very well in a week's time. It will be important, however, to keep close to the order given below; many of the most interesting palaces and villas, containing the choicest collection of art-treasures, being only opened to the public once or twice a week. When a fee is required, 50c. will be sufficient for a party of two. Over that number, it will be advisable to give a franc.

MONDAY.—Church of St. Carlo in Corso, St. Peter's, Vatican Museum and Gallery (this alone will occupy several hours.) The gardens on the Pincian Hill are worth seeing. They are within a few minutes' walk of the principal hotels, and form a delightful evening's drive.

TUESDAY should be devoted to the galleries of paintings in the following palaces; and, as they close at 3 or 4, it will be advisable to start early. Visit the following in succession:—Palazzo Doria, Pal Colonna.

WEDNESDAY.—Start early in a carriage for Tivoli (the ancient Tibur), 18 miles distant from Rome. Stop two hours en route at the Villa Hadrian, one of the most wonderful ruins in Italy. Tivoli, see below.

THURSDAY.—Pantheon, Column of Trajan, Capitol Museum, Roman Forum and Arches of Septimius, Titus, and Constantine, the Colosseum, Lateran Museum and Church (with the two wonderful chapels of Corsini and Torlonia), St. Maria Maggiore, P. Corsini, P. Spada.

FRIDAY.—Villa Albani and Ruins of the Baths of Diocletian, St. Paul's Basilica (a magnificent church, erected within the last few years, at the cost of about 25 million francs), Pyramid of C Cestius, Temple of Vesta.

SATURDAY.—Palazzo Sciarra, P. Barberini Churches of Jesu, and S. Maria Sopra-Minerva.

OBS.—Nearly all the churches of Rome are worth seeing; they should not be passed over. For particular account, see Bradshaw's Italy.

A carriage will be absolutely necessary on Thursday or Friday.

Siena.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 22,970.—INNS:—AQUILA NERA, near the railway station; LE ARME D' INGHILTERRA, IL SEGGI, LA SCALA, and the DONZELLI.

Is the chief city of one of the five compartments of Tuscany. Its chief objects of attraction are the Duomo or Cathedral, striped marble outside and fine paintings, subterranean baptistery, library with statues, and is well worthy of an hour's visit; the Mosaics in the floor of the Choir are unique. The Accademia delle Belle Arte; the Churches of St. Agostino, San Christoforo; the Palazzo Publico the University, and the Library, situated in the great hall of the Accademia degli Intronoli. The Picture Gallery contains 600 paintings. St. Domenicos has some good pictures. The house and cell of St. Catherine are still shown. The Gates of the city and the citadel are also worth inspection. The old city, standing high, is cool and healthy, and has no mosquitoes. Here is some street painting. Siena school numbers amongst its artists, Peruggi, Vanni, Beccafumi, Perugino, Fra Bartolommeo, Riccio, &c.

The rail to Orvieto passes Salcini, where there is a curious bit of deception, viz., a sham cupola, painted on a flat surface. From here an omnibus runs to the beatiful Baths of Cianciano, which has a good Hotel kept by the Chevalier Cassuchini.

Spezia.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 24,139.—HOTELS. GRAND HOTEL DE LA VILLE DE MILAN.

HOTEL DE LA CROIX DE MALTE.

A considerable town and naval port, beautifully situated at the foot of the Gulf of Spezia, about 40 miles from Genoa. A national Arsenal, and Dockyard on a large scale, are in progress. Of late years this has become a favourite and much frequented watering-place. The bathing is excellent, and there is extensive accommodation. Spezia is also much resorted to by the Italian nobility during the summer, as the country all around is very beautiful, and the scenery the Gulf affords is a great attraction for aquatic excursionists. Fine Caves on the W. side of the Gulf. Between this and Pisa, is Via Reggio, a small bathing place, with two Hotels and several Pensions. Good walks in the neighbouring pine forests.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL—J. Greenham, Esq., Acting. AMERICAN CONSUL—G. Rice, Esq.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SERVICE on Sunday, at 11 a.m., at the Hotel de la Ville de Milan.

CONVEYANCES—Rail, see pages 260, 262.

Stresa.—HOTEL AND PENSION des Iles Borromées, just facing the Lake (a most beautiful situation) affords excellent first rate accommodation.

A delightful place to stop at, and the real starting place for visiting the Borromean Islands, in Lake Maggiore, and the Lake Orta at Monterone.

All the Steamers touch at Stresa, and it communicates by diligence with all parts of Switzerland. There is an office in the Hotel des Iles Borromées for the Swiss diligences, extra Poste and carriages for excursions to Simplon, St. Gothard, and St. Bernardino. The climate is so temperate at Stresa, that visitors often remain the whole year. Wonderfully fine view from M. Monterone, quite practicable for ladies, but guide necessary—3 fr.

English Service in Summer, at Des Iles Hotel; supplied by Colonial and Cont. Church Society.

St. Germano.—Stat.—Pop. 10,000, H REALE. The Roman Casinum, on the Rome and Naples line, under Monte Casino, where a famous Convent was founded by St. Benedict, A.D. 528. Its church and library deserve notice. Roman amphitheatre, and numerous antiquities.

Ruins of various temples and other Roman buildings, including baths and amphitheatre, &c. It is about 70 miles from Rome. At hand is the celebrated Fall of Terni, on the Velino, 600 to 900 feet down. It is within a short walk. Mules or donkeys can be had. Railway, p. 260.

Tivoli—Pop. 8,000.—New Hotel lately opened.

Situated in the Campagna di Roma, 18 miles from Rome, in a delightful situation. It is the seat of several remarkable antiquities,—the remains of the Temple of Vesta, of the Sybil, the Villa of Maecenas, the Villa of the Emperor Adrian as Teverone forms a picturesque cascade at Tivoli the former one has recently been destroyed, by diverting the river into a new channel; but the existing cascade is not inferior to its predecessor.

Near Tivoli is Mentana, where the bands of Garibaldi were defeated by the Papal troops under General Kanzler in November, 1867.

Treviso.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 28,295.—Inns: Hotel Stella d'Oro; Posta; Aquila; Quattro Corone.

Many elegant villas are met with on approaching the town, which is 17 miles from Venice, and is itself adorned with a number of churches and palaces, and has a handsome Town-hall and an Academy of Arts and Sciences. Manufactories of cloth, paper, &c. Among the churches the most worthy of note are that of St. Nicholas, an antique structure, and the yet unfinished cathedral of St. Peter's, in which are paintings by Titian Domenichino, &c.; it has two theatres, and near it is the magnificent Villa Manfrini.

Conveyances.—Railway, see pages 228, 253.

The fiacre or carriages ply for hire in the Piazza Castello, and answer as well as the expensive carriages of the hotels.

Turin is the capital of Piedmont, and a thriving bran-new city, without much historical or antiquarian interest except such as has been collected at the Museum. It has three handsome streets, Dora Grossa, Nuova, and del Po, and is situated on the left bank of the Po, near its confluence with the Dora Riparia, in full view of Monte Rosa and the Alps. It contains about 110 churches and chapels, all of which are remarkable for their architecture and for the splendour of their ornaments. The Metropolitan Church of St. John the Baptist is in the florid Gothic style. It is approached by twenty steps. The nave is vast. Behind the high altar is a second church to which you ascend by thirty-seven steps. It is of a semicircular form and of ancient marble. The method of lighting the interior through the dome is quite original. This church contains the tombs of several eminent persons, including Emanuel Philibert, by Marochetti, also that of Marie Adelaide, wife of Victor Emanuel, who died 1856. The chapel of San Sudario is singularly and richly built by P. Guarini. S. Filippo Neri, the largest church of Turin. San Lorenzo is in a fine bold style. The square of St. Charles is the finest in Turin. It is an Archiepiscopal see. Notice the University, the Military Academy, the Royal Academy of Sciences, the Academy of Arts, the superb Museum of Egyptian Antiquities, the Hydraulic Building, the Palazzo Madama, and Private Galleries of Marquis Cambiano and Count Caratch, with many others, are all worth a visit. At the Pinacotecas Van Dyck's Children of Chas. I. with others by that master; also many by Guercino.

In the Royal Palace the Salle des Gardes deserves attention. It is adorned with fine frescoes.

In the Rue de l'Academie des Sciences is the statue of Vincenzo Gioberti. Though attired in a modern costume the pose and attitude are fine, the head is handsome, and the general effect happy.

Environs.—The walks around are beautiful, and in its delightful neighbourhood rises the chain of heights called Collina, on which are built superb and picturesque villas. Several small but elegant towns surround Turin, within a radius of a few miles, all of which possess objects of interest, such as the Royal Palace at Stupinigi, one of the finest summer residences in Europe; the Veterinary School at Venerria Reale; the magnificent church at La Superga, five miles from Turin containing the mausoleum of the Royal Family; Agri, Rivoli, and Moncalliere, with their royal palaces and chateaux, are worth visiting.

Post Office.—Situated in the Palazzo Carignano. The latest hour for posting French and English letters is 10 p.m. Electric Telegraph Office, in the Piazza Castello, adjoining the Foreign Office.

Udine.— Stat.— Pop. (1871) 29,630.—HOTEL L'EUROPA.

A busy town, in the territory of Venice, forty-seven miles north-west of Trieste. Notice the Cathedral, a fine structure; the Palace of the Proveditori; a handsome opera-house; the Bishop's palace; and the chapel of the Toreani, in which are some excellent reliefs by Toretti. The principal square is adorned with the monuments of the Peace of Campo Formio and of Francis I. There is a noble prospect from the tower of the castle. The Campo Santo is considered to be one of the most beautiful cemeteries in Italy.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Venice and Nabresina for Trieste and Vienna, see pages 231, 253.

Varallo.— Pop. 3,500.—HOTEL DE POSTE.

This town is only a short distance from the Turin Railway, near Lakes Maggiore and d'Orta. It is the birthplace of several eminent painters, and is, therefore, rich in fine paintings and frescoes. There is a magnificent Sanctuary, containing fifty handsome chapels, filled with statues of great beauty and colossal dimensions; there is also a splendid view from this edifice. From Varallo cross the Colma to Pella on the Lake of Orta. mule road, time, 5 hours, boat across to Orta, half-an-hour. Omnibus once a day to Arona. Near Varallo there are gold, silver, nickel, and cobalt mines, which are worked by foreigners Railway, see page 255.

Mosquito Curtains are absolutely essential, from the middle of July. Vinegar or ammonia rubbed over the face and hands is a good preservative; the former is a good cure for bites

Porters attend the Station from all the hotels. When you alight from the train call out the name of the hotel you wish to go to, and the porter of it will engage a gondola, and see to your baggage; this saves trouble and annoyances. If you engage your own gondola, 5 cents. per package is expected as the porter's fee. On leaving Venice (which is a free port) all baggage is subject to be examined at the station before it is allowed to pass. A fee equal to the number of packages, say 1 to 2f., will save a deal of annoyance and time.

Venice, capital of Venetia, now an important section of the Kingdom of Italy, is built on 72 islands on piles in the midst of a salt lagune, or shallow lake. It is divided into two unequal parts by the Canalazzo, or Grand Canal, the course of which through the city follows the form of an inverted S; is 300 feet wide, crossed near the middle of its course by the Ponte di Rialto, a splendid marble structure of one spacious arch. In the midst of the labyrinth of canals and streets there are several large Piazzas, nearly all of which are adorned with fine churches or palaces. The principal of these is the Piazza di San Marco, a large oblong area 562 feet by 252 surrounded by elegant buildings, and containing at its eastern extremity the metropolitan Church of San Marco, a singular but brilliant combination of the Gothic and the Oriental styles of architecture.

In the Piazza is the Campanile, 316 feet high, and 42 feet square, with a pyramidal top, to which the ascent is made by an inclined plane. Adjoining the church are the ancient palace of the Doge, the prisons, and other public offices of the late Venetian Republic. San Marco was erected into a cathedral in the year 1817, when the patriarchal seat was removed to it from San Pietro. It was founded in the year 828 by the Doge Giustiniano Participazio for the purpose of receiving the relics of St. Mark, which had just then been translated from Alexandria by Bono the Tribune of Malamocco, and Rustico of Torcello. The Library of St. Mark is a nobly designed building, and consists of two orders—the Doric and Ionic. The Zecca or Mint adjoins the Library on the Molo. The Doge's Palace, or the Palazzo Ducale, is situated on the eastern side of the Piazzetta. The first palace built on the spot was in 820. This was destroyed in a tumult, and the Doge Pietro Ursolo built a second one in 970, which was destroyed by a great fire in 1120, and rebuilt in 1354-5 by the Doge Marino Faliero.

The following Churches should be seen—S. Maria della Salute, S. S. Giovanni e Paolo, S. Sebastiano S. Maria dei Frari, S. Rocco, The Scalzi, S. Lorenzo, Il Redentore, S Giorgio Maggiore, and the Gesuiti, (Gesuiti): all remarkable for rich marbles, or the works of Venetian masters, some of which have been unfortunately destroyed by a recent fire. An intelligent Gondolier may serve as a guide.

Palaces.—Among these are the Palazzo Giovanelli, one of the richest in Venice, and Palazzo Mocenigo, long the residence of Byron. Others are

The Academia delle Belle Arte is located in the ancient Convento della Carità. The house of Titian will repay a visit. The chief Theatre is La Fenice. On the Lido or narrow island which makes the shore of the Adriatic, is the Armenian Convent of St. Lazzaro where Byron stayed some time.

Gondolas.—There are upwards of 4,000 gondolas. Gondolas, with 1 boatman, 1 lira (10d.) the first hour and 50 cents. for each successive hour; gondolas, with 2 boatmen, double the above fares. Omnibus gondolas, for one place, to any part of the city in the line of route, 25 cents.; ferry across Grand Canal, by day, 6 cents., by night, 9 cents.; iron bridge toll, 3 cents. The gondolas at the railway terminus, 1 boatman, 2 frs., 2 boatmen, 3 frs.: these men load your baggage in the gondola, and deliver it at the door of your apartment, at the hotel. A good gondolier serves as valet de place. Gondolas may be hired for about 30 frs. per week. The tide rises three feet. The steamer to Chioggia and back, gives a good notion of the Lagoon, and of the immense sea-walls which protect it.

Vercelli.—Stat.—Pop. 22,000.—Hotels:—

Leone d'Oro. La Posta.

A venerable city, situated close to the right bank of the Sesia, on the road from Turin to Milan by Novara. Its chief objects of attraction are the Duomo, of white marble with 4 steeples and numerous statues, the library of which contains valuable manuscripts, the most remarkable being a Gospel, written by St. Eusebius in the fourth century, and Anglo-Saxon Poems, brought, it is said, from England by Cardinal Bicchieri Papal legate to England in the reigns of John and Henry III, the gothic church of St. Andrew, and the Hospital, both founded by Bicchieri; the church of St. Christopher, which possesses some Italian frescoes of Gandenzio Ferrari, and some excellent paintings; besides many other churches.

It was near here that Marius defeated the Cimbri, 101, B. C.

Conveyances—Railway, see page 256.

Vaudois Church.—2, Via S. Pietro Incarnario—Sr. Rostagno.

An ancient city, connected with Venice by railway. It has a pleasant and picturesque situation; the Adige, which is crossed by four stone bridges, flowing through it, dividing the city into two parts. The buildings are generally very fine, owing, to the great quantity of marble employed. The most remarkable of the ancient edifices of Verona is the Roman Amphitheatre. It is built of Verona marble, and the interior is nearly perfect, owing to the care that has been taken of it. The Palazzo del Consiglio contains some good paintings and statues to celebrated men of Verona, among which are Pliny, the younger, Macer, Catullus, Cornelius Nepos, and Scipione Maffei. The Museo Lapidario contains a very interesting collection of antiquities. There are a number of churches worthy of remark. The principal of which is the Cathedral, an ancient gothic building with a fine porch, the which is guarded by the two celebrated Paladins Roland and Oliver. It contains some good paintings; among which is an Assumption, by Titian, and considered as one of his best works. San Zenone, an interesting edifice in the Lombard style, with a front of marble, and sides of alternate brick and marble. San Fermo Maggiore is a fine ancient gothic building, containing some remarkable monuments, and a few good pictures. Santa Eufemia is rich in frescoes and paintings, a number of which are by Carotta. It also contains some remarkable monuments. SS. Nazarioe Celso contains a great number of good paintings and frescoes. Santa Anastasia is a remarkable building, rich in paintings and altars, and some old frescoes. Verona possesses a philharmonic institution, a society of science and art, academies of painting, music, and agriculture, two libraries, a lyceum, &c. The tomb of Romeo and Juliet is shown in the garden of the Orfanotrofio, but the real tomb was destroyed many years ago.

This town was the seat of the Scaligers, whose fine mausoleum stands in the Piazza dei Signori For its monuments refer to Maffei's, "Verona Illustrata."

Viterbo.—Pop.(1871) 20,640.—HOTEL AQUILA NERA.

A neatly built episcopal city, at the foot of a hill, surrounded with gardens, vineyards, and country houses, 42 miles north-west of Rome. Of its public buildings the churches only are worth visiting, particularly Santa Rosa, held in great veneration by the people.

Vogogna.—HOTEL:—LA COURONNE.

A small town on the Simplon road convenient for travellers proceeding up the valley of Anzasca to Macugnaga. The char road is open to Ponte Grande, where there is a good Inn. There is a bridle path from Ponte Grande to Macugnaga and Borca. "Hotel Cacciatore" a clean little Inn. The Glacier at the foot of Monte Rosa is only one hour farther, and then the pass of the Monte Moro commences, leading from Macugnaga to Visp in the Valois. From Vogogna to Ponte Grande is 3½ hours and from Ponte Grande to Borca 5 hours. The scenery on the whole journey is superb. This is a fine excursion for pedestrians, and the accommodation is good at Vanzone and Borca, and very fair at Macugnaga.

SICILY.

This beautiful island stands in the Mediterranean Sea, adjoining the south-western extremity of Italy, from which it is separated by the narrow strait or faro of Messina. Its greatest length is about 190 miles, and its greatest breadth about 106; the superficial Area is 8,067 English square miles; and the Population (1871) 2,565,323. The island is studded with hills, among which, and on their tops, are plains of moderate extent, some of which are 1,000 feet above the level of the sea. For its most striking natural feature, Mount Ætna, see below. For Greek remains, see Girgenti, Syracuse, &c.

Sicily produces silk in quantities, to the extent of about 400,000 lbs., the greater part of which is manufactured into ordinary silk stuffs. At Catania cotton is also slightly cultivated. Its fishery and sulphur trades are productive Sicily is divided into seven Valli or Provinces; capital, Palermo

Travelling.—The Railway is open from Palermo to Cammerata; from Messina to Catania, and Syracuse; and from Catania to Leonforte, under Mount Ætna. There is a carriage road from Messina to Palermo, through the centre of the island, with a branch to Girgenti. There is also a carriage road from Messina to Catania and Syracuse, following the coast and the rail. The rest must be done on mules. The landlord of the TRINACRIA, or either of the other respectable hotels at Palermo, will make the necessary arrangements. The charge for three mules, guide, muleteer, provisions and lodging, for one traveller, is 5½ piastres, or 23s. per day. Fees for service, police, and local guides extra. Little improvement has been introduced in the communications since annexation to Italy; nor is travelling safer than formerly, the island being still infested with brigands.

Aci Reale.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 35,790.

A clean and well-built town, north-east of Catania, standing on streams of lava, with a castle, mineral waters, the cave of Polephemus, the grotto of Galatea, &c.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 267.

Alcamo.—Pop. 22,000

An archiepiscopal city, 25 miles west of Palermo. It is 3 hours to the site of the ancient Segesta, which has a Temple in good preservation.

Arragona.—Pop. 7,000.

A small town with old Castle, six miles north-east of Girgenti. It is remarkable for its picturesque gallery and antiquities, and also for the singular mud volcano of Macalubo in its neighbourhood.

Bronte.—Pop. 12,000.

A small town a considerable elevation above the sea, under Mount Ætna, which gave Nelson the title of duke, and gives name to a finely flavoured wine made here, but not much exported.

Calatafimi.—Pop. 10,000.

Founded like Alcamo, to which it is near, by the Saracens; and celebrated for the victory gained by Garibaldi over the Bourbon troops, in 1860.

Catania.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 84,400—HOTELS:

GRAND HOTEL DE CATANE (Grande Albergo).

HOTEL CENTRAL, FRANCIA, ETNA, VITTORIA, ELEPANTE.

A large archiepiscopal city, at the foot of Mount Ætna, with wide and straight streets, and a recently constructed Mole; founded by a colony from Chalcis, 750 years B.C. Its Greek amphitheatre is buried out of sight. It has suffered much from earthquakes, is almost built of lava, and has been nearly destroyed by Mont Etna several times, but especially in 1669 when 27,000 persons perished. The cholera carried off 7,000 in 1837. It contains a University, a Lyceum, a Public Library, the Biscari Museum, and other literary institutions; with 108 churches and many conventa. It is now lighted with gas. The silk stuffs rival the best in the kingdom. An excellent road runs close to the shore of the Mediterranean, near the rail, and high up on the right are numerous towns, cities, villages, and castles, some on the very summits of the mountain. The Benedictine Convent of S. Niccolo should be visited. The town is an excellent resort for invalids, as well as a good point of access for Mount Ætna (called by the natives Mongibello), the conical peak of which is 30 to 40 miles distant, 10,874 feet above sea level, and 90 miles round at the base. Here palm and sugar grow, while the top is covered with snow. You reach this after passing three principal regions called Piemontana (at the bottom), Selvosa (in the middle, where are great chesnut groves), and Deserta (near the top). The ascent is usually made at night, in order to see the sun rise. For this drive to Nicolosi (pop. 3120), 3 hours. INN here; but luncheon and wine had better be taken from Catania. Thence with a guide to Casa Inglese, 6 hours; near the Piano de Lago (a plateau, 9760 feet above sea), Valdi Bon, and Torre del Filosofo. At the Monti Rossi are some little craters (450 feet high) and beds of lava. Hence to the top in 1½ hour. The cone of cinders is practicable for ladies who can ride upon mules, and do not mind the piercing cold. As the sun rises, the vast moving shadow of the mountain is projected over the country behind. The view takes in the whole of Sicily, the Lipari Island, &c, with the neighbouring coasts of Italy.

Palermo the capital of the island, is a large and fine archiepiscopal city, on the northern coast. commanding a beautiful sea view, and situated in a luxuriantly fertile and well cultivated plain called La Conca d'Oro, (the golden shell), which is enclosed on three sides by mountains, and opens on the north to a spacious Bay. It has a circuit of 12 miles, and has 15 gates. The houses are all flat-topped, having balconies with glass doors instead of windows; and the streets are well laid out. The point of intersection for the streets is the Piazza Vigliena or Quattro Cantoni, in the Corso Vittorio Emmanuele (a mile long); other squares are the Piazza Marina, Fiera Vecchia, del Duomo. Pretoria Reale or della Vittoria. The Palazzo Reale, on the north of the Saracen Alkasr, is a castellated pile.

The gothic Cathedral of Saint Rosalia was built in the year 1170, containing paintings of Novelle, Velasquez, &c.; also tombs of Henry VI. Emperor of Germany, who died 1198, and of Constantine, his wife, daughter and heiress of Roger II., king of Sicily. San Domenico and San Guiseppe are fine paintings, deserving notice. The Archives contain many early Greek charters. Theatres, are the Carolini and Santa Cecilia. Several fine public buildings, seven Squares, and fine walks; the best of which is the Marina, lying along the shore; a University, and several literary establishments. In the picture gallery of the University is the famous Bronze Ram, found at Syracuse; and in the courtyard many interesting statues from Selinunto. The Capella Reale, and the Church of Marterano, next the post-office, contain many interesting mosaics. The Jesuits Church is rich in marbles. The Botanical Gardens and the English Garden are worth seeing, as well as the Ziza, with its Moorish roof and parapet.

For a splendid drive and view, take a drive to Monreale (there and back 5fr.—No good inn), distant 5 miles; a dirty place with 15,000 inhabitants. Its noble Cathedral, has splendid mosaics with the tombs of Roger II.. William I., and William II., Kings of Sicily. The catacombs of the Capucini Monks are well worth a visit 4000 bodies being deposited there. Visit the Grotto of Sta. Rosalia at Mont Pellegrino, 3 miles from the city.

A fortified episcopal city on the east coast. A splendid natural Harbour, a Royal College, two Seminaries, a Library, and Museum, stand amidst the ruins of the ancient Syracusa, which cover a space of twenty miles in circumference: and of whose five magnificent populous districts the island of Ortygia is the only one now inhabited. Its harbour, one of the finest in the Mediterranean, was long believed to be so choked with sand as only to admit chebecks and brigantines, until Lord Nelson proved otherwise in 1798, when he sailed into it with his ships of war and frigates, and found excellent anchorage. The celebrated Fountain of Arethusa, which flows through the town in a stream four feet deep is now thoroughly cleared out, well preserved, and beautifully planted with the papyrus. The only place in Europe where this plant grows wild is in the river Anapes, about three miles from Syracuse, and a charming boating excursion. This plant was brought here from the Nile 250 years B.C.

ANTIQUITIES.—Fountain of Arethusa; Theatre; and the views of Etna, some of the grandest that can be obtained. The scenery is incomparably beautiful. Books.—Bradshaw's New Handbook to Spain and Portugal, by Dr. Charnock, F.R.G.S. &c. With Pictorial Illustrations, Town Plans, &c., and excellent Travelling Map for Spain and Portugal Price 7s. 6d.

As this kingdom is situated under the same parallel of latitude as Italy, its climate is in certain part similar. In the northern parts the cold is never excessive, but the heat in the southern districts, during the three months nearest midsummer, is very great, and would be almost intolerable but for the sea-breeze, which blows from nine till five. The interior, being generally elevated, is not so warm as might be expected from the latitude; and its temperature is more regulated by elevation than geographical position. It is the configuration of this country which accounts for the aridity of soil in the interior of the Castiles, the want of water, and that difference of temperature observable between Madrid and Naples. Of its large Rivers the Ebro runs to the East; the others, the Douro, Guadiana, and Guadalquivir, runs West; their basins being divided by 4 or 5 Sierras or chains of mountains, viz:—The Asturian, on the N.W., in continuation of the Pyrenees, rising 8,790ft. above the sea, at Picos de Europa, near Potes; the Sierra Gredos, Guadarama, and Moncayo, 10,500ft. high; Toledo range, or Sierra Guadalute, 5 115ft. high; Sierra Morena, west of Cordova; and the Sierra Nevada (or snowy), in Andalusia, 11,664ft. high, at Cerro Mualhacen, the highest in Spain.

Spain promises to regain some of its ancient influence. Railways are being constructed; its commerce is increasing; and a healthy banking interest will do great things for what has lately been only a second-class power. The wealth of its corn, and wine, and oil, favoured by a sunny climate, has scarcely any limit. Two-thirds of the commerce are carried on with France and England.

The Revolution that broke out, September, 1868, drove Queen Isabella from the throne, and changed the Government to a Republic, which, under the guidance of General Prim, lasted till December, 1870, when Victor Emmanuel's second son, Amadeo, Duke of Aosta, was chosen king, as Amadeus I. He abdicated on the 12th of February, 1873; and a Republic was again proclaimed; followed by civil war. Marshal Serrano became President, 1874. On 31st Dec., 1874, Alfonso, the son of Q. Isabella, was proclaimed King, as Alfonso XII. He was born 1857; and received part of his education at the Military College, Sandhurst.

Population (1870) 16,835,510 besides 6½ millions in the Colonies. There are 13 Territorial divisions, and 49 Provinces, including the Balearic and Canary Islands.

Estimated Expenditure.—(1874) 30 millions sterling; against a Revenue of 22 millions. Debt, 400 millions, besides interest unpaid

Army—About 295,000 Navy—123 Steamers, with 819 Guns, and 20,000 Seamen. About 3,300 miles of Railway, and 7,050 miles of Telegraph are open. (1873).

Commerce.—Exports and Imports to and from England (1873), 11 millions and 4½ millions respectively.

Tours.—The tourist may enter Spain in a variety of ways—First, by water from Southampton to Gibraltar; Second, by rail and water viâ Paris, Marseilles and Alicante; Third, by Paris, Bordeaux, Bayonne, Irun, Vitoria, and Burgos—this is the favoured route; Fourth, viâ Urdax and the valley of Bastan. From Bayonne the traveller may proceed to Madrid, viâ Pamplona, or viâ Pau, Toulouse, and Port Vendres By Rosellonè & Co.'s Diligences, in connection with the Railways, twice a day, in about 12 hours. Fares—Berlina, 40 reals; Interior, 32 reals: Rotonde and Banqueta, 24 reals. The P. & O. boats from Southampton afford the best means of reaching the south by water. The most convenient land route is viâ Bordeaux and Bayonne. "Avoid the land journey over the Pyrenees. Take as little luggage as possible, as porterage is very expensive. Leather portmanteaus resist rough usage better than wooden trunks."—O. L.

Letters to Madrid and Gibraltar.—A daily morning overland mail is despatched from London, arriving at Madrid in 48 hours, and Cadiz in about 100 hours: from thence, letters marked p. d Madrid are forwarded by mule to Gibraltar. Postage to England 2½d per ½ oz.

Churches.—Travellers will do well to rise early, as most of the churches are closed at mid-day. After noon it is almost impossible to obtain admittance even into many of the large Cathedrals. A fee will always open a church at any hour, but then the sacristan must be found and from 12 to 3 o'clock he generally enjoys his siesta.

Money.—By a decree of the Cortes, dated 19th October, 1868, the monetary system is as follows:—100 Centimes = 1 Peseta. = 9½d. = a franc nearly. Gold Coins.—100, 50, 25, 20, 10, and 5 Pesetas. Silver Coins.—1, 2, 5 Pesetas, and 20 and 25 Centims. Bronze Coins.—1, 2, 5, 10 Centims. 100 Pesetas = £3 19s. 2d.; 10 Pesetas = 7s. 11d.; and the other coins in proportion. A 25 Peseta gold piece is nearly equal to a sovereign. [From "The Merchant's Handbook."—By W. A. Brown, LL.D. London: Stanford.] Money is sometimes reckoned in reals = 2½d. A peseta = 4 reals; escudo = 10 reals; duro or dollar = 20 reals. 100 reals = £1, nearly. When receiving change hastily at diligence offices, hotels, or from boatmen examine your coin. Take small change before starting a journey.

Language.—Knowledge of Spanish necessary in rural districts. French, English, and German are spoken at the principal hotels in large cities. Except at Madrid and a few of the seaports English is utterly useless, and French is only spoken in the chief towns and better class of hotels. See Bradshaw's complete Anglo Spanish Phrase Book for Travellers and Students. price 1s.. W. J. Adams. The Special Edition of this Handbook contains a vocabulary. Cervantes, the Author of Don Quixote, was born at Alcade de Henares, near Madrid.

Travelling—at present by rail and diligence. The railways are slow but comfortable; the railway stations indifferent; the fares high,—and now higher than ever, since a government tax of 10 per cent. was imposed. The conveniences for ladies and families very miserable. Use Coloured Spectacles. Ask the price of everything. Travellers are usually put into expensive bed-rooms on their arrival. Enquire the charge for the night. Have a Spanish visa to your passport.

CAUTION.—Travellers are advised not to purchase their Railway Tickets of Agents. The Diligences are generally crowded, inconvenient, and dirty; they stop rarely; and Spaniards love smoke and closed windows. Diligence fares are high; if quickly, £2 per day may be calculated on. Steamers are irregular. A two months' tour cannot, for a bachelor, be accomplished much under £60 sterling.

Living from about 40 reals per day; but the Madrid hotels differ. The "Inglaterra" is dearest, 70 or 80 reals, or even 100 reals per day; the Hotel des Princes from 40 reals; Las Ambassadeurs, 30 reals. Prices at Hotels are fixed, and include board and lodgings. No women servants are employed.

Visit Spain in spring or autumn, or not at all. In March the cold and fogs and wintry days disappear, and to this succeeds a fine, genial, warm, and moderate heat. During March, April, and May travelling is charmingly agreeable. The summer heats subside in October. November is also a pleasant month. Remember to keep your temper, as Spaniards will not be hurried, and have a keen sense of personal dignity. Accept a cigarette when offered; but never ask a light from your neighbour's cigar if he has already given it once to some one else.

DESCRIPTIONS OF PRINCIPAL PLACES.

Alicante.—Stat.—Pop. 27,000.

HOTELS: FONDA DEL VAPOR (Steam Boat Hotel).

A thriving seaport, in direct communication by rail with Madrid, of which it is the port (though distant) and by steamers with Marseilles. It is a pretty well-built Moorish-looking town with good markets, reading rooms, and a brisk trade in wine, almonds, raisins, and matting. There are only two churches:—St. Nicolas de Bari and Sta. Maria, the former remarkable for the richness of its decorations.

Visit the Castle; to see which send a commissioner with your card, and the names of friends, to the governor, who will grant a permit. A splendid view is obtained. The ascent is somewhat laborious. A visit may also be made to the Fabrica de Tabacco and the Monument. See also the collection of medals and paintings of the Marquis d'Algorfa. Among the paintings will be found some specimens of Murillo, Velasques, Albert Dürer, &c. The magnificent palm groves at Elche, near Alicante, are well worth a visit. It is the Roman Illica, and half Moorish. Besides the forests of date palms, there are groves of pomegrantes, &c.

In landing at this or any other Spanish port ascertain the proper tariff for boat hire: 2 reals for oneself, and 2 for each box or package is the usual fare. Travellers leaving Madrid viâ Alicante and Barcelona for Marseilles, or vice versa, are advised to book through, and clear railway charges, omnibus fares, and boat hire, to and from the steamer. Marseilles to Alicante takes 40 hours. Commissioners, faquines, or mossa de cordel are distinguished by wearing a brass badge on the arm; they receive, for loading or unloading travellers' baggage at the railway station, 2 reals; for carrying baggage from the railway station to hotels, 8 reals.

BOAT HIRE, embarking or disembarking, 2 reals per person, and 2 reals each packet of baggage.

The capital of Catalonia, on the Mediterranean, surrounded by a beautiful and highly-cultivated country. It is a place of great trade carrying on various manufactures, and has of late much increased.

PRINCIPAL OBJECTS—The Cathedral, a fine gothic building of the 14th century, containing many beautiful tombs and some good paintings. Notice the carving in the choir, the grave of Sta. Eulalia (a martyr, A.D. 309), and the statue of the good Knight Vilardell, in the cloisters. The view from the tower is very fine. The Church of Santa Maria del Mar containing some rich stained glass. The library of San Juan containing 40,000 volumes, some manuscripts, and an interesting collection of coins. The Museo Salvador containing curious manuscripts, coins, a collection of marbles, a museum of Natural History and a splendid herbal. See also the College of Santa Ana (1146), and the Casa de la Disputacion. The Bourse, a fine building, containing some good statues, pictures, and fountains. The Fountains are numerous, and some of them very beautiful. The Rambla promenade is a magnificent street, nearly a mile long, lined with plane trees, and leading to the Muralla del Mar. The Markets, Pescaderia, and Pisteria, are very interesting.

The Lico Theatre is a large building. Plaza de Toros, or Bull Ring, behind Railroad Terminus; said to hold 10,000 persons.

The Archivo General de la Corona de Aragon, in the old Palace, contains documents bearing on the history of ten centuries. The citadel of Montjuich is associated with the chivalrous Earl of Peterborough and his English army in the time of Queen Anne.

Bilbao.—Stat.—Pop. 18,500.—HOTELS:—DE BRIGIDA; FONDA DE LAS NAVARRAS.

It has a theatre, with frequently an excellent operatic company; and an old quarter called the Siete Calles, or Seven Streets. Vessels of large tonnage unload at Oloveaga, about five miles nearer the Bay of Biscay. Near here are iron smelting works for the abundant ore found in the neighbouring hills.

H. B. M.'s CONSUL.—H. Young, Esq. AMERICAN CONSUL.—L. Dahl, Esq.

Railway to Miranda Junction (page 269), for Madrid, Saragossa, and Bayonne. Diligence to Zumarrara Station in 9½ hours, 20 to 40 reals.

Burgos.—Stat.—Pop. 13,000.—HOTELS:

The FONDA DEL NORTE, PARADOR DES DILIGENCIES GENERALES DI VITORIA; PARADOR DE LAS PENINSULARES; CASA DE POSTAS.

A large and cheerful town, on the Arlanson, near the heads of the Douro and Ebro; full of interest for the antiquary. The grand attraction is its celebrated Cathedral, built in the thirteenth century by King St. Ferdinand. It abounds in sculpture, and is profusely decorated with pictures, statues, bas-reliefs; also some fine stained glass windows, the light from which produces a curious effect. There are some large chapels in the aisles, containing some beautiful sculpture, painting, and monuments—one is particularly deserving of attention, the Capilla del Condestable, containing some fine sculpture by Jean de Bourgogne, representing the Crucifixion, the Resurrection, and the Ascension. Among other Churches worth visiting, are San Gil, San Esteban, San Nicolas, and Santa Agueda, in which the Cid forced Alfonso VI., to swear that he had taken no part in the death of his brother Sancho. The Espion is the principal promenade of Burgos, composed of beautiful shady walks. Two others are the Cubos and the Isla, both on the banks of the river.

The traveller should visit the Cartuja de Miraflores and the tomb of the Cid: the former is about 2 miles out of the town, and contains the magnificent tomb erected by Isabella to her parents, Juan II. and Isabella of Castile—the latter is in the convent of San Pedro de Cardena, which once formed part of the estate of the Cid.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Madrid, Alar-del-Rey, and Santander, see page 268

Cadiz.—Stat.—Pop. (1857) 61,750.—HOTELS:—BLANCO'S ALAMEDA HOTEL—"bad"—but fine views of the bay from the windows.

HOTEL DE PARIS, best in the town; DE AMERICA; DE CADIZ; FONDA DE LAS CUATRO NACIONES.

A large fortified port in a Bay, at the end of a tongue of land called the Island de Leon, very strongly protected by the Cortadura and Punta de la Vaca. It has a pleasant Club or Casino, on presenting your card at which, one of the attendants will show you over it. An introduction is necessary for a fortnight; a subscription for a longer period. The Museum contains only very poor pictures. It has a handsome Church and two Theatres; with fine view from the signal Tower in the centre of the town, 172 feet high. Rain water, kept in tanks, is the only supply. Celebrated for the gloves and guitars made here. The Railway Station is outside the ramparts. At La Caracas, 15 miles from the town, are fine establishments connected with the Spanish Navy, docks, rope-walks, building-slips, &c. Jerez with its wine depôts, is 31 miles distant, by rail.

H. B. M.'s Consul.—T. F. Reade, Esq. American Consul—A. Duffie, Esq.

Conveyance.—Railway to Seville, Cordova, and Madrid, see page 274 Steamers to Gibraltar, Alicante, Barcelona, and Malaga: see page 305.

They ply very irregularly between Seville and this city; passengers are disembarked in the Bay, and boats convey them on shore; 2 reals each person, and 2 reals each package Two or three times a week, on uncertain days, to Gibraltar.

Cartagena.—Stat.—Pop. 35,000.—Hotels.—Fonda Francesca; Gutierez, end of Calle Mayor, which is the best street. There are two Fondas in Calle de la Iabonaria.

A half decayed place, with new forts in process of construction on both sides of the pretty harbour in the Mediterranean The Naval Arsenal contains building slips and floating docks, magazines, &c, and is rising again to importance. Cathedral in ruins; good Casino or club-house, accessible. Conveyances—Railway, see pp. 272—274 Steam communication along the coast.

English Vice-Consul—W. Milvain, Esq.

American Consul—C. Molina, Esq.

Cordova (or Cordoba).—Stat.—Pop. (1857) 35,610

Hotels:—Fonda Suiza is a very fine building, with marble staircases and corridors; Fonda Rizzi.

A large decayed city (on the Guadalquiver), the streets are narrow, and the hotels indifferent. At one time it is said to have contained 200,000 houses, and 100 baths. Its University is said to have been instrumental in spreading light through Europe in the dark ages. It abounds in Moorish and Roman antiquities, perhaps more so than any other city in Spain. The Cathedral is of course the first attraction, and was erected, originally by the Romans, but destroyed by the Moors, who commenced the present edifice on the old foundation in 770. The exterior is profusely ornamented with various coloured marbles, sculptured in the most graceful designs; but of the grand effect of the interior, it would be impossible to give any adequate description. It is divided into nineteen principal naves, which are traversed by thirty-six narrow naves or aisles. The roof is supported by a vast number of columns of rare marbles, porphyry, jasper, &c., with marvellous carving, gilding, and painting. The figure of our crucified Saviour has been cut on one of the marble pillars by the finger-nails of a prisoner: a light is required to see it. Next to the cathedral, the principal churches are San Pedro of Roman and Gothic times; and Santa Mariana, a Gothic church. the Alcazar. Other remarkable buildings are the Episcopal palace; the Triunfo, a pretty monument in jasper to St. Raphael, patron of Cordova; the hospital of San Sebastian. Some of the old convents are very interesting. The railway station is a short distance from the city, to the north, and near the old high road to Seville, by the right bank of the Guadalquiver.

Conveyances.—Railway to Cadiz and Madrid, see page 274; Cordova to Malaga, see page 273.

Diligence from Cordova.

Steamers frequently call here.

Corunna.—(Spanish Coruña), called by sailors "the Groyne.")—Pop. 27,600.

Hotels:—Fonda del Commercio, in the Calle Real.; Café Suizo; Café de los Milaneses.

Corunna is divided into two distinct parts, the upper or old town, and the lower or new town called Pescaderia. The latter is well built, but the streets are narrow and for the most part ill paved. There are several good promenades. La Reunion much frequented during summer, is situated between the town and the ramparts, and the garden of San Carlos containing a monument to the memory of Sir John Moore, who was buried here, 1809. The Tobacco factory employs over 2000 hands, principally women, and turns out about 300 tons of cigars annually. The tower of Hercules is a Roman work.

H. M.'s Consul—E. Turner, Esq.

Conveyances.—Diligences to Vigo, Oporto, and to the rail, for Madrid every evening. Steamers to all the Northern ports and to Vigo, Cadiz, &c. Also twice a day to Ferrol.

Gerona.—Stat.—Pop. 8,000.—Fonda de las Diligencias.

Capital of the province of the same name. an interesting town, with a fine Gothic cathedral the nave of which has the great span of 73 feet. Fine view of Monserrat, &c., from the heights. It made a heroic defence against the French 1809

Conveyances.—Rail to Barcelona, see p. 271.

Diligences daily (across the Pyrenees) to Perpignan, in 8 hours from whence by rail to Nismes, Marseilles, Lyons, Toulouse, and all parts of France.

Gibraltar (Eng'lish)—Pop. (1871) 25,920.—

Hotels:—Club-house (very good, but dear); King's Arms Hotel, good and moderate; Griffith's; Francaise.

American Consular Agent—A. Fuertes, Esq. Exchange News-room accessible.

All along the coast of Spain it is most disagreeable to land and embark, as it is done by boats, and Gibraltar is as bad as any. Always make a bargain with the boatmen beforehand. Wondrous Fortifications; permission easily got to visit the Galleries, from the signal tower of which there is a magnificent view; as also from the many other Batteries. Visit the Caves discovered by Captain Brome. The markets contain many strange varieties of fish. Oranges and other fruits very plentiful. Rain water only used here A great variety of dresses. Moorish, Spanish and British, are seen on the Promenade.

The drive to Europa Point and back through the town to the Neutral ground and village of St. Roque is very beautiful. The military Prison and Convict establishment well worth seeing.

At Gibraltar the currency is different from that of Spain. Accounts are kept in dollars, reals, (which have no existence), of the imaginary value of one-twelfth of a dollar, and quarts, equally imaginary, of the supposed value of one-sixteenth of a real. The coinage in actual circulation consists of Spanish gold and Specie dollars, one-half dollars (silver). Spanish quarter-dollars, and one-eighth dollar pieces, not now circulating in Spain; and there being no real quart, any coin of any country, or any button if about the size of an English farthing, is current for the one one-hundredth-and-ninety-second part of a dollar; and other pieces of copper in like proportion

H.M.'s Consul at San Roque.-G.F.Cornwall, Esq.

Presbyterian Church.—Minister, Rev. John Coventry, Free Church of Scotland, at St. Andrew's Church on Sundays, at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Conveyances:—None whatever inland; steamers on uncertain days, about two or three times a week to Cadiz, to Malaga, and to Tangiers. P. and O. Steamers weekly.

Gijon.—Stat.—Pop. 7,500.

Hotel:—Parador de las Diligencias.

Gijon, in Biscay, is much frequented for sea-bathing, and is, for a Spanish town, remarkably clean. Its port is good and safe. Notice a fine arched gateway, called de Infante, built by Charles III; the Palace of the Marquis de San Esteban; the College, founded in 1797; the Tobacco Factory, employing upwards of 1200 hands. Large shipments of coal from here.

English Vice-Consul.—W. Penlington, Esq.

Conveyances:—Railway to Sama, for Oviedo. &c.. see page 274. Steamers to Santander and Corunna.

Granada.—Stat.—Pop. (1857) 65,000. Hotels: Parador de los Diligencias, Fonda del Comercio, Fonda Ortiz, Fonda de Alameda, Fonda de la Victoria, Fonda de la Minerva.

The last two are in the town. Washington Irving Hotel (very good), and the first-class Hotel and Pension de los Siete Suelos (Seven Towers), are on the hill, 2,000 feet above sea level, near the Alhambra, and the groves and elms planted by Wellington on his estate here. "The Seven Towers is a delightful summer residence; temp. 76°. The Irving is more suited for winter."—R. L.

Many Boarding Houses, clean and reasonable.

A fine old town, 1,500 feet higher than Malaga, having a very good Prado with noble old trees, fountains, &c., and beautiful environs with the lofty snowy peaks of the Sierra Nevada, about 20 miles off, and a temperate climate in the scorching heat of a Spanish Summer. The Cathedral has 5 naves, splendid stained glass windows, and 18 very ornate chapels, the best of which, the Capilla Mayor, is a sumptuous one, with fine paintings of Bocanegra, Alonso. Cano, &c. In the Capilla de los Reyes are the magnificent tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella, of Juana and Philip; below are their plain coffins, which may be seen at the close of the afternoon service. Of the 27 parish churches, notice, especially, S. Ana, S. Cristoval, San Agostino, &c.

The great point of interest is the Alhambra, which is now, though too late, being zealously put in repair. It is open in the forenoon, and from 4 to 7 p.m.; a Guide and also a fee to the conservator for the first visit, but not afterwards. Besides its internal architectural beauties, the views from it are fine and interesting, commanding the Duke of Wellington's estate, the gipsy quarter, &c. This ancient palace of the Moorish kings, in point of oriental workmanship, one of the most beautiful extant, and justly the pride of Granada, stands on a lofty eminence between the rivers Doura and Xenil, and derives its name from the red colour of the materials with which it is built. The word alhambra signifies the "red house." The ascent to it is through a shady and well watered grove of elms, abounding with nightingales. You enter first into an oblong court of 150 ft. by 90 ft., with a basin of water in the midst of 100 feet in length, encompassed by a flower border; at each end is a colonnade. Hence you pass into the Court of the Lions, so called because the fountain in the middle is supported by lions; it is adorned by a colonnade of 140 marble pillars. The royal bedchamber has two alcoves adorned with columns, and a fountain between them in the middle of the room; adjoining are two hot baths. The great Hall is about 40 feet square, and sixty in height, with eight windows and two doors, all in deep recesses. Between this and the oblong court is a gallery of 90 feet by 16 feet.

All these lower apartments have fountains, and are paved either with tiles or marble in checkers. The idea of the ceiling is evidently taken from stalactites, or drop stones, found in the roof of natural caverns. The ornaments of the friezes are Arabesque, and perfectly accord with the Arabic inscriptions which are here suited to the purpose for which each apartment was designed. Thus, for instance, over the entrance of the hall of judgment is the following sentence, "Enter, fear not; seek justice, and justice thou shalt find." A handsome staircase leads to a suite of apartments intended for the winter. The Generalliffe, or country palace of the Moorish kings, has a few remains of arcades and fine gardens.

The Cartuja Convent is one of the lions of Granada. Notice the extraordinary paintings in the passages.

Jos. Serfaty is an excellent guide for the Alhambra. The studio of M. Contreras, who is entrusted with the restorations of the Alhambra, will well repay a visit.

A branch line unites Granada with Cordova and Malaga. It is preferable to Malaga in regard to climate The Route from Gibraltar by Ronda is very grand, but is three days mule journey, and not without danger; by mules from Malaga, direct, two long days; by diligence from Malaga 16 hours going, and 14 hours returning. Railway, see p 276.

English Vice Consul.—E. Colibert, Esq.

There is a road towards the rail for Madrid passing Jaen, the Capital of the province, where there is a magnificent Cathedral. Scenery along whole of the route very interesting.

Irun.—Stat -- Pop. 4,500. Hotel: Fonda de Arbuff; excellent

A small town on the left bank of the river Bidassoa, near the French frontier, on the route from Bayonne to Madrid.

Baggage from France is examined at Irun station.

Conveyances.—Rail to Madrid, p. 265; to Alsasua for Pamplona, see p. 270; to Bayonne, p. 45.

Jerez-de-la-Frontera.—Stat.—Pop. (1857) 38,900. Busch's Private Hotel, Guadalete Str. Hotel de Jerez.

Jerez or Xeres, a large and well-built town, celebrated for its "Sherry" wine, to which it gives name; and surrounded by extensive estates, chiefly devoted to the cultivation of the vine. The wine cellars will repay a visit, particularly those of Mr. Domecq, which contain 15,000 pipes of wine, some of which is 100 years old; and those of Gonzales, Dubois, & Co. The different kinds of Sherries are well worth tasting; some is as much as a guinea per bottle. The buildings worthy of notice are: the collegiate church with its library and museum, containing 2,500 volumes, and 12,000 medals of great antiquity; and the Casas Municipales, a fine old building of the sixteenth century. A short distance out of the town are the ruins of a fine Monastry, with a doric façade, ornamented with statues and pictures.

English Vice-Consul.—G. Suter, Esq.

Conveyances.—Railway to Trocadero, Cadiz and Seville. See page 274.

Leon.—Stat.—Pop.—7095.—Hotels:—Parador del Norte: Posada de los Catalanes, Casas de Pupilis (lodging and board), on the Santa Domingo. A Posada on the Rastro.

An ancient city surrounded by walls, and capital of the province of the same name. The Cathedral is one of the most extraordinary specimens of gothic architecture extant. Its walls are 120 feet high, and by some travellers it is considered to surpass the celebrated Duomo of Milan, for lightness and richness of decoration. The principal façade is composed of five ogival arches ornamented with sculpture, and statues to the number of forty, the whole surmounted by two beautiful and lofty towers. The interior is superbly decorated with sculpture and stained glass. The church of San Isidoro is a splendid gothic edifice and should be visited. Other objects of interest are the monastry of San Marcos; the fine Convent of Santiago; the Plaza Mayor, surrounded by fine buildings, much frequented; the Casa de los Guzmanes, a magnificent palace; the Casa Consistorial, devoted to municipal fêtes. There are also a number of convents, a library of 5,000 volumes, and a good theatre capable of accommodating 1,500 persons. Outside the walls of the city there are some good promenades, the principal of which is the Passo de San Francisco, a large square planted with trees, having on one side a convent, and on the other a bull-ring.

Conveyances.—Railway to Placentia, Bustongo (for Oviedo), and Branuelas for Vigo, &c.), see pp. 269 and 272.

Lerida.—Stat.—Pop 13,200.

Fonda San Zois. Posada del Hospital.

A pleasant and busy town, the Roman Ilerda, on the Segre and the rail from Barcelona to Saragossa. The new Cathedral is a fine Corinthian building, containing some good carving and sculpture. The Old Cathedral, built in the thirteenth century, is a ruin, but still presents some rare studies of the byzantine-gothic style to the antiquary; the cloisters are particularly worthy of attention. The church of San Lorenzo, founded 1149, is also deserving of attention. The Old Cathedral commands a magnificent view over a beautiful country.

Rail to Saragossa and Barcelona. See page 270.

MADRID.—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 332,024.—Hotels:—

Hotel de Paris.—Good. Hotel Peninsulares, 15, Calle Alicala. Inglaterra; Des Peinous; Les Ambassadeurs.

Cafés—La Iberia, Café Suizo.

Casas de Huespedes.—Boarding-houses in no way distinguished by sign or name; but when unoccupied a sheet of white paper is seen suspended from the corner of the balcony. There are many of these houses in Madrid, and in most of the principal towns in Spain. Excellent and clean apartments with board and service, at 20, 25, and 30 reals per day. Travellers intending to remain a month or two in the capital, are advised for their own comfort to resort to one of these houses.

Caution.—The climate of Madrid is one of the most trying and treacherous in Europe. The town is at a great altitude on a bleak plain, exposed to a broiling sun and dry icy winds from the Sierra de Guadarrama. The spring is especially dangerous, and cloak well morning and evening. Madrid is cold and damp in winter; hot and dusty in summer. The agreeable months are March and April, October and November; the remainder of the year is almost unbearable.

Madrid in the province of New Castille, was declared to be the capital of the kingdom, by Philip II., from being supposed to be in the centre of Spain. It is built in an uninviting locality, on some sandy hills upon the left bank of the Manzanares; but the view from the Queen's Palace of the Guadarrama range is very fine. The country round is quite desert, except in the valley of the Manzanares, where there are some orchards and woods. The city is about 8 miles in circuit, and contains upwards of 8000 houses, with 146 churches and other religious buildings, 18 hospitals, 13 colleges, 15 academies, 18 public libraries, 6 prisons, 15 granite gates, 85 squares, and plazas, 33 fountains, and 50 public wells which supply the city with a little excellent water brought from the mountains, 30 miles distant. The modern part is fine, having good houses, and straight streets paved with flint, and lined with foot-pavements. The Calle de Alcala is the finest street in Madrid. The Puerta del Sol is a large open area, where eight of the principal streets meet, and in which there is a great thoroughfare. In a pretty square of the Prado is the Memorial called, El dos de Mayo (or 2nd of May), consisting of statues of three artillery officers, killed at their guns, in the massacre of 2nd May, 1808, by order of Murat.

Many of the convents, which gave such a gloomy aspect to the streets of Madrid, in common with the other large towns of Spain, have lately been removed. The royal Palace is a most magnificent face; it is a large square edifice, each front 470 ft. long and 100 feet high, all built of white stone, and enclosing a court 140 feet square. On the south side of the palace is the royal Armoury, which contains a great treasure of historical weapons. Its interior is with difficulty shewn to strangers. The royal Stables contain 360 horses, 150 mules, and 124 carriages, with endless apartments for livery dresses and harness rooms are to be seen. Bull fights are generally on Sunday and Monday; the office for tickets is in the Calle di Alcala; an early application is necessary to ensure good seats. The death of Pepete, the veteran matador, a short time ago is still fresh in the public recollection. There are three public WALKS: the Prado, 2 miles long, from north to south, on the east of the city, with rows of trees and several fountains; the Paseo de las Delicias, along the Manzanares, on the west side of the city; and the Buen Retiro gardens to the east, beyond the Pardo. La Fuente Castellana is a splendid walk, about a mile and half long.

There are six Theatres: besides three Circuses, also, several scientific and literary institutions; among which are the Royal Spanish Academy, containing a museum of Natural History, and a few very fine pictures; the Royal Academy of History; and the Estudios Reales de San Isidro, a kind of university, which has sixteen professors. The two largest Libraries are, the Royal Library, containing 200,000 volumes, some valuable manuscripts, and a rare collection of coins, illustrative of Spanish history; and the Library of San Isidro, containing 60,000 volumes.

The Museo is a magnificent gallery of 3000 pictures, of which 46 are by Murillo, 10, Raffaelle, 12, Rubens, 64, Velasquez, 34, Tintorettos, and 3, Titian: to obtain admission a fee only is necessary. The New Museum was opened on the 2nd de Maio, 1842, by Espartero and has also some works of art. No fee is necessary for admission into the Museos; a passport and registry of name is all that is requisite.

EXCURSIONS.

1. Escorial, about 20 miles off, reached by rail. A magnificent edifice, considered one of the wonders of the world. The Pantheon, containing tombs of the Spanish kings and queens, white marble statue of Christ, and tapestry, will fully occupy an entire day. Ask when there for the sacristan, who can alone show the Mausoleum of Spanish Monarchs, the chapels, and other wonders of the place.

2 Toledo.—Reached also by rail. (See the name). The 7.0 a.m. train from Madrid arrives at 10 a.m. at Toledo.

3 Aranjuez and Palace. Proceed by rail. (See the name) The gardens, and walks, and palace by the river side are picturesque.

4. La Granja, about 7 miles by road.—A royal Palace with splendid gardens, and a Labyrinth at St. Ildefonso.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see pages 145, 268, 270, 272, 274, 275.

Malaga.—Stat.—Pop. 109,988.—HOTELS:—

ALAMEDA and VICTORIA pretty good; ORIENTE, for Universo), bad; EUROPA.

LODGING-HOUSES.—Vilches, Madrilena. Iberia, with other tolerably good "Casas de Pupilos," several establishments of excellent Baths. Restaurants, &c. Living is moderate, apartments and board should not exceed two dollars per diem.

CLUBS.—Good and well-provided reading clubs, the "Circulo," the "Comercio," and the "Liceo."

This city, which may be considered the fourth in Spain, is situated at the head of a Bay in the Mediterranean, surrounded by vine-clad hills, in the midst of a delightful country producing wine, sugar, oil, raisins, figs, almonds, oranges, lemons, limes, and other fruits, in abundance. There are about 20 sugar and refining mills, at Marbella, Andra, &c. It is much frequented by English and other foreign invalids during the winter season, for its mild and charming climate; but the weather is treacherous: hot sun and cold winds being prevalent.

PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS.—Are the Cathedral, a vast pile commenced during the reign of Philip the II. at the time of his marriage with Mary of England; it contains a marble front, handsome carved choir, a recently erected main altar, Italian style, several remarkable side chapels, with some good paintings, and fine altar pieces especially that of the Virgin de la Encarnacion, the patroness to whom the whole edifice is dedicated. From the towers of the cathedral a magnificent and widespread panorama is presented. The churches of the Martyrs, St. James's, formerly a Moorish mosque, St. Telmo, a ci-devant Jesuit college, are worthy of notice, together with the Episcopal Palace, with a fine marble portal.

The principal promenade is the Alameda, on the northern side of which most of the hotels are located, with southern prospects. The houses of the principal merchants are situated there also. It is a long avenue, running east and west, with trees, along which at intervals, are placed marble statues and benches, and a fountain at each extreme. The Alameda, is the base from which the main arteries into this compactly built Moorish city emanate.

Do not fail to try the celebrated Montilla wine, Malaga having become the port for its exportation.

At one of the Theatres, a good Italian Opera company is generally to be heard. The rides and drives about the neighbouring hills and country houses, are delightful.

H. B. M.'s Consul.—R. Wilkinson, Esq.

American Consul.—A. Hancock, Esq.

English Church Service, at the British Consulate every Sunday; Rev. T. J. Scott, M.A., chaplain. The English Cemetery, in the outskirts of the town, has charming views; it is frequented as a promenade by the natives.

Conveyances—Rail to Cordova, connecting it with that to Seville, Cadiz, and also to Madrid and Granada (p. 273). Spanish Steamers three times a month to Gibraltar (slow and dear); to Cadiz, Lisbon, Vigo, and Havre frequently; to the Eastern ports and Marseilles, two or three times a-week.

Manresa. Stat.-Posada del Sol.-Pop. 13,310

A small town, 40 miles from Barcelona, on the rail to Saragossa (p. 270) on the Llobregat, above which are seen the fine church of St. Ignatius Loyola, founder of the Jesuits and the great college of El Seo, containing the Santa Cueva, or cave where Loyola dedicated himself to the Virgin. The scenery about Manresa is very grand, the line to Lerida passing through a range of rocky mountains. The engineering works will command admiration. About 12 miles off is the wild mountain of Montserrat, covered with shrines and hermitages, and noted for its connection with the early history of Loyola. The nearest station is Monistrol.

Mataro.—Stat.—Pop. 17,000.—Posadas.

A thriving manufacturing town, and seaport of Catalonia. It contains a fine old Church with some good wood carving and a few capital paintings; a Hotel de Ville; and college. At a short distance from Mataro are the baths of Argentona, the waters of which are carbonated, and efficacious in the treatment of nervous complaints.

Living and lodgings 25 reals per day. The Infante, near to the Diligence office. Dinner, 12 reals.

A well-built town, the Roman Pompeiopolis, situated on an eminence, commanding extensive views of the surrounding plain of Cuenca, near the gorges of Puerto de Mayo, and Puerto de Ronces valles. The Cathedral, founded in 1023, is a handsome gothic building, with a magnificent façade in the greco-roman style, surmounted by two graceful towers. The interior is profusely decorated. The cloister contains some splendid monumental sculpture. On one side is a door richly carved with scenes from the life of the Virgin, while the pillars are formed by statues of the angel Gabriel and the Virgin Mary. Other buildings are the Hotel de Ville, a fine old edifice, containing a curious mosaic pavement, portraits of the twelve kings of Navarre, and some curious jewels; and the palace of the Deputacion, containing some good paintings and curious MSS. The favourite promenade is the Taconera, commanding a splendid view of the valley and mountains beyond. There are a Theatre and a Bull-ring, the latter capable of accommodating 10,000 spectators.

Conveyances.—Railway to Madrid. See page 270. One hour diligence to Tolosa.

Diligences every two days to Estella, Puente la Reyna, Logrona, Taffala, and Prelata.

Potes.—Pop.—Hotels:—

This place, in the Liebana Valley, about 40 miles S.W. of Santander, is an excellent centre for some of the most striking parts of the Asturian Pyrenees; being near to Picos de Europa, their highest point, 8,796ft. above sea level, at Torre de Lambrian. These mountains resemble the Dolomites of Styria, and are threaded by deep picturesque gorges; one of the finest of which is Cillorgio, 15 miles long, at the head of the Diva. Good fishing and hunting (See Mr. Ormsby's paper, in Alpine Journal, Nov., 1872.)

Port St. Mary or Puerto de Santa Maria.—Hotels: Vista Alegra best; Fonda del Colmada. Pop. 18,000.

Salamanca.—Pop. 14,500.

HOTELS:—DE LOS TOROS; DE LAS DILIGENCIAS

Salamanca, an ancient city, once a great seat of learning, surnamed the "Mother of Virtue, Science, and Art." It is situated in a hollow and surrounded by walls, pierced by nine gates, one of which the Puerto de San Pablo is worthy of attention. The Cathedral is a fine gothic building with three remarkable porches, ornamented with statues, and sculpture representing various scenes in the life of Christ. Above the portal rises the celebrated Tower of Salamanca, richly adorned with statues, basreliefs, and medallions of saints and illustrious men, &c. The University, the pride of Salamanca, at one time ranking as one of the first in Europe, now contains nothing remarkable beyond its library of 60,000 volumes. Other colleges are the Colegio Jesuites, with a fine porch; and the Colegio Viejo, containing a fine staircase in the same style as the celebrated one at Madrid, a museum, a collection of Chinese paintings, and some old pictures by Fernando Gallegos. There are twenty-five Churches none deserving particular attention; also a number of Convents, the principal of which is the convent of Santo Domingo, containing a beautiful gothic chapel and a good library. Outside the gate del Rio is a rare old Bridge of twenty-seven arches whose date is unknown, but it is certain that it was repaired by the Roman Emperor Trajan. The site of the Battle of Salamanca is at two heights rising out of the plain, called the Arapiles, about 1½ league from the city. Here on 21st July, 1812, the British gained a complete victory, over Marmont, which opened the gates of Madrid to Wellington.

CONVEYANCES.—Diligences to Madrid and Valladolid, and Ciudad Rodrigo daily, see page 273.

Santander.—Stat.—Pop. 20,000.

HOTELS:—DEL COMMERCIO on the quay; EUROPA, FONDA DE BOGIO, EL PARADOR DE MOREL.

Capital of the province of the same name, and a seaport of the first class, on a magnificent bay, accessible at all times of the tide to the largest vessels. The Bay varies from two to three miles in width and is four miles long. There are no buildings of any interest in Santander, with the exception of the Tobacco Factory, which was formerly a convent, where cigars and tobacco are manufactured to a large extent, giving employment to upwards of 1,000 people. Santander enjoys a large trade with Great Britain, France, and America, the chief articles of export being wheat and flour.

CAFES.—Suizo, Constancia.

A most interesting town, containing two cathedrals, a curious leaning tower, an old bridge on the Ebro, and many picturesque houses in its unique streets. Saragossa has many ancient monuments, especially the Aljaferia, now a fort, formerly a Moorish palace. The Torres Nuevs, or leaning tower (built 1504), is 84 metres high, inclination 2 metres 50 c. The elder cathedral of San Salvador, or El Seo Greco-Roman style, has a Capilla Mayor very richly ornamented; two fine statues of SS. Vincent and Laurentz, and a beautiful crucifix. In the newer cathedral of Nuestra Senora del Pilar (a square church of 135 metres the side) is a beautiful sanctuary, with the highly venerated statue of the Virgin (on a jasper pedestal), said to have been brought there by St James 19 centuries ago. Saragossa made a heroic defence against the French, 1808-1809. A peak of the Sierra de Moncayo near this is 7,701ft. high, with a vast prospect of the distant Pyrenees

CONVEYANCES.—Railway, see page 270.

Segovia.—Pop. 18,200.

An old town, 50 miles N.N.W. of Madrid, on the Eresma, having a Cathedral, Mint, and Alcazar, with remains of a Roman Amphitheatre and Aqueduct. This last, as built by Trajan, runs on 161 double arches, 100ft. high, and half-a-mile long. Miracle Plays are still acted in the churches. Lead, copper, and marble are worked near the town.

Seville.—Stat.—Pop (1857) 81,550.

HOTEL DE PARIS, FONDA DE MADAID. EUROPA, &c.

There are three good Casinos. English and French papers.

This is the capital of the province of Seville, and an archbishop's see, lying on the banks of the Guadalquiver, 45 miles from the Atlantic, and 212 S.S.W. from Madrid. The Cathedral, supposed by some to be the largest church in the world, next to St. Peter's at Rome, is partly Roman, and partly Gothic in style; it possesses a large organ of 5,400 pipes, and a Moorish steeple of curious workmanship, consisting of three towers with galleries and balconies, surmounted by a giralda or weathercock, said to be 350 feet high. Notice, also, a fine public Square, in the midst of which is a beautiful fountain; the splendid Palace of the Archbishop; the royal palace called the Alcazar, restored at the cost of the Duke of Montpensier), some parts of which are as fine as the Alhambra, one mile in extent, and flanked by large square towers, built with stones brought from the ancient temple of Hercules; the Exchange, a square building of the Tuscan order, each side of which is 100 feet long, and three stories high, where the records of the Spanish navigators are kept; the Tobacco Factory a large building with twenty courts, erected in 1757, at a cost of £390,000, in which 5000 women are employed.

The University contains nine colleges; and there are 120 richly endowed Hospitals. See, too, the Casa del Ayuntamento (town house), a fine old Moorish building; a beautiful modern palace of the Duke de Montpensier; some choice Murillos, filling in fact a room called the Salon de Murillo, in the Museum de la Merced, for which new rooms have been prepared; and good paintings in the convent of La Caridad. El Archivo de las Indias, in the Casa Longa, contains one of the richest collections of original documents in the world, including 80,000 relating to the discovery of America, by Cortez, Pizarro, and Magellan. A guide is very essential. The Murillos in the Cathedral are almost invisible, owing to the want of light.

The Holy Week, Santa Semana, presents Seville in all its glory. This extraordinary festival commences about the middle of April. Living is then doubled. 60 reals a day are not excessive. On Thursday and Friday the religious processions begin, at 4½ p.m. each day, and last till sunset; and six representations of the life and death of our Saviour are impersonated. The Virgin is gorgeously decorated in various costumes. Saturday is quiet. Sunday is devoted to bull-fighting. On Monday a fair is held, and on Tuesday a second bull-fight, and this terminates the festival. The bull-fights at Seville are the best in Spain, owing to the peculiar wildness, strength, and breed of the bulls. Tickets must be procured early, as they are all bought up in forties or fifties to be retailed at exorbitant prices.

Formerly, Seville had an immense commerce, having been the principal entrepôt of the South American trade; but its principal trade now-a-days consists of the export of oranges. The river (about the width of the Clyde) is crossed by an iron bridge, to the suburb of Triana, the gipsy quarter, where was the house of the Inquisition. Seville was occupied by the French from 1810. till after the battle of Salamanca.

H. M.'s Consul—W. M'Pherson, Esq.

Tangier (Africa)—Hotels: Royal Victoria De France; Three Nations; Francais—Mrs. Sassaunah's—very good, especially for invalids; charge 7½ fr. a day. All clean and decent, and English spoken at all. M. Tesef, at the Francais, gives every information about a journey to Fez.

Four hours from Gibraltar, by steamer; which leaves Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday, and returns the following days. Avoid the small steamers.

No traveller should omit to visit this place, in order to obtain a glimpse of oriental life. It is interesting as having belonged to England from 1662 to 1684. The castle, bazaars, and the gardens of the foreign consuls are worth seeing. The climate is more agreeable than that of southern Spain; very mild, and less affected by cold winds. It is a good winter climate for complaints of the chest or lungs. Living is cheap.

Travelling is safe. Mr. Martin supplies mules and horses on reasonable terms. If an escort be wanted, apply to the Consul. The best time is early spring. Boar-hunts and partridge shooting, in the autumn.

Excursions to Cape Spartel (a beautiful road), to Ceuta, the ancient Abyla, one of the pillars of Hercules, now a Spanish garrison; to Tetuan, (another beautiful trip) taken by O'Donnell, Duke of Tetuan, in 1854. Also, to Sally, the "Sallee" of Robinson Crusoe, on the Atlantic Coast; and to the sacred city of Fez (5 days), in the interior, towards Mount Atlas, and the Great Desert (E. W.)

This, the capital of the province and the see of n archbishop, is a large and beautiful city, on the banks of the Guadalquivir, in the fertile plain of he Huerta: the approach by railway from Jativa hrough which is unrivalled; rice, wheat, barley, itrons, oranges, pomegranates, olives, and palm rees growing in astonishing luxuriance. Valencia was taken by The Cid 1094, after a siege of 20 years It is one of the busiest places in Spain, possessing factories of cloth and silk, and printing establishments, which produce the greatest number of books, next to those of Madrid. The University and Institute are the most frequented in the kingdom; the former has a library of 50.000 vols. (most of them ancient) with some fine codices, coins &c. The Cathedral has a moorish steeple, El Miguelet 130 feet high; while one side of the choir is incrusted with alabaster, and adorned with splendid Scripture paintings. Fourteen other Churches deserve notice, but especially St. John, San Martin, San Andres, and San Esteban, formerly a mosque. In San Bartolomeo, the altar of the Sepulchre is said to be as old as Constantine the Great. It contains many fine examples of Juanes, the Valentian painter, for which enquire St. Nicholas has a fine "Last Supper" by him. At the Museo in El Carmen are good specimens of Juanes, Ribalta (the Nailing to the Cross) and Spagnoletto. The palace of the Viceroy, with its cloister; the monastery of St Jerome, the Exchange and the Arsenal, are worth noting; also the Gothic Longa or Town Hall, and the Serrnos Gate. The Old Wall's are gone. Visit the market: observe snails, frogs and flowers for sale.

A spacious Alameda or public promenade, leads to the Grao or harbour, 3 miles distant, where there is good sea-bathing. The harbour is deep and safe; and extensive Moles are in progress Six bridges across the Turia (or Guada quivir) unite the town to an important suburb. The silk works of Valencia are noted; also its azulejo porcelain. Visit Nolla's mosaic factory, the huerto de Capuchinos, the orange groves of Alcira, the Deheca de Dotrea, the great lake of Albufera, the amphitheatre of Saguntum: and do not forget to taste the wine of Requena, which is said to be good for Port or Bordeaux.

PORTUGAL.—(Ancient Lusitania.)

Book.—Bradshaw's new Handbook to Spain and Portugal, by Dr. Charnock.

Now that Portugal is connected with the system of European Railways, its capital Lisbon has become a convenient point of disembarkation from all quarters. Though less generally known to tourists than any other on the Continent, it is nevertheless a very attractive country.

The Kingdom of Portugal occupies the south western portion of the Spanish peninsula, and is situated between 36°55 and 42°6 latitude and between the 7th and 10th degrees of W. longitude

Greatest breadth, about 150 English miles, and greatest length, about 355. The Population in 1871 was 4,368,000; besides 3¾ millions in the Colonies. It is bounded on the north by Galicia, and the river Minho; on the east by Leon, the provinces of Andalusia and Estremadura; on the south and west by the Atlantic; and is divided into 8 Provinces and 17 Civil Districts. The Provinces are Minho, Douro, Tras-os Montes, Beira Alta, Beira Baixia, Estremadura, Alemtejo, and Algarve, and contain a superficies of 36,500 square geographical miles. The country is generally of a mountainous nature, but contains many rich plains, such as the Tagus flats (Lezirias), the meadows of Coimbra and Golegãa, the fertile valleys of Fundão and Chaves, Villarca, and Besteiros, the picturesque environs of Elvas and Evora, and suburbs of Lisbon, &c. The Serra da Estrella, near Coimbra, is 1997 metres high. The most important Rivers are the Tagus, Douro, Minho, Mondego, Lima, Guadiana, Cavado, Vouga, &c. The Lakes are Lamaroza, Alba, Fermentallo, Obidos, Estrella, &c.

Mineral and Thermal Springs.—Caldas da Rainha, Vizella, Vidago, S. Pedro do Sul, Moschique, Estoril, and those in the Arsenal at Lisbon.

The Government is a constitutional monarchy, the king being assisted by the Cortes—an assembly composed of two Chambers: the Peers (Camara dos Pares), chosen for life by the king, and at present numbering 138, and the Chamber of Deputies (Camara dos Deputados), containing 107, elected by the people. The crown is hereditary in both sexes, and the state religion is Roman Catholic. The King, Luis I., was born 1838; succeeded his brother 1861, and has two sons. The heir apparent, D. Carlos Fernando, was born in 1863. His father, styled King Ferdinand, was born 1816. The public Revenue (1874) is 5 millions; the debt 78 millions. Army, 34,000 nominal; 16,000 effective: with a military college at Mafra. Navy, 45 ships, of 336 guns; with an arsenal at Lisbon.

Money.—Money used in accounts and current coins as follows:—1000 reis = 1 milreis, = 4s. 5½d. English. GOLD COINS.—Mein Coroa 5 milreis = £1 2s 2½d.; the quinto de coroa, or 2 milreis piece = 8s 10½d.; the decimo de coroa, or milreis = 4s. 5½d. SILVER COINS.—Pieces of 500, 200, 100, and 50 reis, called respectively 5, 2, 1, and ½ testoon pieces. BRONZE COINS.—Pataco of 40 reis. COPPER COINS.—20 reis (vintem) 10 reis and 5 reis pieces. (From The Merchants' Handbook, by W. A. Browne, LL.D. London: Stanford.) English Sovereigns are current.

Weights and Measures.—The metric system of weights and measures is now used in Portugal, and is the same as that of France, the french names are used with a Portuguese pronunciation.

Language.—The Portuguese Language is nearly akin to the Spanish, but is not to be regarded in the relation of a dialect of it, being quite distinct in many important grammatical particulars, though there is extensive agreement in their vocabularies. Commercial and political intercourse has introduced many foreign elements, and a large infusion of French. A knowledge of the language is very desirable, as few understand any but the Portuguese, except in Lisbon, where the traveller may find French useful.

Passports.—Are not required for entering the country, or for leaving it by land. To leave by sea a permit must be obtained from the Governo Civil (near Opera House), or the passport must be viséd at that Office.

Steamers.—1.—London to Lisbon, Gibraltar and Cadiz. The "Britannia," or "London," from London Dock. John Hall, junr., & Co., Agents. These Steamers are despatched punctually every Thursday; go first to Lisbon, then to Gibraltar, Malaga, and Cadiz, and from there back to London, calling at Lisbon. 2.—Liverpool and Northern Brazil Mail Steamers, under postal contract with the Government of Brazil, and usually calling at Lisbon with 1st and 3rd class passengers every week.—See Advt., p. 714. 3.—The African Steam Ship Company's Steamers from Liverpool, calling at Madeira (occasionally) and Teneriffe. 4.—The Steamers of Messageries Maritimes de France leave Bordeaux 24th of each month, at 10 a.m., for Lisbon, &c.—See Advt., p. 716. 5.—The Liverpool and Valparaiso Line of Steamers, calling at Bordeaux and Lisbon to land and embark mails and passengers.—See Advt., p. 720. 6.—The Brazil and River Plate Mail Steamers leave Southampton on the 9th of each month, calling at Lisbon.—See Advt., page 711. There is a Steamer from Lisbon to Havre on the 1st, 11th, and 21st of each month; fares:—1st class, 166 frs. 50 cents; 2nd class, 126 frs. 20 cents, including provisions; 3rd class, 78 francs without food.—See Advt. p. 732.

Railway.—(1873) about 470 miles are open; besides 50 miles of tramways. Travellers by rail enter Portugal near Badajos. It may also be entered by diligence from Vigo or Tuy, or Orense, in the N.; from Zamora in the east, on foot or horseback, and from the ports of the Southern coast of Spain, by the Steamers which touch at Villa Real, Faro, Lagos, &c., in the Algarve. N.B.—Throughout Portugal the Railway is called Caminhos de Ferro.

Postal Information.—No packet of newspapers, books, or patterns for Portugal must exceed 1 lb weight. Letters are 2½d under ½oz. Newspapers 1d. per 4 oz.

LISBON (with Belem and Olivaes.)—Pop. (1864) 260,000.

HOTELS.—Hotel Central. Casa do Sodré (cuisine française); Hotel de Bragança, rua de Cima, (English), both first class.

POST OFFICE.—Letters for England can be posted up to 5 p.m., at the Administraçao Geral. (vide retro.) TELEGRAPH OFFICE.—Praça do Commercio. LISBON TIME is 25 minutes slower than Madrid.

H. M'S MINISTER—His Excellency Hon. Sir C. A. Murray, K.C.B. Secretary of Legation.—T. Cobbold, Esq. CONSUL.—G. Brackenbury, Esq., Pateo do Piementa, near Caes do Sodré.

AMERICAN MINISTER—His Excellency C. Lewis. CONSUL, H. Diman, Esq.

BOATS to or from steamers in the river, about 500 reis; no fixed tariff.

Lisbon, the capital of Portugal, and one of the most picturesque of cities, lies in and upon an amphitheatre of hills on the right bank of the Tagus, 12 miles from the mouth of this noble river, whose width in front of the town is 2 miles, and its greatest width is as much as 7 miles. It is well lighted and paved, and is tolerably clean and well drained.

PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS are—the Cathedral, the oldest place of worship in Lisbon. In this church are the remains of the martyr St. Vincent, the patron saint of the kingdom. S. Vicente de Fora is a handsome church, founded by Dom Affonso Henriques, when he took Lisbon in 1147. In this church is a mortuary chapel, destined for the Braganza dynasty. St. Domingos, the largest church in Lisbon. St. Roque, remarkable for the valuable chapel of St. John the Baptist, the original cost of which was upwards of a million sterling. Basilica do Coraçao de Jesus; or, the Estrella church, built on the model of St. Peter's at Rome. Graça, much frequented on account of an image of Senhor dos Passos. Martyres one of the oldest parish churches in the city.

Other public edifices are in the magnificent Commercial or Black Horse Square, mostly built subsequently to 1755, and used as public offices. The Custom house is on the east side. At the centre is the equestrian statue of King Joseph the First.

The Naval Arsenal possesses good slips, graving dock, several quays, a Naval School, and a sulphur Spring much used for bathing by invalids; its qualities being similar to the Caldas waters, 50 miles from Lisbon. The Port is half choked with sand. A new Dock is to be made.

SCIENTIFIC ESTABLISHMENTS:—Royal Academy of Sciences; the Polytechnic School; the Meteorological Observatory of the Infant Don Louis; the Army School; School of Naval Construction; the Medico-Chirurgical School at St. Joseph's hospital; and public library.

GARDENS—Passeio Publico and public Gardens north of Rocio square; Estrella gardens; and gardens at S. Pedro d'Alcantara.

THEATRES.—Theatre of St. Carlos, or Italian opera-house. Prices—pit, 700 reis; stalls, 1200 reis; lower boxes, 6000 reis dress boxes 4500 reis; second row boxes, 4000 reis; third row, 2500 reis; fourth row, 1600 reis.

Dona Maria Second Theatre, in Don Pedro IV. Square, where formerly stood the palace of the Inquisition. Prices from 260 reis to 6000 reis. Trindade Theatre, rua Nova da Trindade, the most frequented. Prices 320 reis to 6000 reis. Gymnasio Theatre, in same street, second class, but much frequented. Prices from 400 reis to 2000 reis. There are several minor theatres and circuses. The Praça do Campo de S. Anna is chiefly used for bull fights; prices range from 500 to 6000 reis. Camões brought out his Lusiad in Lisbon, 1572.

Omnibuses and horse tramways traverse the city. This is a cheap means of locomotion; but owing to the many hills and inclines it is confined to certain parts.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND CHAPEL, under the Consular Act, maintained partly by Government. The Rev. Godfrey P. Pope, consular chaplain. Service twice every Sunday.

FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND—Minister, Rev. Rob. Stewart. Prâia des Santos. Service twice every Sabbath. The Scotch and Portuguese Protestants in Lisbon worship in a Church bought of the Government, in Rua Direita das Janelles Verdes.

STEAMERS from the Caes do Sodré to Belem every half hour, and across to Cacilhas every 40 min. From Praça do Commercio to Barreiro (South Eastern Railway) and Setzal, twice a day. Railways to Oporto, p. 277, Badajos, p. 276.

Beja.—Stat.—Pop. 5500.—HOTELS.

See of a bishop, and capital of the district of the same name, on a hill surrounded by old walls, and well cultivated plains. The streets are generally good, but there are no edifices that deserve special notice, except the Cathedral, and the Torre de Homenagem, of an immense height, and from which we can see the castle of Palmella, near St. Ubes; and a few Roman antiquities, such as the Southern Gate and the aqueduct. Railway to Lisbon, page 277.

Cintra.—HOTELS:—

LAWRENCE'S HOTEL, kept by an Englishwoman, is good, clean, and moderate.

A lovely spot, celebrated by Byron and other travellers; now accessible by steam tramway from Lisbon, distance 17 miles. The chief objects of attraction are the romantic scenery, the moorish palace and castle, the Pena palace, formerly a convent, the village of Collares, famous for its wine, and the park of Montserrate, belonging to the Viscount Cook. To visit this last a ticket must be obtained from Mr. Payant, 6, Rua da Magdalena, in Lisbon.

Coimbra.—Stat.—Pop.(1864,18,153.—HOTEL MONDEGO.

The ancient Conimbriga, and capital of Beira, on a hill over the Mondego, here crossed by a good bridge. It contains the only University in Portugal, attended by 1100 students, and having a library of 60,000 vols. Other noticeable buildings are—Velha Cathedral; Sta. Cruz, with the tombs of Alfonso Henriques (1185), first King of Portugal, and his son, Sancho I; Sta. Clara Convent; an Aqueduct near the Botanical Gardens; and Quinta das Lagrimas, where Ines de Castro was murdered by order of her father-in-law, Alfonso IV. She is celebrated in the "Lusiad." To the east is the Serra Estrella, 1897 mètres above sea-level. Rail to Lisbon, Oporto, &c., see page 277.

Evora.—Stat.—Pop. (1864) 11,905.

Capital of the district of the same name, and see of an archbishop, with good public and private edifices, and fine streets. Notice the aqueduct of Sertorio, a famous monument of architecture and antiquity, also the ruins of the temple of Diana. The façade of the Cathedral is magnificent. Railway to Lisbon and Beja, see page 277.

Oporto.—Stat.—Pop. 84,200. Hotel Mary Castro, kept by an English woman, Rua da Reboleira; comfortable and reasonable for English visitors.

Oporto or Porto, the second city in Portugal, and the first for trade, stands on a hilly site, by the side of the Douro, 2 miles from the sea; and consists of an old town within the walls, and the suburbs of Ortas, S. Roque and Victoria with that of Villa Nova across the river, which is spanned by a suspension bridge. It is lined by foundries, ship-yards, and the wine vaults, or "lodges," of the Douro Wine Company, chiefly represented by 20 English houses settled here, who hold the monopoly of the Port trade. Two-thirds of it are sent to England. There are several cotton factories.

Principal Buildings.—A cathedral, 20 churches, 20 hospitals, and suppressed convents; opera house, theatre, public library Bishop's palace, and the English factory, built 1750. Two good points of view are the Convent of the Serra, at Villa Nova, and Entre Quintas, where the ex-king Charles Albert, of Sardinia, died. Oporto was stormed by the French, 1809; and besieged by Don Miguel, 1831-3.

Conveyance.—Rail to Coimbra, Lisbon, etc. see page 277. Diligence to Vigo.

H. B. M.'s Consul.—O. Crawfurd, Esq. Chaplain, Rev. R. B. Leach. American Consul, A. Dockery, Esq.

Bankers.—Van Zeller & Co.; Mercantile Bank of Oporto.

Setubal, or Saint Ubes.—Stat.—Pop. (1864) 13,135.

A port, 18 miles S.E. of Lisbon, on the right bank of the river Sado, accessible to large vessels. Oranges and cork are exported. The fort of Alharquel, and the tower of Outão, built by D. João I. on the skirts of Mount Arrabida, defend the entrance of the bar. In the lower part of Outão there is a lighthouse. Railway to Lisbon and Beja, see page 277.

English Vice Consul, R. Broughton, Esq.

ISLANDS,

(IN THE MEDITERANEAN and ATLANTIC. For SICILY, See p. 584.)

CAPRI (Italy).—Pop. 6000.—

In the Bay of Naples, 4 miles from Massa, 6 from Sorrento, and 24 from Naples; remarkable for its picturesque scenery and salubrious air. There is no trace of volcanic formation in this island, and to this fact is attributed by many the healthiness of the climate, and the superiority of its vegetable productions; the oil, wine, and the other produce of Capri being regarded as the finest in the kingdom. Here a sportsman will find abundance of quails and wood cocks twice in the year, and excellent fishing at all times—the artist, the boldest and most magnificent marine and rocky scenery—the antiquary, ruins of Roman grandeur—and the economist, cheap and excellent living.

Hotels:—Tiberio, kept by Mrs. Rose, an English woman, highly recommended; Hotel Quisisana. There is another Hotel near the landing-place kept by Mr. and Mrs. Standford.

Amongst the natural curiosities should be mentioned the Blue Grotto, the Green Grotto, and one recently discovered by English swimmers; but the lover of splendid scenery should be sure to spend a day on the heights. To its other attractions may be added the peculiar character of the air, which is singularly well suited to cases of bronchitis. Donkeys 2½fr. per day: Guide 2½fr.

Resident Physicians.—Dr. Cerio (speaks English); Dr. Green, at Anacapri; Mr. Fleischmann, M.R.C.S., at Sorrento

Conveyances.—Daily communication with the coast by excellent boats, which may be met with at the Porto di Massa in Naples. Other boats leave twice or three times a week for Massa, Sorrento, and Castellamare. A steam-boat goes from Naples to Capri, Monday and Thursday at a.m., returning at 3½ p.m. Fare—2 piastres there and back. Market-boat daily, 10 gr.

CORFU (Greece).—Pop. (1871) 15,450.

The most beautiful as well as most important of the Ionian group. The verdant olive groves and vineyards, interspersed with orange and cypress trees, the blue waters and grey rocks, form a wonderful picture, framed by the lofty snow-capped mountains of Albania. The olive trees are very old; many date from the 15th century, having been planted by the Venetians. Excellent roads intersect the island, and render access easy to the principal points of interest. Few traces of the legendary or historic glories of the city of the Phæaceans or of old Corcyra exist; but the Homeric enthusiast may identify the sites of the palace and gardens of Alcinous, of the landing place of Ulysses and of his meeting with Nausicaa, or may see his ship turned into a rock at the entrance of the old harbour; and the student of history may verify the topographical accuracy of Thucydid-s.

Excursions should be made to Benizza, 8 miles by water (Roman villa and bath, and water-works made by English), to Govino, 4 miles by water (old Venetian arsenal); to Gasturi, 6 miles by land; Santa Decca, 9 miles; Pass of Garuna, 6 miles; Pellica, 8 miles; Palæocastrissa, 16 miles; Pantaleone, Pass, 14 miles; Oak Tree, 16 miles; from all which points splendid views may be obtained. There is good shooting in the island; quail, woodcock, snipe, &c., but Albania is preferable, especially for wild boar and deer. Yachts may be hired of from 15 to 35 tons, at £15 to £3 a month, from Messrs Woodley, Stretch or Devereil, and these are very snug little harbours on the Albanian Coast; but a passport and Turkish visa are required.

Corfu town contains 24,400 inhabitants. The portion about the Esplanade is clean and well built. There is a fine view from the top of the citadel; a pass is required from the commandant. The Church of St. Spiridion contains the body of that saint. Silver ornaments with emblems of the seven islands may be bought of Varougas and other jewellers. Carriages and saddle horses may be had from J. Wilkin and the hotels.

COMMUNICATIONS.—From London viâ Brindisi, in 3½ days (Wednesdays); viâ Trieste by Austrian Lloyd's, or viâ Liverpool, Malta, Liver's steam packets. Steamers leave Corfu weekly for Ancona, Trieste, Venice and Dalmatian Coast, for the Islands, Patras and Corinth, or Zante and Syra for Athens, for Smyrna, Constantinople, and Alexandria.

HOTELS:—ST. GEORGE (Mazzuchi), first-class. D'ANGLETERRE and BELLA VENEZIA (Gazzi Brothers), first-class hotel, comfortable and clean.

BRITISH CONSUL.—Sir C. Sebright, K.C.M.G.

VICE CONSUL—J. W. Taylor, Esq.

AMERICAN CON. AGENT—T. Woodley, Esq.

ENGLISH PHYSICIAN—H. E. Page, M.D.

BRITISH CONSULAR CHAPLAIN—Rev. J. W. C. Hughes, M.A. Oxon. The new Church, formerly the Ionian House of Parliament, was consecrated Oct., 1870. Divine Service at 10.30, and 5 in summer; 11 and 3.0 in winter.

MONEY.—Gold, English or French commands a premium, as also Bankers' orders, or drafts on England. Mexican or Spanish Dollars = 4s. 4d. Venetian, Bavarian or Sicilian Dollars = 4s. 3d.; English silver is taken at par. The Greek silver coins are the drachma (new) = 9½d. (old) 8½d; Copper penny, 10 lepta; halfpenny, 5 lepta; (12 lepta = to 1 penny English.)

CORSICA (France) is the third largest island of the Mediterranean, 90 miles distant from the coast of France, 34 from that of Italy, and separated from Sardinia by the Straits of Bonafacio; its length is 115 miles, and its greatest breadth is 54 miles. It is intersected by a ridge of mountains running from north to south, some of which attain a height of more than 9000 feet, and are covered with perpetual snow. From Monte Rotondo, the highest, may be seen on a clear day the whole amphitheatre of the Mediterranean from Toulon to Naples, as well as the island of Sardinia. The scenery is grand and imposing, two lakes—"Creno" and "Ino"—are situated thousands of feet above the sea level, and said to be the craters of extinct volcanoes. Its splendid forests include beech birch, oak, and pines occupying the higher regions then the chestnut trees, large and productive, covering a wide tract of land, which receives from them its name, the "Castegneccia." The hills towards the coast are covered with olive trees. The vine is largely cultivated in the plains, some of the wines, as those of Cap Corro and Salano being excellent and well-known. The land, wherever uncultivated, is covered with brushwood, termed "maquis," which consists of myrtle, lentiscus, cystus, and various heaths, &c. The "mouffon" or wild sheep, and the wild boar still exist in the forest, and afford good sport to the huntsman. Coal, iron, marble, porphyry, and various granites are found. The sparkling chalybeate waters of Orezza, 30 miles distant from Bastia, are largely used in the Island, and on the Continent, and a depôt is now opened in London for their sale The sulphur springs of Guagno, near Ajaccio, are also in much repute. The people are remarkable, even among Italians, for vindictiveness, and retentive memories in blood feuds. For further details see Dr. Henry Bennet's work, "Winter and Spring on the Shores of the Mediterranean." Pop. (1872), 258 502.

COMMUNICATIONS.—Valery & Co.'s steamers run weekly from Marseilles to Ajaccio, Bastia, and Calvi, with the mails; on Wednesdays from Nice to Ajaccio and Bastia alternately. From Leghorn to Bastia there are steamers twice a week, and weekly from Ajaccio to Bonafacio, and also to Porto Torres in Sardinia. The roads in the island are excellent. There is excellent communication between all the large towns by diligences; three start every morning from Ajaccio, and the same from Bastia going to Corte, and to Bastia and Bonifacio; there is also an express mail taking a few passengers, and goes through from Ajaccio to Bastia in one day; starts every day from Bastia and Ajaccio.

Ajaccio.—Pop. 15,000.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE FRANCE; HOTEL DE LONDRES; HOTEL GERMANIA, good and clean, 7 to 10 fr. a day; HOTEL DE L'EUROPE.

The capital of the island, situated on a splendid gulf of the same name, with magnificent views, and a mild, invariable climate; cold is unknown, and very little rain falls; being sheltered from every wind, it is a desirable winter residence for invalids. Napoleon I. was born here, in a house preserved in its original state. There is also a beautiful family Mausoleum, where his mother, Letitia, is interred, with a picture gallery, containing upwards of 1000 paintings, presented to the town by Cardinal Fesch. Most of the streets bear the name of some member of the family. Notice an allegorical statue of Napoleon in marble, in the market-place, and another of himself and four brothers. The town is very clean, and the principal street is planted with a double row of orange trees, which, as well as the lemon, are very abundant here. It is now proved to be one of the healthiest in the Mediterranean, and good for invalids, &c. Carriages can be hired from three establishments. There are some good villas. The road between this and Bastia is magnificent. Unfortunately half of it is passed by night.

A traveller not intending to make long stay should be careful to cross from Nice to Ajaccio, and thence to Bastia. The ascent of the Monte d'Oro, which is only a few metres lower than Monte Rotondo, is something never to be forgotten.

H. B. M.'S CONSUL.—J. A. Shortt, Esq

ENGLISH CHAPLAIN.—Rev. J. O. Parr, M.A. Service at the Hôtel de France, in English, at 11 a.m.; in French at 7.30 p.m.

ENGLISH PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Battersby.

Bastia.—Pop. 20,000.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE FRANCE, kept by M. Staffe; very dear. HOTEL D'ITALIE.

The principal commercial town of the Island, only 6 hours from Leghorn by steamer. The streets and shops are good; climate rather variable and subject to winds. The Islands Elba, Monte Cristo, and Capraja form picturesque objects as seen from the town. Bastia, as well as Ajaccio, is being lighted with gas by an English company. The Grotto of Brandis should be visited.

Dil gence daily to and from Bastia and Calvi, and Steamer once a week from Marseilles.

H.B.M.'s VICE-CONSUL.—T. L. J. W. Jervis, Esq.

Bonifacio in the south, and Calvi in the north of the Island, small seaport towns with good harbours, are both interesting.—The HOTEL DE L'EUROPE at Ronose, is comfortable and charges are moderate.

ENGLISH VICE CONSUL—At Bonifacio, Colonel Casabianca; at Calvi, A. Ronosjolo, Esq.

Corte.—Pop. 6000.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE L'EUROPE, good and clean, and moderate charges; good for English. HOTEL DE FRANCE a cheap hotel, not bad for Italians to stay at.

A fine old town, near the bottom of the Monte Rotundo; numbers stay here to make the ascent.

Near Corsica is the small island rock of Caprera, noted as the residence of Garibaldi.

GOZO (England)—Pop. 16,000.—A dependency of Malta, four miles north of it, entirely circumscribed with perpendicular rocks. The best way is to coast round the island in a boat, exploring its caverns. Principal points to visit—the Giant's Tower, a vast Pelasgic monument; L'Emeil aux Champignons, a rock 100 metres from the shore, and 30 high, reached by cables: and Caral Zebag, a Capuchin convent. Rabato is the only town. The famed Maltese lace is made here.

ISCHIA (Italy).—Pop. 26,000. In the Bay of Naples, 6 miles from Cape Misene, and 20 miles from Naples, with an area of 24 miles. Mineral baths; fine view of the wondrous Bay from Monte Epomeo, which is 2574 feet above the sea.

ISCHIA is 3 hours from the Bay of Naples by steamer; it leaves the Island in early morning, and returns in the afternoon. This charming island, which visitors to Naples should not by any means overlook, abounds in picturesque sites and fine panoramic views. At Cassamicciola (2500 inhabitants), are the hot springs, which, for invalids suffering from the effects of wounds, gout, and paralysis, are invaluable. Their temperature varies from 18° to 80° Cent. They are chlorruric, with bicarbonate of soda, and ferruginous.

PHYSICIAN.—Dr. H. R. Storer.

Two excellent Bath establishments have been opened; and there are several good Hotels, (frequented by English,) especially Piccola Sentinellas, Grande, Sauvé, Belle Vue; all commanding a grand prospect of the Bay, Vesuvius, the Islands of Procida, Nisita &c., as well as of Gaeta and more distant points. The people are very handsome, and said to be of Grecian origin.

MADEIRA (Portugal)—Distant from Southampton, 1,332 miles; from Lisbon, 535 miles; greatest length and breadth, 31 miles and 12 miles. It is a volcanic mass, all up and down hill, 6000 feet high in one part, with cliffs 1000 to 2000 feet high. One valley, the Curral, is a gorge 2000 feet deep. Its vines, which were ruined by disease in 1852, are steadily recovering. Sugar and coffee are grown, with abundance of oranges, bananas, dates, figs, and other fruit

CONVEYANCES.—African Mail Packets from Liverpool call occasionally. Fares—£17: 10: 6 and £13: 5: 0. Agents at 14, Leadenhall street, London, and Messrs. Fletcher and Parr, Liverpool. The British and African Steam Navigation Co.'s Steamers on the 6th and 18th. Union Royal Mail Co., from Southampton on the 10th and 25th of each month. All the foregoing are well appointed, mostly carrying Surgeons and Stewardesses.

Funchal, the capital, on the South side, in latitude 32½° N., longitude 17° W. Pop. 14,260.

HOTELS AND BOARDING-HOUSES.—The Carmo Hotel, by J. Miles; Reid's house, near the sea, &c. All excellent, charging about £10 per month.

BRITISH CONSUL, George H. Hayward, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—J. Smith, Esq.

BRITISH CHAPLAIN, Rev. James J. Hewitt.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—Service at the Scotch Church.

PHYSICIANS.—Michael Grabham, M.D., F.R.G.S., M.R.C.P., Lond.; Dr. Juvenal, &c.

MONEY.—Spanish dollar, American eagles, and English gold and silver. Visitors not provided with drafts on the merchants, should bring sovereigns.

ENGLISH CLUB, containing library, reading and billiard rooms. The "Times" "Bradshaw," and all important papers and periodicals. Subscription moderate.

Visitors reside in or about Funchal, in the Boarding-houses, or in furnished houses, from £30 upwards, (plate and linen required). Horse-hire very reasonable; and all necessaries abundant and cheap English everywhere spoken. Principal buildings are Governor's house, the Cathedral, Theatre, and Hospital.

The climate affords a most delightful health resort for visitors from all parts of Europe and Africa. The genial warmth of winter, the pleasant coolness of summer and the similarity of day and night temperature are features which mark the well-known character of equabil ty in this place. The temperature varies between 46° and 80°.

MAJORCA, or Mallorca (Spain).—The largest of the Balearic Isles, standing between the other two, 130 miles south of Barcelona. Pop. 180,000. Size, 60 miles by 45 miles; with a chain of hills running along the north side, 5,114 feet high at Silla de Tonrillos. This beautiful island has a hilly and picturesque surface, with a temperate and healthy climate, but is not so well known or so much visited as it deserves. The rich Valley of Soler, 20 miles from Palma, is 12 miles round. Sulphur spring at Camfos. Malvoisia wine made at Ascores. Among fruits are palm, orange, lemon, olive, and fig. For game see Menorca. The language is a mixture of Spanish Arabic. It gives name to Majolica ware, first made here. The common name of the islands, is derived from Ballo, to throw, as the people were great slingers formerly.

Palma.—Stat.—Pop. (1857) 40,420.

The capital, on the south west side; from which a rail was opened to Inca, 1875. Inn: Fonda de las tres Palmas. Here are a large Gothic Cathedral, in which are tombs of the early kings of Majorca, Marquis Romano, and some of the Bonaparte family; St. Dominic and other convents; St. Francis' Church; the Captain General's Palace; a Town Hall, with portraits of nations; the old Lonja or Exchange; Bellver Castle; Academy; Naval School; General Hospital, &c. The Harbour of Alcudia is on the east side of the island; Arta and its Caves, 45 miles.

English Consul.—C Bidwell, Esq. American C. Agent.—W Wallis, Esq.

Steamers—to Barcelona every Tuesday; Iviza and Valencia, Sunday; Port Mahon, Monday, 11 hours For the Islands—from Barcelona to Alcudia and Port Mahon, every Wednesday, 15 to 24 hours; to Palma, Friday. From Valencia to Palma, every Sunday; Iviza, Wednesday.

Telegraph Line to all the chain of islands and to the Spanish mainland.

Iviza, or Ivi̇ça—(pron "Eveesa") 12 miles S. W. of Majorca, and 50 miles from Cape Nao, on the Spanish coast. Consul—W. Wallis, Esq. Formentera is 6 or 7 miles south. Steamers to Palma and Valencia.

MALTA.—(England).—Pop. (1871) 191 000; of which Valetta, on one side of the harbour, and Vittoriosa, Cospicua, and Senglea, on the other side contain about 60,000.

Hotels.—Morrell's Family Hotel, Strada Forni, Dunsford's Strada Reale. Table d'hote, 8s. Hotel d'Angleterre, Strada Stretta. Imperial Hotel, Strada Sta. Lucia, 8s. per diem. Croce di Malta, Strada Mezzodi, and numerous minor ones.

Carriages drawn by one or two horses at the following fares:—Two horses, per hour. 2s. 6d.: by the course, 8d. a mile. One horse, two-thirds of the above fare. Boats—Per hour, 6d.; every further hour, 5d.

Commerce.—The commerce consists of cotton, wine oil, wheat, fruit, and cattle. More than 1,500 first class steamers pass annually through the port.

Steamers arrive at Malta regularly. From Marseilles.—Fraissinet and Co., (see p. 719) three times a month. From Liverpool.—Moss and Company (see p. 726) every week. Burns and McIver (see p. 711) several times a month. John Ribby and Company's steamers twice each month. From Palermo and Naples.—Florio's steamers every Tuesday and Friday From London.—Twice every month; Agents, Smith, Sundius, and Co., 17, Gracechurch street. Russian Steam Navigation Company, every week. agents as above. From Southampton—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's Steamers, touch every week. The return steamers sail with the same regularity.

The climate of Malta is excellent in the winter; and, there being an admirable new market, provisions of every kind are good and cheap. As the residence of a Governor and large garrison of 5000 men, as well as the Commander-in-Chief and the Port Admiral of the Mediterranean fleet, from October to May, it is a favourite resort of visitors. It is easily accessible, and the accommodation good. Military bands play every evening in the open air during the season, and excursions are daily made to places of interest in the island. The sirocco begins to be felt in July.

The new suburb of Sliema, separated by a deep bay from the city of Valetta, but easily reached by boat or road, contains at the present time some thousand new and well-built villas. At the highest point has been erected an elegant Church and parsonage, founded by Dr. Trower, the late Bishop of Gibraltar. The sea-bathing at Sliema and St. Julian's bay is excellent. Lodgings are to be easily obtained.

The Palace of the Grand Master, now the Governor's Palace, is well worth a visit—its corridors, chambers, and armoury of the knights being accessible to visitors at all times. The Church of St. John, one of the most curious and beautiful in Europe, is well worth the stranger's attention. Of late years much expense has been incurred in the restoration of this and other similar buildings. The churches in Malta are handsome and numerous.

The Garrison Library, a spacious and commodious establishment, containing 15,000 volumes, besides foreign and English papers, magazines, &c., is open to visitors for a small monthly subscription. The Public Library of the knights, erected by the Grand Master de Rohan, containing 50,000 volumes, in French, English, Italian, Spanish, and Oriental languages, can be used by visitors without charge. Here is preserved a rich collection of Phœnician coins, vases, statues, and inscriptions. Periodicals, in English and European languages, are furnished to the library.

Clubs.—There are five; The "Union," is chiefly frequented by officers of the navy and army and English residents. Admission, by ballot. Entrance, £4.

Newspapers - eleven published in Malta. The "Government Gazette" and the "Mediterraneo" are in English and Italian.

University.—Consists of a rector and fifteen professors and examiners The Medical school is a singularly good one; and for cheapness and efficiency can vie with any in Europe. Its diplomas are recognised in England. Course, from 1st October to 30th June Consuls - Several foreign Consuls resident in Malta.

Money—The only legal tender is English money, and the Sicilian dollar, value 4s. 2d The latter will be abolished as soon as practicable.

Malta is governed by its own laws. passed by the Governor and a Council of sixteen members. The Roman Catholic Archbishop's is appointed by the Pope. the revenues being above £4,000 per annum. Most of the other benefices are in the hands of the British Government.

Theatres.—Theatre Royal, near Porta Reale Gate, built at a cost of £40,000, from the designs of Mr. C. Barry, was unfortunately burnt 1873.

When open the best operas take place nightly, except on Fridays and Sundays, commencing at 8½ p.m. The opera season—October to May. Boxes (6 tickets), from £1 2s. to 18s.; stalls, from 2s. 6d. to 1s. 6d. Theatre Manoel, built by Grand-Master Manoel, in 1731, and since altered, is now used only for private and dramatic performances.

Booksellers.—English: L. Critien, 28, Strada San Giovanni; Watson, Strada Reale; Calleja, under the Arcade.

Church of England Services.—St. Paul's Collegiate Church, week days and Sundays. Holy Trinity, Sliema, near Valetta, daily. Services at the two Garrison Chapels, and at the Chapel of the dockyard, and the Royal Naval Hospital. Scotch Free Church, Strada Mezzodi—Sundays at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. The Lord Bishop of Gibraltar resides at Gibraltar Palace, Strada Vescov.

English Physician—J. B. Sammut, Esq., M.D. (late of Naples).

MINORCA, or Menorca (Spain).—The easternmost of the Balearic Isles, 24 miles N. E. of Majorca; 33 miles by 13 miles in extent. Pop. 44,000. It rises to a cone at Monte Toro Convent, 4793 feet high. Port Mahon, 28 miles from the capital (Ciudadela), has Moorish remains, with an arsenal, storehouses, quarantine hospital, &c., built by the English, who took it 1708, and held possession till 1756 (when Admiral Byng, failing to retain it, was shot by court-martial), and again, with two exceptions, till the Peace of Amiens, 1802. Fort St. Philip is a ruin. Its fine harbour, 3 miles long, is so good that the Spaniards say—

"Los Puertos del Mediterraneo son
Junio, Julio, Agosto, y Puerto Mahon."

Or, "The ports of the Mediterranean are June, July, August, and Port Mahon,"—with some allusion to the prevailing winds. From its captor, Lord Stanhope, the present Earl derives his second title of Mahon—a name originally acquired from Mago, the Carthagenian founder. Abundance of partridge, quail, woodcock, becafico, wild duck, and other game, with good oysters, lobsters, and sardines.

Steamer to Palma every Wednesday, 11 hours.

English V. Consul, G. Segui, Esq. American Consul, J. Whallon, Esq.

SARDINIA (Italy).

Steamers start weekly from Genoa, leaving, Tuesday, at 11 p.m.; Leghorn, Wednesday, 8 a.m.; leaving at noon, arriving at Porto Torres (harbour of Sassari), Thursday at noon. The line of steamers from Genoa to Tunis calls at Leghorn, Terra Nova, Sardinia and Tortoli. Leave Genoa on Thursday, at 11 p.m. Reach Cagliari in Sardinia Sunday, at 5.40 a.m.

English Consul at Cagliari, J. Pernis, Esq. American Consular Agent, E. Pernis, Esq. English Vice-Consul at Sassari, C. Bellieni, Esq.

The Island of Sardinia the largest in the Mediterranean, is 115 miles from the Italian coast; is 165 miles long by 60 miles broad: with an area of 9400 square miles. Pop. (1871) 636,565.

The capital is Cagliari (a Stat.; pop. 32,836), at the bottom of the Gulf of that name, in the southern part of the island. Sassari (Stat.), the town of next importance, stands a little way inland not far from the Gulf of Asinara. Porto Torres (stat) is the harbour of Sassari. Railway from Cagliari, p. 287.

A lofty ridge of mountains runs through Sardinia, the highest point being the Genoan-Genna, and the Tirjo is the principal river. Sardinia has great mineral treasures, once known to the Romans, who used it as a place of exile, but at present untouched. The island has also splendid forests and a fertile soil, but the malaria prevails in most of its plains, resulting from the great heat of the climate, combined with imperfect drainage. The fisheries are abundant, but agriculture and industry are almost dormant, and the population is benighted and very uncultivated. A visit to the island will repay those who have leisure and do not mind roughing it, as it presents much fine scenery, and primitive manners in the people, who speak an Italian dialect with points of resemblance to the Spanish and rather close to the Latin.

TENERIFFE—(Spanish Canaries).—One of a group in the North Atlantic Ocean in 29° N. latitude and 14° longitude West. It is 50 miles in length, and 24 miles in breadth at its widest part, and in circumference 140 geographical miles.

The chief town and the capital of the whole of the islands is Santa Cruz, where the Captain-General, and all the public authorities reside. Accommodation for visitors, limited. Richardson's Hotel, opposite the port, is a capacious, clean, and comfortable house, the terms being moderate, and the proprietors, two brothers, most attentive. There is also the Fonda di Marina, a Spanish house. There is also another port named Oratava. The climate of Teneriffe is warm and genial during the Winter months, and by reason of its equable temperature (from 65° to 70°) and the dryness of the atmosphere, is considered a most desirable winter retreat for consumptive patients.

The scenery is mountainous and grand, the famous Peak, 12,182ft. high, being a conspicuous object from all parts of the island. Vegetation is luxurious, and comprises most tropical plants and trees.

British Consul, H. Colley Grattan, Esq. There is no English physician; Dr. José Torres Matos, a native of Las Palmas, Grand Canary, has a great reputation.

The island of Grand Canary is rich in natural scenery, has excellent roads, but no accommodation whatever for visitors. This is to be regretted, as the climate is similar in character to that of the sister isle, Teneriffe.

ITINERARY OF THE ALPINE PASSES AND ITALIAN LAKES,

For the use of Travellers generally, but more especially for those who are already in Switzerland, or the Tyrol, and who Travel by means of public conveyances, on high-roads, by Diligence or otherwise, by Rail or by Steamer.

The modes of conveyance,—the time occupied en route,—the probable expense of the journey,—together with a list of the best Inns and halting-places are given. Tourists are supposed to start from the termination of the Swiss, Bavarian, and French railways.

They can also make selection from any one of the different Passes, starting from or leading to Innsbrück, Bregenz, Coire, Sierre, St. Michel, Briançon, and Nice.

A.—ITINERARY OF THE PASS OF THE SIMPLON.

Leaving the Railway at Sierre, proceed by diligence to Brieg, 32 miles, time 4 hours, cost 7frs. 75 cents; from Brieg by diligence to Domo d'Ossola, 52 miles, time 12 hours, cost 14 frs. 50 cents. Proceeding thence to Arona at the foot of Lago Maggiore, and ascending the same, the tourist would choose between the Bernardino and the St. Gothard passes for his return route. The expense and time occupied are about equal. Selecting the Bernardino for the return route, the calculation will be made accordingly. From Domo d'Ossola by diligence to Baveno; boat to Isola Bella and back, thence by steamer, three times a day, in about 2½ hours; cost, 2 francs, to Arona, 22 miles: from Arona ascend the Lake by steamer to Magadino, 40 miles, time 5½ hours, cost 4 frs. 85 cents; thence by diligence to Bellinzona and Bernardino, 49 miles, time 10 hours, cost 14 frs. 50 cents; thence to Coire by diligence, 58 miles, time 9 hours, cost 12 frs. Total expense for the tour of the two passes, and the Lago Maggiore, distance 303 miles, time 53½ hours, cost 78 frs. 60 cents. The best season to pass the Alps is from 15th June to 30th October. From the Italian side of the Alps the passes are approached from Domo d'Ossola, Bellinzona, Chiavenna, Fenestrelles, Cuneo, Susa, Trent, &c. In the winters of 1829 and 1838, the writer of this made two journeys from Arona to Geneva on a sledge, in about 40 hours each journey, the travelling free from danger, and most agreeable, the cold anything but intense.

Pass of the Simplon.—This stupendous undertaking was commenced by order of Napoleon in 1801 (after the battle of Marengo), and was finished in 1806, at a cost of £5,000 per mile; upwards of 25,000 workmen were employed daily on this magnificent road, which measures throughout the passage 25 feet in width. There are 60 bridges thrown across the rocks, 302 viaducts, 5 tunnels hewn out of solid granite, and numerous galleries which required great skill and ingenuity to construct. French engineers executed the road on the Swiss side of the mountain, whilst the most difficult and almost insurmountable part on the Italian side, was accomplished by the distinguished Chevalier Fabbroni (author of the Collection of Wax-work in Florence.)

On leaving Brieg the traveller commences ascending the Simplon by long zigzags. On the right is seen the handsome covered wooden bridge thrown over the Saltine, a river larger than the Rhone, with which it unites but a few miles distant; the road winds at the foot of Glyshorn Alp, and directs its course towards the Kienhorn. After skirting some precipices, it ascends by bold windings through gloomy forests of Alpine firs, to the first and second refuge; there were originally twenty of them at equal distances between Brieg and Domo d'Ossola. Beyond the first gallery is a bridge 80 feet in height, thrown over the Gantar, and beyond the second refuge there are fine cascades. The openings of the forests and the sinuosities of the road present beautiful views of the valley of the Rhone, encircled by gigantic snow-crowned Alps, the Jungfrau towering above the rest. The Post Inn of Berisal is attained (the third refuge), an excellent resting place, a clean house, good cooking, a civil landlord, and moderate charges. After passing the Gantar, we pass, on the left, a fine cascade, and arrive at the fourth refuge. This part of the road is lined by larches mixed with firs; two bridges, those of the Asback and Saltine, and a tunnel 90 feet long, are arrived at. To the left is the glacier of the Kaltwasser, whence descend four cascades, whose waters, falling on the rocks on the side of the road, are conveyed under its foundations in aqueducts. Continuing to ascend by a beautiful winding road, the fifth refuge is attained, which stands on an eminence exposed to violent gusts of wind. Before reaching it is the gallery of Schalbeck. Here trees cease to flourish, flowers are no longer seen, and an avalanche has rooted up the blighted firs and larches, and suspended them on each other over the yawning abyss beneath. A long and dreary gallery leads from this desolation to the Glacier Grotto, 150 feet long, immediately beyond which is the most elevated part of the whole passage. The traveller now arrives at the sixth refuge, and the barrier where toll is taken. A little above this is a large wooden cross, indicating the culminating point of the pass, which is 6500 feet high, and from whence is descried the magnificent chain of the Bernese Alps, and nearer, the Glacier of Aletsch. On the left of the road is seen the NEW HOSPICE, founded by Napoleon, but not completed till after his overthrow, when the brotherhood of the monks of St. Bernard purchased it in 1825, for the sum of 15,000 francs. In the establishment they placed four of their brotherhood (of the order of St. Augustine), with a sufficient number of domestics, and dogs of the original St. Bernard breed. The edifice contains several sleeping rooms, a saloon, a refectory, a chapel, and about thirty beds for indigent wayfarers, who are lodged and fed free of expense. In stormy weather the dogs are used to go with the monks to trace out the paths, and the dangerous places in the snow, in search of travellers; from 12,000 to 15,000 of whom are received by the brotherhood annually.

From the New Hospice to Simplon the road descends gradually on rocky and treeless slopes. The village of Simplon is a scattered hamlet, encircled by the summits of the Alp whose name it bears: it is situated 3,260 feet above the level of the sea.

The descent to Domo d'Ossola displays on each side lofty and barren rocks, with spaces between them occupied by pasturages, firs, and feathery aspens, and watered by the same impetuous torrent which is seen from the heights. Soon after leaving the village of Simplon, these rocks gradually approach each other, becoming perpendicular, and scarcely leaving sufficient space for the road, which descends by four or five zigzags to the Gallery of Algaby, and enters the valley of the Vedro. Just before reaching the village of Gondo, the road enters the Great Gallery 600 feet long, and on emerging from it, crosses the Fressinone by a stone-bridge. The hamlet of Gondo and the village and post-house of Iselle (which last affords very good quarters), are then passed. At Iselle is the Italian custom-house. From thence to the Bridge of Crevola is about nine miles.

As the traveller advances, verdure, vineyards, orchards, elegant villas, and cheerful hamlets, meet the eye on every side. The rocks and mountains recede, and the road traverses a wide and fertile valley to Domo d'Ossola.

ANCIEN HOTEL DE VILLEAT DE LA POSTE.—(Diligence Office).

A party preferring to pass the Simplon en voiture, may hire a carriage and pair of horses at Brieg, the cost of which, comprising the cheveux de renfort, the barrier tax, and the coachman's fee, will not exceed 80 or 90 francs.

B.—ITINERARY OF THE PASS OF THE STELVIO.

From Innsbruck by Diligence to Landeck thence through the romantic pass of Finstermünz to Mals, Prad, St. Maria, and Bormio; thence by the Valtelline to Sondrio, Morbegno, and Colico (on Lago di Como). Distance, 273 miles; cost, 55 fr.; Time, 40 hours of actual travelling, or 4 days, resting at night.

Pass of the Stelvio.—This pass opens annually on the 1st of July and closes on the 1st of October. The ascent commences at Prad, 3275 ft. n height; eight miles beyond which is the hamlet of Trafni. The ascent now becomes steeper, and the road ascends by repeated zigzags to the Post House of Franzenhöhe. Extraordinary solility is visible throughout the whole construction of this masterpiece of engineering—the work of Italians—begun in 1821, and finished in 1824. The summit of the pass is 9155 feet, and to effect an easy incline, forty-eight zigzags had to be constructed; the road is 15½ feet in width, and cost 3 million francs. Here are seen the Ortler Spitze and Matatsch towering majestically over the fearful pass, and covered with eternal snows. The summit is the highest carriage pass in Europe, and forms the limit of the Tyrol and Valtelline (Italian); the snows rarely leave this elevation in the hottest day in summer, and even then the winds are cold and very keen. From hence is a descent to Santa Maria (the custom-house for Lombardy), a spacious square building, erected for the triple purpose of custom-house, inn, and refuge, at an elevation of 8153 feet. Beyond this we continue to descend for an hour to the third refuge. Here is the extremity of the immense plateau of the Braulio. From hence commences another descent by numerous zigzags. Three miles below is the cantoniera of Spondalonga. No less than seven tunnels and galleries are constructed here for the protection of the road, their length being 2953 ft.; opposite is a fine cascade 525 feet high. In one hour from Spondalonga we arrive at the first gallery (Piatta Martina;) with a handsome bridge over a profound gorge. This spot is called "Wormserjoch;" on the left is seen another fine cascade falling from a precipice into the bed of the Adda below. Beyond the last gallery is seen, close to the road, an immense rock, upwards of 66 feet high, brought down from the mountains by avalanches. Below this are the Baths of Bormio (p. 513), famous for its mineral waters, and the excellence of its honey. From Bormio an excellent road leads through the Valteline, celebrated alike for the excellence of its wines and the richness of its pasturage. The Adda passes in its course the pretty towns of Bolladore, Tirano, and Sondrio (capital of the Valtelline), Morbegno, and Colico, on the Lago di Como.

C.—ITINERARY OF THE PASS OF MONT CENIS.

Mont Cenis (as the French call what the Italians call Monte Cenisio or Moncenisio), is the general name of the dividing ridge between the valley of the Arcin French Savoy, & the Dora Riparia valley in Italy, lately traversed by two railway routes, viz: the Pass Route along the road, and the Tunnel Route under Col de Fréjus. The two lines diverged, so that the Tunnel Line through the Col was 16 miles south west of the Pass Line; but the distance by either, between St. Michel and Susa, was about the same, 48 to 50 miles.

Pompey is said to have attempted making a passage over these Alps; but Napoleon in 1810 was the first to provide a road, practicable and safe all the year round, though it traverses a part where it rises 5900 feet above sea level. His engineer was the Cavaliere Fabbroni; 3000 workmen were employed, and the cost was eight million francs.

Mont Cenis Pass Rail.—At St. Michel the old break of 49 miles to Susa, formerly done by diligence in 9 to 10 hours, was in 1867 filled up by Fell's Climbing Rail, which was laid on the road, at its outer edge, and performed the distance in 4 to 5½ hours. The first train went over the Pass 15th June of that year. The line was single, with a middle or catch rail for safety. It ceased on the opening of the Tunnel Route, and the permanent-way was taken up. From St. Michel cross the Arvan on a stone bridge, then the Arc by another bridge, facing which is a rivulet of water which petrifies every substance it touches, and has consequently made for itself a natural aqueduct. Modane 13 miles. Here are situated Forto Lesseillon, which commands the pass of Mont Cenis. Near this the Tunnel Line diverges. La Verney, 10 miles, close to the double cascade of Benoît-Lanslebourg, (Hotel de Post.)

From Lanslebourg the ascent of Mont Cenis commences, and the road traverses picturesque and beautiful forests to La Ramasse. The most elevated part is a plain of 6 miles, encircled by the peaks of Mont Cenis, and containing the post-house and another inn (the Grand Croix,) the barracks, and a beautiful lake. Excellent trout, cheese, and butter are procured here. At the end of the lake, on the Italian side, stands the Hospice, at an elevation of 6365 feet. It was founded by Charlemagne, and restored by Napoleon. One room contains the bed used by Napoleon. Half of the Hospice is occupied by carabineers and custom house officers, and the other half by Benedictine monks.

The descent into Italy is much finer than the ascent from Savoy. The first gallery on this side is 650 feet in length, cut through solid granite. Opposite Ferriere is another gallery above 2000 feet in length. Here a wall of nine feet in height, and 600 in extent, defends the gallery from earth and loose stones. The scenery in this part is enchanting. Near Molaretto rise the fruitful hills of Chaumont, watered by the Dora Riparia. On the road are established 23 small Inns or "Houses of Refuge," provided with bells, which, during the prevalence of fogs, are rung to guide travellers from one refuge to another. The cantoniers who inhabit these inns are 50 in number, and form two companies, 25 on each side of the mountain.

Tunnel Route, about 48 miles long. This diverges from the other route at Fourneaux, 1½ miles below Modane; winds up the Arc by a loop of easy gradients to Modane and the Tunnel mouth, 3904 feet above sea; then strikes through the great Tunnel under the Grand Vallon near Col de Fréjus; first, by an incline upwards of 1 in 45, to the middle, which is 4377 feet above sea, or 3460 feet below the crest of the mountain; it then slopes down by a very gentle decline of 1 in 2000, to the Italian mouth at Bardonnechia (which is about 440 feet higher than the French mouth); issuing out at the top of a magnificent glen. This is descended by 20 to 25 short tunnels, and about as many viaducts; past Oulx on the Dora Riparia, and Salbertrand, to Bussoleno, on the Susa and Turin main line.

The Tunnel is 12 kilometres, or 13,292 yards, or 7½ miles 192 yards long; that is 4½ miles longer than the Lenerthe Tunnel, on the Paris and Lyons line. It is 19½ feet high, and 32 feet wide, widening a little at the mouths; is traversed by a double rail, the approaches outside being single; and is well ventilated, with an average temperature of 65 to 70 degrees.—See pages 54, 248 & 250. It was begun 1857, finished December 1870, and formally opened 17th September 1871; it cost about 6 millions sterling, divided between Italy and France. It was drilled from both ends, at the rate of 2 to 3 yards in 24 hours; the two parts at the final joining were only 1½ feet out of line. The tools were driven by hydraulic pressure supplied from the hills above; compressed air is supplied in iron tubes. The idea of this great work was first conceived by Medail, a road-maker of Bardonnechia; encouraged by Professor Paleocapa (afterwards Minister of Public Works), and carried out by his pupils—Sommeiller, a Savoyard, (died 1871), Grandis (also dead), and Grattoni, both Piedmontese. Many will still prefer to visit the sublime scenery of the Pass; but to the greater number the Tunnel will be an immense gain.

Susa.—Pop—3189.—Hotel de la Poste.

Here as also at St. Michel on the other side of the mountain, Voituriers may be hired with carriage and pair of horses, to convey 2 or 3 persons including all extras for Chevaux de Renfort, barriers and coachman's fee, from 60 to 65 frs.

Magadino—Belvedere.
Bellinzona—De Ville.

Steamers ply three times a-day from Arona to the head of the lake. Fares: First Class, 4fr. 80 cents; Second Class, 2fr. 65 cents.—Leave railway at Sierre, thence to Brieg, 32 miles, (5 hours).

Brieg to Domo d'Ossola, 42 miles, 11 hours, 2 horses for 80 fr.

Domo d'Ossola to Baveno, 80 miles, (5 hours). 2 horses for 25 fr.

Baveno to Arona, 14 miles, (2 hours), 2 horses for 20 fr.

Arona (by the Steamer) to Magadino 5 hours, 4 frs. 80 cts.

Magadino to Bellinzona, (1½ hours), diligence, 2frs. Thence by the St. Gothard Pass to Fluelen, (14½ hours), diligence. 28 frs.

By the Bernardino to Coire, (16 hours), diligence, 14 frs. 30 cts. By either of the above passes a carriage with 2 horses, 120 fr.

Lago Maggiore.—The traveller visiting the lakes by the Pass of the Simplon will leave Domo d'Ossola, and proceed to Arona at the bottom of the Lago Maggiore; on his right he is accompanied by a lofty chain of mountains, stretching from the Simplon, and decreasing gradually in altitude until they are lost in the plains of Piedmont. Twelve miles from Domo d'Ossola is the village of Vogogna, (at the entrance to the valley of Anzasca, leading to Monte Rosa), thence to Ornavasso, known as the principal white marble quarry, which supplied that material for the construction of the cathedral of Milan. A short distance beyond this we come to Gravellona, (the road to Omegna, on Lago d'Orta, branches from hence to the right, distant 4 miles). In the vicinity are the celebrated rose granite quarries, in which are found abundance of that beautiful felspar, the flesh-coloured crystal, which furnishes the lapidaries, and may be met with in every jeweller's shop at the different watering places throughout Europe. Four miles hence we arrive at Baveno, delightfully situated on the shore of the lake; arrange at any of the hotels at Baveno to refresh there, and go at once direct from Baveno to the Isola Bella, either by steamer or by row-boat, which occupies 2 to 2½ hours, charge 4 fr., and buonamano 1 fr., and go after return to Arona, either by road, or by steamer three times daily: before taking a small row-boat, take care to ask for the tariff card.

The Borromean Islands.—On the surface of the Lago Maggiore rise four small islands. Isola San Giovanni is the smallest; it is situated close to the promontory of St. Remigio, dividing the waters of the lake which bathe the shores of Intra and Pallanza; the old chateau is partly occupied as a granary and partly going to decay. Isola dei Pescatori, (fisherman's island), is very picturesque, and although the circumference of it may be walked in ten minutes, yet within these limits a population of 530 is domiciled, chiefly occupied as fishermen and boatmen for the navigation of the lake. Isola Madre rises in the centre of the lake and is distant from the shore about 1½ mile. It consists of five gardens on terraces, rising one above the other, embellished with luxuriant flowers, shrubs, and forest trees, among which are seen the cedar and the cyprus in great perfection; the latter are near the pheasantry in the vicinity of the palace which crowns the whole, and which contains landscapes &c., by Tempesta, who is said to have taken refuge here after destroying his wife to make way for a mistress. Isola Bella, about one mile distant from the latter island, consists of eight terraced gardens one above the other, carpeted with flowers, refreshed by fountains, shaded by forest trees, and crowned with a noble palace which contains an exquisite collection of marble, some fine specimens of gilding, and a few good paintings by Tempesta, Luca Giordina, Procaccini, Schidone, and Le Brun; the subterranean apartments or grottoes contain fine statuary, mosaic pavement and fountains. In the chapel may be seen the tomb of R. Borromeo, elaborately executed by Bambaio, and considered a chef d'œuvre. The gardens and the palace are open to the public daily at a fee of 1 fr. to the custodian and 1 fr. to the gardener who accompanies the visitor. The Hotel Danphin, on the island, is convenient, very good, and the charges are reasonable. Steamers call here three times a day in their upward, and three times a day in their downward course.

Nothing can possibly be more charming than the drive of 14 miles, between Baveno and Arona, by an excellent road winding along the margin of the lake on the left, while on the right the lawns extending from the villas to the handsome terraces on the side of the road, are covered with hedges of roses, eglantine, and bignonia radicans (this beautiful climbing flower grows most luxuriantly all along, in the gardens); a profusion of flowers and shrubs cover the lawns and terraces, among which, shaded by tall forest trees, are the hydrangia, the oleander, the aloe, the myrtle, the cyprus, the orange, olive, and a numerous family of magnificent trees and plants from every clime. This road is seen best from the steamer, which coasts along the shore. Nothing can prove more grateful than the genial mildness of the climate in early spring and late autumn; for the rose tree never ceases bearing during the year, while the inhabitants of the villages follow their avocations in the open air. In the neighbourhood are extensive palaces and numerous beautiful villas belonging to the nobility and gentry (and even Royalty), who divide their time between the retirement of the country and the attractions of Milan and Turin. Approaching Arona, and at one mile distant from it, we come to the bronze statue of San Carlo Borromeo, a short distance off the road on the right: a few minutes walk suffices to arrive at its base which is situated on an eminence overlooking Arona and the lake. It is not advisable, as heretofore was necessary, to descend the lake to Sesto Calende, since the railway conducts from hence to Milan direct.

The Lago Maggiore is formed by the river Ticino, and is from N. to S., about 40 miles in length, and 7 miles wide at the greatest breadth, is 2460 feet deep, and is at an elevation of 680 feet; its waters produce quantities of excellent fish. The navigation is less dangerous than either the Lake of Como, or Garda: the prevailing winds in winter are south and south-east. On its shores are quarries of marble and granite, mines of minerals, of iron, copper, and lead. The largest traffic on the lake consists of stones and slates for building purposes, timber and charcoal. The timber is floated by the Ticino into the lake and navigated to Milan and other parts of the country. The scenery met with in ascending the lake is very interesting. Immediately on the left is seen Mont Rosa, then the Simplon, the St. Gothard, Bernardino, and Splugen, besides the numerous minor Alps; the contrast between the pure white mantles of snow of the former and the sombre hues of the latter, is at once grand and imposing. Ascending, the scenery on the left, or northern side, is rugged, wild, and grand; on the right, or southern side it is remarkably fertile and undulating. The fine expanse of water is animated with numerous boats and large craft with bleached sails winging their course over the lake in all directions. Now is seen a steamer, now a market-boat with its cargo of fruit and flowers, the peasantry singing their national airs, while the contadini on the shore are heard to take up the air and sing in concert.

Proceeding from Arona up the lake, the names of all the towns are given as they come in succession. On the right, Angera, opposite Arona, there is an old castle built in the 14th century, belonging to the dukes of Milan—it contains some fresco paintings of that period. Railway from Arona to Sesto Calende. On the left, Lesa, beautiful scenery, rich in villas, among which are those of Villa Stampa, belonging to Alessandro Manzoni; on the left, Belgirate, a continual series of elegant villas, surrounded by luxuriant gardens; also on the left, Stresa, with church and convent of Rosminiani. Palace of H. R. H. the Duchess of Genoa, formerly the ancient palace of Bolongaria, where Rosminiani died, the palace of the Duke of Vallombrosa at Baveno, opposite the Borromean Islands, the steamer calls; here is an ancient church and baptistery, beautifully situated on the lake, and surrounded by gardens and villas; in its vicinity are those of Hudson and Cavour, granite quarries of some note, &c.; on the left, Feriola, junction of the Simplon road; on the right, Laveno, with fortifications and extensive barracks, 15 miles distant from Varese, a beautiful drive, omnibuses twice daily, thence to Como, 17 miles. On the left, Pallanza, commanding the finest views of the lake: (The Grand Hotel, M. Seychab, proprietor.) perched in a beautiful position on its shores on the left, Canaro, romantically situated at the foot of a gorge; for the sweetness of its climate, for its vineyards, cedars, olives, and vegetation, it vies with the finest part of Lago di Como. The Isoletta, in the lake opposite, contains the ruins of an old castle of mediæval origin, called the Cannero, belonging to the bandit Mazzarda, who resided there. On the left, Intra, manufactories of cotton and silk thread, glass, &c., a fine palace, a handsome church and an elegant theatre; a beautiful road hence to the head of the lake; a delightful drive to Pallanza about 2 miles. On the right Luino, the birth-place of Bernardino di Luino, the Raffaelle of Lombardy; here is the palace Crevelli. Omnibuses in connection with the steamers to Lugano in 3 hours, (19 miles); carriages with 2 horses, 12 frs., coachman 1 fr. 50 cents; on the right, Maccagno, on the left, Canobbio, containing two churches, in one of which, Pieta, there is an immense-sized altar-piece by Gaudenzio Ferrari; behind the town there is a deep gorge where the mountains, lofty and sombre, frown over the lake. On the right, Magadino, the principal emporium between Italy and Switzerland, whence there is an excellent road to Bellinzona and Locarno; on the left Brisago, containing an extensive manufactory of cigars; the wine here is noted for its excellence; the small islands of same name opposite, abound in rabbits. On the left, Locarno, (Pop. 2700), contains the ruins of a castle, the churches of St. Francisco and St. Antonia; in the latter there is a fine painting of the Temptation of St. Anthony, by Arelli. It was from this place that the Protestants were expelled in the 16th century—they settled at Zurich. The view from the tower of the church of the Madonna is magnificent. Having arrived at Magadino or Locarno, the tourist may choose either the Bernardino or St. Gothard Pass for his return route. On the other hand, by taking the diligence from Magadino he can proceed to Lugano, the capital of Canton Tessin, which is situated in the midst of enchanting scenery; from thence, proceeding up the Lago Lugano to Porlezza, (the Italian frontier and custom-house), thence by diligence or carriage to Menaggio, 2 hours, 9 miles, on the Lake of Como, or, on the other hand, proceed to Capo Lago, and thence by carriage to Varese and Como. The usual way is to leave the steamer on Lago Maggiore at Luino, and thence, in 3 hours, 19 miles, through a lovely country, on the banks of the Tresa, to Lugano; nothing can be more agreeable than this drive.

Lago di Orta.—This beautiful miniature lake is worthy of the tourist's notice. It may be approached by leaving the high road from Domo d'Ossola to Baveno at Gravellona, thence to Omegna and Orta, on the shores of the Lago di Orta, returning by same route. Distance in all, about 24 miles; time, 9 hours; cost, 14 frs. Lago di Orta is 13 miles in length by about ½ to ¾ mile in breadth. It contains quantities of excellent fish and its shores are covered with every variety of fruit and vegetation, adorned with handsome casinos of the gentry, and pretty villages with houses white as snow. The drive around this enchanting scene is most agreeable. Immediately opposite to the little town of Orta, rises from the bosom of the lake, the little Isola de San Giulio, 370 yards in length by 200 yards in breadth, containing about 200 inhabitants. This fairy island was the habitation of San Giulio in the 4th century—during the epoch of the Longobards it was considered the principal place in the dukedom—and in which king Berengario took refuge; the tribune is adorned with strange figures. There is also a fine Mosaic of the 4th century, and in the crypt of the chapel reposes the relics of the saint. From Orta ascend the Sacred Mount, passing on the way 29 chapels each of which contain statues and paintings representing the different episodes in the life of San Francesco d'Assisi—at the summit the little church and convent of the order of the Franciscans. During the ascent the view of the lake with the surrounding scenery forms a variety of pictures unequalled for diversity of mountain, wood, and water. The magnificent snow clad Alps appear in the immediate neighbourhood although distant, and the chain of Monte Rosa stands out in bold relief. From Stresa, on Lago Maggiore, Orta may be visited by mule path over the Motterone in 6 hours; a guide is indispensible, 4 frs.; the views from the summit are very extensive and diversified in mountain, wood, and water scenery; the other carriage road is from Arona viâ Varallo, the starting-point for excursions in the Southern and Eastern Alps—24 miles, 7 hours, from Orta by boat to Omegna—6 miles, 1¼ hour; 2 rowers, 4 frs.; and 50 cents buonamano—thence to Gravellona, 4 miles, half an hour; Feriola on Lago Maggiore, 2 miles, quarter of an hour. By omitting Varallo the drive from Arona direct across the hills to Orta may be accomplished in 3 hours—distance, 12 miles.

LAVENO (LAGO MAGGIORE) TO VARESE.—Laveno is situated at the foot of the Sasso del Ferro, 3287 feet. Omnibuses twice daily to Varese, 13 miles, 2½ hours, 2 frs. 50 cents. The road to Varese lies through a highly cultivated but hilly country, abounding in silk, fruit, corn, and wine. The mulberry is everywhere met with; the cultivation of silk is much and profitably attended to here. Proceeding through the hamlets of Citiglio, Germanio, and Gaverati, constantly ascending, to Comerio, 10 miles, 800 feet above the lake, the views are everywhere beautiful; on our right are seen the Lago Varese, Lago di Monate, Lago di Comabbio, and two minor lakes of no note. The lake is 20 miles in circumference, and about 2 miles in width; it is very well stocked with different kinds of excellent fish, and is distant about 2 miles from Varese.

VARESE—Pop. 12,000, Hotels, Angelo and La Stella. The principal church is that of Vittore called the Pelegrini; the carving of the organ and the pulpit, executed by Castelli, is worthy of notice; among the paintings, those of St. Gregoria, by Del Cerano, and a Maddalena by Morazzone. In the Battistera there is a magnificent vase (the font) in marble, adorned with exquisite basal rellevi. The Palace of Verata, with its fine gardens, may be seen on application. In the neighbourhood of the town and the lake are distributed many beautiful and chaste villas, among which the following are distinguished: Villa Taccioli, Litta, Ponte, Serra; these are generally surrounded by spacious lawns, sumptuous gardens adorned with numerous garden statuary, orange and citron groves, with here and there magnificent forest trees, the flat-topped pine distinguishable. The Madonna del Monte, five miles distant from Varese, is well worth visiting. It is a sanctuary dating from A.D. 397, commemorative of St Ambrose's extermination of the Arians. There are fourteen chapels met with during the ascent, illustrative of gladness, sorrow, and fame; there is a carriage road past Rafarello village, 2½ miles, thence for 1½ mile ascend on ponies; the view is among the finest in these parts, and second only to that of St. Salvadore at Lugano. Carriage and 2 horses, 10 frs. Diligences several times daily, 1 fr. 50 cents. ponies, 1 fr. 50 cents. The ascent of the Madonna del Monte may be taken on the way between Capo di Lago, Lugano, and Como. There are several silk-thread factories in this part of the country, which are highly interesting and well worth an inspection. Strangers are admitted and politely received.

FROM LUINO (LAGO MAGGIORE) TO LUGANO.—LUINO, Hotels: Hotel Simplon, newly built, well furnished, fine garden, &c., moderate terms; Poste and Del Vapre. Leave the steamer here, and proceed by diligence 13 miles, 2½ hours, 3 frs., or carriage & 2 horses, carrying 4 persons, 12 frs. The Swiss frontier and custom-house is but a short distance beyond the town. Before arriving at the village of Sessa, passports are shown—no difficulty. The road follows the course of the river Tresa, constantly ascending and descending through a romantic and densely wooded country. The scenery about the town of Ponte Tresa, at the lower extremity of the Lago di Lugano, is singularly wild and diversified, adorned with mountain, forest, and flood, the scenery constantly changing; in our progress are the pretty villages of Agno and Muzano. Ascending from Ponte Tresa, the road is lined on each side with gigantic walnut trees, and higher in the mountains quantities of chestnut trees adorn their slopes. Descending on Agno, from the summit of a chain of lofty hills, all at once the most romantic panorama develops into view, and reveals a picture rarely met with by the stranger, Lugano proudly perched on the margin of the still dark lake, Mont Salvadore immediately in the front, rising like an immense tumulus from the promontory, stretching into the lake, the whole surrounded by mountains of every variety of form and colour; those on the opposite side of the lake to Lugano, embracing Monts Caprini and Generosa, rising perpendicularly from the bosom of the lake, rocky in some places, in others wooded from their summits to the water's edge. The scenery in our descent and approach to Lugano is supremely beautiful, and certainly may be entitled to rank as a highly favoured spot, such as is rarely met with, and scarcely can be equalled. Having passed the river Agno, one of the tributaries of the lake, we reach Lugano (Hotels Corona, Suiszero, and Du Parc), situated on the lake of the same name, pop. 3,250, the capital of the Canton Tessin; its elevation above the sea is 900 feet. The town lies on the west side of the lake, between Monte Bré, on the east covered with villages, country seats, vineyards, citron and orange plantations, &c., and San Salvadore to the south-west. The finest view of the lake is seen from the tongue of land from San Marino and Castagnola. From these edifices we observe three convents and three monasteries.

Lugano contains but few churches; that of St. Lorenzo (the cathedral) as yet unfinished, that of Santa Maria Degli Angeli, situated close to the Hotel du Parc on the quay, and once belonging to the convent of same name, which was suppressed in 1853; the latter contains several paintings by Luini—the crucifixion and a madonna are among the best. The palace of the governor, the ground floor of which is converted into a café; the hospital, the foundations of which date from the 13th century; the handsome theatre, the only one in the canton, was originally the residence of the Archbishop of Como; several palaces, and handsome mansions, with a Statue of William Tell, by Vincent Vela, on the quay opposite Hotel du Parc, constitute the lions of Lugano. The town contains manufactories of paper, silk-thread, leather, &c.

The territory of Lugano was given by Maximilian Sforza, Duke of Milan, in the 15th century, to the Swiss confederation, for the assistance rendered by them in expelling the French from the country.

The most interesting excursions in the vicinity, and they are numerous, are the Park of Mr. Ciani, on the borders of the lake. The ascent of San Salvadore (a spent volcano) the summit of which is 2900 feet, wooded the whole way. It occupies 2 hours accompanied by a guide, to ascend, 2 frs., a horse, 5 frs. The view in front comprises the lake and the rich plains of Lombardy, as far as the cathedral of Milan; turning round, the opposite view displays the line of Alps, extending from the Splugen to Monte Rosa, a magnificent view. Among excursions around Lugano, occupying from 15 to 40 minutes, the following will be found most agreeable—Monts Bre, Melide, Agno, Ponte Tresa, the Convent of Bigoria, and Monte Caprino.

Lago Lugano. This lake resembles that of Lucerne in shape; it is a reunion of gulfs, called by different names, commencing at Porlezza, in Lombardy; it runs from north-west to south-west, to Lugano, 3 hours, and from Lugano south to Melidi, 1 hour, where it branches into two arms, one of which extends south to Capo Lago, 1½ hour. The other takes a south-west direction to Porto, 2 hours, from whence returning north-west, 1½ hour, it divides into two other branches, the principal of which in about one hour, stretches to the village of Agno, while the other about half an hour, descends to Ponte Tresa. The length of the lake may be taken at 14 miles (some say 18 miles), and the widest part about 3 miles, its depth 575 feet, its elevation 760 feet. It enjoys a delicious climate, an almost continual spring. Lago Lugano possesses other and striking characteristics in its diversified scenery; its several gulfs present a succession of varied pictures. The Lugano side of the lake is Swiss the opposite shore is Italian. Steamers traverse the lake daily between Lugano, Porlezza, and Capo Lago, see page 333.

LUGANO TO LAKE OF COMO, viâ PORLEZZA AND MENAGGIO. By steamer; fares, first class, 2fr., second class, 1fr.; one hour to Porlezza, calling by the way on the left shore at Castagnole, Gandria, Albocasia, and Drono. Drono is the Italian frontier; passports required here: the authorities cause no delay. Porlezza is beautifully situated at the base of an amphitheatre of hills. Diligence to Menaggio, 9 miles, two hours; fares, 2 fr. 50 c.; carriage with one horse, 5fr. 50c. The drive from lake to lake is very interesting. Principally uphill to within two miles of the lake of Como, near Piano and its tiny lake, where, after passing Croce, we commence descending the richest country imaginable, commanding the most sublime views of the rich and classic lake of Como with its surrounding scenery, the whole appearing at our feet; the Alps, extending from the Splugen to the Ortler Spitz, beyond the Valtelline are seen distinctly, and, although distant, appear close at hand. We arrive at MENAGGIO (Hotel Corona; Grand Hotel Victoria, "comfortable, reasonable, and beautifully situated."—W.P.P.) from whence boats are hired for different parts of the lake, but more frequently to Bellaggio and Gennazzini; fares, two rowers, 5fr. and buonamano. Steamers ply three times a-day up and down the lake, calling at the different towns in its course from Como to Colico, and vice versa. Menaggio is convenient, as being the landing place for Porlezza and Lake Lugano.

LUGANO TO COMO, viâ CAPO LAGO AND MENDRISIO. Distance, twenty miles; omnibus, 3fr.: Capo di Lago to Como, eleven miles, 2fr. The high road to Como runs between the lake and the base of Mount Salvadore, whose porphyry rocks, overhung with extensive green woods of many hues, have a beautiful effect. After skirting the lake, and crossing it, among enchanting scenery, for nine miles, we come to Capo Lago, the drive is preferable to the steamer from hence to Lugano. Fares by steamer, first class, 90 cents.; time, about half an hour. From the lake we proceed through a lovely and fruitful country for two miles to Mendrisio, pop. 1700, Hotel Angelo. The ascent of Mount Gornico is made from hence. The summit partakes of the scenery of Switzerland; it abounds in verdure and flowers, and abundance of wood. Near the town, on the side of the road, one of those interesting sights may be visited—a silk-winding factory in operation. Strangers are admitted and welcomed. Three miles further bring us to Chiasso, the Italian frontier; passports, and little delay at the custom-house. Four-and-a-half miles hence, through a highly cultivated and densely populated country bring us to Como; half an hour more, by a direct route leaving Como on the left brings us to Camerlata, on the Monza and Milan Railway.

For Railway from Lugano to Chiasso, &c, see page 240.

COMO.—Pop. 24,000: Hotels Angelo, l'Italia and Monte di Brianza, near the harbour, Hotel Corona, without the gate of Milan, is the best. The population of Como is chiefly employed in the manufacture of stucco images, and other ornaments, and the winding of silk and cotton. The city possesses little of interest or attraction for the tourist, except its splendid and picturesque Cathedral, Town hall, and the fine statue of Volta in the market-place; the surrounding scenery makes ample return for the deficiency of the town. Its history is of a remote date; the ancient city was taken and burnt by the Milanese in 1127 and 1271, it then became incorporated with the Duchy of Milan in 1335. It is the birth place of several distinguished men; Pliny the younger, Paul Jove, the Popes, Clement XIII. and Innocent X. Volta, and Canova, were born here. The Cathedral is the handsomest and most interesting of the ten churches of Como; it is a splendid structure, commenced in 1396, and finished in the 15th century. The Baptismal Chapel is after the design of Bramante, and is an elaborate piece of workmanship.

Omnibuses to the Milan Railway Station at Camerlata, one mile distant, every hour, fares, 50 c.; steam-boats ply three times a day from each end of the lake, from Como and from Colico, fares, 1st Class, 4 frs; 2nd Class, 2 frs. 10 c. There is a steamer leaves Como for Lecco, and vice versâ, in 3 hours, see page 332. Small boats are always ready; fares, 1 man, 1 fr. 50 c. to 2 frs. per hour; per day, 5 frs. each man. Bargain before starting, reserving the right to give buonamano. There is a char road on one side of the lake and a post road on the other.

The Lago di Como.—This lake is formed by the Adda and the Maira: it is 32 miles in length, and from two to three miles in width, is 1805 feet in depth, its elevation about 656 feet above the level of the sea. It resembles the letter Y in its form. At Bellaggio it divides into two branches, the one towards Como, the other descends to Lecco, from whence the Adda pursues its course to the river Po. The deep waters of the lake are abundantly supplied with fish of various kinds, among which are distinguished trout, some of a considerable size; luccio, a sort of whiting; tenca (tench); carpio, and of more importance than all the others, in point of profit, the agonl, of which there is much caught and sold throughout the country. The Lago di Como is incontestibly the most beautiful and picturesque of all the lakes in Europe; in fact, no other can compare with it for the sweetness of its climate, the richness of its shores, the varieties of its panoramas, the magnificence of its villas and sumptuous gardens. On the borders of the lake are excellent roads, communicating from one village to the other. The enchanting scenery of the Lago di Como is described in glowing terms by travellers from every clime. In every language and in every age its scenery and local beauties have been extolled. It evidently has been, and ever will remain, the elysium of the tourist.

Ascending the Lake from Como to Colico, the various towns and places of interest will be taken as they are arrived at in succession. The letter r, right, and l, left, will indicate their position.

Ponte de Geno, once the Lazzaretto, now Villa Cornaggio, l Borgovico, Villas Battaglia, Mandolfa Raimondi, Brambella, l, Cernobbio, the Monastery Cluniceusi, Villa Calderara, Baroggi; above the village rises the lofty Monte Bisbino, of which the natives say, when the clouds rest on its summit, it portends rain, hence the verse.

"Vanne prendre l'umbrella, Che Bisbino ha il suo capella."

(Gotake the umbrella, for Bisbino has on its hat.) Here is also a Sanctuary of the Madonna, Villa d' Este, now Ciani, once belonging to the unfortunate Princess of Wales; near to this is the extensive and excellent Hotel del Regina d' Inglaterra, beautifully situated and well patronised; Villa Pezzo, of the Count Muggiasco, afterwards became the property of the Archduke Rainerl, the gardens are very fine; Villa Curie, containing good paintings; l Moltrascio, celebrated for its grotioes so highly esteemed for preserving wines; the Villa Passalaqua, of splendid design and architecture; Belvio, a delicious climate, numerous country seats. Here are the Villas Pasta, Taglioni, Schovaloff, Mylius, &c.; r Torno, at one period this town rivalled Como for its arms and its commerce; the church is of interest, one of its doors dates from the 14th century. Villa Plinlana, constructed by Count G. Aguissolo, one of the four who were sworn to take the life of the Duke of Farnese, which tragedy took place at Piacenza; at the extremity of a court there is a fountain of intermittent water, issuing from a rock mentioned by Pliny the younger. This villa is certainly one of the most interesting sights on the Lake. l Ureocarate, a small village, whose inhabitants are engaged in boat building; villas Visconti and Battaglia. l Giuliano and Laglio; on the promontory of the latter stands the Villa Antongina, and the pyramidal monument to Giuseppe Franck. l Torriggio, a very picturesque and romantic situation, on the narrowest part of the lake. r The Molina, in the vicinity there is a mountain gorge, from whence issues a fine cascade. 60 feet in height; it is called "L'Orridio di Molina." r Nesso, with a fine waterfall. l Brienno; the houses composing this village rise one above the other, and from the lake they have the appearance of huge steps, leading to the top of an eminence. r Argegno, a small mercantile place from whence there is a good road, eight miles to the Lake of Lugano. r Lezzeno, noted for the excellence of its figs; they remain on the trees all the winter, and ripen in May; this village is situated in a kind of alcove at the foot of a dark mountain, hence these lines,

"Lezzeno della mala fortuna, D'Estate senza sol, d'Inverno senza luna."
"Unfortunate Lezzeno, Without sun in summer, in winter without moon."

l Colonna, with the fine cascade of Camoggia; it is supposed that this water comes by a subterraneous channel from the Lake of Lugano. l Sala, Villa Beccaria. l Isola Comacina, celebrated in the history of the Lombards, at which mediæval epoch it was well peopled, and fortified with high walls flanked with towers; at the present day the island is almost deserted, and nothing is met with beyond a few ruins of its former importance. l Campo Villa Balbianello, belonging to Cardinal Durini. l D'Osso de Lavedo, Villa Arconate: after passing the promontory, we enter the delicious scenery of Tremizzina. l Lermo, with its pretty church and Battistario of the 9th century; it is also interesting for its archæological history; the following towns and hamlets occur in succession, l Portozzo, Mizsogra, Bolvedro, Tremezzo, among which are the villas Busca, Cramer, Brentani, Giulini, &c. This is the finest point of view, and the loveliest part of all the lake, called "Tremezzina," in which are pretty good inns. In the vicinity, Villa Sommariva, or Carlotta, the most majestic of all others around the Lake of Como; it belonged originally to Count G. B. Sommariva, and built at a cost of £32,000, and sold for £20,000 in 1843, to Prince Albert of Prussia, and took the name of Carlotta, from being occupied by the Princess of Prussia. It is now the property of her husband the Duke of Saxe Meiningen. It is exquisitely situated in the midst of delicious gardens, supported with terraces overlooking the lake, and containing a precious collection of objects of the fine arts. No one should neglect to visit this Palace; a fee of 1 fr. to the custodian suffices. Its paintings and statuary are renowned. Among the latter, "Mars departing for the War, delayed by Venus," by Aquisti. "The Triumphal Entry of Alexander the Great into Babylon," a stupendous basso relievo, by Thorwaldsen. The choice of all, perhaps, are the three following:—"Amore and Psyche," "Palamedes," and the "Magdalene," by Canova. "The Embrace of Romeo and Juliet," by Hayez; "Perseus and Andromeda," by Mongez; "The Death of Attila," by Jorden; "Virgil reading his Sixth Book of Æneid to Augustus," by Wicard; a fine Landscape, by Breughel; "Cupid and Venus," by Serangli; "The Portrait of Laura," by Agricola; "The Sepulchre containing the Ashes of Themistocles," by Bassi; a "St. John," by G. Ferrari; "Vulcan tempering the Arrow of Cupid in the presence of Mars and Venus," a fresco transferred on to wood, by Bernardino Luini; "The Portrait of a Lady," by Leonardo da Vinci; an "Achilles," by Appiani. The Marble Sepulchre of Count John Sommariva, by Marchese. In the Chapel, which is embellished with statuary, there are two beautiful bassi relievi, one by Tenerani, on the tomb of Luigi Sommariva; the other by Marchese, represents Giovanni Sommariva counselling his son to cultivate the arts which had contributed so much happiness to his parent. l Cadenabbia (Hotel Belle Vue) and Majolica Villa Records (Alberro della Villa di Milano), towns on the shores of the lake. It is recommended to travellers who wish to take the scenery of the lake in detail, either to sleep at Bellaggio, or stop here for the night; it requires half a day to do justice to all that is to be seen in and about the Villa Carlotta; there is a Church of England service here on Sundays throughout the season. r Bellaggio, Hotels Gennazzini, Gran Bretagna, and Hotel Grandi. This village is beautifully situated in the angle which separates the lake into two branches. The villa Serbelloni to the east, is in one of the loveliest situations imaginable; it commands the different branches of the lake; the gardens are remarkably fine; fee, 1 fr. to custodian. Ascend to the highest point for the most extensive view. Observe the variety of flowers met with on the way.

Venna, perched high and secure in the mountains above the village. During the mediæval epoch this was the retreat and refuge for the brigands. Villa Frizzoni, situated on the margin of the lake, Villa Trotti and Polde Pezzoli, and on a rise, Villa Melzi, erected by F. Melzi, vice-president of the Italian republic, famous for the richness of its flowers; here is seen the portrait from life of Napoleon, by Andrea Appiani, in the chapel, a sepulchral canopy by Nisi, a statue of the Saviour by Comelli, and a chiaroscuro by Montecelle, the beautiful designs by Albertolli, and those of the figures by G. Bossi; this artist designed the arc of the door (sopra porte) which represents Leonardo da Vinci teaching his pupil Francesco Melzi the art of designing; in this composition is represented the actual likeness of Leonardo, who at his demise left his studio and its contents to his favourite pupil F. Melzi, who continued for some time the school of painting left him by his illustrious friend and master. There is a beautiful design representing Parnassus, attributed to Lavelli, in the garden, and also an exquisite group, Dante and Beatrice, by Comelli. The Villa Ginlia, late the retreat of Leopold king of the Belgians; this palace has been extensively restored and embellished, and spring water has been conveyed from the mountains at a great outlay. l, Menaggio,—Hotel Corona—a lively commercial town; this is the landing-place for the road to Porlezza and Lake of Lugano. r, Fiumelatte, this village derives its name from a rapid stream, whose waters have the singular property of becoming colder as the summer heat increases; this torrent issues from a cavern in the rocks, 1000 feet in height, and precipitates itself perpendicularly over the rocks into the lake below; for nearly a mile the vehemence with which this river pursues its rapid course covers it with foam of the colour of milk, hence the name Fiumelatte, (river of milk).

To the right, Varenna, a village in front of Menaggio, on the Spligen road; in the vicinity are long galleries; the scenery here is most charming. Situated on the heights above this village there is an excellent hotel and pension at the hydropathic establishment of Rigoledo, containing more than 200 rooms, admirably kept. Tourists may here recruit the fatigues of travel; the hotel is clean, and comfortable, and the charges are reasonable, 6 fra.

On the left, Rezzonico, with ruins of a castle of the 13th century, and the remarkable Sasso Rancio (orange rock), from which it is recorded that many of the Russians passing in 1799 were precipitated into a premature grave. l, Bellano, at the foo: of mont Grigna, 7415 feet, is the country residence of the Archbishop of Milan. A handsome church constructed by Azzone and Giovanni Visconti, manufactory of iron, wire, &c., the birth-place of Tommaso Grassi; the savage gorge formed by the river Pioverna, and the old castle, should be visited. l, Cremia; in the church is seen a painting by Paul Veronese, representing St. Michael and the Archangel. l, Musso, which still retains a portion of its ancient castle, of triple fortifications, constructed by General Trevulzi, afterwards occupied by Giovanni de Medici, who caused to be constructed secret chambers pierced in the rock for the purpose of coining money. l, Dongo, originally founded by a colony of Etruscans. l, Algiasco, celebrated for its mines of pure white marble. l, Gravedona (Hotel del Sasso), a remarkable town, teeming with richness in architecture and design, and objects worthy the inspection of the antiquarian and the man of taste. The church of Vincenso, fine in architecture, and possessing some rare paintings, seen in the chapels of St. Girolamo, St. Rigio, and St. Orsola; the ceiling is elaborate, and of great antiquity; it is covered with exquisite ornamental enrichments; under the altar is seen the ancient oratory of St. Anthony, in the Lombard style, and containing a painting of the eighth century. In the vicinity, and immediately on the shores of the lake, is the Battistario of Santa Maria; the façade, constructed of gray and white marble blocks, in alternate layers, is embellished with numerous bassi-relievi; above the entrance rises the tower. In the interior is a gallery containing antique paintings, &c., and in the centre is placed the font; the churches of St. Gusmeo and Matteo possess some good paintings; a mile distant from the road is seen in the church of Peglio, "The Last Judgment," and "l'Inferno," St. Eusebio appearing to the Emperor Costanzo, several of the Saints, with Beata Virgina, magnificent works of art, principally by Fiammenghino. One hour from Gravedona we join, on the left, Livo; its church is embellished with frescoes of the quattro and cinquecento style. r, Pioria, with a church of the seventh century, now reconstructed, an ex-convant of Friars of the Order of St. Antonia del Tau, of date 1252; l, Domaso, in front of Colico, the seat of commerce with the Valtelline. l, Gera, a village situated at the mouth of the Adda, surrounded by malaria. l, Sorico once well-peopled, now almost abandoned, in consequence of malaria. r, Colico, once possessing a large population, which is now greatly diminished, its vicinity to the Lagoons rendering it unhealthy; in the neighbouring country there is nothing but vast plains and stagnant waters, which are called by the natives, the "Pian de Spagna;" near this are the ruins of the castle of Fuentes. Here is the station of the diligences to the Stelvio and the Spingen. For steamers, see page 332.

Lago di Lecco.—A branch of Lago di Como Lecco, Pop., 6470, the most important town is Comascio; here is held every Saturday a much-frequented market, and a fair annually. Of the once extensive castle nothing remains but ruins. The bridge on the Adda, the Theatre, the Bovara, should be visited and the Casa Bovara contains some good paintings, and a collection of antiquities. Lecco possesses manufactories of iron, silk, cotton, and paper; it was in the environs of Lecco where Alessandro Manzoni passed his youthful days; here he conceived the scene of his "Promessi Sposi."

Lago d'Iseo.—An excursion can be made to this interesting Lake, by leaving the railway station of Palazzola, a neat little town of some trade, having a ruined castle in its vicinity; proceed by diligence 14 miles to Iseo; fare, 1 fr. 50 cents.; cross the Lake by steamer to Sarnico on the south side; fare 1 fr. 50 cents., thence to Lavore at the head of the Lake on the north side; fare 1 fr. 50c.

This beautifully situated lake is formed by the river Oglio, is about 17 miles in length, and from 1 to 2 miles in breadth; its waters are limpid, and contain a variety of excellent fish. The country around is picturesque, the lake is encircled by hills sloping to its margin, which are highly cultivated and thickly populated. The vine, the fig, the mulberry, and every other tree common to Italy are found here. The shores of the lake are studded with numerous thriving towns, pretty hamlets, and villas, surrounded by luxuriant gardens and pleasure grounds; their richly clad terraces may be seen decked with the rose, the hydrangia, the myrtle, the oleander, &c.; vines, festooned and hanging over the walks intermingled with a variety of flowering creepers, while rising from the lawns are seen in classic vases, the Indian fig and American aloe, the whole encircled by orange and lemon groves, hedged in by tall dark cypress trees. Directing the eye farther into this perspective, a handsome church, or tall campanile is seen emerging from among groups of the stately Italian pines. This magnificent picture terminates with the lofty range of the Swiss and Tyrolese Alps clad in snow. There are excellent roads throughout the country, and a drive through the exquisite scenery on the shores of the lake will amply repay the traveller.

Lavore possesses a good harbour, and a handsome church, and contains an establishment of some repute, the academy of Todine, embracing music, design, and objects of the fine arts. A short excursion up the Val Camonica on the banks of the Oglio, to the pretty town of Brena, about 14 miles, is worthy the traveller's notice, and he will find the charges in the inns, and the hire of conveyances, much more moderate than on the line of railway; the drive is beautiful, and replete with every thing that can delight the eye. Brena has a gothic church, and a castle, and in its vicinity there is a tunnel some 3000 mètres in length, leading into the Tyrol.

Lago di Garda.—The traveller wishing to visit this picturesque lake, should take it on his way from the Tyrol to Italy, in which case he will leave the railway at Roveredo, and proceed for 20 miles by diligence, over an excellent road to Riva, on the upper or north end of the lake. On the other hand, going from Italy to the Tyrol, he will leave the rail at Peschiera or Desenzano. Steamboats ascend and descend the lake between Peschiera and Riva, (Austrian Tyrolese frontier, passport examined,) in 3½ hours; fares, 1st class, 3 frs. 60 cents., 2nd class, 2 frs. These steamers correspond with the diligences and railways at each end of the lake, see page 331. Some of the steamers from Desenzano only traverse part of the lake and return. The Lago di Garda is formed by the river Sarca and several other small streams, among which are the Varrone, and the Torento Albola. It commences at Riva di Trienti, and terminates at Peschiera, situated on a small island at the lower or south end of the lake, from whence it forms the Mincio, which after forming the Lago di Mantua, debouches, and a few miles farther, unites with the river Po. The lake is situated between two chains of mountains; from south to north it is 34 miles in length, by about 4 to 10 in breadth, and its depth is about 985 feet. In the summer it rises from 4 to 5 feet during the melting of the snows, and heavy rains, in the Alps. Its ancient name was Benacus, the name of a city on its shores long since destroyed. This lake is frequently subject to storms and squalls from the mountains, which render its navigation dangerous in sailing boats, at certain seasons. In 1860, a fearful and sudden storm arose on the lake, which caused, in the space of three hours, the loss of 60 persons; hence Virgil's reason for saying "Fluctibus et fremitu assurgens Benace marino." In this lake are found abundance of various kinds of fish; sardelli, trout, carpione, (the latter held in high repute by ancient epicures,) and the sceppi. There are three small islands rising from the lake, that of Trematone about the centre, is occupied with the villa and gardens of Count Lecchi, which are well worth seeing, being rich in the collection of choice flowers, shrubs, and evergreens; the walks are shaded by delicious groves of orange and lemon trees. The proprietor is very liberal, and allows the public to land and visit the palace and grounds, a fee of 1 to 2 frs. to custodian. If any one is desirous of knowing what a mosquito is let him stop at Salo on the Lake.

Desenzano—Pop. 3450.—(Hotel Vittoria and Albergo Imperiale.)

One mile from the railway station, (conveyance to the trains), half-an-hour distant from Peschiera. The situation of this town at the bottom or south end of the lake, is very beautiful, surrounded by forests of orange, lemon, and all sorts of fruit trees. The apples, and particularly the pears of this locality are highly esteemed for the excellence of their quality, and delicious flavour. Projecting for some distance into the lake, and not far distant from the town, is a tongue of land called the promontory of Sermione. Here Catullus, the poet, seduced by the attractions of the lake, resolved to fix his abode. The ruins found there are called the "Grotto di Catullo."

In describing the scenery while ascending the lake, the words right, and left, will indicate the positions of the towns and villages on its shores. The mountains on the west are lofty and grand, their sides displaying valleys with deep ravines, producing bold, wild scenery, in the midst of luxuriant groves of lemon and forest trees, which descend to the shores of the lake. The opposite shore to the east is fertile and interesting, but far inferior to the western side, yet productive in wine, oil, corn, figs, &c.

Leaving Desenzano, we come to Peschiera, on the right, (Pop., 1700), forming part of the famous Quadrilateral, and containing a small harbour for the tiny fleet of gunboats and steamers belonging to Austria; this town is distant from Verona 15, and Mantua 20 miles. On the left Manerbio, which is said by antiquarians to occupy the site of the temple of Minerva, is surrounded with lemon and orange groves, and other fruit trees. On the right, Bardolino, with its small harbour and the handsome villa Gianfilipi; the town is constructed in the form of an amphitheatre. To the left Salo, population 3000, a bustling, commercial town of some trade; its situation is singularly beautiful, surrounded by one vast garden of rich landscape, teeming with every kind of fruit, and backed by lofty mountains, hanging as it were over the lake. On the left, Gardore and Maderno, containing a pretty gothic church, and an extensive paper manufactory; it is thought that the latter town occupies the site of the ancient city of Benacus. On the right, Garda, from whence the lake derives its name; in its vicinity are the villas Albertini and Bozza; there is an old fort here also; the surrounding country is fertile in corn and wine. To the left, Tremosine, with quarries of limestone. On the right, St. Vigilio, a point of land projecting into the lake covered with olives and fig-trees. On the left, Limone, one of the principal steamboat stations, deriving its name from the quantity of lemons grown in its vicinity and exported hence; it is a charming spot. On the right, Torre, containing an old castle, and in its vicinity extensive quarries and beautiful gardens. On the left, Panal; behind this village is seen the magnificent cascade of Ledro, which has a fall of 200 feet; the surrounding scenery is very beautiful. On the right, Massisina; here is an old fort, attributed to the Venetians; this town is immediately under Mount Baldo, which appears comparatively bare as it hangs over the castle. We are now in the Tyrol, and shortly reach Riva, at the head of the Lake, Pop., 5000, Hotel, Il Sole, Giardino. This town is the principal port of the lake, and the steamboat station; it is a place of considerable importance from the trade carried on between Italy and the Tyrol; there are six fairs held here annually. Surrounded on three sides by lofty mountains, and by the shores of the beautiful lake on the other, its lovely position entitles it to be called the paradise of the South Alps. The Rocca castle on the lake was built by the Scaligeri family. There is a fine promenade in the colonnade on the little harbour. Diligences several times daily, corresponding with the steamers and railway trains. To Roveredo, 20 miles in 2½ hours, fares, 3 and 4 frs.

ITINERARY OF ROUTES.

ROUTE 1.

Paris through Bale to Lucerne, the St. Gothard, the Grisons, Splugen, and Lake of Como.

Paris to Basle, through Strasbourg, 643 kil. (428 m.) Time, 15 h. 55 m. Fares, 1st class, 72 fr.; 2nd class, 54 fr. (4 Trains a day.) By Chaumont, 524 kil. (342 m.) (4 Trains a day), 12 h. 35 m.; 1st class, 58 fr. 20 c.; 2nd class 44 fr.

Basle—Population 44,838, clean dreary streets, Pietist and commercially spirited population. Remarkable ribbon manufactures and much trade with America.

Monuments—Münster (Cathedral) fine red sand stone edifice. Remarkable tomb of Œcolampadius and other reformers. The University has had eminent professors, Euler, Plater, De Wette, &c.

Museum—Library (open 1 to 3) 80,000 vols., 4,000 MSS., some very remarkable. Interesting Collections—Natural History, Physics, Medals, &c. Picture Gallery.—Among the paintings are some cartoons of Cornelius of Munich, paintings of Albert Dürer, Carraccis, Lanfranc &c.

Basle is an interesting old town, near Augusta Rauracorum, a great place in Roman times, and washed by the rapid clear current of the Rhine. Proceeding to Lucerne. 93 kil. (62 m.) Fares, 1st class, 9 fr. 85 c.; 2nd class, 6 fr. 95 c., 3 h. 20 m. Fast morning Train direct. Only remarkable place en route is Sempach, 15 kil. (10 m.) from Lucerne, memorable as the spot where the Swiss hero Arnold Von Winkelried drew the enemy's lances on his dauntless breast, thus clearing a way for his countrymen and for victory (July 9th, 1386.)

Lucerne.—14,525 inhabitants. Great centre, in summer often overcrowded.

Monuments at Lucerne:—Church of St. Leger has a grand organ and ring of bells, and some good paintings of the Swiss painter Deschwanden. The arsenal contains arms of William Tell and Zwingli, &c. The monument of the Lion in the solid rock, made from plans of Thorwaldsen, to honour the Swiss Guard who fell at Paris August 10, 1792, is a fine work of art. Lucerne is surrounded with interesting walks. The principal excursions are:—1. Up Pilatus. 2. To Meyringen (Route 1), over the Brunig. 3. To Engelberg. 4. The Right. 5. To Uri (up the lake) and St. Gothard. To pass just encomiums on the points visited in these excursions would only be a repetition of superlatives. Suffice it to say that the Right panorama is considered perhaps the grandest lake panorama in the world, and that the view from Pilatus is even grander in point of mountain scenery. We shall rest satisfied with making the access to all these natural charms as easy as possible. 1. To ascend Mont Pilatus. Steamer or carriage to Hergiswyl, 1½ l. (3¾ m.) Omnibus twice a day, 1 fr. From Hergiswyl good mule path to Blättler Hotel, 4 hours from Lucerne (on the ridge between the two summits), Klimsenhorn, and Esel. Klimsenhorn and Tomlishorn command a great part of the Oberland chain. 2. Over Brunig to Meyringen and Brienz, 11 l. (33 m.), 2 diligences daily in 6 h. 40 m., 7 fr. 65 c.; or steamer to Alpnach 3 times a day. Hotels Pilatus and Schlussel. Sarnen, 1 hour from Alpnach, capital of Obwald. Adler, Sarnerhof Hotels.—Arnold of Melchthal, one of the founders of Swiss liberty at the Grutli, (see further on) lived near here. Next place Lungern, on a lake that has been partly drained. Brunig, Lowe hotels, 3 h. 30 m. from Brienz. Brunig (3,135 ft.) offers pleasing views; soon after strike Hasli road, and, leaving Meyringen to the left, you reach Brienz, Brienzwyler; Hotel Bär. 3. To Engelberg monastery, in the midst of emerald pastures and cascades, 3 times a day; steamer from Lucerne to Stanzstad, ¾ h. Diligence thence to Stanz, 1 fr. 95 c.; 1-horse carriage from Stanzstad to Engelberg, 12 f.; 2-horse, 20 f. You can go from Lucerne to Engelberg and back in a day. Engelberg is a great place for cheese. Stanz, on the way, capital of Nidwald; Hotels Engel, Krone. Pensions Mettler, Breiten, Christen; is interesting from its association with the great Swiss patriot Nicolas von der Flue, who lived a life of solitude and prayer near here, and saved his country from civil war 1481. Fountain and statue of Arnold von Winkelried. At Engelberg Pensions Catani and Muller. Hotel Engelberg, 4 to 5 f. per day. Excursions innumerable and delightful; wild passes to Altdorf, in Uri, and to Hasli. Ascent of Titlis, 10,620 feet—not dangerous—view indescribable.

The Righi is in fact a ridge N.E. of the Lake of Lucerne, between it and Lake of Zug. May be reached in many ways —1st. Lucerne to Kussnacht, steamers three times a day (50 min.) Hotels, Seehof, Adler. Hohlengasse and chapel of Tell, where he shot Gessler (½ of an hour). From Kussnacht to Righi Kulm, 3 h. 15 m.

2nd, Steam to Wäggis. Ascent 3 h. 30 m. Best ascent from Zurich. Rail to Zug. Steamer from Zug to Immensee. Immensee to Kulm, 3½ h. Arth (also near Zug) to Kulm, 3½ h. Gersau, a lovely village higher up Lake of Lucerne, by Righi Scheidegg 4 l. (12 m.), has finest views of all. Righi consists of four principal points:—Righi-Kulm, 5541 ft.; 2 Hotels. Righi Staffel, 4880 ft. (½ l. ¾ m.), lower down; one hotel. Righi Kaltbad, 4436 ft. (½ l. 2½ miles), below Staffel; very fine hotel and sanitary establishment (150 beds). Excellent centre for botanising. Righi Scheidegg, 5073 ft., S.W. of Kulm; another fine establishment (150 beds). Great sight sunrise from Kulm. You are roused by a bell If Alpenglühen or rosy tints on snows are seen, the sublimity of the scene is prayerful. Finest lake view in the world. See p. 505. At Gersau good quarters. Pension Muller, Sonne. Excursion up Lake of Lucerne to St Gothard. Direct route to Milan by Lago Maggiore. Time 29 h.; 1st class, 44fr. 6c.; 2nd class, 37fr. 81c.

From Lucerne six steamers a day to Fluelen, head of lake (2 h. 30 m.) Upper basin, Urner See, savage scene, with high precipices descending sheer into the dark waters, the scene of Tell's exploits. Points to visit, Tellen Platte, where he leapt on shore from Gessler's boat, (little chapel), Grütli, where the three Swiss, swore to free their country from the Austrian yoke. Near the Grütli, Frohnalpstock, fine view; 5430 ft., 4 l. (12 m.) from Brunnen. Fare from Lucerne by steamer 3 fr. Near it, Pension of Stoss. Row boat may be taken from Brunnen to Treib, 1½ fr. Thence ascend to Seelisberg, Pension Sonnenberg, 1 l (3 m); 1 horse, 6 fr.; porters, 2 to 3 fr.; price of pension, 4 to 5 fr. Delightful centre. Superb views close to house.

Pursuing main route to Fluelen, (Adler, Post, hotels). Omnibuses to Altdorf, 50 c. Altdorf, the scene of many of Tell's exploits, especially the shot at the apple. Hotel Adler, Goldener Kreuz (telegraph and post). Lion. Visit spots hallowed by traditions with Tell. Good paintings in the church.

Burglen, ½ l. (1½ m.), Tell's birthplace, where the house of this hero is still shown. Altdorf to Bellinzona, Magadino, head of Lago Maggiore; 2 diligences, 14 h. 15 m.; 23 fr.

Road up Reussthal from Altdorf takes you through Amstäg (Hotels: Hirsch, Stern, Lowe), (3 hrs.), Wasen (Ox Hotel), 2 h. 30 m. at mouth of branch pass to Meyringen (Route A) by Susten Joch; then reaches a chaos of rocks and roaring torrents, passing the Devil's Bridge and Urnerloch (tunnel) to Andermatt (Pension St. Gothard, Post, Krone). Much fighting in this terrible Reuss Thal, between Suwarof and his Russians and the French in 1799. Passing Lake Lucendro, source of the Reuss, you come to the St. Gothard Hospice (15 beds), a very charitable institution.

Descent by Val Tremola to Airolo (Hotel Poste), and following the splendid Ticino, rich in trout, through scenery, glorious beyond compare, rocks, woods, and cascades, Italy in her beauty bursting upon you at every step, you come to Feriolo (Hotels Angelo, Sole), Biasca (Hotel Unione). you pass spots noted for actions with Italians, shewing Swiss heroism. Arbedo, and Saint Giacomo, you come to Bellinzona (Hotel de Ville, Angelo), with very old church of San Biaggio.

3 h. 30 m. from Bellinzona is Locarno see pp. 241 498, (Hotels: Corona, recommended; Angelo), in a relaxing district, close to head of Lago Maggiore. 4 h. 30 m. from Bellinzona the road passes by Monte Cenere to Lugano, largest town of Tessin, on charming lake of that name (Hotel du Parc Suisse, Corona); good centre for excursions; 5597 inh. Church of Santa Maria degli Angeli has fine paintings. Ascend Monte Salvatore, 2 h.; guide, 4 fr. View over Grisons, Lombardy, Pennine chain, &c. Height, 2797 ft. Monte Bre. Height, 930 metres; 2 h. 30 m. Fine view.

Camoghe, 6 h. 30 m; height. 2226 mètres You see the Tyrol Alps from it. Monte Generoso, 5 or 6 h., half way to Como. Figs and chestnuts at its base; 2 inns 2 h. from top. Height, 3700 ft. There is an excellent Hotel and Pension, kept by Dr. Pasta on "Monte Generoso." Telegraphic wire to the Hotel. Divine Service every Sunday. Mendrisio, 2½ h. from Lugano. Ascension 4 to 5 h. from Mendrisio. Lugano to Como, by lake to Capolago, 1 fr. 60c. Omnibus from Capolago to Como, 2 fr. 10 c. By land to Cameriata, diligences twice a day, 3 h. 35 m.; 5 fr. 40 c. and 4 fr. 50 c.

The following interesting tour via the Stelvio, &c., occupies altogether about 6 days.

From Innsbruck to Colico ..... 2 days.

[Or four days, resting at night, says a Correspondent. Thus—"Leave Innsbrück at 5 a.m. by diligence for Landeck; reached at 5 or 6 p.m. Next day, leave at 5.30 a.m. for Mals; reached at 4 or 5 p.m. Leave Mals early next morning, cross the Stelvio, to the New Baths of Bormio, about 4.30 p.m. As no diligence leaves Bormio earlier than 11 a.m., I had, after bathing and dining, to hire a one-horse carriage, and leave about ten at night to get to Tirano in time for the 4 a.m. diligence to Colico; which I reached at 4 a.m. the next day, making four days of steady diligence travelling, averaging 10 to 12 hours a day."—Rev. T. C.]

Proceed from Colico by steamer to Como, return from thence and sleep at Bellaggio, 1 day.
Cross the lake to Menaggio by boat, thence by diligence or carriage to Porlezza, by steamer (on Lago di Lugano) to Lugano, by diligence to Luino, by steamer (on Lago Maggiore) to Arona ..... 1 day.
From Arona, visit the statue of St. Giovanni de Borromeo, by steamer to Isola Bella, by steamer or small boat to Baveno, by diligence or carriage to Domo d'Ossola... 1 day.
From d'Ossola to Simplon, Brieg and Sierre 1 day.
Or by ascending the Lake from Isola Bella or Baveno to Locarno or Magadino, thence to Bellinzona, either of the passes Bernardino or St. Gothard may be substituted; time and expense being about equal to those of the Simplon.

Probable expense of the 6 days' tour from Innsbruck to Sierre, by the Stelvio, and the Valtelline.

Chur is an interesting town. The country and people are interesting too, the latter being a mixed race, some think of partly Etruscan origin, speaking a corruption of the Latin in some valleys (Romantsch and Ladin). Pop. 7400. Cathedral mediæval; a Roman mosaic in crypt; good wood sculpture; metal work of great value; precious antiquities (8th century); Marcoet tower of the Roman times; good cabinet of Natural history; curious archives.

EXCURSIONS.—Statzerhorn 5½ l. (16½ m.); grand panorama of Grisons mountains; Calanda (8650 ft.) 8 h. Statzerhorn has a finer view.

Over Splugen to Lake of Como and Milan. 21 h. 40 m. 44 2-8th l. (132⅔ ml).

Grandest scene the Via Mala. Rhine thunders below out of sight in a cleft, 130 metres deep. Its storm of 1834, Aug. 27. water rose to within a few feet of one of the bridges.

Splugen Village —Hotel Post. Col Splugen, height 6,900 ft., descent through many galleries, among many cascades. 19 h. 30 m. from Chur, is Chiavenna. Hotels —Corradi, Chian d'Oro. 3000 inhabitants. Very old church, San Lorenzo. Lower valley of the Mera is marshy and unhealthy. Before arriving at Colico you come to Adda, and road to Stelvio Pass into Tyrol by Bormio. (See further on).

Colico.—Hotels, Albergo del Lago; Isola Bella. Steamers twice a day to Como, in summer; time 3 h.

Unnecessary to expatiate on lake of Como, its beauties have been appreciated and described in all ages. See page 562. It is admittedly the queen of European lakes in point of beauty. Its banks are crowded with villages and villas in enchanting positions; but Bellaggio where it forks into two branches (right to Como, left to Lecco) is the favourite spot. Menaggio (Corona Inn) is at widest part of lake. Road to Menaggio, lake of Lugano, 2 h. 30 m. E. Gittana has a thermal establishment at Regolado.

Varenna.—Hotel Albergo Reale, is near a cascade of 900 ft. Fiume di Latti. Tremezzo.—Hotel Baxioni, near villa Carlotta or Sommariva with splendid gardens, pictures, sculptures of Thorwaldsen, Canova, &c. Bellaggio.—Hotel Gran Bretagna; villa Melzi and villa Serbelloni are remarkable for beauty of position and works of art.

RIGHT FORK.—Passing the villa Pliniana with intermittent spring, Palazzo Odescalchi, villas Taglioni, Pasta, Tanzi, &c. You come to Como.—Hotel L'Italia; Angelo. 24,350 inh. a city of Roman origin. The Cathedral is a fine edifice with paintings of Luini, Ferrari, &c. The Lyceum has some ancient columns. In the Palazzo Galletti is a painting of Leonardo da Vinci.

Passes Tiefenkasten in a deep gorge at the entrance of the Oberhalbstein valley, Hotel Post, Albula, (3 h. 35 m. from Chur). Stalla or Bivio is at the junction of the Julier and Septimer Julier Col, 2287 metres. Other route is by Maloggia, 11 h.; diligences every day, 9 f. 60 c. Road goes up Val Bregaglia, by Casaccia and Vicosoprano (good inn) to Chiavenna. Col Maloggia 6,180 feet high, is the watershed for streams flowing to the Black Sea, by the Inn, and the Adriatic by the Mera. Descending amidst cascades to Lake of Sils you pass Silva Plana, and reach Saint Morits. These Baths have come into much repute of late. The air is bracing in summer and the excursions are enchanting. In the village of St. Moritz, Hotel Badratt, Pension Fuller, and Zum Engadiner Kulm. 25 min. from it Baths of St. Moritz, 130 rooms. Iron springs. Kurhaus has 90 more rooms. Silva Plana is 1 h. 45 m. further up (Hotel de la Poste), on lake of same name. Engadin takes its name from Inn, which flows down it to the Tyrol, at the pass of Finstermunx after forming near its source the three great queen lakes of Sils, Silva Plana, and St. Moritz, full of trout.

Engadin.—Pop. 10,149, mostly Romantsch and Protestants. The men go forth into the cities of Europe, where, as confectioners, they amass wealth, and, coming back, build stately and substantial houses in these remote districts, peculiarity of Engadin. Few parts of Europe are inhabited at so high a level as these Engadin and lateral valleys. Excursions to Samaden. (Hotel: Crown, Pix Ott.) From Samaden to Tirano, Poschiavo, and the baths of La Prese, by Col Bernina, 2334 metres, 11½ l. (34½ m.), diligence every day. 7 h.; to Tirano 7 f. 40 c. Fine scenery throughout, passing Pontresina (Hotels Rosegg & Couronne; close to Bernina and Rosegg glaciers. Ascension of Pix Languard. Pix Morteratsch, and Pix Bernina. At Poschiavo (La Croce, Zum Bernina) pretty Lago di Poschiavo. At La Prese, sulphur baths, in a fine country by a beautiful lake.

At Tirano in Valtellina, Hotel Due Torri, Poste. Splendid marble church of Madonna di Tirano near it. Higher up Adda valley the beautifully situated Baths of Bormio, near the grand Stelvio pass leading to Tyrol. Descending Engadin to Nauders you come near the Munsterthal district, with wild forests inhabited by bears. Diligence from Samaden to Nauders, 9 fr. 5 c. From St. Moritz to Samaden, carriages, 5 fr. At Nauders (Hotels: Mondschein, Post,) you reach the Finstermunz pass, and soon after enter Tyrol. Diligence daily, Innsbruck to Landeck; omnibus daily, Landeck to Nauders.

EXCURSIONS.—Schloss Amras, of 13th century. Roman antiquities. From Patscher Kofel (7590 ft.) is a fine panorama. From Innsbruck to Botzen by rail over the Brenner, one of the easiest of Alpine passes, now traversed by the German route to Brindisi. It strikes near Valserthal, full of glaciers. Brenner (village), 400 inh. (height, 4346 ft.), between basins of Black Sea and Adriatic, down the Eisach, with several cascades, to Sterzing, passing the ground where the Tyrolese peasants defeated under their heroes Hofer, Haspinger, and Specklacher, a large French force under General Lefevre (1809), rolling down tremendous rocks on the column, and picking off its soldiers with their rifles. This event happened at Mittelwald, 7 miles from Sterzing on the side of Botzen. At Sterzing (Hotels Adler, Post, Krone), fine view of glaciers of Stubbaythal from Capuchin convent. At Brixen (Hotels Sonne, Elephant), 4000 inh., on the Eisach you plunge into Italian nature, culture and Italian population. Cathedral contains frescoes and paintings of Tyrolese artists.

Following down the Eisach, you arrive by the Kundersweg among porphyry rocks. At BOTZEN (Bolzano). Hotel Schwarzen Adler, Goldener Hirsch, Kaiser Krone. Omnibus to finest Tyrolese scenery at Kaltern and Meran. 10,000 inh. A great centre of routes. Botzen stands in one of the finest Tyrolese valleys, the Botzener Boden; splendid view from bridge; climate very sultry in summer. Fine view from the Calvary and the parish church has some good monuments.

Descending the Eisach, the South bursts upon you in the glory of its skies and vegetation. At TRENT (Hotels Europa, Corona) 14,500 inh., in a valley surrounded by high mountains, you are on the spot where the last great Council of the Roman Catholic Church was assembled in the 16th century. The Council was held in the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore (lasted 1545 to 1563). Principal town between Trent and Verona is ROVEREDO; 9,000 inh. Hotels Corona, Cavaletta. All round here there was much fighting between the Austrians and the French under Bonaparte, especially in 1797.

Verona is 150 kil. (100 mls.) from Botzen, on the main rail from Milan to Venice. From Milan to Verona 167 kil. (112 mls.); time by express, 5h. 29 m. Fare 1st class 21 fr. 75 c.; 2nd class, 14 fr. 75 c. To Venice 118 kil. (78 mls. Fare, 1st class, 14 fr. 70 c.; 2nd class, 11 fr. Time 4 h.

Verona.—Hotels Torre di Londra, Gran Torre, Aquila Nera, Colombe d'Oro, Cabs, the hour, 60 soldi; 2nd hour, 50 soldi. Sights—the Roman Amphitheatre, one of the most perfect and largest that exist. 150 churches; San Jerome the finest; in Santa Maria l'Antica, tomb of the Scaligers; Chapel of Pellegrini; in Church of San Bernardino, a masterpiece of San Michell. In a garden on banks of Adige, the tomb assigned to Juliet is pointed out.

Near Verona, the fields of Solferino and Custozza.

Leaving Verona, and pursuing the railroad to Venice you pass several interesting towns, especially VICENZA, decorated with churches, palaces, and a theatre, on the antique plan, by Pallachi. Hotels Gran Parigi, Stella d'Oro, Reale della Citta. Population 37,690. Museo Civico has MSS. of Palladio. Churches of Santa Corona and of San Stefano have fine paintings. The next town of interest is PADUA, 248 kil. (165 mls.) from Milan; 37 kil. from Venice (25 mls.) Hotels Croce d'Oro, Aquila d'Oro. Cabs ½ an hour, 30 soldi; 1 hour, 55 soldi; 44,607 inhabitants. Churches—Sant' Antonio contains fine sculpture and paintings, admirable bronzes, and good works of art, of all kinds. Santa Guistina, admirable for structure. In the Palazzo della Ragione, people used to shew the pretended tomb of Titus Livy. The University is one of the oldest in Europe, and the most important in Italy; it includes the cabinet of natural philosophy in which Galileo taught for 18 years. It has an observatory, and many collections. The library has 100,000 vols. Soon after Padua the tourist comes to Mestre, and crossing the lagunes by a great viaduct, reaches Venice.—Hotels: Albergo Reale, Europa, Lena, Regina Vittoria, Bellevue, Italia, Bagioad'Inghilterra. Hotels Garnis: National, Spalatin Palazzo Barbaro. Omnibus-boats, starting from the Mole or from the Riva del Carbon (¼ of an hour before the arrival of every Train) to the Station, 8 soldi each; boxes, 7 soldi each. Gondolas, 1 rower per hour, 40 soldi (1 fr.); succeeding hours, 20 soldi; 1 day, 1 fl. 60 s. (4 fr.). Tariff and number given by the Gondolier to the passenger. Great Station Piazetta of San Marco. Most of the Gondoliers are honest and good natured fellows. To pass the Grand Canal, 2 kr. One of the most attractive and original sights of Venice, the Cafés of the Piazza San Marco, open all night; Florian and Suttil are two of the best.

MONUMENTS.—1. Churches: Santa Maria della Salute, for the architecture of Palladio. 2. San Stefano, Frari, with monuments of Titian, Canova, and others. Many tombs of Doges. San Giovanne Paolo, superb Gothic Church, begun 1240. Mausoleums of a host of Doges and Venetian heroes; paintings of St. Peter the Martyr, by Titian. San Giorgio Maggiore, begun 1560, by Palladio, on an island; paintings by Tintoretto. Fine view of Venice from the Dome. Redentore, on the Giudecca, built in 1570, by Palladio, very remarkable for its architecture, with paintings of the Venetian masters. San Sebastiano, containing the tomb of Paolo Veronese and several of his paintings. Altar piece, painted by Titian when 86 years old. San Stefano, Gothic Church of the 14th century; much good statuary and curious sculpture in wood. The great monument of Venice, however, is the Church of Saint Marc, of the Byzantine style and 10th century, whose fine cupolas and gold mosaics give it a very oriental character. The four horses of gilt bronze over the main entrance, long attributed to Lysippus, are known to be of the date of Nero. Saint Marc has 500 marble columns; its great gold mosaics are of the 17th to 18th century. One of the most ancient mosaics, Christ, the Virgin, and Saint Marc (11th century), over entrance in the fanrior. High altar very ornate: the baldachino above it, of verde antico; the palad 'oro also above it, plates of gold and silver are incrusted with enamel and precious stones, done at Constantinople 1105. Relics of St. Marc are said to be under the altar. Second altar behind it has 4 alabaster columns, said to have belonged to the Temple of Solomon. Church contains a quantity of other treasures, which our limits forbid us to enumerate. The treasury contains a crystal vase with the Saviour's blood (according to tradition), part of the skull of St. John, cuneiform inscriptions from Persepolis, &c.

The campanile of San Marco in the square, 100 metres high, deserves a visit on account of its splendid view, commanding the Alps, Istria, the Adriatic, &c. The Doges' Palace is highly interesting, founded 800. Present building of the 14th cent., in the Moresco-gothic style; columns of galleries deserve notice, bas-reliefs in porphyry, staircase of the giants, lion's mouth, Ponte de Sospiri, &c.; but especially the salles of the 1st and 2nd stories, filled with treasures of the Venetian school. On the 2nd storey especially, Tintoretto and Paolo Veronese,—on the 1st storey, many historical pieces relating to Barbaressa and Venetian history. Library of the Palace, very rich in MSS. and medals. Principal other Palaces, Mocenigo, inhabited by Byron; Cavalli, belonging to the Duke of Bordeaux. Toulon.—Hotels: Croix de Malte, Croix d'Or. Cabs, 1 fr. the course, 1 fr. 40 c. the hour. Post, Rue Royale 46; Telegraph, Rue Royale, 25. Pop. 67,127. New fortifications have been constructed since 1853. Principal streets, Royale, Bourbon, Boulevard Louis Napoleon.

Monuments: Cathedral St. Marie Majeure (11th cent.); Virgin of Canova. Museum, Library, and Botanic Garden; but the great sight is the Arsenal, built by Vauban, 1680; the Convicts' Prison, Bagne (3000 convicts); great Bakery Asenal de Castigneau; many schools and hospitals connected with the Navy.

Passing Frejus (Hotel du Midi) near where Napoleon landed from Elba, 1815 (at St. Raphael, 1¼ ml. from Frejus) you reach Cannes.—Hotels: Du Nord, Des Etrangers D'Angleterre, Des Princes, Victoria, De l'Europe, Bellevue, Bristol. Carriages at the hotels. Boats, 8 to 12 fr. per day, 2 sailors. Post Route d'Italie; Telegraph near the Cours. Pop. 10,000. Mean temperature of the year 16° 2 centigr.

Cannes is noted as a winter residence, accordingly its vicinity is covered with splendid villas, including that of Lord Brougham.

Passing Antibes you soon reach

Nice.—Hotels: Iegion—Alpes, France, Mediterranée, Etrangers, table d'hôte, 3fr.; Univers, Princes, Grande Bretagne, Royal, Angleterre, Pension Milliet, 22 Rue de France.

Furnished apartments mostly let for 6 months. In the Marine quarter, 400 to 500 fr. for a small lodging; 1000 to 1800 fr. for a large family. Prices very high in the New quarters. See page 375.

Corniche.—The Corniche route from Nice to Genoa, along the Maritime Alps, Apennine and Mediterranean presents some of the finest scenery in Europe, and is now accessible by rail all the way.

First important place Monaco (Hotel de Russie, De Paris, Des Bains), a principality of 1890 inhabitants; built on a rock. Passing over delightful woody country, near Cape Martin, you reach beautiful gardens and some ruins, and, soon after, Avenue Victor Emanuel, leading to Mentone. Pension, about 7 to 12 francs per day; Villas, about 2000 to 4000 francs the season; Cercle des Etrangers, 60 fr. the season; Ladies, 48 fr. Physicians: French, German, Italian, and English (Dr. Henry Bennet). Banker, Bioves & Brother. 6000 inhabitants. Charming bay, in a bower of citron and orange trees. Protected from North by high rocks. Mean winter temperature, 12° 90′ Reaumur. Cool breezes frequently refresh the heat.

Continuing along the lovely Riviera beyond Mentone, you command a succession of glorious sea and mountain views, and pass through several interesting places. About Bordighera are large plantations of palms, which supply the processions of Rome on Palm Sunday. Passing Capo Nero you reach San Remo (39 kil.), 11,000 inhabitants, with an alley of cypresses bending up to a bright white church. Passing San Lorenzo and Porto Mauricio, in a very picturesque country, you reach Oneglia (Hotels Turia, Victoria), 6,440 inhabitants; good port, fine scenery. Ascending to Cervo you have superb views, and wander through enchanting olive groves, many of the trees being of great age. Passing two promontories you next approach Laguilla, with a magnificent view and Alassio (fine Hotel of La Halle.) Rising very high above the sea you come to Albenga with important Roman remains (bridge) and an elegant cathedral.

At Final (Grand Hotel de la China), also is a cathedral with marble and gilding, beyond which you pass to the Defile of Berggi, in a district presenting olive woods, ruined castles, churches, shaded by cypress groves and hills fringed with Maritime pines. At Savona (Albergo Svizzero, Albergo Reale) you are only 27¼ miles by rail from Genoa. Savona has 24,855 inh., a handsome theatre, adorned with statues of Italian poets, and a cathedral with paintings of Dürer. Between Savona and Voragine is a chaos of rocks; soon after you reach Cogoletto, said to be the birth-place of Christopher Columbus, a man so closely connected with the dawn of American greatness. The village is among hedges of aloes; on the house attributed to Columbus is an inscription. Continuing to Avenzan, amidst rich southern vegetation, you come to Voltri, and soon reach Genoa. See page 518.

Modena; of each of which places we shall give a brief account.

Piacenza is 69 kil. (46 mls.) from Milan, 1 h. 35 m., express; fare, 1st class, 8 f. 35 c., and 188 kil. (126 mls.), 3 h. 55 m., express; fare, 1st class, 20 f. 80 c. from Turin.

The town stands on the Po. 34,590 inh. Hotels, Leone d'Oro, Italia. Principal street, Corso. The cathedral is of the 12th cent. in the Lombardo-Romanesque style; the cupola was painted by Guercino, and the church contains frescoes of Agostino and Ludovico Carracci. The church of San Sisto used to have Raphael's celebrated Madonna di San Sisto, now in the Dresden Gallery. Continuing our journey, 58 kil. (37 mls.), h. 6 m.; fare, 1st class, 6 f. 40 c., bring us to Parma is 127 kil. (84 mls.) from Milan, and 240 kil. (164 mls.) from Turin. Principal Monuments:—The Cathedral, containing an immense fresco of 1530, in the cupola; the work of Correggio, representing the Assumption of the Virgin—unfortunately, this grand work, unique in its kind, has been much injured. The Baptistery is a rich piece of workmanship, of the 12th to the 13th cent.; San Giovanni Evangelista, contains renowned paintings of Correggio (in his youth), of Parmegiano, and others; another church, La Madonna della Steccata, has a fine painting of Moses, by Parmegiano; the Ducal Palace, contains a library of 144,000 books, of which 4000 MSS.; a fragment of a fresco of Correggio, and various curiosities. The Academy of Fine Arts is very rich in Correggios, especially his Saint Jerome; this picture brought Correggio 550 ℔ (£22), and his board. In 1798, the Duke of Parma offered in vain. 1,000,000 f. (£40,000) for it; this academy, contains many other paintings of rare value, e.g., the Madonna della Scodella, of Correggio; paintings of Parmegiano, Leonardo da Vinci, Bellini, &c. The Museum of Antiquities, has a number of antiquities found at Velleja in N. Italy, especially a highly valued bronze statuette of a drunken Hercules; cameos, medals, &c. Public walks:—The Botanic and Ducal gardens.

From Parma to Modena are 52 kil. (35 mls.), 1 h. 10 m.; fare, 1st class, 7 fr. 50 c. Passing Reggio, with 46,223 inh. (Hotels Cavaletto, Posta) possessing fine paintings of Guercino, Spada, and others, in the church of Madonna della Ghiara, and anatomical collections of Spallanzani in the Lyceo, we arrive at Modena, a town of 33 000 inh., in a damp and fertile plain, the birthplace of Cialdini and of a much higher character, Muratori, author of the valuable Annali. Finest streets, Corso del Naviglio, Corso della via Emilia. The Cathedral is in the Lombard style. In the Campanile, called the Ghirlandaja, is a pitcher of water, the subject of Tassoni's poem, La Secchia Rapita, and in the church of San Agostino is the tomb of Muratori. In the church of La Vergine del Carmine is a cupola painted by Calabrese. The Ducal Palace contains the Galleria Estense, which formerly possessed the Notte of Correggio. This gallery is open to foreigners, and contains more than 500 paintings and 300 drawings, some of them of the older schools, several frescoes of Correggio, and fine specimens of many Italian schools, and even of the Flemish school. The Biblioteca Estense has 93,000 books and MSS., some of them of great value. Modena has also a University, Theatres, &c.

From Modena to Bologna the distance by rail is 26 kil. (17 mls.)

Bologna has a population of 89,104, and contains a number of ancient streets with arcades. Hotels: Reale, Tre Mori, Aquila Nera, Villa di Parigi, Pensione Suizzera, Italia, Europa. Omnibus from Station, 60 c., 1 fr. with luggage.; cabs, open fiacri, 1 horse, the course 75 c.; broughams, 1 horse, the course 1 fr. 50 c. Monuments, San Petronio, an immense basilica, begun in the 14th century, still unfinished, contains sculptures of Sansorino, and of Properzia de Rossi, and paintings of Parmigiano and others. The central porch is a masterpiece of Jacopo della Quercia; San Domenico has the tombs of Guido, of St. Dominic, and paintings of Guercino and others; San Bartolomeo di Reno has paintings of the Carracci; San Giacomo Maggiore possesses others of the same artists, and of Procaccius and others, and the mausoleum of Bentivoglio; the Madonna di Galleria contains a fine painting of Albani; San Stefano is a curious group of seven united churches of the 12th century.

The University is one of the oldest in Europe, has had many ladies for professors, and was founded in 1119. The new University, founded 1714, has reckoned among its professors, Galvani, while the Curator of its library, was for many years the celebrated Mezzofanti, the great linguist. The University has many collections, anatomical, and others of natural history, philosophy, &c. Among the curiosities of Bologna, we may name its leaning towers, the Asinella, 89 metres high (292 feet), inclination, 3¼ ft.; and La Garisenda, height, 49 metres (161 feet), inclination, 9¾ feet; these towers are built of brick, and are noticed in the Inferno, of Dante. The Theatres, are the Corso Sole, Contavalli, &c. Walks:—To San Michela, in Bosco; to la Madonna di San Luca, reached by an approach of 640 arcades, and the church of the Annunziate, a master-piece of Francia. The Palazzi, Fava, Sampieri, and Magnani, have frescoes of the Carracci. It may be useful to add, that Bologna had a school of its own, in painting, and has been the birthplace of many first-rate artists; among the great names of the Bolognese school, must be noticed, Ludovico Carracci, (flourished 1555-1619); his cousins, Agostino and Annibale (1560-1619); Dominichino (1581-1641); Guido Reni (1575-1642), and Guercino 1591-1666).

From Bologna to Florence, the railroad cuts through the Apennines. Fares, 1st class, 10 f. 80 c.; 2nd class, 8 f. 65 c. Distance. 182 kil. (88 ml.) Principal town, by the way to Pistoja. Pop. 11,880. Hotels.—Stella d'Oro, Leone Rosso, Leone d'Oro. The town contains several interesting monuments, with sculptures of the 12th cent. The Cathedral has sculptures of Brunelleschi and Andrea della Robbia. San Francesco, at Prato, has some remarkable paintings. Santa Maria delle Grazie, has an admired painting of L. di Credi, and the Palazzo Rospigliosi is rich in remarkable paintings.

Pistoja is 34 kil. (23 ml.) from Florence. Prato, another interesting town, 18 kil. (12 ml). from Florence, Hotels.—Posta, Stella. Pop 11,515, has a Duomo, rich in white and green marbles, with sculptures and bronzes of Luca della Robbia, Donatello and Brunelleschi, and paintings of Lippi and Gaddi. Soon after this, the rail brings you to Florence.—Central station is near Santa Maria Novella. Cab to hotel, 1 f.; carpet bag, 15 c.; trunk, 25 c. Hotels —Nuova York (the old Ricasoli palace); Gran Bretagna, Victoria, Italia, on the Lung' Arno; Albergo di Firenze, via del Cerretani, near the Cathedral, all first-class; Anglo-American element prevails in them. Rooms 2½ f. and upwards. Table d'Hote at 6 p.m., 4 f. Pension, 8 to 10 f. Second-class houses are the Hotel de Geneve, Pension Suisse, Pension Americaine, Pension Anglaise. Houses in the Italian style, Fenice, Stella d'Italia. Hotels Garnis and apartments:—Casa Santi, and Casa Nardini, Lung' Arno, rooms 1½ f., 1 f. if you prolong your stay. (2nd storey). Price of apartments varies: in winter, 2 rooms with 1 bed, 50 to 60 f. the month; in summer 40 f. In winter, the best situation is Lung' Arno; but in summer, a North aspect is better. In fact, Florence is not healthy or agreeable in summer. The surrounding villas are a delightful residence at that season.

Cafés.—Doney, Risorti (via Cavour), Italia, Lung' Arno. Half a cup of coffee, 15c.; Ices, 30c.; Beefsteak, 70c. Restaurants.—Luna, Italia, Stella, Patria. You dine for 2 to 4f. à la carte. Cabs, 80c. (1 horse); 1 f. (2 horses), the course. (1 horse), 1 f. 60 c.; (2 horses), 2 f. the hour.

Theatres:—Pergola, restored 1857, pit 1½ fr. for ballets and operas. Pagliano, similar. Alfieri, (1740). Politeama, Vittorio Emanuele, operas, ballets, &c, (1863.) Goldoni, Nazionale, &c. Goodban English library. Photographs, Bernoud, Via Delle Orivolo, 51. Alabaster work to be had in shops, Lung' Arno. Bankers:—Fenzi and Co., Piazza Della Signoria; Schmitz and Capezzuoli, Via dell Proconsolo, 10. Rails: Trains to Pisa and Leghorn, 3 times a day in 4 hours; Rome 4 a day by Arezzo in 11½ hours.

Florence the classical city of Art, the capital of the Medici and sun of Italy, is beautifully situated on the Arno, in the midst of a rich vale full of olivegroves, gardens and villas. It is in winter the pleasantest residence in Italy. Population, 167,900 inhabitants. The highest point of the Apennines within sight is Monte Murello, height, 1600 metres. Climate, subject to sudden changes, but generally considered unhealthy.

It contains 87 churches, and has 6 bridges over the Arno, which divides it into two parts. Oldest bridge, Ponte delle Grazie, of 1237. Town has 9 Gates, several, especially San Gallo, with frescoes of Ghirlandajo. There are 23 public squares in Florence; the oldest part of the town N. of the the cathedral, the Lung 'Arno is the fashionable lounge, and generally preferred by foreigners; but the Piazza della Signoria is the focus and centre of Florence life. Here the celebrated monk Savonarola was burnt, 1498. At hand is the Palazzo Vecchio, built 1298, and the seat of the ancient government of the Republic; the Loggia dei Lanzi; the Mint Zecca, and the Portico degli Uffizi, with the Galleria de Uffizi, one of the richest art Galleries in the world. In fact, this Piazza is a perfect treasury of high art.

We can only touch on the salient points of interest in this magic ring. In the Palazzo Vecchio, or Della Signoria, are frescoes of Vasari, an unfinished statue of Victory by Michael Angelo, and in front of it the admirable David of the same great sculptor, and Hercules with Cacus by Bandinelli. To the right of the Loggia de Lanzi (which is decorated with all kinds of sculpture), is the group of the Rape of the Sabines (marble, 1583), by John of Bologna, Perseus with Medusa's head in bronze, by Benvenuto Cellini. Judith with the head of Holophernes, by Donatello, &c. &c. In the Portico degli Uffizli the niches inside and out are filled (1845—56) with marble statues of eminent Tuscans, such as Giotto, L. da Vinci, Michael Angelo, Dante, Petrarca Boccaccio, Amerigo Vespucci, the Florentine traveller, who has left his name to America, Macchiavelli, Guicciardini, Galileo, Benvenuto Cellini, Lorenzo de Medici (the Magnificent), &c.

The second storey of this building contains the Picture Gallery of world-wide renown, (open 9 to 3 p.m.) The collection was begun under the Medicis, and in 1858 has been enriched by the addition of an Etruscan museum, &c.

We can only give a summary of its contents:—1st Vestibule; bronze statues of Mars, Silenus, &c., and Roman bas-reliefs. 2nd Vestibule; Antiques, busts of Jupiter and Cybele. East Corridor; ceiling by Bernardino Pocetti 534 portraits of eminent men, many antiques. Most remarkable objects; Busts—41. Julius Cæsar (bronze); 47. Augustus; 48 Agrippa: a fine Athlete; copy of the Doryphoros of Polycletus; Sarcophagi Paintings: C. Giotto—Christ in the Garden; 2. Giotto—St. Cecilia; 17. Beato Angelico; a gold tabernacle with paintings. In the South Corridor, among others, notice 146, Nymph extracting a Thorn (Venere della spina).

West Gallery:—Frescoes showing the revival of art; Sculptures; 380, Bacchus, one of the earliest works of Michael Angelo; Adonis dying, by the same sculptor; an unfinished Apollo, also by him. Works of Donatello.

Lateral Cabinets.—La Tribuna; unequalled collection of Antiques and Paintings; the Venus of Medici, of world-wide renown, (found 16th century at Adrian villa, Tivoli,) Greek inscription ascribes it to Cleomenes; Apollino, or young Apollo (school of Praxiteles); Group of Wrestlers; Satyr playing—restored by Michael Angelo.

PAINTINGS.—Raphael. 1139. Madonna del Cardinello; 1138, Madonna della Fontana; 1137, St. Jean; 1132, Correggio, Head of John the Baptist Salles connected with the West Corridor.—Salle 1. Tuscan School.—1147, Andrea del Sarto, painted by himself; 1159, Medusa's head, attributed to L. da Vinci; 1184, Death of the Virgin, Beato Angelico. — Salle 2. 1252. Leonardo da Vinci, Adoration of the Magi; 1265, Fra Bartolomeo, The Virgin and Patron Saints of Florence. — Salle of Ancient Masters. Beato Angelico. Coronation of the Virgin. Paintings of Credi, Lippi, and others.

Other side of Tribune; Venetian and Lombard Schools. 1164, Canaletto, the Ducal Palace at Venice; 1068, Paolo Veronese, Head; 1077, Canaletto, the Grand Canal at Venice; 99-8, Guido, Madonna; 1001, P. Veronese, Madonna; 1062, Titian, Madonna. Others of Palma, Vecchio, Caravaggio, Salvator Rosa, &c.—Flemish School. 817, Rubens and Adonis; 851, A. Dürer, Madonna; 768. Dürer, the Apostle St. Philip; many Holbeins and Teniers'.—Salle 2. 504. Teniers. St. Peter weeping; Memling; Van der Goes.—Near Venetian and Lombard, is the Dutch School. 422, Rembrandt; 882, Ruysdaal, Landscape; 977, John Steen, a Violin-player. Many pieces of Mieris, Ostade, and Dow. To the top of the Gallery is the cabinet of precious stones, works of John of Bologna, of Benevenuto Cellini, and even Etruscan gold work.

Two Salles of the Venetian School. 1st Salle: has 3 Titians and 2 Paolo Veroneses. 2nd Salle: 7 Titians, 2 Tintorettos—includes 626, the celebrated Flora of Titian.

Next follows a Corridor of Tuscan sculpture—contains works of Luca della Robbia, Donatello, and Michael Angelo.

ETRUSCAN MUSEUM.—1st Salle: Etruscan vases, mostly found in Tuscany; greatest curiosity: the Vase de Français, unique for its size and beauty, with scenes from Pagan mythology; the Combat of the Centaurs, &c. 2nd Salle: Unpainted vases. Rest of the gallery contains the following Salles: Painters' Salle—Portraits of all great Italian, Dutch, and German painters. 2nd Salle—Idem; Cabinet of Inscriptions, Cabinet of the Hermaphrodite. Salle of Baroccio; a Florentine mosaic in the middle of Jacopo Antelli cost 40,000 ducats. The Salle of Niobe contains the renowned groupe of Niobe, found 1583, near Rome, and supposed to be the copy of a work of Scopas or Praxiteles; also paintings of Reubens, Van Dyck, and others; Cabinet of modern bronzes, Cabinet of ancient bronzes, three Cabinets of original drawings.

The second storey of same building has the Biblioteca Magliabecchi, open 9 to 4 p.m., except Sundays—contains the first printed Homer: Florence, 1488. Cicero ad familiares: Venice, 1469.

OTHER MONUMENTS.—The cathedral of Santa Maria del Fiore, built by Arnolfo di Lapo, 1294; the façade remained unfinished, and is so still; in 1865, however, a plan was adopted conformable to them. The cathedrals of Sienna and Orvieto; the cupola was made by Brunelleschi, and is higher than that of St. Peter's at Rome. The exterior is covered with white, red, and green marble. Michael Angelo used to say of the cupola of Brunelleschi (who died 1444), "It is difficult to do so well, and impossible to do better." The interior is very grand, but rather bare. It contains the tomb of Brunelleschi, and a Pietà of Michael Angelo.

Near the Cathedral (same square) is the noted Baptistery (San Giovanni Battista), with its exquisite bronze gates that were said to deserve the name of Gates of Paradise (la Port del Paradiso) by Michael Angelo—the work of Andrea di Pisa and Ghiberti, and a perfect study in ancient history. Ghiberti devoted 20 years to complete the north gate. The interior has frescoes of Fra Jacopo, Gaddi, Lippi, &c.

Santa Croce, though exteriorly unsightly, is a vast, dark, solemn church, full of the monuments of Italy's great departed. Notice especially the tomb of Michael Angelo by Vasari; that of Alfieri by Canova; that of Macchiavelli (date 1787); a modern monument to Dante, besides various other works of art.

San Lorenzo (shut at 12.30 p.m., open 3 to 5) has 3 naves, and is another treasury of art; but its great glory is the chapel of the Medicis, with sepultures of the Medici, and the walls covered with marbles and rare stones, valued at 23 million florentine lire. The new Sacristy is the great attraction (open 9 to 12.30), being in fact a Michael Angelo chapel, ordered by Leo X., forming a sanctuary of Italian art. The great gems are Michael Angelo's statues of Day and Night, Dawn and Twilight.

Santa Annunziata is another grand church (13th century). In the atrium and interior numerous frescoes. In the interior, Perugino, and a Pietà in marble by Bandinelli. Santa Maria Novella, called by Michael Angelo, his bride (1270 to 1357), has in the Buccellai chapel a celebrated Madonna of Cimabue, a famous Crucifix of Brunelleschi, and a painting of Beato Angelico. San Spirito is a fine church on the left bank of the Arno (1471). Has good paintings of Lomo, Ghirlandaji, Lippi, &c. The Pitti palace on the same side of the river, built 1440 by a Florentine merchant, from a design of Brunelleschi. Length of façade, 201 metres (661 ft.), of immense blocks 8 metres (26 ft.) long. Cosmo de Medici united it to his palace by a gallery 487 metres long (1602 ft.), crossing the Arno and the town. Great sight in the palace; Picture gallery, open 9 to 3 p.m. We can only notice the principal treasures. Salle de Venus has works of Dürer, Guercino, Tintoretto, Titian, Reubens, &c. Salle of Apollo, a Holy Family of A. del Sarto, a Madonna of Murillo: Perugino, the Magdalen; portraits by Titian and Raphael; the Pietà (a grand work) of Tintoretto, &c. Salle of Mars: the Madonna della Seggiola, one of the masterpieces of Raphael, and his Madonna dell' Impannata: Moses of Guercino; Rebecca of Guido, &c. Salle of Jupiter: Michael Angelo's Fates (Parcæ) a noted painting; his Wife, by A. del Sarto; works of Da Vinci, Paolo Veronese, &c. Salle of Saturn: Giorgione, a Nymph pursued; Charles I. of England, by Van Dyck. Perugino, Descent from the Cross (one of his finest paintings); Giulio Romano's Dance of the Muses (a nosed painting); Raphael's Vision of Ezekiel, a splendid work. Salle of the Iliad: many works of Giorgione, Titian, Da Vinci, Guercino, A. Caracci, and others. Salle of the Education of Jupiter: paintings of Del Sarto, Tintoretto, &c. Salle of Ulysses: the Caraccis, Salvator Rosa, and others. Salle of Prometheus: Fra Angelico, Fra Bartolomeo, &c. Many other salles have fine paintings too numerous to notice.

Behind the Pitti palace are the famous Boboli gardens (open Thursday and Sunday), with fine statuary, and a splendid view of Florence. The Museum of Natural History, near the Palazzo Pitti, has some good collections. The Academy of Fine Arts has a good picture gallery, and the town is full of monumental brasses, where its great men were born or resided. Thus you may see the houses of Galileo, Macchiavelli, Alfieri, Guicciardini, B. Cellini, &c.

EXCURSIONS.—The country near is delightful, and the excursions are numerous.

San Miniate al Monte, (30 min.) has fine architecture and paintings, and a grand view of Florence.

Vall Ombrosa.—Rail to Rignano, 28 kilom. (19 ml.) Thence on foot. Monastery founded 11th cent., mentioned in the Paseroso of Milton. At hand the little convent called Paradisino, on a rock, with a beautiful view of the Arno Vale.

Alvernia, the scene of many startling events in the life of St. Francis. Journey partly on foot, partly by carriage through Osteria della Consuma, (an inn,) 2 hrs. Bibbiena, (5 hrs.) Camaldoli, (3 hrs.) an ancient abbey founded (1000) in the midst of savage and picturesque scenery, still occupied by an austere order of Camaldolese monks. The neighbourhood presents magnificent points of view extending to the Adriatic on one side, and the Mediterranean on the other. At hand is the source of the Arno, and Dante has described this wild country, (14th Canto of his Purgatorio). You ascend from Camaldoli to Alvererda on mule, donkey, or foot. Mountain is riven by a deep chasm, is surrounded by superb forests, and has grand views. Convent founded 1218 has 120 monks. Close to Florence are the celebrated lounge and drive, known as Cascini Gardens, greatly crowded on fête days; they extend ¾ l. (2½ ml.) along the Arno, present fine views, and have a good Zoological Garden. Florence can be also approached direct from Paris through Marseilles, and by steamboat to Leghorn. (For Time and Fares, see Marseilles).

ROUTE 7.

Paris to Florence, via Marseilles and Leghorn.

Marseilles to Leghorn, 1st class, 72fr. Messageries Maritime Co's Boats, 8 a.m., Sunday and Wednesday. Paquebots Poste Francais, on Wednesday. See Route 4.

Port very animated. Monuments few. Fine view of Elba, Capraja, &c., from Mole. Leghorn has handsome streets,—principal via Grande, or Vittorio Emanuele.

Excellent shops in Via Vittor Emanuele. (Mossica, Scagliolo.) Principal buildings in Piazza d'Arme—the Cathedral, the Palazzo Communalis, and Castello Reale.

Rail to Pisa (and thence to Florence) 25 min. 1 fr. 75 c; to Florence, 2½ hr. 7 fr. 60 c, or 6 fr. 20 c. The line cuts the Arno plain covered with scattered maritime pines.

Pisa.—Fiacres, 1 fr. If time be precious, drive round to see the monuments. Grand old town; desolate and half-peopled: 21,345 inh.; mild climate in winter. Hotels: Gran Bretagna, Lung' Arno, Vittoria, Peverada. Post, under Ponto di Mezzo. Apartments, Lung' Arno; two to three rooms, 100 to 130 fr. the month.

Ancient city of Etruria on the Arno, has had a celebrated school of art, and noted men of science in the University. Pisa, in the Middle Ages, was great as a commercial republic, and long the rival of Genoa. The town has 9 public squares and 3 bridges. The sights require at least 3 hours.

The great monuments are, the Duomo, the Baptistery, the Leaning Tower and the Campo Santo. Duomo, founded 1067, Norman-Tuscan style, 5 naves, 375 feet long; most of the 68 columns in the interior are ancient; a splendid perfect building, with an almost unrivalled façade, containing a great number of Greek and Roman capitals to its columns; 12 altars of the nave attributed to Michael Angelo; high altar gorgeous with lapis lazzuli; mosaic of the half cupola by Cimabue; many paintings in choir and transept by Andrea del Sarto. It is said that it was in observing the bronze lamp suspended in the principal nave, that Galileo was led to his theory of the pendulum.—Baptistery (1153), a circular building, with many pillars, most of them antique octagonal fonts, and hexagonal pulpit of exquisite workmanship.—Leaning Tower, begun 1174, by Bonanno; not known if its inclination is the effect of design or accident; height 47 metres (154 feet); it deviates 4 metres (13½ ft). View from platform over the sea, town, and mountains very fine; a staircase of 294 steps leads to the top; the heaviest bell weighs 24,000 lb.—The Campo Santo (1188) 50 c., open all day, was formed of earth brought from the Holy Land by 53 ships. The building surrounding the cemetery is of Giovanni Pisano (1278). There are 43 arcades on 44 pillars. The vast gallery running round the Campo is pierced by 62 windows, and decorated with ancient paintings. The chapel in particular has many specimens of early Tuscan art. There is also a valuable collection of Etruscan, Roman, and mediæval sculptures. Paintings in Chapel: Last Judgment of Orgagna, many Old Testament subjects by Gozzoli and Spinello, &c.; among the sculpture, many of Pisano and one of Thorwaldsen.

Pisa has several other interesting churches—Santa Caterina, San Sisto, &c. The Sapienza, or University, is a grand edifice of 1493; has good collections of ornithology and geology, and one of the oldest botanical gardens in Italy. Many other interesting objects at Pisa and in its vicinity.

Rail from Pisa to Florence, 2 hrs., 5 fr., up the valley of the Arno by Empoli. From Leghorn you can reach Rome by rail through Civita Vecchia by the Maremma, open all through; from Civita Vecchia to Rome, 81 kilom. 3 hours 29 minutes, 10 fr. 95 c. Total distance, 336 kil. (224 miles.)

ROUTE 8.

Florence to Rome by Arezzo, Perugia, and Terni.

371 kil. (232 ml.), 12 h., express. Fares through 1st class, 44 l. 15 c.; 2nd class, 30 l. 65c., express.

(Florence to Rome by Empoli, Sienna, Orvieto, and Orte. 320 kil., 200 ml.).

The rail from Florence to Rome by Arezzo passes through interesting classical scenery.

Arezzo, 89 kil. (58 ml.) from Florence, Hotels Vittoria, Inghilterra, Croce d'Oro), 10,587 inh., is beautifully situated on an eminence, in a fine pure air. It is an old town full of interest from Etruscan times downwards, as it was one of the important cities of the Etruscan Republic. The Museo Publico is very rich in antiquities. It will add to the interest of this place to remember that Arretium was the birthplace of C. Cilnius Mæcenas, friend of Augustus, and protector of Horace and Virgil; also of Petrarch, Vasari, Aretino, Cesalpini the botanist, and others. Principal streets, Via Cavour and Corso Vittorio Emanuele. The church of Santa Maria della Piere has a singular façade with very old sculptures. Church is of the 9th century. The house in which Francesco Petrarca was born (July 20, 1304) is in Via dell' Orto. The cathedral is a fine church in the Italo-Gothic style. Guide to the Museum:—Salle 1. Etruscan, Roman, and Christian inscriptions; funerary urns in red clay, called Vasa Arretina. Salle 2. Majolica. Salle 3. Fossils of the Chiana valley, including whale and elephant bones, &c.

Next town of interest is Cortona.—Hotels Europa; Casa Nuti, inferior. Small town in fine Chiana valley, made very fertile by drainage, works of Torricelli (the inventor of the barometer) and other disciples of Galileo. Cortona is an ancient Umbrian city, conquered by the Etruscans. L. Signorelli (born 1439) and Pietro de Cortona (1596).

In the Palazzo Pretoni is Museo of Etruscan antiquities, has a splendid lampadario of a circular form, with 16 jets, ornamented with satyrs, syrens, &c. Many interesting Etruscan bronzes and inscriptions. Fine MSS. of Dante in the Biblioteca Ponbani. The cathedral is a fine basilica, having in the choir a Greek sarcophagus. Jesuit's church has 3 paintings of Fiesole; also a Madonna of Fiesole in the church of San Domenico. Fine view from the ruined fortress.

Soon after, Lake Trasimene, passing near the scene of Hannibal's great victory over C. Flaminius, June 23, 217. The whole country corresponds exactly to Livy's description (B. 22, 4) and to that of Polybius (3, 83). Lake 10 l. (20 ml.) round; has 3 islets, and is full of fish. A little beyond is Perugia, near the Tiber, 76 kil. (44 ml.) from Arezzo. Hotels Posta, Corona, France; 18,500 inh. Stands high, is of Etruscan origin, and the capital of Umbria. The Corso is a fine street, and the whole town has a venerable appearance; but it is especially interesting as the birthplace of Pietro Perugino, the master of Raphael. In the cathedral is the Chapel of the Holy King, formerly possessing Perugino's great work (now at Caen) of the Sposalizio, or Espousals of the Virgin. Perugia has 103 churches, crowded with specimens of the Umbrian school of painting. San Domenico is particularly rich in Peruginos. Il Cambio, or the Exchange, has frescoes of Perugino, and the town possesses an archæological museum, a university, an arch of Augustus, &c. A little way beyond Perugia you reach the ancient solemn city of Assisi, 100 kil. (66 ml.) from Arezzo: 4500 inh. (Inn, Lepri); is curious and remarkable on account of its churches and its connection with the history of St. Francis, born and buried here (1182-1230). Assisi is a treasury of primitive Italian art. The church of San Francesco consists of 3, one above the other, with frescoes of Giotto, Memmi, Gaddi, Buffalmaceo, &c.

Proceeding, you reach FOLIGNO, 116 kil. (74 ml.) from Arezzo. Hotels.—Posta, Aquila d'Oro. 11,200 inh., with a Cathedral, and in the Nunziatella, a painting of Perugino. Passing Spoleto, with many Roman remains, temple, triumphal arch, &c., you come to TERNI, 54 kil. (36 ml.) from Foligno, 113 kil. (62 ml.) from Rome. Hotels.—Posta, Europa. 15,000 inh., with a Roman amphitheatre, temples, therme, &c., and at hand, one of the finest falls in Europe; distance to the cascade, or Cadute delle Marmore, 1¼ h., 1 horse carriage, 3 to 4 fr. Escort of beggars, charged 1 or 2 sous for a number of gateways. Highest fall is the middle one, of 150 to 180 metres, (492 to 592 ft). Total height of cascade, 250 to 280, or according to others, 200 metres, (658 ft). One of the finest views is obtained by passing through orange and citron groves of Villa Graziani to the rocks above the Velino. Passing Narni and Civita Castellana, full of Roman remains, you reach Borghetto, saluting Mount Soracte, sung by Horace, and catching sight with rapture of the Dome of St. Peters', you arrive with strange emotion at the Eternal City (Roma).

Rome, 371 kil. (232 ml). from Florence; 261 kil.(174 ml). from Naples. Hotels, the best are at Piazza di Spagna, and on the Corso.

Rome, the urbe dell' orbe, is built on 7 hills, the Palatine, Capitol, Quirinal, Celio, Aventine, Esquiline, Viminal, the Janiculum, now Montorio, Citorio, Testanio, Vaticano, and Pincio, were not included in the ancient city. Rome stands on both banks of the Tiber, united by 5 bridges; Sant Angelo, Sisto, Quattro Capi, S. Bartolommeo, and Rotti, and has 12 gates. The principal streets are the Corso, Babbuino, and Ripetta. Squares, Del Campidoglio, di S. Giovanni Laterano, di S. Pietro in Vaticano, Monte Cavallo, Spagna, Foro Romano, Foro Trajano, S. Maria Maggiore, Navona, Panteon. The most noticeable fountains are the Trevi, Paolina, Acetosa, and Termini.

Any attempt to give a detail of the wonders of this overpowering place would be impossible in our limits; all we can attempt is to give first a summary of the most remarkable monuments; secondly, to single out some of their salient features, dwelling on what cannot be passed over, even by the most flying visitor. Beginning chronologically with the earliest monuments we enumerate its antiquities. 1st. The Foro Romano, the Arch of Septimus Severus (3rd century), the Temples of Vespasian, Saturn, and Concord. the Curia Hostilia, the Basilica Giulia, the temple of Vesta, the Via Sacra, the temple of Antoninus and Faustina, the temple of Romulus and Remus, the Basilica of Constantine, the temple of Venus and Rome, the Arch of Titus, that of Constantine, the Meta Sudans, fountain, of the time of Seneca; the Colosseum, with a circumference of 1,641 feet (elevation 157), capable of containing 100,000 persons. House of Rhenzi, Temple of Fortuna Virilis, Temple of Minerva Medica, of Mars Ultos, of Venus, of Vesta, the Pantheon, the Mole of Adrian, &c. Among Mausoleums must be noticed those of Augustus and of Adrian, the latter now called the Castel Sant Angelo. The pyramid of Caius Cestius, the tomb of the Scipios, that of Cecilia Metella. The most remarkable Thermæ or baths, are those of Caracalla, Diocletian, and Titus. The largest theatres are those of Marcellus, capable of holding 50,000 spectators; and that of Pompey, which could contain 60,000.

The Basilica, or churches of Rome, are 364 in number, and are altogether superior to any religious edifices in the world. The principal of these Basilicas are St. Peter's, Santa Maria Maggiore, San Paolo (fuori della mura), San Giovanni Laterano, Santa Croce in Gerusalemme, San Lorenzo, Sant Agnese.

The principal churches are Sant Andrea, Sant Agostino, Ara Coeli, S. Clemente, SS. Cosmo e Damiano, Il Gesu, S. Trinita dei Monti, San Luigi di Francesi, Santa Maria degli Angeli, &c. The Art collections of Rome are unrivalled, and their name is legion; we enumerate the Vatican, a world of aesthetics in itself, the Capitol, the Palazzi, Barberini, Braschi, Chigi, Colonna, Doria, Pamphily, the Quirinal, Palazzo Torlonia, Biblioteca Angelica, del Collegio Romano, the Osservatorio Astronomico, &c. There are academies of all branches of art and science.

In the vicinity, the Catacombs, Aqueducts, and Via Appia, deserve the most attention.

It may be considered as an axiom that the most superficial acquaintance with only the principal monuments of Rome, requires, at least, 8 days, hard driving, and 15 days, steady work. Latitude of Rome 41° 5′ 54″ N., and its population is considered to have 4,661 priests; 4,847 nuns; 4,881 soldiers; and foreigners, on the average in the season, 30 to 35,000.

To dwell on its history would be out of place here; yet we may say that every stone almost has a world memory, and at every turn you tread on hero's dust. The criticisms of Niebuhr will never destroy those beautiful early legends of Numa, of Egeria, of the Horatii, of Coriolanus, and Camillus. Pace the Forum, and you still seem to catch the echoes of Cicero's grand eloquence chiding the avarice of Verres! Go to the Scipios tomb, and the shades of the great departed seem to rise before you in the majesty of Rome's early republican virtues! Ascend the Palatine, and the revelry and frantic luxury of Nero and Caligula flash before you! Pass to the Colosseum, and you seem to hear the roar of many voices shouting, "The Christians to the lions!" "Christians ad leones!' as the early martyrs were hurried to this glorious arena of their faith and courage. All is great and venerable at Rome; and though its streets are happily lighted by gas (through Anglo-Saxon enterprise), and you are whisked across the Campagna, over the Catacombs, and among the Aqueducts, by the shrieking steam-dragon, the power of Rome in great part eclipses here all other thoughts or feelings.

n our brief survey of Rome we shall class the Monuments first, into two orders, of—Profane or Pagan, and Christian; 2nd, chronologically into periods.

PAGAN MONUMENTS. Times of the Kings.—The Cloaca Maxima, supposed to have been established under Tarquinius Priscus, is entitled to inspection, as evidence of the grand common sense works of this practical people. The Mammertine prison, where Cicero had the accomplices of Catiline strangled.

2. Republican Period (B.C. 509—530).—There are few remains of this period; consisting in traces of Pompey's theatre, the tomb of the Scipios, and perhaps the temple of Fortuna Virilis.

3. Period of the Empire (B.C. 30—A.D. 417.)—It is a saying, that Augustus found Rome of stone, and left it of marble. In fact, most of the monuments of ancient Rome still extant are of his reign, or subsequent to it, including

THE FORUM.—The spot itself is no doubt the same where the earlier, freer, and stormier assemblies of republican times used to meet, and where the great events of the history of the Gracchi, and other patriots, occurred. The present ground is twenty-six feet higher than the old level. The Arch of Septimius Severus was cleared by Pius VII. (1803); it is of the composite order. Three upright columns of the Corinthian order mark the Temple of Vespasian, close by are the eight columns of the Temple of Saturn. Three other handsome columns are remains of the Temple of Castor and Pollux. Other monuments of the Forum are three gigantic archways of the Basilica of Constantine, which is said to have poured molten gold into the Forum when burned at the great fire of Nero; the Arch of Titus, with bas-reliefs of his triumphs in Palestine; that of Constantine, with other bas-reliefs in decayed taste; ruins of Temple of Venus and Rome, &c.

THE COLOSSEUM is the impersonation of Rome—sublime, majestic, severe; cruel, terrible, in its beauty. Begun under Vespasian on his return from the Jewish war, it could hold 100,000 spectators. Its inauguration was signalized by the slaughter of 10,000 captives and 5000 animals. It was the grand arena of Christian martyrdom. Built of travertine, it presents four orders of architecture, has a circumference of 1683 Paris feet, and an elevation of 188 feet. Diameter, 591 feet at widest part.

THE PANTHEON, built by Agrippa to all the gods, is the most perfect work left us of ancient Rome. The portico has sixteen blocks of solid monolith granite. The capitals are in white marble, and perfect in beauty. Diameter in the interior, 43 metres. It has been converted into a church; the two belfries have been added by Bernini. This monument has the tombs of Raphael, Annibale Carracci and others.

THERMÆ.—The largest, and best preserved, are the Baths of Diocletian, which have been transformed into the church of Santa Maria degli Angeli, the work of Michael Angelo; 2nd, the Baths of Caracalla, which used to have 1600 marble seats. Many of the finest statues remaining from antiquity were found in Caracallas Thermæ, including the Toro Farnese, the Ercole Farnese, and the Callipyge Venus. Of aqueducts, many remain in and out of Rome, threading the Campania, and showing the practical genius of this people roi. The best preserved are the Antoniniano and Neroniano. Other vestiges of the grandeur of Rome from Vitruvius downwards, and even before are the Arch of Janues Quadrifons, and the Palace of the Cæsars on Mount Palatine. The Palatine was the site of the oldest foundations at Rome, and the abode of the Gracchi, Cicero, Marc Antiony and other noted Romans. The Palace of the Cæsars was celebrated for its splendour, and was even the residence of German Emperors in the middle ages. The Emperor Napoleon III caused extensive excavations to be carried on there, which brought to light the torso of a satyr attributed to Praxiteles, and other works of high art to be seen in the little museum of Chevalier Rosa. The Mausoleum of Adrian, now the Castel Sant Angelo, is a grand piles till used as a Citadel, close to the Tiber Bridge (St. Angelo), and interesting, historically, as the place where Pope Clement VII. was imprisoned at the time of the siege of Rome, by the troops of the Emperor Charles V., commanded by the Constable de Bourbon (A.D. 1527).

The site of the Circus Maximus is still pointed out, showing its vast area, which, at the time of Constantine, could hold 400,000 spectators. The Arches of the Theatre of Marcellus, at the Palazzo Orsini, are admired as masterpieces. The finest monumental columns are those of Trajan, and of Marcus Aurelius, the capitals of both being composed of vast blocks of marble which, in the shape of the former, are good bas-reliefs of Trajan's victories over the Daciana. The obelisks of Rome deserve attention, especially those on the Piazza del Popolo, of the Piazza Navona, of the Place of St. Peter's, and others. They are mostly of Egyptian origin.

Before we notice the catacombs we must complete our survey of Rome within the walls, by a glance at its modern monuments.

The history of Mediæval and Modern Rome is almost that of Christianity down till the Reformation, and forms the chief page in every treatise in art. If Paris has been called the guingette, and London the market of the world, Rome is its art treasury and atelier.

Modern Monuments:—Foremost stands St. Peter's, unrivalled among churches, the great Basilica of Christendom. Begun under Julius II. (1506), on the site of an older church and of previous attempts; it was planned by Bramante, carried on by Raphael and Michael Angelo, and completed 1626, under Urban VIII. Area 199,926 Paris feet (St. Paul's in London, 102,620). St. Peter's has 290 windows, 748 columns, 47 altars and 380 statues.

Curiosities:—The Confessional of St. Peter, where the body of this apostle and of St. Paul are said to be preserved. Fine statue of Pius VI. by Canova; 142 lamps always burning at this place. The Baldachino of gilt bronze, by Bernini, above the high altar, is a wonderful work supported by 4 composite columns, 27 metres high. Tribune and pulpit of St. Peter; the latter in gilt bronze is said to be of apostolic origin. Many monuments of Popes near it. There is a grand bas-relief of Attila on the altar of St. Leo the Great. In the Clementine chapel is a tomb of Pius VII. by Thorwaldsen; in that of the Presentation is the monument of James III. (Stuart) and his sons, by Canova. The chapel of the Pieta has a fine marble group by Michael Angelo when 24 years' old. In the chapels of Saint Sebastian and of the Holy Sacrament are many tombs of other popes. In the north transept is a splendid tomb of Clement XIII., by Canova.

The mosaic paintings in St. Peter's are well worth a careful inspection. The treasury in the Sacristy contains a number of valuables, including the dalmaticum worn by Charlemagne at his coronation, and miniatures of Giotto. In the subterranean church (Sagre Grotto, open 9 till 11; fee, 2 pauls) are a number of tombs of Popes, including the English pope, Nicholas Breakspeare, or Adrian IV., died 1159. Best time to ascend the cupola, Thursday mornings, from 8 to 10. View over the Campania to Soracte the hills of Tivoli and Tusculum, Rome, and the sea. Oldest and first metropolitan church at Rome, St. John Lateran's. Original church was founded by Constantine. The entrance is by 5 gateways, the interior has 5 naves. On a picture on a column to the right is a painting attributed to Giotto; the roof was planned by Michael Angelo, and in the treasury are many rare relics. At hand is the Museo Gregoriana, founded by Pope Gregory XVI., 1848, divided into Pagan and Christian churches, with many statues and remains recently found.

The Christian Museum has been arranged by Cavaliere Rossi, and contains very old Christian sarcophagi, and other interesting objects from the catacombs, illustrating early Christian art, and shewing bas reliefs of scripture subjects and early Christian inscriptions.

The Picture Gallery contains early Christian paintings from different catacombs, and illustrations of early art in Italy.

The Scala Santa is supposed to be formed of the staircase from the Palace of Pontius Pilate at Jerusalem.

The Basilica of Santa Maria Maggiore was founded A.D. 352. The spire is the highest in the town, and dates from 1376. The interior consists of 3 naves, has 44 ancient columns of the Ionic order; has a grand sepulchral monument intended for Pius IX. the reigning pontiff, and some splendid chapels, especially those of Sixtus and Borghese.

Santa Croce in Gerusalemme was founded by Helena, mother of Constantine, but was rebuilt 1743.

San Lorenzo, fuori le mura, contains columns, arcades, and other remains of antiquity.

St. Paul's, outside the walls, founded by Constantine, was burnt 1833, and a new Basilica erected on its site was inaugurated 1847. The interior has 80 Corinthian columns of granite, and many relics of the earlier Basilica, including mosaics of the fifth century, 6 yellow alabaster columns presented to Gregory XVI. by the Viceroy of Egypt, medallion portraits of all the Popes, old frescoes restored, and modern stained glass windows. The general architecture of the church is not satisfactory, but the interior has an imposing effect.

Other old Basilicas are, St. Sebastian's and St. Agnes.

The number of secondary churches in Rome is legion. We can only notice a few—1. The Gesu, a very rich church, built 1568 to 1575, has been adorned in all subsequent times by the splendour of Popes and princes, contains tomb of Cardinal Bellarmin, altar of St. Ignatius Loyola, with lapis lazuli pillars, under the altar a gilt bronze coffin containing bones of St. Ignatius, founder of the Jesuit order. The church of the Gesu presents a more splendid appearance during the "Quarant' Ore," the two last days of the carnival. First rate preachers can be heard here during Advent and Lent Sundays at 11 a.m.

San Pietro in Vincoli contains the noted statue of Moses by Michael Angelo.

Trinita dei Monti has a celebrated Descent from the Cross by Daniel di Volterra.

Santa Maria Sopra Minerva possesses a statue of Christ by Michael Angelo, and the tomb of Fra Angelico, the heavenly painter.

Sant Agustino has a façade said to have been built with stones from the Coliseum (1483). The interior has 3 naves, the church being built in the shape of a Latin cross. The Madonna and Child by Jacopo Tutti, near the entrance, is surrounded with exvotos, especially daggers, presented by persons who have escaped assassination. The image of the Madonna on the High Altar is attributed to St. Luke.

The interior of S. Andrea della Valle is handsome, but the chief interest centres in the paintings of the Evangelists and others, on the apse and ceiling, by Dominichino, representing St. John the Baptist, St. Andrew, and 6 allegorical figures. There are also fine frescoes of Calabrese.

St. Gregorio contains valuable paintings of Dominichino and Guido. The church of Ara Coeli, on the site of the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, has good frescoes of Pinturicchio. The church of the Cappuccini contains paintings of Guido and Dominichino. Sant Onisio, in the Janiculum, is a convent where they show the cell in which Tasso died. San Lorenzo in Lucina, contains the tomb of Poussin, and San Luigi de Francesi that of Claude. San Silvestro and S. Carlo di Catinari have many paintings of Dominichino. But we must pass to Galleries of Art; and 1st—

The Vatican, the largest palace in the world, with portions contributed by Bramante, Raphael, Bernini, Fontana, &c. It consists of 3 stories, and has 20 courts, 8 great staircases, and 200 escaliers de service. It has only been the residence of the Popes since their return from Avignon. The latest additions are the Museo Pio Clementino, by Clement XIV. and Pius VI., the Braccio Nuovo, by Pius VII., and the Etruscan and Egyptian Museum, added by Gregory XVI.

The chief points of the Vatican are: 1.—The Loggie of Raphael. These world-renowned galleries had the great Art Genius for architect, sculptor, and painter. The gallery of the second storey is that particularly associated with Raphael, who painted its walls with scenes from the Old and New Testament (1516–18.)

The stands of Raphael are 4 in number, containing various specimens of high Art of his school, including Perugino; Raphael's beautiful painting of the School of Athens, Heliodorus driven from the temple; St. Leo stopping Attila; the Miracle of Bolsenna; the Deliverance of Leo X. when prisoner at Ravenna, showing a wonderful contrast of lights, &c.

The Vatican Picture Gallery has many masterpieces, especially The Transfiguration and the Madonna di Foligno by Raphael; others sketched by him and finished by his pupils; The St. Jerome (chef d'œuvre of Dominichino), Pieces of Guido Guercino, Perugino, Paolo Veronese, Murillo, &c.

The tapestries of Raphael are along a gallery above the garden.

The Vatican Museum is divided into several departments. The most interesting are Museo Chiramonti, and the Museo Pio Clementino. The first has 700 marble sculptures, including a number of characters from Greek mythology. The second has the Apollo of Belvidere and the Laocoon, two of the finest statues in the world.

The Egyptian Museum and the Gregorian Etruscan Museum deserve inspection, especially the latter (in 12 rooms), and among them Salle X., with all sorts of curiosities, illustrating early Italian art, and Etruscan civilization. The chains, rings in gold prove that this people worked the metals with great skill.

The Library is noted for valuable archives and MSS., (24,000 of the latter, 17,400 Latin, 3450 Greek, 3000 Oriental.) Printed books, 50,000. The noted works are the New Testament, 5th cent.; Virgil, 4th cent.; Terence, 4th cent.; a palimpsest of the Republic of Cicero; valuable orthographs, &c.

The Museum of Christian antiquities contains many remains from the Catacombs, the Papyrus chamber, specimens from the 4th to 8th century.

The Studio Mosaico should also be visited, and the Sixtini Chapel, noted for the grand chant of the Miserere on Good Friday, and for the Sybils and Last Judgment (a fresco), by Michael Angelo.

THE QUIRINAL PALACE, built 1574, is remarkable for good painting.

THE CAPITOL has a Museum begun by Clement XII., in front of which is an equestrian bronze statue of Marcus Aurelius, the only one that has reached us from antiquity. That part of the Capitol called the Palace of the Conservation has the Pinacotheca and Museum, rich in the Dying Gladiator, immortalised by Byron.

Another interesting Academy is that of Saint Luca (especially for paintings—open 9 to 5), has fine good pictures of Titian, Raphael, Guido, Rubens, and Vandyck. Some of the palaces of Rome deserve a close inspection, especially the Palazzo Farnese, by San Gallo, 1546, containing the grand Gallery, forming the capital work of Annibale Carracci. The Farnesine palace has celebrated frescoes of Raphael and his disciples, particularly Psyche and Galatea. Palazzo Borghese has a rich picture gallery. Palazzo Rospigliosi possesses Guido's celebrated Aurora. Palazzo Doria Panfili has also a picture gallery.

Among the Colleges and learned bodies we must distinguish the Sapienza or Roman University, the Collegio Romano, containing a celebrated observatory, conducted by Father Secchi, and the Kircher Museum, with Pagan and Christian Antiquities, and the Propaganda. The principal walks at Rome are the Pincio and Borghese Gardens.

Rome is surrounded by interesting villas; those close at hand are villa Pamphily Doria, with beautiful ancient pine trees; villa Madama; villa Ludovisi, with an Aurora of Guercino, &c., and villa Borghese, with the park 4 miles round. Entrance, every day, except Monday. Fine Antiques. The Catacombs: the interest attaching to these early relics of the Age of Martyr has greatly increased of late, owing to the learned and able researches of Cavaliere Rossi. The latest view is that these subterranean passages were excavated expressly for the tufta stone in building ancient Rome, and afterwards used by the early Christians, as shelter and sepulture. They are of different ages, extending from the 2nd to the 5th cent., and are 26 in number, one of the oldest, being that of St. Priscilla, 2 miles from Porta Salara, including a Madonna and child, probably of the 2nd cent. The Catacombs of St. Agnes outside the Porta Pia, contain several valuable mural paintings, and in a chapel, an image of the Madonna, supposed to be of the second half of the 3rd cent.

The Catacombs of St. Sebastian were those first discovered, and are most easily visited. The Catacombs of Saint Nereus and Achilles, or of Domitilla, on the Ardeatine Via, are perhaps the oldest; but those of the Calixtus, Via Appia, are the richest, have tombs of several Popes (including Saint Sixtus II., died, A.D. 252), inscriptions, paintings in byzantine style, &c. Nothing can be more venerable or solemn and touching, than the sight of these early Christian sepulchres and bones, the monuments of the greatness of soul on which our faith is based

Before leaving Rome, it is right to add a list of the days and hours for visiting the chief lions:—

The Vatican, 8 to 11 and 2 to 4 p.m., except Sundays, and great fêtes; Capitol, 9 to 4 p.m.; Academy of San Luca, 9 to 5 p.m.; Borghese palace, Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, 9 to 2 p.m.; Doria Gallery, Thursday and Friday, 10 to 2 p.m., The Quirinal Palace, 9 to 2 p.m.; Lateran Collections, 9 to 4 p.m.; Excavations on the Palatine, Thursday and Sunday.

Rome to Naples, Pompeii, Sorrento, &c.

Rail, distance 174 ml.; time 8 h. 10 m.; fare, 1st class, 31 fr. 65 c.; 2nd class 18 fr. 95 c.

Pass VELLETRI (28 ml.) Hotels: Parigi, Posta, 16,000 inh., where Augustus was born, and a celebrated Pallas has been found. CAPUA (30 ml. from Naples). Hotels: Festa, Belvedere, 16,000 inh., with many antiquities and a cathedral, and at hand (3½ ml.) Santa Maria di Capua, on the site of the ancient city so noted in the history of Hannibal, and presenting still many high interesting antiquities, including the Amphitheatre that held 100,000 persons. Caserta, 22 ml. from Naples. Hotels: Stella d'Italia, Villa Reale, with a vast palace (1752). The chapel has a profusion of marble and lapis lazzuli; the gardens are pretty and well adorned. We now reach Naples, the City of the Sirens, the Parthenope of classic pens, is verily "un Pezzo del Cielo caduto in Terra." Nature dances here in a perpetual holiday, the air, the sea, and all appear radiant in the brightest beams of beauty. Cabs, 2 horse, 1 fr., at night 1fr. 50 c.; the hour, 2 fr.; each succeeding hour, 1 fr. 50 c.; omnibuses through most thoroughfares, 20c.; boats, 1 hour, 1 fr. or 1fr. 50c. BANKERS—Rothschild, Strada S. Maria, in Portico 14; Iggulden & Son, Villa Reale.

CONSULS.—England, E. Walther Bonham, Chiatamone 23; France, Sonlange S. Bodin, Chiatamone 28.

Post and Telegraph, Palazzo Gravina Strada Montoliveto.

It may be interesting to add, that the Strada di Toledo was built by the Viceroy Don Pedro (under Spanish rule) 1532-33, and the Strada Chiaja in 1695 by the Duke de Medina Celi. The Strada di Toledo is 1¼ mi. long, and the town a length of 3 and, including the suburbs, a circumference of 16 mi. The favourite walk is the Villa Reale by the Chiaja. Principal squares: Largo del Castello, Largo del Palazzo, by the King's Palace, adorned with statues of Charles III. and Ferdinand I. The Largo del Mercato is the spot where Masaniello's conspiracy broke out. Naples has 258 churches, and is divided into 12 quarters, i.e., S. Ferdinando, Chiaja, Calvario, Exevocula, Stella, S. Carlo, Arena, Vicaria, S. Lorenzo S. Giuseppe, Porto, Pendino, and Mercato.

CHURCHES.—The Cathedral; Sant Angelo Maggiore, with fine sculpture; Santa Restituta, an old Basilica of the Greek rite, falsely attributed to Constantine, and possessing the chapel of Saint Januarius, richly adorned with paintings of Spagnoletto and Dominichino. The liquefaction of the Saint's blood takes place in this chapel every year, first Saturday in May, September 19th, and December 16th; Santa Chiara; San Domenico (Gothic); Santa Maria della Pieta, or the Cappella di San Severo; San Severino e Sosio; L' Incoronata.

 For detailed description of the churches of Naples, see Bradshaw's Handbook to Italy.

The great sight at Naples is the Museo Borbonico, or the Studii, called now Museo Nazionale (open daily, except Monday, 8 to 3.) This Museum contains the following collections.—Paintings and mosaics (antiques, 1st Salle), mostly upon Pompeii and Herculaneum, 1,600 in number. Specialities: The 18 Dancing Girls of Pompeii (discovered 1749); 4 monochrome paintings on marble, representing Theseus and the Centaur, &c.; Briseis, taken from Achilles; the 12 funambuli paintings, representing all the habits and usages of the ancients (from the fullonica, &c.) at Pompeii. Ashes and remains of victims of the eruption at Pompeii. Mosaics: Choragium, &c. Marble statues and bas reliefs, 1500, in 3 large galleries. Many statues from Herculaneum, Gladiators, an Amazon, Ganymedes, a colossal Antinous, Bacchus, Trajan in cuirass, Aggrippina seated, a colossal seated Jupiter, an Egyptian Diana, in oriental alabaster, and an Apollo Musegetes, in green basalt.

In the Salle of the Muses is a beautiful Greek vase, with bas relief, by Salpion of Athens (found at Formiæ, near Gaeta.)

In the Adonis gallery is the celebrated Callipyge Venus (from Nero's golden palace.)

In the Flora Salle is the colossal chef d' œuvre, called Flora or Venus draped, and a great mosaic of the battle of Issus; also Eschines, a masterpiece of Greek art.

The Toro Farnese, in the Salle Jupiter, is another masterpiece of Greek art.

EGYPTIAN ANTIQUITIES.—Many collections under this name. Etruscan and Oscan bronzes of great interest. Epigraphic collection: 1600 inscriptions, Roman, Greek, Punic, Christian, &c. Here also is the great group of the Farnese Bull, by Apollonius; and the Farnese Hercules, by Glycon, of Athens. The Gallery of Bronzes is grouped in two divisions—Principal treasures: the Sleeping and the Dancing Fauns; Mercury in repose, an exquisite gem; Ptolemy Soter, &c.

The Glass collection, with ancient enamel, &c. is of high interest (4000 pieces). Terra Cotta, 5000 articles. Bronzes of all sizes and kinds (14,000), throwing light on ancient customs; arranged in 7 Salles. Salle II has lamps; Salle IV agricultural instruments; articles for the toilette; theatre tickets. Salle V, surgical and musical instruments; brass tables of Hercules (1732), 3rd cent. B.C. Italio-Greek vases, the first collection in the world of the kind.

3300 articles. Papyri: 3000 long rolls; method of deciphering them found out by P. Antonio Piaggi. The cabinet of gems, has 2000 articles (silver and gold), with cameos, utensils, &c. On the pavement, is the Pompeii inscription, "Cave canem." The Taxa Farnese, an oriental sardonix, is widely known; much silver and gold plate, ear-rings, colours, utensils, corn, fruit, wine, oil, and linen from Pompeii. The Secret Museum cannot be seen without a special permission. The Numismatic Museum has 50,000 medals, many of them from Magna Grecia, Sicily, &c. The Picture Gallery has 901 paintings—its greatest ornaments are: Titian's portrait of Pope Paul III., and Philip II. of Spain; Domenichino's Guardian Angel; Raphael's Madonna col' divino Amore; Annibale Carracci's Dead Christ, and Hercules; Ribora's St Jerome; Claude Lorraine's Paysage with the Nymph Egeria; Albert Dürer, The Nativity; Agostino Carracci, Rinaldo in the Garden of Armida &c.

The Biblioteca Nazionale, is open from 8 to 2 p.m; 200,000 vols., and 8000 MSS.

Naples has a University (1224), with 52 professors, and a noted collection of Mineralogy. The Palazzo Reale, built 1600, has some good paintings, by Raphael, Holbein and Rembrandt. The Royal Palace contains a library and a collection of natural philosophy. At hand is the celebrated Theatre of San Carlo, the largest in Europe, built 1737 (rebuilt 1816). The Military harbour has a mole and pharos (142 alipa, 1 f. to see it), with a very fine view of the town, Vesuvius, the bay, and the splendid neighbourhood.

Naples has many private palaces, including the Fondi and Miranda, with good collections of paintings, and the Saint angelo (13th cent), with splendid works of art; Italo-Greek vases and paintings, of best masters. The Albergo di Poveri is one of the most princely hospitals in Europe. Near that of San Gennaro de' Poveri, are the vast catacombs extending many miles; but presenting a painful spectacle in those parts still used for burial, called Campo Santo. The Palace of Capo di Monte has a good picture gallery, and a fine garden; near it is the Observatory. The two great castles at Naples are the Castel dell' Ovo, on an island, noticed by Pliny (Hist. Nat. III. 6), called Megaris: present structure, built 1154, by William I. The Castel Saint Elmo above the town (built 1343), commands a superb view, and is used as a prison. At the end of the Chiaja near the grotto of Posilippo, leading to Baiæ, is the supposed Tomb of Virgil (15 square feet, with 3 windows), having a glorious view, and an inscription, partly made up of the epitaph ascribed to himself, viz.:—

"Mantua me genuit; Calabri rapuere; tenet nunc
Parthenope: cecini pascua, rura, duces.'

"I was born at Mantua, snatched away in Calabria (at Brundusium), and Naples holds my dust. I sang of flocks, fields, and heroes."

EXCURSIONS.—The neighbourhood of Naples is the perfection of enchantment. For classical associations, Baiæ and Pompeii; for volcanic phenomena, Vesuvius and Avernus, with the Monte Nuovo; for Elysian scenery, Sorrento; for the treasures of the deep, Capri.

"Facilis descensus Averni" is known to every schoolboy; and also,

"Talibus ex adyto dictis Cumæ Sibylla Horrendas canit ambages, antroque remugit."

The scholar will not forget Horace's line in praise of the hot springs—

"Seu liquidæ placuere Baiæ."—Lib. iii. 4.

Nor can the Christian traveller ever forget that it was at Puteoli that St Paul landed in bonds on his way to his martyrdom. Ovid's description takes in all the remarkable points—Capri, Sorrento, Herculaneum, Castellamare (Stabiæ), Naples (Parthenope), and Cumæ.

"Inde legit Capreas, promontoriumque Minervæ
Et Surrentino generosos palmite colles,
Herculeamque urbem, Stabiasque, et in otia natam
Parthenopen, et ab hac Cumæas templa Sibyllæ."—Met. xv.

The round of interesting objects on this excursion costs 5 fr. for a fiacre with 1 horse.

To reach Pozzuoli (Puteoli) you pass the Grotto of Posilippo, a tunnel of half a mile, cut through the tufi rock in ancient times, and noticed by Seneca in the reign of Nero. Pozzuoli is half an hour's drive (two hours on foot). Inns: Bella Italia, Del Ponte di Caligola. Objects to see: the Temple of Serapis, the Amphitheatre, the Solfatara, and the Lake of Agnano. The Cathedral of St. Proculus is built on the foundations of the Temple of Augustus, erected by L. Calpurnius. The Amphitheatre is noted in profane and sacred history under Nero and Diocletian. St. Januarius was decapitated at the Capuchin convent (commanding a splendid view of the gulf) in 305. The Solfatara is 15 minutes from the Amphitheatre, and consists in the crater of a half extinct volcano, from which issue many jets of smoke, while the neighbouring rivulets are charged with alum. Half an hour thence is the Lake of Agnano, having on its banks the celebrated Grotto del Cane. The cause of the fit that overtakes the unfortunate dogs who are thrust into the cave is well known to be a great quantity of carbonic acid gas rising to a certain height.

Passing the ruins of the villa of Cicero you reach in half an hour from Puteoli, Monte Nuovo, raised by volcanic action in 1538. Boat from Pozzuoli to Baiæ, 1 fr. (3 to 4 persons); time, 30 to 40 min.; 1 horse carriage from Pozzuoli to Cumæ and Baiæ, 5 to 6 fr. The road continues past Lake Lucrino, renowned in ancient times for oysters, and very near Lake Avernus, the supposed descent into Hades, having on its south side a tunnel called Sibyl's Grotto, and containing evidences of ancient workmanship. It is necessary to bargain about entrance fee; 1 fr. to enter, and 1 fr. for torches. Road continues past the Baths of Nero, anciently known by the name of Thermæ Neronianæ, with natural hot springs that boil eggs (1 fr.)

At Baiæ, the principal objects are what are popularly called the Temples of Minerva, Diana, and Venus, though evidently other structures for secular purposes. Other objects at hand are the Piscina Mirabilis, a large reservoir, and Cape Misenum, with a glorious view. The district beyond, in the direction of Cumæ, containing the Mare Morto and Lake Fusaro, was given the name of Elysian Fields, by antiquaries, who wanted to assign a place for all Virgil's descriptions.

Cumæ, the seat of the great Oracle, consulted by Æneas before he descended to the shades at Avernus to see his father's spirit, has few remains to show, chiefly an amphitheatre and many tombs, besides a Grotto, thought to correspond with considerable exactness to the description of the Sibyl's abode in Virgil.—Eneid, vi. 41.

Procida and Ischia.—These charming islands are situated on the same side of Naples as Baiæ. To appreciate them properly takes 2 days. In June a daily steamer to the Baths of Casamicciola in the Island of Ischia; 1st class, 5fr.; 2nd class, 3fr. 50c.

There are good hotels at Procida, Ischia, and Casamicciola. At Procida on fête days, the women put on a Greek dress, (a red tunic fringed with gold).

Ischia,—Its principal point Mount Epomens, was noted for eruptions before Vesuvius, (B.C. 474.) The air of this island is delightfully fresh in the heats of summer. Cassamí-ciola, with boiling mineral springs is the principal spot that is visited. Hotels:—Bellevue, Gran Sentinella, Gran Bretagna; Pension Pisani, &c. Delightful walks all around. At Lacco with the convent of Santa Restituta, patroness of the Island, the inhabitants on her fête put on Greek costumes and dance the Tarantella. The ascent of Mount Epomenee is the most interesting excursion, (5 to 6 hrs., 3 to 4 fr., with an ass.) Chestnut woods, and the hermitage of St Nicholas on the top, (bread and wine supplied), commanding a perfectly admirable view, embracing Naples, its bay, Gaeta, Salerno, Capri, Vesuvius, &c. Everything is novel and captivating on this island. The architecture of the houses, the luxuriant vegetation, the population with a handsome type, and costume, and a special language, the manners and customs, all have a charm and classical elegance about them.

Vesuvius.—This is one of the most interesting excursions near Naples. Train to Resina at 5 40 a m. Guide and horse, with boy to keep charge of latter at foot of cone, 12fr ; time 7 hours.

Vesuvius is interesting from its position, its historical associations, and its natural phenomena. It destroyed Herculaneum and Pompeii, A.D. 79, when Pliny the Elder perished in its flames; and it has been the theatre of 45 eruptions since 1660. On its flanks grows the celebrated Lachryma Christi; at its feet lies the loveliest scenery on earth. Precautions are required, and accidents have happened to those seeking to be too familiar with the pitchy horrors of the crater.

Herculaneum, under the present town of Resina, has not very many remains, and is eclipsed by Pompeii. They are at an average depth of 28 metres (100 ft.) under the ground, and were first discovered in 1719. The theatre was built by L. Annius Mammianus Rufus, and contained 8,000 spectators. In 1837, there were brought to view the house of Argus and several parts of the ancient city, including a triclinium with a painting of Mercury, Argus, and Io. Taking the rail to Pompeii and passing Torre del Greco and Torre dell' Annunziata, the traveller reaches Pompeii in 50 minutes; 1st class, 2 fr. 55 c.; 2nd class, 1 fr. 80 c. Five trains a day. A day devoted to this interesting city, gives a more perfect insight into the manners of the ancient civilized world than we could otherwise obtain.

After lying undiscovered for 17 centuries it was brought to light in 1748. In 63 (Nero's reign) it was partly, and in 79, finally ruined. Burnt wood, melted glass, and other evidences of the hailstorm of ashes, testify the terrible nature of the eruption. It appears that after the town was buried under a bed of stones and ashes, a number of torrents swept the light fragile objects clear of the houses before their fall, and thus preserved them. Many of the inhabitants had time to fly, and returning afterwards dug and recovered some of their valuables, and founded a new Pompeii near, which itself was buried in an eruption A.D. 472. New researches daily bring to light bronzes, statues, skeletons, and other curiosities. Principal street, Of the Tombs. In it the house of Diomed (17 bodies found in it). Tombs of Arcius, Scaurus, Tyche, Quietus, &c. Gate of Herculaneum, with 3 arcades (lava and brick). Houses near it, that of Sallust, one of the finest at Pompeii, of the Vestals, of the Surgeon, &c. The bakery and public oven are close by. The quarter of the Forum contains 3 triumphal arches in brick and lava, the temple of Venus (the largest at Pompeii), the basilica, the law courts, the civil forum, surrounded with porticoes, &c. In the street of the Thermæ is one of the handsomest houses, that of Pansa, the fullonica, rich in treasures, now at the Naples museum, the house of the Faun, in which the mosaic of the Battle of Issus was found, &c.

In the quarter of the Theatres is the temple of Neptune, the barracks, in which 63 skeletons, many gladiators' arms, and other objects were found, the great theatre, the temple of Isis, and the amphitheatre.

Castellamare is close to Pompeii, in a charming sheltered position on the bay. Hotels:—Reale, Europa, Gran Bretagna, Italia, Quisisana, Surrounded by high mountains covered with woods, offering shady walks. It has thermal waters. A fine carriage road leads hence to Sorrento, amidst scenery offering a Paradise of beauty.

The trip to Pompeii may be extended to Salerno, Pæstum, and Amalfi. Rail from Naples to Salerno, 80 kil. (54 ml.); 1st class, 8 fr. 80 c.; 2nd class, 6 fr. Time 3 h. 30 m. Train passes La Cava (Hotels Victoria and Londra), in a romantic country, near the convent of La Trinita.

Salerno, on the bay of that name (Hotels: Nuova, Vittoria, Inghilterra), has had one of the earliest and most noted law schools in Europe. Justinian's Pandects said to have been discovered there. Situation unhealthy.

At hand is Amalfi, in a delightful situation on the gulf: it may be reached by carriage road. Vietri, near La Cava, or from Salerno by boat. Hotels at Amalfi: Stranieri, Luna, Cappuccini, Palombo. 2000 Inh. Curiosities: the cathedral, the Capuchin convent, in a grotto, with a ravishing view. Many noted maccaroni factories. Flavio Gioja is said to have invented the mariner's compass at Amalfi (about 1300). Enchanting walk over the mountains to Sorrento Eboli, beyond Salerno, 80 kil. from Naples, can be reached by rail. Hotels: Locanda; Nobile.

Pæstum is 24 kil. (16 ml.) from Eboli, and can be reached by carriage. March and October are the proper seasons to visit the temples, and beware to stay a night in this malaria district.

Pæstum was a colony of Sybaris, in Magna Græcia, and its ruins (first noticed, 1745,) consist of 3 Doric temples, 2000 years old. The Posidonium, or temple of Neptune is one of the finest examples of Greek architecture, 60 metres by 25 (225 by 95 feet), having 6 columns on each face and 14 at the sides. The columns are 7½ feet in diameter, and 16½ feet in height, giving them a more massive look than those of the Parthenon, at Athens. The other temples are that of Ceres, and the structure incorrectly called the Basilica.

Sorrento is in a plain, covered with orange orchards gently sloping from the cliffs that border the bay, to the hills that form the watershed between the bay of Naples and that of Salerno. The whole country is full of delightful walks. Sorrento consists of three populous boroughs, Vico Piano and Sorrento proper, each with a Marina, where the fishing-boats land.

Hotels Tasso, Parigi, Risoli, Nardi, Cucumella, at Piano, &c. Sorrento is the birthplace of Tasso, and was known in Roman times. A temple of Neptune stands close to the waves, in an enchanting position, on the road to Massa.

From Sorrento a boat takes you easily to Capri (time, 2 hours; fare, 6 to 8 fr.), which should be visited for the beauty of its views, and for its marine azure grotto.

Hotels at Capri: Londra, Vittoria, Tiberio; 6,000 inhabitants; 3 ml. from Naples. Remains of the Villa di Tiberio (the seat of the Emperor's orgies) are pointed out; also the Salto, 230 m. (606·70 ft.) high, a precipice rising sheer out of the sea, into which the tyrant had his victims plunged. The Grotta Azzurra offers a magical spectacle. Length of cavern, 53 metres (174·37 ft.); width, 32 metres (105·28 ft.); height, 13 metres (42·77 ft.); depth of water, 8 fathom. A little boatman who takes you there, shows you the effect of the blue water by plunging into it for 2 or 3 fr. It is quite sufficient to put your own arm in.

Another green grotto was discovered by some hardy English swimmers, in 1848.

ROUTE 9a.—Trip to Palermo.

Distance, 311 kil. (207 ml.) By steamers of the Florio Company, starting Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday, 4 p.m., arriving at Palermo, Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday, at 9.30 a.m.

Principal hotels at Palermo: La Trinacria, France, Londra, Sicilia, Universo, Fortuna. Cabs: (1-horse) the course, 50 c.; to the station, 75 c.; 2 horses, the course, 80 c.; to the station, 1 fr. 80 c.; the hour (1-horse), 1 fr. 70 c.; following hours, 1 fr. 50 c.; 2 horses, 2 fr. 10 c. and 1fr. 90c.

Population 219,400. The immediate vicinity is a bower of orange and lemon trees, backed by a grand frame-work of mountains, known as the Concha d'Oro. The town is built in the form of a square, with a circuit of 14 miles, and 15 gates.

Palermo has fine wide streets, intersecting at the central knot, known as the Piazza Vigliena, or Quattro Cantoni, encompassed by fine buildings, and full of fountains and statues, including Charles V. and Philip II. of Spain.

The Kassaro (El Kazar), Via Toledo, or Corso Vittor Emmanuele, is a mile long. There is a splendid drive along the sea, called the Marina, extending to the Flora public garden. The most interesting monument is the cathedral of St. Rosalia (built 1170), presenting a mixture of the Mooresque and Norman styles. Its western front presents a rich example of the ogival Sicilian architecture. The interior contains monuments of Frederic II., of Roger II., &c.; paintings by Velasquez and Morrealese, the greatest Italian painters, and sculptures of Gagini. San Giuseppe consists of paintings of the same artists, and Badia Nuova has frescoes of Morrealese. Other churches are Santa Zita, San Domenico, &c. See "Bradshaw's Handbook to Italy."

The Palazzo Reale is a vast edifice, presenting a curious assemblage of various styles, interesting as a monument of the 12th century. The University, founded 1805, is rich in collections. The principal Theatre is that of Carolino, with 5 tiers of boxes. Other theatres are Santa Cecilia and San Fernando.

ENVIRONS.—The Concha d'Oro presents the most delightful and diversified scenery; one of the most noted points, Monte Pellegrino, 2 kil. (1¼ ml.) from Palermo, containing the Grotto of St. Rosalie, the patron saint of the town, whose body was discovered in it. Her fête occurs on the 11th to the 15th of July. La Bagheria is a delightful part of Concha d'Oro, with many palaces presenting specimens of Saracen art, especially those of Maredolle, Zisa, Cuba, &c. The Capuchin Convent is remarkable for a vast cemetery (date of foundation 1621), with mummy corpses preserved chiefly by the purity of the air and dryness of the place, and all dressed as alive.

MONREALE, 6 kil. (4 miles) 15,000 inh., contains a Cathedral with splendid mosaics, and in the Palatial Convent a frescoe of Morrealese, representing Daniel in the Lion's Den.

TOURS IN SWITZERLAND.

ROUTE 10.

A Fortnight's Tour through Switzerland for £12 Guineas.

1. Take the Tidal Train via Folkestone to Paris. If in time, leave Paris at 12.25 a.m., arriving in Strasburg at 5.3 the following afternoon. See the Cathedral, Church of St. Thomas, and Monument of Gutenburg; dine, and leave Strasburg at 7.3 for Bâle Sleep there.

HOTELS:—Trois Rois; Du Sauvage; Tete d'Or.

2. Basle to Olten, by Rail, a beautiful pass of the Jura, thence to Berne.

HOTELS:—Bernerhof; Falken; Maure: BELLE VUE.

See the view from the Cathedral Terrace—Aar rushing beneath; Snow Mountains in the distance.

Additional.—a.

Rail to Lausanne, steamer to Geneva. See Cathedral, Library, Meeting of the Rhone and Arve.

HOTELS:—De l'Ecu; Des Bergues; Couronne.

Steamer to Villeneuve. Walk to Vevey. Rail to Berne.

3. Berne to Thun and Scherzlingen, by rail; Steamer to Neuhaus; Omnibus to Interlaken. When on steamer, look out for Castles of Oberhofen and Spietz, and the Mountains, Stockhorn and Niesen, on the right, and for the Snow Mountains in front. Rest in Interlaken. Full of good Hotels and Pensions; 5 and 6 francs a day for board and lodging. Climb the Harder, or the Sheinige Platte; or, less arduous, the Abendberg. The Jungfrau looks down from its height of 13,000 feet, upon the beautiful valley. Sit under the shade of the largest and finest walnut-trees in the world. There is an English Church.

Additional.—b.

On Monday morning walk to Lauterbrunnen, 7 miles, by the banks of the Lutschine; go on to end of the Ober Valley, and see the magnificent fall of the Schmadribach, rushing down in an immense volume from the mountain side; or ascend to the village of Mürren, commanding one of the finest views in Switzerland. A splendid amphitheatre of high Alps, the Jungfrau, the Tehingelhorn, Schilthorn, &c. Return, and on the way, look out for the misty thread of the Staubbach falling 800 feet from the rock above. A good Inn—the Capricorn. Return to Interlaken.

4. Take Steamer to Briens at 6 a.m., stop at the Giessbach falls at 10 a.m. An easy climb—very beautiful. Breakfast al fresco opposite to the falls; take steamer again at 4.5 for Briens, diligence next day at 11 for the Brunig Pass, by the Lakes of Lungern and Sarnen to Alpnach—Steamer through some of the finest scenery in the world, to Lucerne.

HOTELS:—Les Balances D'Angleterre; Schweizerhof.

Additional.—c.

Walk to the top of Mont Pilate, if clear weather—or, take Steamer to Weggis, and from thence climb up to the top of the Rigi—sleep there, good Hotel. Return next morning to Weggis, take steamer to Fluelen, passing William Tell's Chapel, the field of Grütli, &c. &c.; or, instead of returning next morning to Weggis, vary the route by walking along the summit to the Rigi-Scheideck (excellent house), descend to lake at Gersau, and take steamer there for Fluelen This the more beautiful, but a little more time and fatigue. Return to Lucerne, beautiful walks in the environs.

5. Railway by the Lake of Zug to Zurich, about three hours' journey.

HOTELS:—Baur; Belle Vue.

Ascend the Huitliberg, about two hours' walk there and back.

6. Zurich to Schaffhausen, by Rail. See the wonderous Rhine falls. Back to Zurich in evening.

7. Zurich to Bale, by Rail.

8. Bale to Paris, by Malhouse, Vesoul, and Troyes. This varies the Route.

9. Paris to London.

All the journeys numbered above are included in the fares paid for the return tickets. The journeys marked with letters a., b., c., must be paid for in addition, if the tourists wish to take them.

PROBABLE COST OF THE ADDITIONAL JOURNEYS.

a. To Lausanne—Return Ticket, 10s.; Steamer on Lake to Geneva, 2s.; Geneva to Villeneuve, 3s.; walk to Vevey or Lausanne.

b. A boy guide up the Ober Valley. 1s.

c. Steamer to Weggis—and on to Fluelen and back to Lucerne, about 7s 6d.

COST OF HOTELS, &c.

Most of the second class hotels in Switzerland, and many of the first, will take travellers for one or two days—by the day 6fr.—not quite 5s. per day. On the Road the early table d'hôte is generally 3fr., but if no table d'hôte, order a "déjeûner à la fourchette" for 2fr. 50 c., including vin ordinaire. It will consist of soup, vegetables, a mutton chop, a slice of roast meat, and sweets In towns the "petit diner" will cost 3fr.; breakfast or tea generally 1fr. 50 c. Cutlet with fried potatoes, 1fr.; wine, à la carte.

[Twelve days at 6 francs, with extras and sundries, and cost of return tickets (nearly £7) bring up the total cost to the sum mentioned above.]

SPECIAL DIRECTIONS.

Buy Bradshaw's Pedestrian Route Book to Switzerland Take very little luggage—25 kilogrammes are allowed, but much less will do. The best kit for the tour will be two loose coats, one warm, the other light; one to go over the other, if needed; one pair of light tweed trousers on; one warm ditto in a black bag; two vests; one pair of strong shoes on; one pair light ditto in the bag; four shirts—if flannel, three will do; four pairs of socks; six collars; six pocket-handkerchiefs; brushes, razors, &c. A good knapsack will be better than a bag; either can be carried in the hand from Rail to Steamer, from Steamer to Hotel, &c.

The Return Ticket, for Switzerland, ought to be taken at the Station of the "Chemin de Fer de l'Est," in Paris; ask for the "Billet pour le Voyage Circulaire en Suisse, Seconde Classe," it is available for a month. Take a good stout umbrella, which will answer for a walking-stick. A carpet, or black leather bag, may safely be left in the cloak-room, called "Consigne," while the tourist is absent seeing sights. Pay 10 centimes, and ask for a ticket for the bag.

ROUTE 11.

A Route through Switzerland.

We may premise that the route given underneath, applies to travellers entering Switzerland from Freiburg-in-Breisgau (in Baden), at Schaffhausen, and leaving it at Bâle. For further information, see Bradshaw's Handbook to Switzerland.

1. FREIBURG-IN-BREISGAU TO SCHAFFHAUSEN, BY THE HÖLLENTHAL.—Distance about 50, or perhaps 52, English miles, by diligence, performing the journey direct in about twelve hours. The route is through the charming valley of the Höllenthal, or Infernal Valley, which presents the appearance, at its opening, of a fertile plain, enclosed by sylvan hills. Nearing the ascent, at about 42 miles from Schaffhausen, it assumes a character of romantic grandeur. Its woods, rich in foliage, cover the steep sides of the ravine, from which project sharpened fragments of rock, rugged and naked, having running at their base the Dreisam, whose banks are verdant with turf, and studded with mills.

STEIG and HIRSCHSPRUNG are the spots most remarkable for the exhibition of this rugged grandeur. On the journey we pass BURG, remarkable from Moreau's retreat, in 1796. Ninety-four years previous to this Marshal Villars was deterred from attempting this pass, saying that he was not dare-devil enough. The first village is STEIG, a post station, where the traveller may obtain good accommodation, on reasonable terms. Here a steep slope of the road leads the tourist up the Höllensteig; and on leaving it, he parts with the finest scenery. At this juncture an extra horse is required for the ascent of the Höllensteig, for which 1fl. 12kr. must be paid. Opening in the distance is Himmelreich. Passing Lenzkirch, and Bondorf, nineteen miles from which is the Benedictine Abbey of St. Blaize,) we arrive at the top of the ascent, whence may be had a magnificent view of the Lake of Constance. Close by is the Castle of Hohenlupten; and a little further on, after passing Stuhlingen, we cross a stream, and, journeying on a distance of 11½ miles, we enter SCHAFFHAUSEN.—For a description of the Falls, see page 504.

2. SCHAFFHAUSEN TO ZURICH, BY EGLISAU.—Distance, 28 miles; mode of conveyance, by rail; which crosses the Rhine just above the fall. After traversing a small portion of the Baden territory, we arrive at EGLISAU.—Situated on the Rhine, about 13 miles from Schaffhausen, and containing about 1700 inhabitants. The scenery of the passage of the Rhine at this place is very romantic. The water flows between hills covered with trees, and is crossed by an embowered wooden bridge. We next meet, at a distance of about four miles, BULACH, a town of 1,500 inhabitants, having some good inns. From here a magnificent view of the Alps, with their tops crowned by eternal snows, may be had. The descent to Zurich is very picturesque and romantic, passing about two miles to the right is the hill of Weid, whence a rich view of the town and its lake may be enjoyed. After this, nothing worth special notice presents itself until our arrival at ZURICH.

3. ZURICH TO LUCERNE, ACROSS THE ALBIS, via HAUSEN.—Distance, 33 English miles.—The journey is made by diligence, occupying about 7 hours in the transit (also by rail, see page 243). A very fair zigzag carriage-road leads to Zug, and crosses the High Albis. All along the route a very beautiful view of the Alpine chain, can be enjoyed. After skirting the Lake for a short distance, it crosses the Sihl, and wends to the inn of the Albis, where the tourist can be well accommodated. Above the inn, about one mile, is a height commanding an excellent view of the entire Zürichsee. Situated at the foot is the picturesque vale of Sihl, remarkable as having been the favourite sanctum of the pastoral poet Gessner. On the south is seen the Lake of Turi; not far from which is the Church of Kappel, where Zwingli died. Farther off is the Lake of Zug, behind which rise aloft in sublime grandeur Mounts Pilatus and Rigi, the former on the right, the latter on the left. At this point the horizon, reflecting the snowy chain of the Alps from Sentis to the Jungfrau, presents a remarkably brilliant appearance. Attaining the summit, 2,500 feet above the sea and 1,000 feet above the lake, we descend, touching on the right the small Lake of Turi. After traversing the new road along the western slope of the Albis, we arrive at HAUSEN. Near this place is Albisbrunn—a Water-cure establishment—where general travellers can board and lodge for 6 or 7fr. a day. From here the Bernese Alps can be seen to advantage.

HAUSEN.—A village of 6,000 inhabitants, the scene of a religious conflict, in which Zwingli fell on the battle-field, 1531. A monument is now erected on the spot, bearing a Latin and German inscription. We next arrive at

RISPERSCHWYL.—Lucerne to Knonau, 10 English miles; Knonau to St. Wolfgang, 6¾ miles. A good road to Zug, the Righi, St. Wolfgang, Giesliker-brucke, Brucke, Dierikon, and Ebikon; whence passing the monument of the Swiss guards, we enter

—From Lucerne the tourist may proceed per steamer to FLUELEN, distances about twenty-four English miles; the voyage is made in about three hours; see list of steamers, page 350. The fare varies from 1 franc to 4 francs, and the boat generally touches at Weggis. The lake, very interesting in its natural proportions, is also singularly so by its historical recollections. Its shores witnessed the memorable events that guaranteed freedom to Switzerland.

Leaving Lucerne—starting place near to the Hof Brücke—we soon hail Meggenhorn, and sail along through undulating hills, rich in verdure, and studded with picturesque villas and cottages—a scene beautiful in itself, but shadowed into a dark grandeur by Mount Pilatus. Further up, near the Bay of Kussnacht, to the right, is the Castle of Neu Habsburg. At the other side of the bay appears the stupendous mass of the Rigi, whose sides are studded with forests, at the base of which lie fields, gardens, and cottages. Across the promontory of Tanzenburg the village of Weggis is seen; there tourists anxious to ascend the Righi disembark. To facilitate the tourist in his ascent, we here notice the ASCENT TO THE RIGHI FROM WEGGIS.—The visit should be made in order; and for this purpose the traveller should set out early, as, if he do not, it will be impossible for him to reach the Staffel Haus or Kulm in time to witness the sun set—one of the most glorious scenes in nature. All the interesting objects can be visited in a day, and are particularised below for the convenience of the traveller. A mule-path leads up the ascent, commanding a constant view of the lake. It first passes the Heiliges Kreutz, after which we next come to the Cold Bath, where we find a wooden inn, a small Chapel of the Virgin, and the Spring of the Sisters' Fountain. The first crucifix on the Kussnacht side is met at Leeboden, and a walk or ride through a succession of rich pasturage, brings the tourist to the Righi Staffel, an elevated plain or platform chosen for viewing the effects of sunset. There the traveller finds a very good inn, where he can get comfortable accommodation. Half-an-hour's walk further on brings him to Kulm, the most celebrated summit, where is also a large and good Hotel. From the Kulm is the best view. Another path branches off from Leeboden towards the right, which leads the tourist to pass the following interesting objects. From the north side very good views are obtainable of the Lake of Zug and of the town of Arth. On the west Lucerne can be distinctly seen; whilst on the south the objects seen are the Lakes of Alpnach and Sarnen, the Stanzer and Buochserhorn mountains, behind which are the mountain ranges of Berne, Unterwalden, and Uri—an unbroken reef—with their glaciers, embracing the Engelberger, Rothstock, and the Bristenstock. On the east are the snowy peaks of Glarus and Appenzell.

Pedestrians require no guide, as they have only to follow the crowd that lands at Weggis. A boy, for 2 francs may be obtained to carry a knapsack or carpet-bag to the top. If a horse is taken, the man who leads the horse acts as guide.

Resuming our journey towards Fluelen, the steamer proceeds through the Nosses, immediately after passing which, we find ourselves shut out by high mountains. After running through the oval basin called the Gulf of Buochs, it touches at Beckenreid and at GERSAU, a very picturesque little village, and a delightful spot to stay for a while (en Pension Müller), and make a few excursions on the Lake, which is here very picturesque. The Rigi-Scheideck, a Pension kept by M Muller, can also be reached from here; ascent 2½ hours; tariff for horse 7 fr.; chaise à porteur 15 fr.; very easy, and a beautiful prospect, gradually widening from the Lake at the foot to the snowy Alps of the Bernese Oberland. The prospect from the Pension at the summit is quite as fine as from the Kulm; indeed by many it would be thought finer. The charge per day is 5 to 6 fr., including board, lodging, and attendance. English is spoken. There are 150 beds, baths, and other conveniences; and every thing is scrupulously neat and clean. Telegraph messages can be despatched to every part of Switzerland, 1 fr. for twenty words. We then reach Brunnen, opposite which we change our entire course and sail along the Bay of Uri for Gruth, a short mile or two from which is Tell's Chapel. At the head of the lake is

5. FLUELEN—described at page 493.—From Fluelen we proceed to visit Andermatt and the Grimsel, or PASS OF ST. GOTHARD, per Altorf; Bürglen, birth-place of William Tell; Amstäg, where there are good inns; and Wassen, a village of about 380 inhabitants, on the left bank of the Reuss.

THE DEVIL'S BRIDGE.—The stern and savage grandeur of this portion of the Pass far excels that of all the rest. Just above the bridge, the road passes through a tunnel cut through the rock, called Urnerloch, into the beautiful valley of Urseren. About one mile further brings us to ANDERMATT.—A small village with about 700 inhabitants, and the chief place of the valley, 4,450 feet above the level of the sea. Honey, cheese, and splendid trout can be had here. Behind Andermatt a bridle-path leads over the Oberalp, and by its lake to Disentis, in the Grisons.

Taking a direct road from Andermatt, we arrive at Hospenthal. By sleeping here, an hour is gained in the morning. An early start is advisable, as an early arrival at the Grimsel ensures a bed—late comers are often obliged to sleep on the floor. After passing Realp, where there is a small but dear inn, we enter a monotonous valley, which terminates on the Furca. After a brief repose, we descend by a steep and rugged road, to the glacier of the Rhone. The road skirts the glacier to the lower extremity, where a dirty stream issues forth—this is the source of the rapid Rhone. A wooden bridge conducts the traveller to a small inn, the only habitation between the Furca and the Grimsel, where a few beds may be had. Ascending the road to Grimsel, look down on the glacier, which is here seen to more advantage than from below. On the top of the Mayenwand is the small gloomy Lake of the Dead. A line of poles marks the road to the Hospice of St. Gothard, situated lower down in the valley. Those who pass the Grimsel need not mount the St. Bernard, which is tame in comparison. On arriving at Grimsel, lose no time in securing a bed. There is a table d'Hôte in the evening. A splendid panoramic view of the Grim-sel, and of the adjacent peaks and glaciers, can be enjoyed from the summit of the Sidelhorn, on the right of the path to the Furca.

6. FROM GRIMSEL TO GRINDELWALD, via MEYRINGEN—Distance forty-one English miles.—Leave the Grimsel early in the morning, and if the weather be fine, the descent to Meyringen will afford a day of pleasure without fatigue. At first, not a plant or shrub is visible, gradually vegetation begins, and soon the road is bounded by sombre pine forests. At Handeck is a little wooden inn, close to the falls of the Aar, the noblest cataract in Switzerland. It is best seen from the bridge above. There are several fine points of view during the descent. One hour and a half beyond Handeck is Guttannen, and an hour beyond is Imhof, where there is a carriage road to Meyringen. From Meyringen to Grindelwald the distance is about 21 English miles; and the journey is accomplished in about eight hours.

From Grindelwald to the Wengern Alp is a journey of 3½ hours. On the summit of the Pass are several inns, (whose resources are, during the travelling season, generally taxed to the uttermost.) The houses are all wooden, and widely scattered over the banks of the torrent. It is 2450 feet above the level of the sea, and buried, as it were, among precipices. The Staubbach fall of water is less than a mile from the inn, and is one of the loftiest in Europe. Visitors should not leave here without exploring the upper valley of Lauterbrunnen, or ascending to Mürren, a village commanding one of the most glorious views of the Jungfrau, etc., in the Bernese Alps, finer than that from the Wengern Alp. The ascent may be accomplished on horseback. Pedestrians may proceed to the top of the Schilthorn, some way further; a still more magnificent prospect. There is a good inn (the Jungfrau) at Mürren, but it is easy to return to Lauterbrunnen in the day. Invalids may reach Mürren in a Chaise-à-porteur. Very little of interest is to be met with on the route to INTERLAKEN—described at page 496. At Zweylutschinen there is a very good little hotel.

8. INTERLAKEN TO THUN.—There is an excellent road to Thun each side of the lake. The journey by water is preferable. A diligence conveys the tourists to Neuhaus, where the steamer takes them up for Thun. On the voyage up the lake is the village of Merligen, at the rear of which is the Justis Thal. Nearly opposite the Nose is the Castle of Spietz, founded, it is said, by Attila. An Hotel has been recently built near the top of the Niesen commanding a superb view. The access is from Thun or Frütigen. As we get into Thun, on the south side, is the beautiful chateau of Schadau, the property of Col. Rougemont, in the midst of a charming garden.

9. THUN—described at page 506.—The distance from Thun to Berne is about 17 English miles, and the journey is made by railway down the Valley of the Aar. The road on a clear day commands a very fine view of the Alps, and passes Munsingen, where the oligarchical rule was overturned, in 1849, and a new constitution adopted. The Stockhorn and Niesen mountains on the left are also passed.

10. BERNE—described at page 491. The road leaves Berne by the Gate of Morat, and proceeds as far as Neueneck, where the stream separating the two cantons, Berne and Freiburg, is crossed. Before entering Freiburg, the view is impressive in the extreme. The city is one of the most picturesque in Europe. Close to the summit of the hill is the large old building once the Jesuits Pensionat; near it the Jesuits' College, the Tower, and Church of St. Nicholas, beyond which is seen the Suspension Bridge, over which the carriage road enters Freiburg. The rail now finished taking another line reaches

11. FREIBURG — described at page 494: and thence goes on to Lausanne and Vevey, past Romont; a branch is now open from Romont, to Bulle, the capital of the Gruyères. This Railway opens up a beautiful tract of country for tourists. Bulle lies at the foot of the Moleson, a mountain the view from which is said to equal if not excel the Rigi. By the Bulle-Romont Railway tourists can now go by a much shorter route from Lausanne and Geneva to Thun and Interlaken by the beautiful valley of the Simmenthal.

12. VEVEY—on the Lake of Geneva, described at page 506.—From Vevey to Martigny, by Montreux, Villeneuve, Aigle, and Bex. Leaving Vevey, the first object of interest met with is the Tour de Peilz—a fortified castle, about 1 mile from Vevey and 2½ from CLARENS.—described by Rousseau in Nouvelle Heloise, and referred to in Childe Harold. From this place a splendid view of the Lake and valley of the Rhone, and of the opposite shore, can be had Here jutting rocks, towering ruggedly from the banks of the lake, succeed to the gorgeous scenery of hills and vine-clad undulations that adorn the banks of the lake all the way from Geneva.

At MONTREUX there are many good hotels and pensions, the largest, called Glion, in a fine situation. The climate, owing to the sheltered position of the place, is healthy and mild, rendering the village a delightful winter quarter for invalids unable to cross the Alps. Two miles beyond Montreux is the celebrated Castle of Chillon, open to visitors. It communicates with the road by a wooden bridge, stands solitary and alone, and is a building of the thirteenth century, which owes its origin to Amadeus IV. of Savoy. Byron has immortalized it in his "Prisoner of Chillon,"

Beyond is

VILLENEUVE—HOTEL BYRON—Built on the eastern extremity of the Lake of Geneva, and containing about 1500 inhabitants. Here the road leaves the borders of the lake, and enters the valley of the Rhone. The railway is continued by Roche, Aigle, and St. Triphon to

BEX.—On the road to the Simplon, containing 3550 inhabitants, and only remarkable for its salt mines and works; situated in the valley of La Gryonne, about three miles from Bex. Pensions here per day, 4fr. 50c.

At MONTHEY, on the Ligne d'Italie line from Bouveret to St Maurice; distance 15 miles. There you diverge to the delightful valley of Vièye, leading to Champery. Itinerary, Trois Torrents 1 hotel

Val d'Illiez (Hotel du Repos and pension, 4fr. 50c. per day); Champery 3 hours, hotel and pension of the Dent du Midi, with 92 rooms; pension 4 fr. 50c. per day; Croix Federale. Ascents from Champery: Dent de Bonacon (2824 metres), 6 hours, splendid view; Dent du Midi, 9 hours up (guide, 13 fr.); View of Northern and Southern Chains, Berne and Valais, and Lake of Geneva; the Val d'Illiez is a favourite and delightful resort, communicating with Sixt by several passes. Of these, one deserves to be especially noticed, i e., that by the Col de Coux et de Golize, 8 hours, fine views; thence to Samoens, near Sixt.

BRIDGE OF ST. MAURICE.—This bridge connects the cantons of Vaud and Vallais. Immediately beyond it, on the left bank of the Rhone, is the old town itself, embedded among mountains.

ST. MAURICE contains about 1,100 inhabitants, and the traveller should make it a point to see the Abbey, a building of the fourth century. Its objects of attraction are the Museum of Ancient Art—a vase of Saracen execution, presented by Charlemagne—a golden crozier of a spirelike form, exquisitely carved—and a second one, presented by Bertha, Queen of Burgundy.

CHAMPERY, in the Val d'Illiez, near Bex, with excellent pensions, much frequented in summer, and charming excursions to Dent du Midi, Sixt, Chamouni, &c.—See MONTHEY above.

A little past St. Maurice, on the other side of the river, is the Bath-house of Lavey, over a sulphureous spring. Rising far above the road is the Hermitage of our Lady of the Rock. Seven miles further is the celebrated waterfall of the Sallenches, or Pissevache, the fall of which is about 120 feet. The road crosses the Trient, as it descends from the the Tête Noire.

13. MARTIGNY—described at page 500.—The distance from Martigny to Chamounix is about twenty-three or twenty-four miles, and may be accomplished in from nine to eleven hours by mule or on foot. The road commands a very good view of Mont Blanc. The path from Martigny leads over the Forclaz. The hamlet of Trient lies to the left, deep in the valley. After climbing up a fatiguing ascent, the traveller enters on the pasturages and farm-houses of Herbagères. From the top there is a most magnificent view of Mont Blanc, and the Aiguilles of La Tour, l'Argentière, Verte, de Dru, Charmoz, Midi, and Vosa. To the right are the Aiguilles Rouges, whilst beyond them, enclosing the valley, stretches the Brevent, to the rear of which is seen the Mortine, supporting the snow-capped summit of the Buët. The scene will remain impressed on the mind for ever.

On the descent the pastures of Charamillian are crossed to the village of La Tour, a little below which the path meets the road to Chamounix by the Tête Noire. To reach Chamounix by the Tête Noire Pass, one of the most strikingly beautiful in Switzerland, the preceding route is left at the village of Trient. At the distance of one league is the mountain inn, de la Tête Noire, on the angle of a precipice 1200 feet above the meeting of the waters Trient and Eau Noir. On the opposite side of the ravine is Finshaun, watered by five or six cataracts, which in the distance look like silver cords. Beyond the hotel is a short tunnel, and after passing it, the deep gorge of the Eau Noir. A few miles further is the La Porte Chaeltard—all that now remains of the ancient fortress, built to defend this frontier pass. Soon after is the cascade de la Barberine, 200 feet high, from Mont Tannevergues; near the cascade is another excellent mountain inn. Beyond it is the village of Valorsine, the Aiguille de l'Orient and Mont Buët. The route joins that of the Col de Balme at the village of Argentierres.

14. CHAMOUNIX—described at page 492.—The distance from here to Geneva is about 52 English miles, and the journey is performed by mule or voiture to St. Martin, thence by diligence to Geneva, and the time occupied is nine or ten hours.

SALLENCHES—A small town about 36 or 37 miles from Geneva, containing 2100 inhabitants. From the bridge is one of the best Alpine views of Mount Blanc. On coming within a short distance of Maglan, the road nears Nant d'Arpenaz, one of the highest waterfalls in Savoy. The next village is CLUSES—containing about 2000 inhabitants, and famous for its watchmaking trade. It was burned down in 1843, but has since been rebuilt.

From Annemasse, we obtain a distant view of Mont Blanc. It is six miles thence to

15. GENEVA.—See page 494.—The journey from Geneva to Lausanne can be made by diligence or steamer daily, as well as by railway. Beyond Versoix, an inconsiderable village, is COPPET.—A small town containing about 700 inhabitants, and possessing a château, once the residence of Madame de Staël.

MORGES.—A small town, with 3000 inhabitants. Adjoining its Port is the venerable old Castle of Wufflens, said to have been built by Queen Bertha.

Before entering Lausanne, the view of the town is very beautiful indeed. At the entrance of the suburbs is the village of Ouchy, with an inn, in which Lord Byron wrote the "Prisoner of Chillon," in June 1816, when he was detained by severe weather.

16. LAUSANNE.—See page 497.—LAUSANNE to BASLE, by YVERDUN, NEUFCHATEL, and BIENNE; or by FRIBURG and BERNE. Both journeys are made by railway.

17. YVERDUN.—See page 507.—From here there is both rail and steamer to Neuchatêl, passing Grandson, a small town on the lake, three miles from Yverdun.

18. NEUFCHATEL—described at p. 501.—Thence by railway or steamer, on to

19. BIENNE.—See page 491.

20. To BASLE.—Conveyance by railway; also by diligence, through the valley by the left bank of the Suze.

ROUTE 12.

Martigny to Milan, by Sion, Brieg and the Passage of the Simplon. Domo d'Ossola.

(Distance 179 English miles.)

Digitized by Google

(An International Railway is projected over the Simplon, towards which 10,000,000 francs are already raised. 17,000,000 more being required The scheme is under the patronage of the French Minister, M. De la Valette).

CONVEYANCES.—Diligences run daily to Milan, in 58 or 60 hours, making Brieg a sleeping-place. Sierre may be reached by rail. See page 247.

After quitting Martigny, the road lies between sterile rocks and mountains, which, on passing Riddes, change to luxuriant pasturages, rich vineyards, picturesque villages with churches, and the ruins of ancient castles.

SION—celebrated for an excellent wine made here, called Malvoisie, is the chief town of Valais, with a population of 4200 souls. It stands on the declivities of three hills, and possesses extensive castles on each declivity, one of which is the archbishop's residence; the second is Valerie: the third called Tourbillon, contained portraits of the bishops of Sion from the year 300; it is now in ruins. Here are several Roman antiquities, one of which is a half-effaced inscription to the memory of Augustus, near the door of the cathedral.

Leaving Sion, the route lies through a beautiful country, irrigated by the Rhone.

SIERRE.—A pretty little village, terminus of the Ligne d'Italie.

At Pfyn is the boundary between the French and German languages.

LEUK, nine miles above which up the gorge of the Dala are the Baths of Leuk or Loeche. Travellers in carriages usually turn off here to visit the Baths, and ascend the lofty and sterile Mount Gemmi.

TOURTEMAGNE.—Behind the fine cascade is a view of the entire Alpine chain, connecting the Simplon and St. Gothard.

VISP.—Is seated at the junction of the Rhone and the Visp—a river as large as the Rhone. It was once the residence of many noble families, whose palaces are now in ruins; and is now a miserable village, having been fearfully shattered by the earthquake in 1855. From Visp to Zermatt, 30 miles, mule path, to the right; 7 miles beyond is Glys, and a mile further Brieg, where the ascent of the Simplon begins.

VIESCH is on the upper valley of the Rhone, beyond Brieg on the route to the Grimsel. The ascent of the Æggishorn is made from Viesch in 3½ hours, and from whence there is one of the grandest panoramas in the Alps. There is a good Inn at Viesch, and another on the Æggishorn.

From BRIEG to the left is the road to the Rhone Glacier with the footpath to the Hospital on the St. Gothard-road, and to Meyringen, by the Grimsel pass.

BRIEG.—Is a small town (pop. 800) and the usual resting-place for travellers crossing the Simplon. The only buildings worth notice are the Château of Baron Stockalper and the Jesuits' College. At this town the Simplon road leaves the valley of the Rhone. The distance from Brieg to Domo d'Ossola is about fourteen leagues or forty-two English miles. It takes seven hours to reach the Simplon, and three or four to Domo d'Ossola. Ascent of the Simplon, see page 555.

DOMO D'OSSOLA.—It is nine miles from hence to VOGOGNA.—A small village, with the valley of Anzasca, leading up to Monte Rosa, opening up before it; a scene worthy of special notice.

ORNAVASSO.—Near this are the white marble quarries, from which stone for the Milan Cathedral was procured. At Gravellona the road crosses a large bridge, and following the road leading up its left bank, arrives in one hour, at Omegna on the Lake of Orta, one of the most beautiful on the Italian border. Lago Maggiore, and Isola Madre—the most northern of the Borromean Islands—here burst on the vision. Not far beyond this place will be found the rose granite quarries; the colour produced, it is said, by the felspar in it, which mineral abounds here in elegant flesh-coloured crystals.

BAVENO.—Close to Lago Maggiore, and immediately in front of the Borromean Islands. Diligences from here to Arona in 2 hours; rail to Milan.

Boats.—Parties wishing to visit the Borromean Islands, will here find boats at the following rate:—For two hours, with two rowers, 4 fr., and 1 fr. per hour after; an hour once commenced is counted as full; the boatmen expect buonamano 50 cts. each.

Asses may also be hired here at 4 frs. each, to ascend the Motterone, towering in the rear of the village, and commanding a magnificent panoramic view of the Alps. The top is 4,350 feet above the level of the sea. The descent may be made by the opposite side to Orta. In three hours, and from thence to Omegna in about two hours' walk. Steamers call for passengers off Isola Bella, on their upward and downward courses daily.

PALLANZA.—The steamer calls here for passengers every morning at about half past 8 o'clock, and a boat plies between here and Baveno.

LAGO MAGGIORE.—This lake, on which these islands are situated, was anciently called Lacus Verbanus. It is computed to be 56 Italian miles long and 6 to 9 broad, and in its deepest part is 2465 feet deep. It presents an enchanting picture. (For further description, see page 558.) The Palace or Isola Bella is worth seeing, and contains many very excellent paintings. There is also a very good Inn on the island. Isola Madre will be found worth a visit.

Below Baveno is Stresa, where there is an excellent hotel and pension. From Baveno and Stresa paths lead across Monte Motterone to Orta. View from Monte Motterone, extensive and beautiful, something like Righi. One mile before reaching Arona is the great bronze statue of St. Charles Borromeo, by Zonelli, and measuring, with pedestal, 106 ft. in height. It stands on a hill overlooking ARONA—A small old town, containing about 4,500 inhabitants, built on the margin of the lake, and having the Simplon road running through a part of it, and a railway communicating with that to Turin and Milan from the junction at Novara. At the lower end of the lake a splendid view of the snowy Monte Rosa is enjoyed; and a ferry-boat carries passengers over the Ticino to.

SESTO CALENDE.—The town is built on the left bank of the Ticino, shortly below the place it leaves the lake, and contains only one structure worthy of notice, the church of St. Donato, a building of the middle ages. Near Sesto Calende are interesting remains of ancient pile habitations. The route thence to Milan lies through the great Lombardo plain, a level route made between gardens and fruit trees. For Railway, see page 253. Passing

GALLERATE, whence there is a railroad to Varese. The Simplon road enters Milan through the ARCO DEL SEMPIONE—A structure begun by Napoleon, and finished in 1839 by the Austrians.

MILAN.—Described at page 520.

ROUTE 13.

From the Eggischhorn and Viesch, by the Tosa Falls and Val Formazza, to Lago Maggiore; and to Airolo on the St. Gothard Pass.

Ascent from Viesch easy at first. Proceed either direct thence, or follow Rhine valley to Munster and Ulrichen; good quarters at Ulrichen. Hence you ascend the Eginenthal, and from it you go up a tremendous steep slope to the Gries glacier, which you cross—a spot haunted by the lammergeier, and where chamois are often seen. Horses often cross the glacier, and ladies have passed over; but it is prudent to dismount. Scene at top very wild and solitary. Geological formation of district interesting; much true granite.

Descent brings you to first village, Andermatten. Upper part of valley inhabited by a vigorous, industrious German race. Inn at Andermatten—Albergo del Caval Bianco. Next place, small chapel of San Lorenzo, just above Falls of Tosa or Toccis, whose waters fall over a succession of cataracts of 500 feet, forming in some respects (combined height and volume) the most remarkable waterfall in the Alps.

Val Formazza, below the Falls, is exquisitely beautiful all the way to Domo d'Ossola. At Fopiano you meet the first Italian-speaking village. By the Falls you can strike off, and rise by the chapel of San Giacomo, near the Nufenen Pass; summit covered with rhododendrons, and commanding a splendid view of Finsteraarhorn. Reaching All'Acqua, 4380 feet above the sea (dirty inn), passing under a beautiful azure-coloured glacier, you come to the beautiful Val Vedretto, and Airolo on the St. Gothard Pass, 3609 feet above the sea, with an inn. This Pass is easily passed by horses.

The road down from the Tosa Falls to Crevola and Domo d'Ossola, is through scenes of perfect beauty, passing the defile of Foplano, with chestnuts, vines, &c., and garnets in the schist, to Premia (Hotel de l'Ange). The lower part of the valley of the Tosa is called Val Antigoria, filled with smiling villages, Cravegna, Crodo, &c., picturesque in campaniles, glancing streams, and emerald meadows.—See "Pedestrian Route-Book to Switzerland." Distance from Obergesteien to Premia, 10½ leagues (31½ miles). From Tosa falls to Premia, 4½ leagues (13½ miles.) From Tosa falls to Pommat, 1½ league (4½ miles); to Andermatten, 1½ league.

The passage over the Gries, down Val Formazza, brings the traveller to Domo d'Ossola; and, continuing down the Tosa valley, towards Baveno and Lago Maggiore, he reaches Vogogna, at the entrance of Val Anzasca, leading up to the finest scenery in the Alps. Vogogna, 2½ leagues or nearly 9 miles from Domo d'Ossola, has an inn, the Corona, and a posting station.

Scenery up Val Anzasca to Macugnaga is perfectly lovely, with Monte Rosa towering above luxuriant southern vegetation, and azure transparent trout streams. Distance to Macugnaga, 8½ leagues (25½ miles). Best points—Ponte Grande, 1½ leagues (4½ miles), with a fair inn, and Ceppo Morelli, 2 leagues (6 miles), farther up. Macugnaga, a centre of splendid excursions. Hotels du Monte Rosa and of Monte Moro. Various passes lead from Macugnaga to the other favoured Italian valleys south of Monte Rosa.

Three routes have been classified into High Passes, Intermediate Passes, and Lower Passes.

1. Beginning with the Lower Passes, Macugnaga communicates with Orta by two delightful routes, both of which strike off from Ponte Grande. 1. By Val Strona. Footpaths lead from Ponte Grande by Col de Campello (2000 metres), 5 hours. Campello village has a poor inn. Val Strona presents some of the most charming sylvan scenery in North Italy. The botany and geology of the whole district are full of interest. Cataracts of emerald streams, fern-clad rocks, and every scenic beauty, topped by the snows of Rosa, complete the attractions of this lovely valley. At Omegna, where there is a poor and dear inn, you reach the Lake of Orta, a paradise of beauty. It is the best plan to proceed to Orta by boat, 2 hours 10 minutes; excellent quarters at Orta.

2. Another route from Ponte Grande to Orta is by Val Mastalone, 55 to 60 kiloms. (36½ miles). Almost too much for one day; best plan to sleep at Varallo. From Ponte Grande you proceed, by Val d Oloccia, through magnificent ancient woods of chestnuts and other timber, to Col Barranca (1752 metres), over swelling pasture ground, to Fobello (fair inn), in a charming, striking situation. The female peasantry are noted for physical beauty, and their graceful costume. Descending to Rimello, where there is a small inn, with a church having curious frescoes, in the midst of a delightful panorama of rocks, woods, and mountains, you arrive at a defile defying description, and combining all the elements of grandeur. Pont della Gula particularly striking. At length you reach VARALLO, from which Orta is reached by the Colma (6 hours), the road passing through vast forests and among immense granite blocks. View from Colma very grand over Pennine chain. Varallo has three inns—Albergo d'Italia Falconi, Nero, and La Posta.

Digitized by Google

Varallo is in the Val Sesia, from which a succession of Lower passes lead to Aosta. From Orta there is a delightful path over Monte Motterone, with one of the finest panoramic views in the Alps, to Baveno and Stresa, each with a good hotel on Lago Maggiore. See p. 558.

At Varallo the traveller should visit the celebrated Sacro Monte, or Nuova Jerusalem, nel Sacro Monte di Varallo, presenting excellent representations of the principal events of our Lord's passion, in 46 oratories. View from top very fine. From Varallo a route leads by the Val Sesia to Alagna, 42 kilom. (34 miles), 7 to 8 hours' carriage road to Piode. Car route on to Mollia, and mule path thence to Alagna. (Hotel Monte Rosa; clean, but dear). Excursions to Pile Alpe, Cima delle Pisse, &c. From Alagna a lower pass leads by Col d'Olen, and to that delightful centre of the Italian valleys, Gressonay, La Trinita, and St. Jean. Excellent inn. (Col d'Olien, 8956 feet; distance, 6 to 7 hours' walk.)

Gressonay, near beautiful Lys glacier: remarkable handsome German peasantry, of primitive virtues, and with picturesque costumes. From Gressonay, Col de Renzola, to Brussone in Val Challant. Fine view of Mont Blanc from Col. Homely inn. Proceed on, over Col de Jon to Chatillon, in Val d'Aosta. Five hours' mule path from Gressonay to Brussone; Col de Jon presents fine bark scenery. Four and a half hours Brussone to Chatillon.

2. Intermediate Passes.—1. Turlo (8526 feet), from Macugnaga to Alagna. This is the nearest way, but fatiguing and stony, and with fewer fine views than most of these passes. 2. Alagna to Col d'Olien, to Gressonay, and thence by Betta Furka (8106 feet) to St Jacques d'Ayas, in Val Challant. Thence by Col de Furtola, 2436 metres high, to Val Tournanche, one day's walk; or from Brussone to Chatillon by Col de Joux, 4 to 4½ hours. Mule path. Fine forests and pastures. View of Monte Rosa and Cervin.

Other intermediate passes from Gressonay, which is an excellent centre of excursions, lead to Riva by the Col de Valdobbia, 6 to 7 hours (2548 metres). Fine view of Monte Rosa. Inn at Riva bad; but you can proceed, to sleep at Mollia.

2 Riva to Rimasco by Col de Moud, 7 hours (2270 metres). Splendid rhododendrons and fir forests.

3. Riva and Rimasco also communicate by two other passes (the Vals Sesia and Sormenza) 8 hrs. Carriage roads. Waters of Sermenza are beautifully ultramarine; and this is a capital district for trout-fishing, and affords the choicest scenery in the Alps.

3 The following are the higher passes of the Italian valleys:—

1. From Macugnaga to Pile Alpe, by the Col delle Loccie; 1 day. 14 or 15 hours. Hard day's work. Guides wanted (3647 metres). Crevasses, bergschrunds, &c., on the way. Pile Alpe, or Chalets de Bours, by Col delle Piscie (3162 metres)

3. Gressonay St Jean to Breuil, by Betta Furka (2633 metres), and Cimes Blanches (3021 metres), 10 hours. Guide wanted. There is a series of still higher passes, only attempted by Alpine club-men and chamois-hunters. Among them we may notice the new Weisthor (passed by ladies), Macugnaga to Zermatt.

2. Sesia Joch, Alagna and Zermatt.

3. Lys Joch, Gressonay to Zermatt, the highest pass in the Alps.

ROUTE 14.

A Fortnight's Tour in the Autumn, through South Germany.

[BY H. C.]

LONDON TO PARIS, via FOLKESTONE AND BOULOGNE in 10¾ hours.

PARIS.—The attention of visitors should be directed to the Chapelle St. Ferdinand erected on the spot where the Duke of Orleans died in 1842, and to the Chapelle Expiatoire, on the spot where the remains of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette were interred after being guillotined.

PARIS TO STRASSBURG by Railway, in 10 to 16 hours.

The beautiful monument erected in memory of Marshal Saxe, in the Protestant Church of St. Thomas, at Strassburg, should be seen by every one, though the cathedral is by far the finest object in Strassburg.—See Bradshaw's Handbook to Germany.

STRASSBURG TO FREIBURG IN BREISGAU, by Railway in 3½ hours.

At Freiburg, travellers should ascend the Schlossberg, a little hill about a quarter of an hour's walk from the Neustadt, and which commands a beautiful view of the valley of the Treisam, having the hills of the Black Forest in the distance.

The very beautiful Cathedral, with its magnificent modern wood carving, is especially worthy of notice.

FREIBURG to SCHAFFHAUSEN, through the HOLLENTHAL and BLACK FOREST (51 miles). Eilwagen in 11 hours.

Though the distance is only fifty-one miles, yet the road is so hilly that eleven hours are required. The Höllenthal, a magnificent defile, through which the waters of the Dreisam force their way to join the Rhine, ought to be visited by every lover of picturesque scenery. An omnibus leaves Freiburg every morning, in the season, for Steig, at the extremity of the Pass, returning in the afternoon or evening. The road to Schaffhausen, after climbing out of the Höllenthal by a very long and steep hill, passes through the Black Forest, by Lenzkirch, Bondorf, and Stuhlingen; it is a picturesque route, though inferior in scenery to the Höllenthal. Shortly after leaving Stuhlingen the road crosses the Wulach, a small stream which separates Baden from Switzerland.

SCHAFFHAUSEN.—Described at page 504.

Steamers daily to Constance up the Rhine—a beautiful sail in 6 hours. Railway, pp. 132 134, Eilwagen daily, along the south side of the river, in 4½ hrs.

The road to Constance is carried along the Swiss, i.e., south side of the Rhine, and presents many beautiful views of the river, whose banks are here and there richly wooded; also of the Unter See, or Lower Lake of Constance. Steckborn is the only considerable place on the route. At Constance Baden is re-entered.

CONSTANCE.—An ancient city, at the point where the Rhine flows out of the Lake. It is chiefly noted for the Council of 1414–1418, by which John Huss and Jerome of Prague were condemned to death as heretics, and burnt, in violation of the safe-conduct given to them by the Emperor Sigismund. The Hall where the council was held is shown; Huss's bible, and other relics of him; also, in the Cathedral, the flag upon which he stood to receive sentence of excommunication. The place of martyrdom is in the suburb of Bruhl, a little distance outside the city. The Rhine is crossed at Constance by a curious, long, covered wooden bridge.

Lake Constance is navigated by seven or eight steamers, which keep up a communication two or three times a day with the principal places upon its banks. The traffic upon Lake Constance has received a considerable impetus from the formation of a port at Friedrichshafen, the southern terminus of the Wurtemberg railway, and by the completion of the Bavarian railway to Lindau. The northern banks of the lake are flat, but the southern side has the mountains of Appenzell and St. Gall, in the back-ground.

CONSTANCE to LINDAU, by Steamer on the Lake, in 3½ hours.

LINDAU.—This Bavarian frontier town is built on an island in the north-eastern corner of the lake, and connected with the mainland by a long wooden bridge. It is a place of great antiquity, having formerly been a Roman station. A fragment still exists of a wall, called the "Heidenmauer," attributed to that people. This town suffered greatly during the Thirty Years' war, having, in common with many other parts of the territories of the Elector of Bavaria—their most formidable opponent—been devastated by the Swedes. At present, Lindau has a population of upwards of 3000, the majority of whom are Protestants.

A pleasant excursion of 6½ miles may be made from here to Bregenz. The road lies along the shores of the lake, and at Loschau crosses the Austrian frontier. Bregenz is a good starting-point for an excursion into the Tyrol, as Innsbruck can be reached from here in about 2½ days' posting, or by a daily diligence through Feldkirch and Landeck. Travellers should not omit to ascend the "Gebhardsberg"—a hill behind Bregenz—the summit of which may be reached in about twenty minutes, and commands a magnificent view, embracing the whole expanse of Lake Constance, the snow-capped mountains of Appenzell, together with the lofty peaks of the Rhenane and Tyrolese Alps.

LINDAU to AUGSBURG. By railway, past the old imperial cities of Kempten and Kaufbeuern.

AUGSBURG.—The Hotel "Drei Mohren," was formerly the mansion of the Fuggers, the merchant princes of Augsburg; and the apartment is still preserved and shown, in which Count Anthony Fugger entertained the Emperor Charles V. on his return from the campaign against Tunis; on which occasion he destroyed in a fire of cinnamon, the Emperor's bond for a large amount, which he held as security for the funds supplied by him to enable Charles to undertake the campaign. Augsburg has been the seat of many important diets of the empire. The Allgemeine Zeitung, the leading German newspaper, is published here by Baron Cotta. See further, page 433.

AUGSBURG to MUNICH, Railway (39 miles) in 2 hours.

The Bavarian railways having only one line of rails, and the trains having to wait at certain stations for others to pass, considerable delays frequently occur. The country is flat, and only enlivened by occasional distant glimpses of the Bavarian Highlands. Shortly before reaching Munich, the royal palace of Nymphenburg is passed.

MUNICH AND ITS ART COLLECTIONS— See page 414. The colossal Statue of Bavaria, by Schwanthaler, a female figure in bronze, 61½ ft. high, of most beautiful proportions, advantageously placed on a slope is the finest work of art in Europe.

The English Garden on the northern side of the city, a plot of land four miles long, and through which the waters of the Isar are conveyed, is beautifully laid out, and forms a delightful promenade.

Return to Augsburg.

AUGSBURG to ULM. By railway.

The country is undulating, and in some parts richly wooded. From Gunzburg, the road is carried nearly parallel with, though not in sight of, the Danube, to Ulm, where it crosses that river, which here forms the boundary between Bavaria and Wurtemberg.

ULM is now strongly fortified to defend the valley of the Danube. Pop. 26,290. It was formerly an imperial city, and enjoyed an extensive commerce. Large quantities of snails are fattened in this neighbourhood, and exported to Austria, where they are considered a great delicacy, and much consumed during Lent. The emperor Maximilian I., in order to refute the accusation brought against him by the citizens of Ulm, that he had drank too much wine to be able to attend to public business, climbed to the top of the tower of the cathedral, (316 English feet high,) and there balanced himself on one foot, swinging the other round in the air, which foolhardy feat is recorded by an inscription. Ulm was surrendered to the French without resistance, by the Austrian General, Mack, in 1805, when 30,000 of his troops were made prisoners of war.

ULM to STUTTGART. Railway, in 4 hours.

Passing through a picturesque country, under the Swabian Alps, and affording many beautiful views of the valleys of the Fils and Neckar; one of the most striking of which is at Geislingen, at the mouth of a deep defile, one side of which is richly clothed with foliage, while the other presents a series of gigantic rocks. The curves in the line of railway afford many different views of the gorges. Before reaching Goppingen, a town of 5000 inhabitants, on the Fils, the Hohenstaufenberg, a conical hill about two miles to the right of the line, should be noticed; on it stood the castle of the noble family of Hohenstaufen, which for upwards of a century (1140 to 1250) furnished emperors to Germany. The railway then passes Plochingen, at the junction of the Fils and Neckar; follows the valley of the latter by Esslingen (described at page 479) to Cannstadt, an ancient Roman station, and now much frequented by the inhabitants of Stuttgart on account of its mineral waters; and thence to Stuttgart.

The Russian, or rather Greek, chapel, is erected on the spot where formerly stood the feudal castle of Wurtemberg, the cradle or Stammschloss of the ancestors of the present reigning family.

STUTTGART.—A pleasant, clean city. See p. 448. The railway station is in the Schloss Gasse, close to the Palace, and quite in the centre of the town. The Palace gardens, which extend upwards of two miles along the valley of the Nesen to the elegant Grecian villa of Rosenstein, are open to the public, and form a very pleasant promenade. The orange trees are remarkably fine.

STUTTGART to HEILBRONN. Railway, in 2 hours.

Chiefly along the banks of the Neckar and Eus, past Ludwigsburg, a city with 7000 inhabitants, once intended for the capital of Wirtemberg; then winding round the base of Hohenasperg, an isolated hill with a fortress on its summit, now used as a prison, the line reaches Bietigheim station, from which a railway joins the Baden line at Bruchsal Crossing the Eus by a curious lattice bridge, it reaches the valley of the Neckar, the course of which it follows very closely to Heilbronn.

HEILBRONN contains upwards of 18,960 inhabitants, almost entirely Protestants. There is a covered wooden bridge across the Neckar, similar to those seen in Switzerland. Its chief architectural ornament is the church of St. Killian, whose tower, upwards of 220 feet high, is very beautiful. The holy spring, "der Hellige Brunnen," from which the city derives its name, is near the church. About three miles east of Heilbronn are the ruins of Weibersberg, called "Weibers Treue," woman's fidelity, to commemorate an occurrence in the wars between the Guelphs and Ghibelines, when Conrad III., having taken the castle, and intending to put all the garrison to the sword, permitted the women to leave the place in safety, along with whatever they could carry; the women accordingly marched out of the castle, each bearing her husband or her lover on her shoulders.

HEILBRONN to HEIDELBERG. Steamer, in 6 hrs. —The descent of the Neckar can be made in 6 hours, but the return requires nearly 12, the current being strong. Steamers ply twice a-day in summer. Refreshments can be had on board; but the cuisine is indifferent. The scenery is almost everywhere lovely; and many parts will bear comparison with the finest parts of the Rhine, though on a smaller scale.

The most remarkable places are the following:—Right bank—Juxtfield, visited on account of its brine baths, and with Ealensen salt-works in the neighbourhood. Left bank—Wimpfen, beautifully situated on the top of the steep and richly wooded bank of the river; a very ancient town, with a beautiful Gothic church, whose three spires form very prominent objects. Left—Heinsheim, a village of Baden, prettily situated at the foot of the ruined castle of Ehrenberg, one of the most beautiful on the Neckar. Right—Gundelsheim, with the Castle of Hornseck, formerly a stronghold of the Teutonic knights. Right—Ruins of Hornberg, picturesquely situated, and overgrown with ivy. Left—Obrigheim, where the river is crossed by a bridge of boats. Left—Melmeburg, an ancient castle in ruins, believed to have been destroyed during the Thirty Years' War. Right—Zwingenberg, formerly an extensive feudal fortress, defended by eight towers, five of which still remain: it belongs to the Margrave of Baden, who resides here a portion of every year. Right—Eberbuch, a very ancient village, and in the neighbourhood the Katzenbuckel, the highest mountain in the Odenwald. Right—Hirschhorn, with its walls and towers in ruins. Right—Neckarsteinach, the most charming of all the scenes on the banks of this picturesque stream—the four castles of Vorderberg, Mittelberg, Hinterberg, and Schadeck, rising one above another, in close proximity, forming a tout ensemble not soon to be forgotten. They were formerly inhabited by the family of Landschaden. The highest of them, called by the peasantry the "Swallow's Nest," is situated on the verge of a steep and inaccessible precipice, and presents a good specimen of a fastness of the robber knight of the middle ages. Left—Neckargemund, at the mouth of the Elsenz. Left—the Wolfsbrunnen, about two miles above Heidelberg, from which it is a pleasant walk along the banks of the river. In returning, a road, carried on the top of the high land, conducts to the castle of Heidelberg. Wolfsbrunnen is famous for its trout, which are preserved in reservoirs, and attain an enormous size. It is a favourite resort of the students from the university. Left—Heidelberg, see page 441.

HEIDELBERG to FRANKFORT, by Railway, in 3 hrs.

FRANKFORT to COLOGNE, by Railway and Rhine Steamer, in 9½ hours.

COLOGNE to BRUSSELS, by Railway, in 7 hours.

BRUSSELS to LONDON, via CALAIS, in 10¼ hours.

ROUTE 15.

Berne to Thun and Vevey, by the Simmenthal, Saanen, Chateau d'Oex and Gruyeres, and Pass of the Dent de Jaman.

(Distance, 81 English miles.)

BERNE to Thun, see Route 11.—From Thun, a splendid road leads through the Simmenthal and a diligence runs in summer. The journey is rendered delightful by the beautiful and charming scenery with which it abounds. The entrance to the Simmenthal lies between the Stockhorn on the right and the Niesen on the left. It is approached from Thun by the road extending along the margin of the lake and by the banks of the Kander, to the spot where it meets the Simmen, a short distance from the castle of Wimmis, passed on the left.

ERLENBACH is a couple of miles further on, with the Stockhorn rising immediately behind it.

WEISSENBERG.—The Baths of Weissenberg are distant 2½ miles, winding along a romantic and picturesque defile. The Bath-house is constructed of wood; expense of baths and living, 9 or 10 fr. a day.

BOLTINGEN.—A small village built to the south of the castle of Simmeneck, 2600 feet above the level of the sea. Above are the ruins of the castle of Lanbeck.

ZWEISIMMEN—A village of picturesque Bernese wooden houses, containing about 1200 inhabitants, built where the great and lesser Simmen join. Here the road to Bulle and Vevey, verging towards the S.W., leaves the Simmenthal; and crossing the Saanen Moser, leads into SAANEN.—The principal village of the Valley of the Upper Sarine or Saane, all in pasture, and famous for the manufacture of cheese. From here is made the ascent of the SANETSCH PASS. The road, on leaving, is rugged and steep, and will take the traveller, in about 11 hours, to Sion, in the Valais. The Canton of Vaud is entered about a mile below Saanen.

ROUGEMONT.—A small village of no note.

CHATEAU D'OEX.—A small village of 600 inhabitants, 3030 feet above the sea, rebuilt after a terrible conflagration. Crossing the Saanen we traverse the narrow pass of La Tine, amid mountains, rocks, and pines. The road, though rather narrow, is accessible to carriages; and 10½ hours will suffice to accomplish the journey from here to Vevey, with a carriage and pair of stout horses.

MONTBOVON.—A small but pretty village situated in the Canton of Freiburg. A horse-path over the Pass of Dent de Jaman, brings the traveller to Vevey in 6 hours. The views and scenery are perfect. The carriage road leading from Montbovon to Vevey, keeps to the valley of the Saanen. After making a long détour, it passes round the base of the Moleson, (6181 feet), and, winding under the hills, passes by GRUYERES.—A quaint little town or village containing about 400 inhabitants. Its position is very picturesque, being built on the face of a hill, crowned with a castle, which is very remarkable, and an object worthy a visit. The district in which the town is situated is renowned for its cheeses. The old chapel of St. Theodule is also worth a visit. Within it is a monument and effigy of a Count of Gruyères, remarkable for their antiquity. Bulle to Vevey, see Route 11.

Several paths strike out from the Simmenthal, leading across the intervening molasse ridge to the head of the Lake of Geneva, and presenting some of the finest scenery in the Alps. Thus, if the traveller wish to proceed to Bex or Aigle, in the Canton de Vaud, on the railway from Vevey to Sion, he starts from Saanen. The road passes Gestad on the Sarine, a village 1052 metres above the sea; then, crossing the Laubach, you cross the Sarine, and, passing the charming valley of Arnen, with its lovely mountain lake, surrounded by fir forests and pastures, you can reach the Col of Arnen and the Hotel of Diablerets, the centre of many excursions, and a good pension. This way, however, is steep and difficult.

The usual route proceeds from the foot of the Arnenthal to GSTEIG (Hotel, the Bear), 2½ hours from Saanen, situated in a deep ravine, under a great precipice that blocks out the sun for six weeks consecutively in winter. Passing a waterfall and crossing marshy ground, you reach the Col du Pillon, 1 hour 15 min. from Gsteig (1502 metres) in the midst of many cascades that swell the Dard, whose banks you follow to Ormonds Dessus, covered with pastures and chalets. Descending you cross the Grande Eau and reach the hamlet of Les Iles, in a delightful pastoral situation (1 hr. 10 min.), and ascending again you reach in 1 hour the Col de la Croix (1793 metres), with a fine view of the Ormont and Illiez valleys and of Dent de Midi.

Two paths descend from the Col to Bex, one 3½ hours, by Taveyannaz; the other 3 hours, by the Grionne valley. To reach Aigle you descend from the Col du Pillon (1½ hour) to the Hotel du Diablerets and passing Vers l'Eglise, with the hamlet of the Cerf (pension 3 fr. 50 c.) you come, in 2½ hrs. by Combellas, to Sepey. From Sepey, which has many mountain pensions, you reach Aigle in 2½ hours, by a good road. Other paths cross this delightful ridge from Chateau d'Oex to Villeneuve, with charming lake views.

Lastly, from Montbovon you reach Vevey in 7 hours, and Montreux in 6, by the Col de Jaman, commanding views over the Lake of Geneva, beautiful as a dream.

ROUTE 16.

Martigny to Aosta, by the Pass of St. Bernard.

The distance from Martigny to the Hospice is about 27 miles, which can be traversed in a walk of about eight or ten hours, and thence to Aosta in about seven or eight.

Chars take the travellers from Martigny (see Route 11,) to the Cantine, about two hours below the top, whence the ascent to the Hospice is accomplished on mules. The road passes through the Bourg Martigny, and crosses to the left bank of the Drance. From this point it follows the course of the river as far as the villages of Valette and Bouvernier. The road again crossing and recrossing the river, along the Valley of the Drance, proceeds to Sembranchier—a miserable village situated at the foot of Mount Catogne—where the two branches of the Drance unite. A little above this place, very beautiful views in the Val d'Entremont may be enjoyed.

ORSIERES.—A path from here through the Val de Ferret. Nothing remarkable is passed on the way to LIDDES.—A char to Martigny costs 12 frs.; and mules to the Hospice, 6 frs.

ST. PIERRE.—A small and wretched village, venerable by its antiquity. Not far from here is a magnificent cascade, in the Val Orsey. Beyond St. Pierre the path passes through a larch forest, far below which, in the distance, can be seen the course of the Drance. Four miles beyond is the Cantine, a rough inn, where the carriage road stops. Above this plain is the Glacier of Menou, topped by the lofty peak of Mont Velan—the highest part of the Great St. Bernard. Shortly after, the Hôpital is reached, 8000 feet above the level of the sea at the point of separation between the waters that flow into the Adriatic and those that flow to the Mediterranean.

The Hospice of St. Bernard has acquired a world-wide fame for the hospitality of its inmates. It is a stone building, massive and strong, built on the loftiest point of the Pass, exposed in its north-east and south-west sides to every storm, but sheltered on the north-west by Mont Chenelletaz and Mont Mort. The chief building has seventy or eighty beds for the use of travellers, and is capable of affording shelter to over 300. Some days 600 or 700 receive aid and succour. Independent of this building, there is on the other side of the way a house of refuge, called the Hotel de St. Louis, a building erected in case of fire, the Hospice having been once burned down (in 1552). On the ground floor are the stabling, store-rooms, &c. Above these are the sleeping-rooms, the church, and refectory. A flight of steps between the two corridors leads to the drawing room, where visitors are received by the brethren. The reception-room is chastely furnished, and ornamented with paintings, &c., presented by visitors in token of their gratitude to the brethren. The Library is interesting and attractive; it contains a number of the plants, insects, and minerals indigenous to the Alps. It also contains a great many relics of the Temple of Jupiter, which once stood on the Pass, not far from the Hospice (about ¼ mile off, beyond the lake, on the Plain of Jupiter). The figures of bronze, arms, metals, and coins, will interest the antiquarian. Among the bronze relics is an extraordinary uplifted hand, carrying a snake and several toads—a horrible object, perhaps a counter-charm—there are said to be only three such in Europe.

The chapel is a very handsome one, and contains the grave, and a monument erected by Napoleon to the memory of General Dessaix, slain at Marengo.

This monastery was founded in the tenth century by St. Bernard—a member of the noble family of Menthon, in Savoy—who was a canon and archdeacon of Aosta. He governed the convent for forty years, and died in 1008. All the documents, &c., likely to throw light on the circumstances of its foundation, were destroyed by the terrible conflagration of 1552. The monks of the community are regular canons of St. Augustine. Ten or twelve usually live at the convent. Their duty is to assist travellers in the dangers to which they are here continually exposed from the storm and the avalanche, in the discharge of which duty these devoted men often lose their lives. Scarcely a traveller ever passes without paying a visit to the Morgue—in which are deposited the bodies of the unclaimed dead who perish on the mountains.

The visitor can scarcely leave without seeing the Dogs of the Hospice. They are a noble breed, said to be a cross between the Newfoundland and the Pyrenean. They are powerful, of great muscular strength, and remarkable intelligence. Very many of them have perished with the guides. One of them, called "Barry," is reported to have saved fourteen persons. His skin is stuffed, and may be seen at the Museum of Berne.

A quarter of a mile beyond the Hospice, the descent to the Val d'Aosta commences. A very fine view may be had on looking out from the gorge on Mont Mort, towards the Vacherie. Five miles from the Hospice is the hamlet of St. Remy. From here to St Oyen we pass no picturesque scenery. At this pla e the passports are rigidly examined; and unless perfectly correct, the traveller is not permitted to pass. The baggage is closely examined at Etroubles, where also is crossed the branch of the Buttier. From here the road goes down to the village of Gignod. Beautiful indeed, and rich in all the glories of picturesque grandeur, is the scenery of the country we now pass through. The Val d'Aosta, with its trellised vine and luxuriant vegetation and a back ground, filled with the beautiful forms reflected by the snowy tops of the mountains above the Val de Cogne, is interesting and delightful.

AOSTA.—Pop. 7000.—A city built at the confluence of the Buttier and the Doire, in a rich and beautiful valley; remarkable for its antiquities and historical recollections, and for the beautiful scenery surrounding it on every side. It fills a large space in the page of antiquity. Its foundation is set down as being 406 years earlier than that of Rome by Romulus, and as having occurred 1158 B.C. Twenty years before Christ, its inhabitants were reduced to captivity by the Emperor Augustus. He gave his own name to it, Civitas Augusti, on its being rebuilt, and established there a large number of the Prætorian cohorts. The Prætorian Gate, with a Roman Arch, and other remains exist. It gave one archbishop to England—Anselm, the Archbishop of Canterbury in the eleventh century, who was born there. The Cathedral deserves a visit. From Aosta there is regular communication with the railway station at Ivrea, thence rail to Turin, &c.

ROUTE 17.

Thun to Zermatt, Saas, and the Italian Valleys.

N.B.—A league is 3 miles.

From Thun to Kanderstег, by diligence, or on foot. Thence over the Gemmi. Route 12, to Leukerbad and Leuk. From Leuk on to Visp, p. 593. At Visp diverge from main road to Simplon, and follow up the valley by mule path to Stalden, where it forks. Distance from Visp 2 leagues.

(a)—Take right hand valley, that of the Görner Visp. Traces of earthquake of 1855. At Stalden a good inn, Zur Traube. 4 hours from Visp reach St. Nicholas. Hotels, Sun, Star, and Golden Cross Fine view of Bernese Alps from near here. On through Mattsand to Randa, at foot of the Bies Glacier of the Weisshorn to the left, 13,900 feet, first ascended by Tyndal, and the Dom to the right 14,935 feet, the highest Swiss mountain, as Monte Rosa is the highest Italian. Hotels at Randa, Dom, Good Guide, Broentchen. Täschhorn and Dom can be ascended from Randa; former 16 hours, latter 11. On through Täsch and Wilde to Zermatt, 6½ leagues from Visp).

Itinerary from Visp: to Stalden, 2 leagues; Stalden to St. Nicholas, 2½ leagues; St. Nicholas to Randa, 2½ leagues: Randa to Täsch, ½ league; Täsch to Zermatt 1½ league. Fares: a horse to Stalden 5 fr., to St. Nicholas 10 fr., to Zermatt, 22 fr. Hotels at Zermatt—Mont Rosa, by Seiler Brothers, and Mont Cervin, by Seiber. Excursions from Zermatt. Riffelberg, with hotel, 2½ hours from Zermatt. Centre for ascents of Monte Rosa, Cima de Jazzi, &c., and visits to Görner Grat, Görner Glacier, &c.

Continue journey from Zermatt to Col St. Theodule, Breuil, and Val Tournanche, in Piedmont. Journey takes 12 to 13 hours to San Giacomo d'Ayas. Itinerary: to the Col (10,900 ft.) 5½ hrs., 3½ hrs., to the hotel of Giomen 7 hrs., Val Tournanche 9 hrs., Chatillon 12 to 13 hrs. Hotel du Mont Rosa at Val Tournanche This road, takes you five leagues over the ice and snow. From Breuil (Hotel du Mont Cervin) you can strike off by the Cimes Blanches and Val Ghallant to San Giacomo d'Ayas, 2½ leagues, and thence to the Italian Valleys, Lakes Orta and Maggiore, and by rail to Milan.

(b)—From Stalden take left hand fork, following Saaser Visp Valley. Saas, 3 leagues from Stalden. Hotels, Monte Rosa and Monte Moro. Excursions: Village and Glacier of Fee, half an hour; Anclin Glacier, one of the finest in the Alps. Adler Col to Zermatt 13 or 14 hours. Splendid views.

Pass over Monte Moro to Macugnaga and the Italian Valleys. This is a shorter and easier Pass than Col St. Theodul.

Saas to Mattmarksee, a mountain hotel with tarn. Thence to Macugnaga, 7 leagues. Height of Monte Moro, 8368 feet. Descent over snow fields, and near precipices, with a fine view, to Macugnaga. Hotel du Monte Rosa, Hotel du Monte Moro. The most lovely spot in the Alps. Centre of excursions. Thence down Val Anzasca, ½ league, to Borgo, ½ league, to Pestarena, 1 league, to Preguarters, ½ league; to Ceppo Morelli, 1½ league; to Borgone, ½ league; to San Carlo, 1 league; to Ponte Grande, with splendid view, and branch paths to Vals Mastalone and Strona (superb sylvan scenery), ½ league, to Pic di Mulera, 1 league, to Vogogna (Crown inn) on high Simplon road to Baveno and Lake Maggiore.

From Aosta (p. 511) a charming excursion may be made to the unfrequentin district of the Grivola, where the bouquetin or steinbock, extinct in other parts of the Alps, is still to be met with.

Leaving Aosta you follow the left bank of the Dora, and after some miles strike off up a wild ravine, down which a torrent thunders along as it bears its waters to the larger stream.

Following the ravine by a mule path you reach a few houses called Vielle, where quarters may be found for the night. This village, as well as Silvenoiro, or black forest, are in the romantic Vale of Cogne. A little further is Cretaz and at length the village of Cogne, a collection of wretched houses, charmingly situated. Inn, dungeon like, with dirty rooms. Dr. Argentier, an intelligent explorer of the district, lived here for some years. Best guides, the Royal Chasseurs of the pioneers of the king of Italy.

To ascend the Pic of the Grivola, or Corne de Cogné, which rise grandly above the valley, follow the latter a little way from the inn: then strike to the left up a ravine; then leave the ravine by a foot path to the right. Ascent is here rapid and near precipices. On through fir forests to unoccupied chalets, and up a steep incline strewed with masses of debris. You can go thus far with mules. Three-quarters of an hour higher up is the Col of the Grivola, with splendid view of Grivola Pic beyond. It is not desirable for any but professed climbers to attempt the Pic. The summit has been several times attained, especially by M. Glavey and a man named Jeantet. View indescribably grand. Height 3964 metres, or 13,982 ft.

Another easier ascent can be made up Becca di Nona, opposite Aosta. Obtain Chanoin Carrel of Aosta's panorama of the view from Becca di Nona.

ROUTE 18.

Lyons to Pont de Beauvoisin, by Les Echelles, Chambery, and the Pass of Mont Cenis, to Turin.

(Distance, about 180 English miles.)

LYONS TO PONT DE BEAUVOISIN.

CONVEYANCE by diligence or courier every day.

PONT BEAUVOISIN.—Situated on the banks of the Guiers Vif, which is crossed by a bridge. The road from this place is at first flat, but becomes an ascent after a couple of miles are passed. At the height of the ascent, splendid views open up. Soon after we enter the magnificent gorge of La Chaille. The road is constructed of solid masonry, extending along the edge of the precipice. Rugged cliffs, many hundred feet high, line the other side; whilst in the depths below rushes the impetuous torrent.

LES ECHELLES.—A village situated on the Guiers, being the starting point of a road leading to the Grande Chartreuse. We next enter a valley, and pass through the great tunnel cut in the face of the mountain, 25 feet high and 1000 feet long. We follow our route through a rocky ravine.

ST. THEBAUD DE COUX.—A waterfall not far from here has been written of by Rousseau as "La plus belle que le vis de ma vie."

CHAMBERY—described at page 362. From here some very pleasant excursions can be made, particularly those to the baths of Aix and the Lac de Bourget.

Railway to Aix and St. Innocent, also to St Michel. See page 54.

THE DENT DE NIVOLET AND LES CHARMETTES.—Our road proceeds through the valleys of the Arc and Isère. On the right we see Mont Granier, 5700 feet high. The Château Bayard stands on the left bank of the river, a few miles below.

MONTMELLIAN.—Situated on the left bank of the Isère, where the four roads, of Mont Cenis, the Tarentaise, Little St. Bernard and Grenoble, meet. Several handsome country seats, forming a handsome suburb, are around here. At this point the valley of the Isère divides itself into two large plains. Crossing the river, we ascend a hill, and enjoy a magnificent view of the Arc and Isère. The hamlet of Maltaverne is the next place, commanding a very good view of the lofty mountain Cerin, at the opposite side of the Isère. The rivers Arque and Isère join between Maltaverne and AIGUEBELLE, situated at the foot of Mont Cenis. The country about is very unhealthy, the rivers forming marshes, which generate malaria, &c. Issuing from Aiguebelle, we pass under a triumphal arch, and reach

LA GRANDE MAISON.—A short distance beyond La Chambre, on the east, a large valley, called La Madeleine, opens a road to Mousten, the chief place in the valley of the Tarantaise, situated on the high way from the Little St. Bernard to Italy. Crossing the bridge of the Hermillon, and following the base of the mountain of Rocheray, we reach

ST JEAN DE MAURIENNE.—It is the chief place in the valley, among the vineyards of St. Julien, which produce some good wines. Beyond the town we cross the ARVAN, and a little further on, the Arc, after which we arrive at ST. MICHEL.—HOTEL DE LA SAMARITAINE, kept by M. Berigandat, opposite the Railway Station.

A very picturesque little town, surrounded by orchards and meadows.

Here the Summit Railway, over Mont Cenis, began, and ran close to the road, past Modane, Lanslebourg, &c. Part of it, over the summit of the Pass, is superseded by the Tunnel (mentioned below). See page 248.

MODANE, a town among hemp grounds, at the termination of Sterne's "Sentimental Journey." In this part of the valley the bed of the Arc is much confined, and has to flow through a narrow gorge. The road here has been cut for about a league through the mountain. Beyond is Fort Lasseilon, closing the gorge of the Arc. The Pont du Diable is a very striking object

SUSA.—A small town with about 3189 inhabitants situated at the point where the roads over St. Genèvre and Mont Cenis meet. Outside the town is a triumphal Arch, erected in honour of Augustus, 8 B, C. Passing Bruzzolo, St. Ambrogio, and Rivoli, we arrive at

For the Tunnel now completed under Mont Cenis see p. 558.

ROUTE 19.

A Three Weeks Tour in Switzerland.

BY J. K., JUNR.

BASLE.—HOTELS &c., see page 488.

BASLE TO ZURICH.—By railway. But, for a party of three or four, in fine weather, it is much more pleasant to take a carriage from Basle to Baden: starting from one and a half to two hours sooner. In attaining the summit of the eminence, before descending to Brugg, on the Aar, the traveller gets a first view of the Alps of the Oberland.

ZURICH.—HOTELS, &c., see page 508.

ZURICH TO THE RIGHI AND LUCERNE.—The steamer leaves Zurich early in the morning for Horgen, on the south shore of the lake. Passengers can book on board the steamer for the whole route, as far as Arth; fare, 5 frs. Omnibuses wait the arrival of the steamer at Horgen, to convey the passengers to Zug. A good table d'hôte is always ready at the hotel at Zug for the passengers. The steamer then conveys them across the beautifully green lake of Zug to Arth, where the ascent of the Righi commences. The ascent from this side, and descent to Weggis, is recommended in preference to the opposite route. At Arth, horses may be procured for the ascent—or at Goldau, three miles further on. If is well, if the weather be fine, with a probability of much company, to telegraph for your beds before you leave Zurich. There are few finer scenes in Switzerland than the ascent of the Righi from Arth or Goldau. The horse path up from Arth is the best way up. The place whence the great fall occurred that destroyed the former village of Goldau, is plainly seen.

The ascent of the Righi from Arth occupies about 3½ hours. After being roused by the Alpine horn, to see the sunrise, if so fortunate as to have it fine, you descend in 2½ hours to Weggis, on Lake Lucerne (or this may be varied by walking on by the Rigi-Scheideck to Gersau, and taking the steamer there.) This descent is extremely fine, over looking the view of the lake, at an immense depth below you, with Mount Pilatus beyond, and the mountains of the Oberland in the distance. From Weggis to Lucerne by steamer, or row-boat if preferred.

LUCERNE.—HOTELS, &c., see page 498.

Steamer several times a-day in summer from Lucerne to Flueln and back, calling at Weggis, Beckenreid, &c., p. 330, and passing the Field of Grütli and Tell's Chapel, in the Bay of Uri. Travellers going by Altorf and the St. Gothard Pass, leave the steamer at Flueln. Lucerne may be reached from Basle by rail direct.

Tourists who intend passing the Sunday in Lucerne must bear in mind that in the season it is difficult to obtain a bed on Saturday, owing to the great rush of excursionists from the mountains. It is well to secure one on Friday by telegraph.

At Lucerne the curious covered Bridges, and the monument to the Swiss Guards, by Thorwaldsen, are well worthy of inspection.

THE BRUNIG PASS.—To Beckenried by first boat in the morning, thence by diligence at about 10.30 a.m., or by a hired vehicle to Lungern; or by a row-boat to Alpnach; if there is a party, this mode is not only pleasanter, but cheaper. The charge is 1½ franc for the boat, 2 francs each to three rowers, and a trifle for trinkgelt. From Alpnach to Lungern by hired vehicles, passing through the vale of Sarnen and past the lake of that name, and the Lake of Lungern. Or, one may take a ticket at Lucerne by the postal Brünig route to Brienz, or Interlaken; leaving by 6.45 or 9.15 a.m. boat to Alpnach. Fares to Brienz; banquette, 11fr 50c; to Interlaken, 15fr.; there is only one seat in the banquette, the conductor sits on the other; but for an extra charge of 2fr. they will give the second seat. 20 kilos. (44 lbs.) luggage, free, allowed by this route. There are printed tariffs of charges for vehicles, &c., in most parts of the Oberland.

There is an Inn at Lungern. Here the Pass of the Brunig commences, and can be done in carriages, during the summer, when diligences run from Alpnach to both Brienz, and Meyringen, and vice versa, in connection with the steamers on the Lakes of Brienz and Lucerne. But horses can be hired at Lungern. If fine, it is a delightful walk, turning off the road by the footpath to the left, close above Lungern—the scenery grand, yet beautiful—the forests fine, and vegetation most luxuriant. On the top of the Pass the road diverges into the Vale of Meyringen. The right hand leads to Brienz and Interlaken, the left to Meyringen, either of which can be reached the same day easily. The view, on entering the valley, is extremely grand. Opposite to you rises the Faulhorn; to the left are seen the cascades of the Reichenbach; and looking up the valley of the Schiedeck, at the bottom of the Pass, may be seen the Wetterhorn and the Glacier of Rosenlaui. A good carriage road turns off to the left through the covered bridge to Meyringen.

MEYRINGEN.—HOTELS, &c., see page 500.

From the hills behind Meyringen there are some cascades well worthy the traveller's attention. One called the Alpbach, is frequently of immense volume, endangering the existence of the village.

THE PASS OF THE SCHIEDECK.—To be done on foot or horseback. An early start is desirable. This is one of the grandest excursions in the Oberland. The first part is a very steep ascent of about 2300 feet, passing close to the splendid cascades of the Reichenbach; afterwards along the upper valley, between most wild and magnificent crags, over one of which, on the right, falls the noted Seilbach, or Rope-fall, clothed at the base with splendid pine-forests; the lower parts of the valley are filled with most luxuriant vegetation. Before you is the Wetterhorn and the Glacier of Rosenlaui. After proceeding a few miles, you can (close to the Rosenlaui hotel), diverge from the path to the left, and by a sharp half-hour's climb reach the foot of the Glacier. After climbing a little way on to it, you may then pass into a cave inside, with semi-transparent ice for the roof.

Leaving the Glacier, the path is soon regained; and then, passing among the Alpine rhododendron and many other rare and beautiful plants, growing in great profusion, you pursue the main valley until you attain the châlet at the summit of the Pass, from which the view on both sides is very magnificent. Here a footpath to the left along the ridge leading off at once to the Faulhorn, is by far the best and easiest way of ascent of about three hours from the Schiedeck summit.

While the horses are taking their rest here, the traveller may be also gratified by an avalanche from the Wetterhorn, which is towering immediately above.

The descent to Grindelwald is steep and tiresome. A visit paid to the Upper Glacier of Grindelwald in passing, will well repay trouble.

GRINDELWALD.—See page 496.

The view of the Lower Glacier of Grindelwald from the hotel is very fine. On the left of it stands the Mettenberg; on the right the Great Eigher, the Monch, and the Jungfrau. Behind you, to the north, is the Faulhorn; and to your right the carriage-road to Interlaken, through the Lütschenen Thal, one of the four lovely valleys of the Oberland.

THE WENGERN ALP.—This is another splendid excursion, but only to be done on foot or horseback, or by chaise-à-porteur. There is now an hotel on the very top of the pass.

Crossing the stream that flows from the Glacier, the traveller ascends the opposite side of the valley, leaving the road to Interlaken to his right; and traversing the precipitous base of the Great Eigher, and passing both it and the Monch, arrives at the summit. Every point of the ascent is very fine. The constantly changing views of the magnificent range of mountains are a source of excitement, that almost make the traveller forget the fatigue; and at the summit, the Jungfrau, in all its majesty, is suddenly brought before him. There are inns on the road, and a châlet inn on the top where good refreshment may be obtained. The fall of avalanches from the Jungfrau into the Trümeleren Thal, which is about two miles across, may give some correct idea of their size, from the noise caused by them, as it is echoed and re-echoed among the mountain peaks. The descent thence is pretty good, till arriving at the edge of the precipice above the Lanterbrunnen, when it becomes exceedingly steep. After viewing the Staubbach Falls, Interlaken may be reached the same evening.

INTERLAKEN.—HOTELS, &c., see page 496.

This is a good point for a few days' rest, after rough mountain-climbing. Pleasant excursions can be made, viz., to Grindelwald and back, to the Scheidegk, to the top of the Faulhorn, up the vale of Lauterbrunnen, and to the Staubbach, to the village Mürren, to the Falls of Schmadribach, &c. &c.—all so well remembered by the admirers of Longfellow,—over the Wengern Alp, or along the Lake of Brienz, to the Giesbach Falls, and on up the valley of Meyringen and the Grimsel. For the last excursion, a steamer leaves Interlachen. beautiful wood-carving is to be purchased in great variety.

INTERLAKEN TO LEUKERBAD.—THE GEMMI PASS.—This may be done in one day; but is rather too hard work, unless the days be long, as daylight is absolutely needful for the last six hours.

A vehicle may be hired to Frutigen, or Kandersteg, and the horses there taken out, and ridden the rest of the journey. Travellers should start not later than 5 a.m. Or by steamer to Thun, and thence by vehicle to Frutigen. There is a diligence daily at from Thun.

FRUTIGEN.

The Hotels at Frutigen are good; but it is better to rest all night at Kandersteg, near the commencement of the Pass. From it to Leukerbad 6 to 7 hours. A vehicle may be hired from Frutigen to proceed to Kandersteg, or your own retain over night. At Kandersteg the carriage-road en the rest has to be done on foot or horseback, or chaise-à-porteur. The best plan is to engage your horses at Frutigen. On leaving Kandersteg, the steep ascent commences almost immediately; and after two and a half to three hours' climbing, you reach the small châlet, where refreshment is to be had. This Gemmi Pass is noted for its extreme wildness. For miles along the top, the track is through a district almost destitute of vegetation, over the lowest point of the range of the Blumlis Alp. The grandest part, however, is the descent down the face of precipitous cliffs, along which a horse-path has been ingeniously constructed.

The view, immediately prior to this steep descent, is very grand. At your feet lies the village of Leukerbad, at a depth of some 3000 feet, and yet so near that it would seem that you could throw a stone on to it. Looking down the valley of the Dala, and across the valley of the Rhone, the chain of mountains, of which Monte Rosa is the chief, stands before you in all its magnificence. Monte Rosa itself is not however visible, but the Matterhorn is very conspicuous.

LEUKERBAD.—See p. 498.

This romantic spot is shut in on all sides but the south by mountains of the grandest kind, whose perpendicular sides appear to defy all attempts to climb them. It is a favourite resort for invalids, who come to take in the hot Baths. These are supplied by springs of water considerably above one hundred degrees of Fahrenheit. The mode of taking the baths is striking. In a long room are four large tanks, fifteen or twenty feet square, filled with people in thick woollen gowns—men, women, and children, of all ages, mixed together in the same bath, sitting on floating seats up to their necks in the water, and amusing themselves with chess, draughts, books, work, &c., on floating tables, or with coffee, fruit, &c., before them. The usual allowance is a month's course, beginning gradually, but when the cure is in full operation, the allowance is four hours in the morning, and four hours in the afternoon. A visit to these baths should by no means be missed.

LEUKERBAD TO MARTIGNY.—By diligence daily from l'Hotel des Alpes, at 8 a.m., Sion at 3 p.m., and at Martigny at 7 p.m. The charge for a two-horse vehicle, with relays of horses, at Sierre, Sion, Riddes, and containing four persons including the driver, on the excellent road from Leukerbad to Leuk, is 60 francs—viz., to Sierre 22 francs; guide 3 francs, to Sion 10 francs, guide 2 francs; to Riddes 10 francs, guide 1½ franc; to Martigny 10 francs, guide 1½ franc—for one horse to Sierre, and two horses the rest: total, 84 francs: if one horse all through, 44 francs. From Leukerbad to Susten, on the Simplon road, a carriage with two horses costs 20 francs.

Martigny may also be reached from Sion by railway, and there is a railway from Martigny to Bouveret on the Lake of Geneva; whence there are steamers twice daily to Vevey, Lausanne, and Geneva.

In ascending from Martigny to Leukerbad, it is considered best to take a mule at Sierre for the rest of the way, and so ascend the right bank of the Dala, passing along some wonderful terraces cut in the rock. The whole Pass up the Dala is one of extreme wildness and beauty. In descending the valley to Martigny, it is better to keep the regular road, from which the grandeur of the valley will be as well appreciated.

MARTIGNY.—HOTELS:—Various. See page 500.

At the foot of the valley of the Rhone, which here turns suddenly to the right, to join the Lake of Geneva.

MARTIGNY TO CHAMOUNI—by the Tête Noire, or Col du Balme.

Mules may be had for either route: each mule, 12 francs; each guide, 12 francs: mules cannot be had without a guide or attendant; but one guide will do for any number of mules. A chaise-à-porteur and six men, cost 72 francs—with eight men, 96 francs.

The ascent commences within one mile of the town, where four branches off to the right from the St. Bernard road, and is one continued steep unbroken ascent, till you attain the summit of the Forclaz. The paths for the Col de Balme diverge to the left, that to the Tête Noire to the right at the bottom of the descent, in the Val de Trient. The attraction to the Col de Balme consists in the splendid view, if fine, of the whole of the Mont Blanc range, the moment you attain that spot, after crossing the valley of Trient; but to any one going for the first time, especially if any doubt exist as to the clearness of Mont Blanc from clouds, we recommend the Tête Noire. You descend, in this case, down the vale of Trient, till you join the Val d'Orsine.

Be sure not to allow the mule-driver to stop to dine at the village in the vale of Trient, but to go on to the hotel at the Tête Noire, where, instead of passing an hour in a very tame hollow, you spend it in the most beautiful spot in Switzerland, and not half an hour's ride from the former place. This Pass is constructed round the face of the mountain, forming the angle between the two valleys, but at an immense precipitous height above the streams. Having come down the Trient valley, you now ascend the Val d'Orsine, along this splendid gallery; continuing on, you arrive at a point where the path is again on a level, from which it gradually ascends to the highest part of the road, called the Montets. Before reaching this spot, if fine, the Col de Balme is seen towering before you, and then Mont Blanc itself, and the different Aiguilles forming the Mont Blanc range. The descent is through Argentières, passing the glaciers of Tour, Argentières, and de Bois, and so on into the valley of Chamouni.

CHAMOUNI.—Several good Hotels.—See page 492.

FROM CHAMOUNIX TO GENEVA.—From Chamouni to Sallenches, along the new road, finished in 1869. The views of Mont Blanc are magnificent. (See Route 20.) From Sallenche to Geneva by diligence.

ROUTE 20.

Geneva to Chamounix, and Excursions thence.

GENEVA—See page 494.—(Distance, 80 English miles.) The journey is performed as far as St. Martin by diligence in eight or nine hours, and by light carriage in four-and-a-half hours; thence to Chamounix.

Charges for carriages uncertain—do not depend upon the voiturier, but ascertain the point from a respectable landlord, (experto crede) so also as to back fare, bonnemains, &c.

A light carriage for four can be had to go from Geneva to Sallenches or St. Martin; from whence a lighter carriage can be had to carry two or three persons to Chamounix; the former for about 30 frs. and 3 frs. to the driver, the latter 15 frs. and 2 frs. to the driver.

Leave Geneva by the Grande Place, and pass, for some miles of the journey, through a picturesque country studded with neat villas, &c., to CHESNE—A large village situated on the Seime. At this point the eye rests upon some magnificent views—the Voirons on the left, Mount Salève and the range of the Jura on the right. Departing hence, cross the stream which separates the Genevese Canton from the acquired territory of France, and arrive at ANEMASSE. Beyond this place the road leads up the valley of the Arve; the Monog is crossed by a pretty and lofty bridge. The next station is

NANGY—close to which village, on the right, are some ruins of the Chateau of Faucigny, on a cliff to the left of the road. The road proceeds on close by the Mole, a fine hill surmounted by an obelisk. Passing through some beautiful scenery and an avenue of trees, the road enters BONNEVILLE.—Inn: Couronne.

The chief place of the province of Faucigny, with 1306 inhabitants. It is an excellent mid-day halt. A column, ninety-five feet high, erected to honour the memory of Carlo Felice, at the end of the stone bridge, is surmounted by a statue of the king. After crossing this bridge, the road passes between the bases of the Mole and Mont Brezon, which on the right bounds the valley of the Arve. A new line of road extending from Bonneville to Chamounix was undertaken by express command of Napoleon III., on his visit to Mont Blanc. The road continues immediately under the Brezon until it crosses the Arve on a stone bridge, and enters CLUSES.—Inns: Parfaite Union and Balances.

A very old town, nearly consumed in 1843, but now nearly rebuilt, near the mouth of the gorge. It has a population of 1800; a large number of these are celebrated as watch-makers, in which capacity very many of the inhabitants of this place have founded establishments in Strassburg, Lyons, Augsburg, &c.

Departing from Cluses, our road is carried through the defile and beneath grand Alpine precipices. In some places they seem to overhang the traveller. A very agreeable visit may be made to the Grotto of Balme, 800 feet above the valley, shortly before arriving at Maglan; at La Balme are mules for the ascent. The depth of the grotto is more than 1800 feet. The peaks of Mont Douron are seen on the other side of the valley.

MAGLAN.—On the right of the Arve, situated beneath lofty mountains, lies this straggling village of about 1800 inhabitants, who bear much the same migratory character as the people of Cluses, and are just as remarkable for their foreign establishments. Proceeding beyond this place the valley widens; and our road touches on the Nant d'Arpenaz, one of the highest waterfalls in Savoy The stream is like a zig-zag cascade, and crossing the road beneath a bridge, falls into the Arve. Travellers en route from Geneva will be pestered with idle vagrants offering them minerals for sale, guides, &c., vending echoes by firing pistols, &c., whom they should discountenance.

The valley now loses much of its former narrowness; and from Sallenches up to the base of the Douron, lie before us rich and verdant fields. Direct above rise, 8000 feet above the sea, the peaks of the Varens, as we enter ST. MARTIN, and soon after find ourselves in the yard of the Hotel de Mont Blanc. Crossing the bridge, situated about 100 yards from the inn, our road leads on to Sallenches. From the bridge there is a delightful and magnificent view of Mont Blanc—so gratifying, that it is worth the entire journey from England. Forclaz, in its pine-clad armour and green helmet, is seen; and, towering above, are the Aiguille de Goûté, the Dome de Goûté, and the summit of the highest mountain in Western Europe, 12 miles distant, supported by the ridges of Aiguilles, the intersecting spaces being studded with glaciers.

SALLENCHES.—Inns: Hotel Chalet Suisse; Bellevue and Leman. A small town with a population of 2000; rebuilt on the ruins of the former town, entirely consumed on Good Friday in 1840. Here chars, mules, and guides can be hired for Chamounix: char, 12 francs; with two horses, 18 francs; and postilion, 2 francs.

The Journey occupies about five hours; the roads are steep and rough, and only accessible for light chars.

Persons who desire to visit Chamounix, and return by Geneva on foot, had better proceed from St. Martin to Chêde, Servoz, and Chamounix, by the right bank of the Arve, returning by the Col de Forclaz, and the Baths of St. Gervais, to Chêde.

An agreeable drive may be taken from Sallenches to the Baths, about two miles off, in the gorge of the Bon Nant—a small stream descending from the Bon-homme. The baths are situated at the extremity of the glen, which cannot be left unless by returning to the entrance, where two roads branch off—one up a steep ascent to St. Gervais, a sweet village in the Val Montjole, passing the hamlets of Bionnay and Tresse, as it leads to Contamines and the pass of the Bonhomme. The road leads to Chêde across the valley of the Arve by Passy.

Digitized by Google

Above St. Martin and Sallenches the valley of the Arve spreads itself out before us; and all along to Servoz, magnificent views greet the eye.

Close by Chêde there is a beautiful cascade on the left; and after attaining a considerable height, on the left the Lac du Chêde, now filled with mud and stones. Our road here makes a deep curve along the bed of a wild torrent, from which there is a path to SERVOZ, where refreshments can be had for man and horse, and guides hired for the Buet, one of the panorama-commanding ascents, from which a splendid view of Mont Blanc may be enjoyed. From its summit, 10,500 feet above the level of the sea, a vast extent of horizon stretches out bounded by the mountains of St. Gothard on the east, and by the ranges extending into Dauphiné on the west. The Buet can be ascended from the Servoz side; but no traveller should attempt its ascent without a good guide. See further details, page 17, Bradshaw's "Handbook to Switzerland and Bradshaw's "Pedestrian Route-book to Switzerland," p. 168.

On leaving Servoz our road crosses the torrent of the Dioza, and follows close to the base of the Breven. Near the Pont de Pelissier, which the road crosses, are the ruins of the castle of St. Michel.

Les Montets, a steep and stony ascent, next interposes itself in our way, and we find ourselves on the upper storey, as it were, of the valley of the Arve. In close proximity to the mountain monarch, though we cannot see his head, which is concealed by the stupendous Dome de Goûté.

We now proceed through some beautiful meadows to Les Ouches, the first village met with in the valley. Two miles above this place we meet the first of the white lines of glaciers, which begin to be seen from Les Montets, extending themselves into the valley. It is called Taconey, but is a mere nothing compared to those around it. As we proceed numerous torrents are passed, and the hamlet of Bossons is reached, near the glacier of the same name. The brilliancy of its ice, pinnacle, sixty or seventy feet high, renders it a beautiful object.

The Arve is crossed a short distance above the Glacier of Bossons, and our road follows its right bank. The Glacier du Bois is at the head of the valley, a league beyond

CHAMOUNIX.—See page 492.

EXCURSIONS FROM CHAMOUNIX.

ASCENT OF MONT BLANC.—Who that has ever visited Chamounix has not felt the excitement and delight of foreign travel? He looks from his hotel window, and sees the bustle consequent on numerous arrivals and departures. Guides in one corner, and tourists speculating on their plans for the morrow in another, keep up a continual interest; and then above him are the vast walls and pinnacles of the Alps, the "Palaces of Nature."

The tour of Mont Blanc can be made with the greatest advantage from Chamounix over the Col de Bon Homme to Cormayeur in the Val d'Aosta, where Mont Blanc is seen in grander proportions and mightier lineaments than from the north side; and from thence by the Col de Ferret, or Great St. Bernard to Martigny, returning by the Tête Noire pass to Chamounix. The guide taken at Chamounix is not allowed to proceed further than Martigny, where a local guide must be engaged for the remainder of the journey. Should the journey be ended at Martigny, the guide returning to Chamounix can only demand one day's pay.

MONTANVERT.—A pleasant excursion can be made to this place. (Inn Pavilion.) The excursion is generally undertaken for the purpose of making a visit to the Mer de Glace; the stupendous series of glaciers ending in Glacier du Bois, and the source of the Arveyron, in the valley of Chamounix. The ascent is accomplished by a mule path in 2½ hours, and the descent in 2 hours.

We first cross the Meadows and the Arve by a path traversing the valley to the foot of the Montanvert. Here the path leads up a beautiful forest of pines, meeting at intervals very steep ascents. Large masses of rock, and uprooted trees, mark the direction of the avalanches that have fallen at different periods. About a league further on is a ravine, formed by avalanches. Mounting towards the top, we see, looking above the pine-tops, the Aiguille de Dru, a gigantic obelisk of granite. On the summit, at the MONTANVERT, we find an Inn, called the Pavilion, and good accommmodation.

A short but steep descent leads to the Mer de Glace, or Icy Sea, so called from its resemblance to the waves of the sea after a storm. The path passes by the Rocher des Anglais, and several mountains environ the wonderful Mer de Glace Across it are some of the most majestic of those mountains that form such a striking peculiarity in the scenery of Chamounix. On the north-east is the Aiguille de Dru, the nearest; on the south-west is the Aiguille de Charmoz; and on the left of the former is the Aiguille de Boehard—a forest of pinnacles, appearing to hold up the giant of them all—called the Aiguille Verte.

Parties not proposing to cross the Mer de Glace should descend upon it and walk for 100 yards, as it is only by so doing they can clearly recognise its brilliancy of hue and deep pure colour of blue.

The JARDIN.—A visit from the Mer de Glace to the Jardin, in the remote recesses of Mont Blanc, forms one of the finest excursions in the entire range of the Alps. Persons wishing to enjoy it thoroughly should make the Pavilion their resting place for the night, where they will find comfortable sleeping accommodation. No one should attempt the passage without a guide, who can carry provisions. Bread, cold meat, and wine, are the best to be taken.

We follow the south-west side of the Mer de Glace and after ascending either of the two passages called Les Ponts, we descend to the edge of the glacier, and continue for some time along its moraine. Here is a very pure fountain, issuing through a natural arch in the rock. The path at length reaches the point where the Glaciers de Tacul and de Lechaud unite. Near the latter, are four parallel and protracted heaps of rubbish on the Mer de Glace. After traversing the latter for two hours, we arrive at the foot of the Talefre. The view of the Glacier de Talefre is here very sublime and awful. To attain the summit, we must ascend the rock called the Couvercle, which shoots up into the inaccessible Aiguille de Talefre. The necessity for here scrambling with both hands and feet, has gained for the passage the name of Egralets, or Petits Dégrès. It is, however, more difficult than dangerous. The plain of the Aiguille de Talefre affords an agreeable resting-place. Amid the labyrinth of granite blocks at the foot of this glacier is a rock, called the Pierre de Bérenger, which affords shelter to those surprised by bad weather. In the midst of the ice and snow is a flat rock, which, at the close of August, is covered with a layer of greensward, diversified with a variety of beautiful Alpine plants. This is the Jardin of this palace of nature, and its beauty can only be exceeded by the splendid sublimity of the surrounding objects. The journey from Montanvert to the Jardin can be performed in twelve hours, including two or three hours to rest.

Beyond the Jardin, is a place called Les Courtes, very difficult and dangerous of access, where minerals, &c., are collected.

In descending, we can avoid the Egralets by taking a direction across the glacier, a long and steep descent, which leads to the Glacier de Lechaud, abruptly terminated by the Aiguille de Lechaud and the Grand and Petit Jorasse. It requires nearly five hours to walk from Montanvert to the Jardin, and six hours to return thence to Chamounix.

The Flegère will also prove a delightful excursion, and enable one to enjoy an admirable view of the great monarch of mountains.

Ladies will find this an exceedingly agreeable spot to view Mont Blanc in. The ascent can be accomplished by mules all the way up, and it is one of the best in the valley.

In case the traveller has not much time to devote to the excursions about Chamounix, the two most worthy of visits are the Montanvert and Flegère.

The Breven also forms a favourite excursion, and, though many ladies perform the ascent, yet it is fatiguing. Returning from it to Chamounix, the journey can be varied by taking the west side of the Breven, above the valley of Dioza, close by the lake, and then descending by the Chalets of Calaveiran, towards the village of Chapeau, whence a path leads down to Les Ouches, in the valley of Chamounix.

Source of the Arveyron.—If we would avoid a separate excursion, we should immediately descend from the summit of Montanvert to the source of the Arveyron, which issues from the Glacier des Bois. The descent is along a hollow, wrought on avalanches, and called La Filia. It is very steep, but not dangerous, and may be undertaken on foot

The Ascent of Mont Blanc.—Of late years the feat of ascending this mighty mountain has become quite as common and fashionable as it was before rare and exceptional. The adventure—a daring one enough in its way—requires the aid of half a dozen guides.

Mont Blanc, every schoolboy knows, is the highest mountain in Europe (14780ft.) except the Elbarz and Kasbek peaks in the Caucasus. It is situated between the valleys of Chamouny and Entrèves. It has three principal summits; the most westerly, called the Dome du Gouté, that in the middle the Bosse du Dromadaire, and the most easterly the Tacul. It requires two days for the excursion from Chamouny to the top of Mont Blanc—the first from the former place to that called Les Grands Mulets, where the shelter of a rock can be obtained; the second from this spot to the summit and back. Those who make the attempt from the mountain of La Côte, proceed from the Prieuré to the village of Bossons, turn aside on the right near the foot of the glacier, and proceed to the hamlet Du Mont. A little further begins the ascent, which follows the bank of the torrent that issues from the Glacier de Taconay. Mules can proceed to the distance of two miles from the Prieuré; but the remainder must be performed on foot.

Though it may be very gratifying to make this ascent, yet it is dangerous, and should not be hastily attempted, as it must be considered as hardly justifiable to endanger, not only one's own life, but the lives of the guides.

ROUTE 21.

From Geneva to Sixt.

64 Kilometres (42¾ miles). Diligence, carriage road.

The valley of Sixt is one of the most charming in the Alps; and from it a series of splendid passes lead to Chamouni and to Champery, at the foot of Dent du Midi, Canton de Valais, (see Route 20) As far as Nangi you follow the high-road from Geneva to Chamouni, 15 kilometres (10 miles.) Two kiloms. from Nangi you turn off to St. Jevire (Hotel, the Crown), 28 kiloms. (19¼ miles), on through Tanninges (Hotels, Balances & Lion d'Or).

Next important place Samoens (Hotels, Poste, Croix d'Or). Good guides, Gallet, Gurnie. On the banks of the Giffre, fine cascade (630 feet). Nant d'Au, 56 kiloms. (38 miles) from Geneva. Advancing, pass a fine defile of the Giffre, near la Balme, to the abbey of Sixt (Hotel and Pension, des Cascades). 1 hour, 20 mins. from Samoens. Luxurious growth of timber-trees, and centre of excursions. At ten minutes, cascade of the Dard, 1200 feet descent. The Fer à Cheval, surrounded by peaks and cascades. Beyond, the Vallée de Combes, with many cascades, 2 hours 30 minutes, to the Lac de Gers, to Vaudru 2672 metres, with a view of Mont Blanc, Dauphiné, Lake of Geneva, &c. Mont Buet, 6 hrs, 30 mins. to 7 hrs. up. Road by forests and cascades, Rouget, and Joux Bas. You can descend from the Buet to Chamouni, 6 hours, by the Pierre à Berard. ROUTE 22.

Down the Rhine, from Bingen and Mayence to Bonn, (INCLUDING ITS FINEST SCENERY).

For the ascent, see p. 421.

Kreuznach to Bingen (Bingerbrücke June.) 1 German miles, 4¾ English; fare, 1st cl. 13 sgr.; 2nd cl. 9 sgr.; time, 18 minutes.

At Bingerbrücke is the great Junction for the Rhine railway down to Coblentz and up to Mayence, and for the Wiesbaden and Frankfort line.

From Bingerbrücke you can proceed along the Rhine by rail or steamboat, but the latter method is preferable, if the object be to view the scenery.

Bingen.—(Hotels: Englischer Hof, Bellevue, Victoria)—Is an ancient town, in a picturesque position where the Nahe joins the Rhine, close to the finest Rhine scenery, and opposite some of the most noted vineyards of the Rhine district, Rudesheim and Assmannshausen. Pop. 7000. Bingerbrücke Junction is the great central knot of railroads—west to Paris, south to Mayence, Heidelberg, Strassburg, and Bâle; east to Wiesbaden, Frankfort, Homburg, and the Brunnen of Nassau; north to Coblentz, Cologne, and Belgium.

By Rail to

Mayence is 4 2-10th German miles (18 Eng.) from Bingerbrücke. Pop. of Mainz or Mayence, 54,920. Garrison now entirely Prussian; very strong town. Birthplace of Gutenberg, inventor of printing (invention 1442). Cathedral has a painting of Schwanthaler; there is a statue of Gutenberg by Thorwaldsen on the Theaterplatz; and the Drusus thurm is of Roman times. Distance to Frankfort 4 6-10th German miles (18 Eng.) up the Main.

Frankfort (Prussia.)—Hotels: see page 4 7. Restaurants: Bohm, Weil, Jouy. Cafés: Milani, Pazzol. Telegraph: Paula-platz and Borse. Post-office, Zeil 52. Cathedral partly burnt down 1867. The Roemer, or Hotel de Ville, has some fine salles, portraits of many German emperors. Ariadneum has the celebrated group of Ariadne, in marble, by Dannecker. Monument of Gutenberg; Statue of Goethe (born at Frankfort), by Schwanthaler, and of Schiller. Many walks.

Baths near Frankfort. 1. Wiesbaden (Prussia).—Distance, 5 6-10ths German miles (22¾ Eng. miles). Time, 1 hour 5 mins. Fare, 1st class, 2 fl. 15 kr. Hotels: see page 466.—Adler, Nassauer Hof, Grunerwald. Pop. 35,564. Waters, 37°5 to 68°75 Cent., chloraric and sodic, frequented by 30,000 bathers a year. Most copious spring, the Kochbrunnen. The Kursaal is a vast edifice, with a ballroom 150 feet long. Gaming tables, cafés, &c. A theatre with good representation all the year.

2. Homburg.—Distance, 2¾ German ml. (12 ml.) Rail time 30 m. Fare, 1st cl. 1 fl. Hotels:—In Hesse Homburg: see page 441. These baths, now very frequented, are chloraric, sodic, iron, and gaseous. The Kurhaus is the finest in Germany, with ball room, concert room, gaming tables cafés, and beautiful walks near it.

From Wiesbaden you reach Schlangenbad 2 German miles by rail, and 1 hr. in diligence.

At SCHLANGENBAD, in Prussia, see page 465. Hotels: Victoria, Nassauer Hof. Picturesque position among large oak woods. Two bathing establishments; chloraric sodic waters. Pretty walks near. In 1 hour the diligence takes you on from Schlangenbad to SCHWALBACH. See page 465. Annual number of bathers, 3000. Carbonate, calcareous, and iron waters. Walks near, very pretty.

To return to Bingen, see page 429.

Bingerbrücke to Coblentz by steamer or rail, the former preferable to see the scenery. 4 h. 45 m. descent; ascent 7 h. Fares, 1 thaler 6 silver groschen. Descending you pass the most remarkable Points on the Rhine:—viz., Mausethurm in the river with a legend; castles of Rheinstein, Sonneck, Wisperthal, Bacharach, Strahleck, the Pfalz, another picturesque castle in the river, Caub, Oberwesel, St. Goar, the Rheinfels, the Lurley Rocks, the Cat and Mouse towers, Boppard, Liebeneck, Lahnstein, and Stolzenfels, palace of the King of Prussia.

Coblentz, in Prussia. See p. 427. Several old churches. A Roman bridge on the Moselle House of the sacristan of St. Florin is one of the oldest in Europe.

Fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, opposite is the Prussian Gibraltar, 123 metres above the Rhine. Has magazines with supplies for ten years. Since 1866 has cost Prussia 100,000 000 fr. View of Rhine and Moselle superb; fee, 5 sil. groschen.

COBLENTZ to EMS, 2 8-10ths German ml. (10 English), up the Lahn. Hotels at EMS: See page 456. Many furnished lodgings. Best on the left bank of the Lahn. Cabs and asses, with a tariff. Noted waters, carbonate and calcareous (22° to 59° Cent.). Old and new Kurhaus—the latter the best. Balls and concerts. Fine walk in the woods.

Descent of the Rhine from Coblentz to Cologne by Bonn. To Bonn 7 7-10ths German ml. (33 Eng. ml.); rail or boat. Time by boat 4 h. 30 m.; going up 7 h. 30 m. Fare 1 thaler 6 silver groschen.

Pass Andernach, a very ancient town, Rolandseck, Drachenfels, the noted Sieben Gebirge hills, and come to Bonn.—HOTELS: see page 427.

Excellent university. Library of 140,000 vols. Museum of Rhenish and other antiquities. Aula, with frescoes by Cornelius. Hofgarten. Kreuzberg pilgrimage. Godesberg.

TOURS IN FRANCE.

In the descriptive portion of this Guide we give the leading routes through Belgium, whilst we have provided for the traveller through Switzerland in the preceding pages of this Special Edition. And now in order that the tourist in France should be equally well catered for, we subjoin some valuable routes through that country.

ROUTE 23.

London to Paris, via Dover & Calais.

For description of route from London to Dover, and thence to Calais, passport information, management of baggage, &c. see page 34).

Calais.—See p. 360 —Quitting this station, the railway almost makes the circuit of the town, and passes through a low and flat country.

Ardres.—A small fortified place, memorable as being close to the spot where in 1520, the famous meeting took place between Henry VIII. of England and Francis I. of France, called the Field of the Cloth of Gold, situated to the west, midway between this station and Guisnes. The next stations arrived at are places of no importance.

St. Omer.—See page 388.

Departing hence, we pass Eblinghem station, and reach

Hazebrouck, whence there is a branch line to Dunkirk, see page 366. Our journey is continued via Bethune, unmarked by any particularity of character.

Arras—See page 353.

Nothing of interest occurs in passing Bolleux, Achiet, Albert, and Corbie stations, till we arrive at Amiens—See page 357. Trains run from here to Abbeville and Boulogne. Refreshments can be had; the time allowed is about twenty minutes: coffee, tea, bread and butter, 1 fr.; chop, a glass of wine, and bread, 1 fr.

Conveyance to Beauvais through Noiremont: 10 English miles. Pass the stations of Boves, where remains of a castle upon a hill are in sight from the rail, Ailly, and Breteuil, whence diligences go to Beauvais and St. Quentin, St. Just, and Clermont, and arrive at Clermont-sur-Oise.—Inn: Croissant.

A small town on the slope of a hill, whose summit is crowned by a Castle, now used for a female penitentiary. It was the birth-place of the astronomer Cassini.

Diligences from here to Beauvais.

Liancourt Station is next met with, before arriving at Creil.—The railway, which previously traversed the chalky high lands of Picardy, now descends into the valley of the Oise, winds amid agreeable scenery to the stations of St. Leu, (whence there are diligences to Senlis), Boran, Beaumont-Sur-Oise, (a small town hemmed in by a round tower and old Castle, with a population of 2100), Ile-Adam and Auvers, and reaches Chantilly—See page 363.

St. Denis.—See page 388.

Paris—See page 377.

Since the opening of the Railway from Calais to Boulogne direct, the mails are carried via Calais, Boulogne, and Amiens. See page 18 for Special Tidal and Mail Trains and Steamers.

ROUTE 24.

London to Paris, via Boulogne.

This route is an agreeable one. The journey from London to Folkestone is performed through a beautiful country; the sea passage across is expeditious, and the steamboats are excellent.

A steam-boat communication exists between London and Boulogne direct.

For information as to the course to be pursued on landing, in reference to luggage, &c., see p. xlii.

The Railway station is opposite the harbour; and the passenger receives two tickets, one for his fare (which he should always have ready to show), the other for his luggage. At the sound of the bell he should leave the waiting-room and proceed to the carriage. The distance from Boulogne to Paris is 157½ English miles.

From Boulogne the railway turns a little to the west of the post road, and makes a lengthened detour, going close to the river Liane, the high grounds overhanging which form a very pretty prospect, until its arrival at Pont-de-Briques, close to a village of the same name which we do not see. To the right we see the De Cloche ville château, in which Napoleon once lodged. The next station is Neuchâtel, 6½ m. from Boulogne, after passing through the forest of Hardelot. Close by Condette, famous for game and for its large rabbit burrow. Hence for 8½ miles to Etaples.—17 English miles—An old town, now almost in ruins, with a population of 2700, situated on the left of the mouth of the Canche. Adjoining the station is the cemetery.

The road proceeds by a viaduct 900 feet long, and takes in a good view of the sea and sand banks, as it approaches Montreuil-Verton, 24 miles from Boulogne, situated on a hill, and remarkable for a lofty flamboyant Church, with a magnificent west door under the towers. From the line we see Ilerdin, amid gardens, meadow-land, and water ponds, and shortly after arrive at

Rue—34 miles from Boulogne—A small but deeply interesting town. Its chief object of interest is the church of the Holy Spirit, or Saint Esprit, which will well repay a visit. Not far from here is Crecy, on the field of which Edward III. fought his battle in 1346, and hence called "the battle of Crécy" Agincourt, where Henry gained the victory of 1415, is 16 miles from Crécy. Passing the station of Noyelle, we arrive at Abbeville—See page 3 0—49½ English miles from Boulogne. The railway from here to Amiens directs its course up the left bank of the Somme. The first station from Abbeville is Pont Remy—54 English miles—A small village on the right bank of the Somme, remarkable for its old castle. Six miles further on is Longpré, surrounded by very pretty and picturesque suburbs. The road then passes through deep cuttings, completely hemming in the view. Before reaching Hangest, we see at a distance the Camp l'Etoile, an old Roman fort, oval-shaped.

Hangest—64 English miles from Boulogne; whence we pass on to Picquigny—4 miles from Hangest—A village of 600 inhabitants, famous in history as the place where Louis XI. and Edward IV. met to sign the Treaty called after that place. The distrust of both monarchs was so great, that a barrier of strong wooden palisades was placed between them, and room enough only left them to shake hands. Close to the church is the ruined Castle, celebrated in her letters by Madame de Sévigné. Departing hence, we pass Ailly and reach Amiens—76 English miles from Boulogne, and 91½ from Paris.

For description of route from here to Paris, see preceding route 23.

ROUTE 25.

London to Paris, by Southampton and Havre.

Havre.—See page 368.—The Railway departing from Havre terminus, situated close to the Cours Napoleon, passes through a street of gardens, villas, and guinguettes, as far as Graville, to the right, a little above the road, and interesting because of its Norman Church, and dating from the eleventh century. From here the railway proceeds along the side of a sloping hill, and takes in at intervals a view of the Seine, whose embouchure is seen now and again between the trees and houses, until our arrival at Harfleur—A small town of no importance. Its church, a building of the fifteenth century, is surmounted by a tower and spire, and ornamented by a fringed portal. From the Chateau of Orcher, on the heights above the town, a splendid view of the river can be enjoyed.

St. Romain and Beuzeville are next arrived at. At the latter the railway ascends, and near Fiurville it passes, over a viaduct of 48 brick arches, the highest 106 feet above the ground, and requires an extra engine.

Bolbec and Nointot—Bolbec is a manufacturing town, on the right bank of the river Bolbec, in one of the little valleys intersecting the Pays de Caux. It has a large number of cotton mills and printworks, bleaching-grounds, &c. Lillebonne, a venerable old town, five miles from here, deserves a visit, to enable the tourist to view its Roman theatre. Five miles from the last station we come to Alvimare, whence the railroad proceeds through the centre of the Pays de Caux, a high, fertile table land, intersected by watercourses, and arrive at Yvetot—An industrious town, nearly composed of timber houses, and carrying on some manufacture in cotton, otherwise noticeable for the "Roi d'Yvetot" mentioned in Béranger's song. Its population is 9,100. Motteville and Pavilly are next passed. The railway then descends from the table land of the Pays de Caux into the basin in which Rouen is situated, and arrives at Barentin—A small town with 2,600 inhabitants, and the seat of some cotton mills. Coming to this station, the road is carried over a curved viaduct of twenty-seven arches, each sixty feet span. From here the railway crosses the valley of Barentin, is carried over the high grounds, and passes through the heights of Picoy Poville by a tunnel one mile and three furlongs long, sweeps over an embankment and viaduct of eight arches, and arrives at Malaunay (here is the junction line to Dieppe). Thence it passes on to Maromme, and proceeds through a country full of mills and factories to Rouen, before reaching which station, in the Rue Verte. It has to pass through three tunnels and over a viaduct. It penetrates beneath the suburbs of Cauaine, Beauvoisine, and St. Hilaire, near which it passes a second tunnel 1,530 yards long, takes a sweep and enters the third tunnel, 1,133 yards long, under the hill of St. Catherine, describing a radius of nearly half a mile.

Rouen Station (described at page 387) lies in a hole, and is shut in by escarpments of stone, excluding all view of the town. There is also a station on the left bank. Steamers run during the summer months to Havre, and throughout the year as far as Bouille; see alphabetical list of sailings.

Leaving the Rouen Station, the railway passes along the right bank of the Seine, through St. Etienne de Rouvray and Sotteville, to Oisel Junction, or Tourville—Where passengers get out for Elbeuf.

[ELBEUF.—An exclusively manufacturing town, the Leeds of France—having a population of 25,700, and about 20,000 weavers in the adjoining communes.] From Tourville, the road passes by a short tunnel through the hill of Tourville, to Pont de l'Arche—A small town with a gothic church, containing some curiously painted glass. A bridge of 22 arches crosses the Seine here. The railway leaves by the left bank of the Seine, and again crosses the river, before arriving at

St. Pierre de Vauvray:—[Five miles west is Louviers —a manufacturing town, with thirty cloth manufactories and a number of spinning mills.] The road is carried through two tunnels, near Le Grand Villiers, before reaching Gaillon—Whence omnibuses go to Auteuil and Andelys. Here is a large penitentiary; and in the distance, five miles north of the road, rises the Château Gaillard—a magnificent ruin, a lofty rock, at whose base the Seine flows. This was the favourite castle of Richard Cœur de Lion.

Vernon.—Inn:—Grand Cerf.

An old town giving a name to an English family, beautifully situated, and having a population of 7,400. Its houses are generally timber-framed, and its streets narrow, which renders its tout ensemble rather picturesque. Its church and tower are objects of interest. Leaving Vernon, the railway runs close by the river at the base of the high ground, to Bonnieres, at a short distance from which it goes through a tunnel 2,480 yards long, driven through a hard, chalky and flinty bed, and skirts Rosny Forest—felled at one time by Sully of its timber, to the value of 100,000 francs, in order to pay his royal master's debts. Ivry, where Henry defeated the League, 1590, is 22 miles from Rosny.

Mantes — Inns: — Rocher de Cancale, and Grand Cerf.

A very handsome town, on the left bank of the Seine. Its chief objects of interest are the Cathedral of Nôtre Dame, an elegant gothic building, built for Blanche of Castile and her son St. Louis; and the Tower of St. Madou. It was here that William the Conqueror received the injury which terminated in his death a few days afterwards, at Rouen. The railway now enters a cutting, and proceeds through a beautiful country to Epone, where we see a fine church of the twelfth century. Meulan and Triel are next passed—the former, a town on the right bank of the Seine, containing several manufactories and corn mills; and the latter, a place famous for its plaster quarries.

Poissy is a small town, situated at one of the extreme points of the forest of St. Germains, on the left bank of the Seine. A cattle market is held here every Thursday, for the supply of meat to Paris. It was the birthplace of St. Louis, who was baptized in the parish church, in a font yet preserved there, and shown to visitors. Here the conference was held in 1561, for the purpose of adjusting the differences between the Calvinistic and Romish churches. Its first meeting was attended by Catherine de Medicis, and her son Charles IX. Beza, with several doctors, represented the one church; and Cardinal Ippoloto d'Este, as Papal legate, the other.

From here the railway follows the left bank of the Seine, cutting through the forest of St. Germains, and arriving at Maisons.—Inns:—Hotel Chasse Imperiale Soleil d'Or.

It is situated in a neighbourhood bristling with villas, &c.; and it was here that Voltaire wrote "Zaire"

The railway crosses the Seine at Bezons by a timber bridge of nine arches, each 100 feet, resting on stone piers. Immediately after, on our left, we come to the junction of the St. Germains line: and at Asnières the Versailles line branches off to the right. The Seine is again crossed by a bridge of five arches, and the village of Clichy passed on the left; after which the railway enters Paris by Les Batignolles, passing through two tunnels under the Place de l'Europe, and crossing under the Rue de Stockholm, it arrives at the Paris terminus, Rue d'Amsterdam.

Paris.—See page 377.

ROUTE 26.

Paris to Strasbourg.

The railway from Paris to Strasbourg is about 319 miles in length, besides having several important branches. It traverses provinces differing in their produce, manners, and the character of their inhabitants, and the last section of the line is now German territory. Between the rising and the setting of the sun, a traveller may quit the banks of the Seine and reach the banks of the Rhine; he may contemplate the towers of Nôtre Dame in the morning, and admire the spire of the Cathedral of Strassburg in the afternoon. The railway, on quitting the large terminus at the Rue Neuve de Chabrol, takes a northern direction between the Faubourgs St. Denis and St. Martin, passes by Bondy, Villemonble, and Gagny, joins the valley of the Marne at Chelles, touches Lagny on the right bank of the Marne, crosses that river twice at Chalifert and at Isle, proceeds between Villeney and the Marne to skirt the Faubourg St. Remy at Meaux.

Meaux—Inns: Sirene, Trois Rois.—A pretty town, situated in a plain on the river Marne. Population 10 800. Its chief object of attraction is its Cathedral, a magnificent Gothic edifice of the 12th century, with a vaulted roof 100 feet high. Among several episcopal mausoleums is the monument of the eloquent Bossuet, who for a long period filled the see, and was called the Eagle of Meaux. The only other objects worth notice are a magnificent Hôpital Général, and the restored church of St. Nicholas. Meaux carries on a good trade in corn, and is famous for its cheese. See page 373.

The railway joins Armentières after having crossed the canal of the Ourcq and the Marne above Trilport. On quitting the tunnel it proceeds by the side of the Marne to the south-west of the village, touches at Ussy, to the north of La Ferté-sous-Jouarre, a very pretty town with a large number of promenades surrounding it, passes the river a second time at Saussay, a third time at the south of Courcelles, traverses Nanteuil with a tunnel, crosses the Marne a fourth time, following the left bank, touches at Nogent l'Artaud and Chezy l'Abbaye, and cuts through a corner with a tunnel. The beauty of the Marne will strike the traveller

Chateau-Thierry—Inns: Sirène, d'Angleterre—A sweet little town, beautifully situated on the Marne, in the department of Aisne, with a population of 5930, and remarkable as being the natal place of La Fontaine.

Diligences to Soissons, Mery, and Varennes.

Dormans—Inn: Lion d'or—A small town in the department of Marne, with a population of 2250. Magnificent park. The line crosses the Marne an eighth time between Chateau-Thierry and Vitry-le-Français; follows the left bank constantly, touches at Dormans, Port-à-Binson, Damery, and arrives at Epernay (Junction for Reims), see page 367. Population 10,600. On the left bank of the Marne and famous for its champagne wines.

Chalons-sur-Marne—See page 362.—Leaving here, the road passes Vitry-la-Ville, Loisy, and arrives at Vitry-le-Francois—Inn: La Cloche—A modern town, built on the Marne, with 7620 inhabitants. It has a very pretty Gothic church.

The railway leaves Vitry by the south-east, turns off to the left into the valley of the Saulx, passing Blesmes, Pargny, Sermaize and Revigny stations, following the course of the river, and then skirts the valley of the Ornain to gain

Bar-le-Duc—A good-sized town with 15,000 souls, and chief town of the department of La Meuse. In St. Pierre's church, which is in the upper town, there is a monument to the memory of René de Chalons, Prince of Orange.—It consists of a skeleton of white marble on a black altar-tomb. The river Ornain produces excellent fish. Diligences to Verdun. See page 392. The railway continues through the valley of the Ornain to Loxeville, and Lérouville stations. It passes

Commercy, then crosses the valley of the Meuse at Ville-Yssey, over a bridge of ninety yards; then passes near Pagny-sur-Meuse, under a fort, by a tunnel 570 yards long, and reaches Toul by the valley of the l'Ingressin, which it enters by a tunnel 1120 yards long.

Toul, see page 390. From here the railway runs along the left bank of the Moselle, while approaching the canal of the Marne, to the Rhine. It follows the valley of the Moselle on the right bank, crosses that river at Fontenoy over a bridge of seven arches, of 16 yards span each, turns the picturesque fort of Liverdun, and crosses the Moselle twice, on bridges raised sufficiently high to allow vessels to pass underneath. These bridges are formed of five arches, of 24 yards diameter. The traveller should look out for the Cathedral, which may be finely seen from the rail near the station, although at some distance. The road then proceeds to Frouard, its point of junction with the branch to Metz, which is distant thirty miles. From Frouard the road runs to Nancy, by the village of Champigneulle. It crosses the canal there by a bridge; it reaches Nancy, to the south of which the terminus, situated between the Faubourgs Stanislas and St. Jean, have been constructed on a lake, where it is recorded that Charles the Rash was killed.

After having passed Nancy, the railway joins the canal from the Marne to the Rhine, alongside of which it runs as far as Varangeville. A single bridge, that of St. Plin, 19 yards wide, serves both for the railway and the canal to cross the Meurthe. The line follows the valley of the Meurthe as far as Luneville. There it passes the various arms of the river over bridges of a peculiar construction, thence from Lunéville—a town where was signed the treaty between France and Austria in 1801, ceding the Rhine as the French boundary on that side—the railway turns to the valley of the Verruse, near Marrainvillers. It ascends the stream of the Amiscuts, the hill which separates the waters of the Savon from the Sarre, above Richecourt, crosses the new German frontier, and arrives at Sarreburg, and proceeds towards Hommarting. It was at this point that it became necessary to cross the chain of the Vosges. From Hommarting to Strasburg the line is 63 kilometres and 987 metres. The section between Hommarting and the limits of the department of the Bas-Rhin comprises the difficult labour of the passage of the Vosges, which is accomplished by a tunnel of 2678 yards in length. On the side of Lorraine this tunnel is placed at the left of, and on the same level as, the tunnel of the canal of the Marne to the Rhine; but, in place of remaining on that level, it descends into the mountain, becoming thus excavated under the canal, so that it reappears on the side of Alsace on the right of the canal, and 39 feet below it. Beyond that great tunnel five others of less dimensions are met—respectively, 245, 432, 395, 500, and 308 yards in length. The last, the entrance of which presents the appearance of a feudal fortress, is immediately followed by a great viaduct which crosses the canal and the Zorne, and terminates in a cutting almost perpendicularly in the rock, and of which the form resembles that of a fort. Nothing can be more picturesque than the country in which these works of art are to be found. The ruins of the Castle of Lutzlebourg are also to be seen above the tunnel of 450 yards, and the two Castles of Haut-Barr and Geroldseck show themselves on the mountains at this side of Saverne. The railway, on quitting Saverne, continues in the valley of the Zorne as far as Brumath. After passing Vendenheim station we arrive at Strassburg. The Paris railway joins that of Basle on the glacis of Strassburg, and it proceeds into the town by four lines of rails.

Strassburg—Now the German capital of Alsace or Elsass. See page 447.

ROUTE 27.

Paris to Marseilles, by Lyons and Avignon.

The railway, after leaving Paris, in Terminus Boulevard Mazas, on the right bank of the Seine, close to the Bridge of Austerlitz, follows the bank of that river, passing Villeneuve St. George's, Montgeron, and several other unimportant stations, before its arrival at Melun.

Bois-le-Roi—There is a fine viaduct of thirty arches, upwards of 70 feet high.

Fontainebleau—See page 367.

Moret St. Mammes—A venerable and picturesque old town, surrounded by walls, and having an old church and castle.

Montereau—An industrious town, at the junction of the Sonne and Yonne, with a population of 6220. The train stops a few minutes, and passengers can get some refreshment. A branch railway to Troyes diverges at this point. There are two porcelain manufactories here. Steamers ply between this and Paris.

Pont-sur-Yonne—Is beautifully situated surrounded by verdant banks and sheltered by lofty poplars. Châteaux of noblesse are crowded together in large numbers.

Sens—See page 389. A pretty town with little bects of water running through the streets. Its Cathredal has the mitre, alb, girdle, stole, and maniple worn by Thomas à Becket when he fled in 1164 from the wrath of his royal master, Henry II. of England. Departing, the railway passes Villeneuve le Roi, or Sur Yonne (in this neighbourhood and town the lover of sketching will find ample food for study), and St. Julien du Sault stations, to

Joigny—Inn: Duc de Bourgogne,

A town of 6000 inhabitants, beautifully situated on the Yonne, which is promenaded from one side to the other by a fine quay. There are three Gothic churches worth a visit. Coaches daily to Auserre, Verncauton, Chemuiz, and Nevers.

La Roche—From here the branch line separates for Auxerre.

Brienon is next arrived at, a small town carrying on an extensive trade in linen, coals, and corn.

St. Florentin—A neat town, having a Gothic church, museum, baths, and theatre, and manufactories of cotton, silk, and velvet. Coaches to Auxerre, Vermanton, Vezelay, Clamas, La Charite and Nevers.

About fourteen miles off is the Abbey of Pontigny, the retreat of Thomas à Becket.

Flogny—The railway is carried through the valley of the Armançon, and follows the course of the Canal de Bourgogne.

Tonnerre—Inns: Lion d'Or, Des Couriers, De Geneve. Pop. 5,000.

An old town, built on the slope of a hill, and having some implement works. On the summit is the church of St. Pierre, commanding a magnificent view. In it is a marble effigy of Marguerite of Bourgogne, Queen of Sicily and wife of Charles I. of Anjou. She founded the richly endowed hospital in the town. The Trains stop here for refreshment.

Tanlay—128 miles.—Here is one of the finest châteaux in Burgundy, built by Admiral Coligny, the leader of the protestants, and first victim of the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

Ancy-le-Franc—136¾ English miles.—Another magnificent château, surrounded by very pretty grounds.

Nuits-Sous-Ravier—140¾ miles.—A small town in the midst of the vineyards Romana Richelbourg La Tache, &c. Passing the station at Ausy, we proceed through a famous vineyard country, entering the department of Côte d'Or.

Montbard—151¾ miles.—Inn:—l'Ecu.

A small town, remarkable as the birthplace of the celebrated naturalist Buffon, who lived in the Château now occupied by the widow of his son, who was one of the first victims of the great Revolution. The railway here passes through cuttings and embankments, winding round hills and mountains.

Coaches to Autun, Semuer, Sanlieu, Chatillon, and Langres.

Les Laumes and Verray are passed before we arrive at Blaisy station, at the tunnel which cost more than £90,000, and is 2¼ miles long.

Dijon—See page 365. From hence the railroad takes us on by Gevrey and Vougeot stations, through vineyards famous for their wines and the richness of the land. There is a branch Railway to Dole, and Besançon.

Nuits, and thence by Corgoloin to Beaune—See page 356.

A prosperous town, in department Côte-d'Or, and the chief seat of the wine trade in Burgundy.

Twelve miles S. W., at Caesy la Colonne, is a Roman monument in the shape of a pillar, bearing bas-reliefs, and said to have been erected to commemorate a victory of Julius Cæsar over the Helvetians. Its access is very inconvenient, from the cross-roads met with at every turn of the journey.

Coaches daily to Autun. From here the railway proceeds through a beautiful wine country, and arrives by Meursault station, at Chagny—A town full of objects worthy the sketcher's notice. The tower of the church is striking. Here terminates the range of the Côte-d'Or.

Chalons-sur-Saone—See page 362.

DESCENT OF THE SAONE—CHALONS TO LYONS.—From Chalons the tourist can proceed on to Lyons by railway, (page 48), by steamer or by the diligence, travelling by the post road, which is good, and interestingly picturesque. From here to Lyons, by steamer, in about 6 hours, returning in about 8 hours. The voyage is preferable to the land journey, though it follows the classical Sonona, a stream still as in Cæsar's time "incredibili lenitate."

Leaving Chalons, the banks at first rather uninteresting, brighten up as we approach Lyons. Passing opposite the mouth of the Canal du Centre, we sail into a canal which saves the boat a long round, and see, on the right

Digitized by Google

Tournus—Inns:—De la Gare, Sauvage, and De l'Europe.

A town of 5600 inhabitants. It has a church Greux, the painter, who died at Paris in 1805, was born here. At Pleurville, on the left, there is a bridge over the Saône under which the boat passes, and gets into a larger expanse of water. To the left we see St. Albin, with its early pointed Gothic church. Here the scenery is delightful; the slopes are all covered with vineyards—22½ miles from Chalons.

Right—Macon—38 miles from Chalons. See page 372.

Remarkable as the birthplace of the living poet, philosopher, and statesman, Alphonse de Lamartine. Here a bridge of 13 arches spans the river, and from it a magnificent view of Mont Blanc may be enjoyed, but still better from the little esplanade planted with trees behind it. In the neighbourhood also are fine views of the hills of the Bourbonnois and Charolois.

Railway to Amberieu and Geneva, see page 54.

Below Macon the banks of the river become more elevated and picturesque, taking in on the east a view of the Jura Mountains To the west is Château de Corielles, flanked by four round towers.

Right—At St. Romain (36½ miles from Chalons) is a suspension bridge, of considerable lightness and beauty; to the left is Toissey, an old town shaded by poplars and willows. We see another bridge to the right at Belleville. The next places seen are Montmerle to the left, and Villefranche to to the right, whose port is Ause.

Left—Trevoux (68½ miles from Chalons) an old town, beautifully situated on the slope of a hill, under an old castle. It has a population of 3,000; and was the place where the Jesuits compiled and printed the learned works called the "Journal de Trévoux," and "Dictionnaire de Trévoux." The river becomes contracted and passes on the right, by Belle Ile, and under the richly wooded heights of Mont d'Or, 1000 feet above the river. Neuville is seen on the left, near many flotillas drawn by horses. To the right is Couson, opposite

La Roche Taillee, on the left, so designated from a cutting caused to be made by Agrippa through it, to effect a passage for one of the great Roman highways. Further down we see L'Ile Barbe—an island on the river nearly surrounded by escarped rocks, and linked to each bank by a suspension bridge. It was, we are told, a favourite retreat for Charlemagne, and has a chapel of the twelfth century, and many curious fragments of Roman antiquities. As we enter Lyons under the heights which here border the river, called Croix Rousse, we are forcibly reminded of the Avon at Bristol, under the slopes of Durdham and Kingsdown, and the rocks of Clifton.

Lyons—86½ miles from Chalons—See page 371.

Railway from Lyons, only steamer.

The boats are anything but clean, and are generally overloaded with merchandise. They start from the right bank. Leaving Lyons, we pass on our right the junction of the Saône with the Rhone, and sail by the wire suspension bridge of La Mulatiere, close to the railway to St. Etienne. The scenery is picturesque in the extreme, being enlivened by a series of landscapes.

Givors, on the right—an important place, because of its position on the railway, and of the trade which it carries on in glass. It is situated at the mouth of a canal, and has a population of about 9350. Railway between Givors and Vienne.

Vienne—On the left bank, has a population of 20,000, and is faced by a handsome quay, situated at the base of precipitous rocks. It is one of the most ancient towns in France. See page 393. This place is also interesting as the cradle of christianity in the west. On the right is St. Colombe, connected with Vienne by a suspension bridge. There is a square tower, almost in ruins, called the Tour de Mauconseil, in consequence of a tradition, that Pontius Pilate who was banished here, threw himself off it. On our right we see Mont Pilas, 4516 feet above the sea, and Ampius —a small village—on the same side. Railway to Grenoble, Lyons, Marseilles, Paris, Givors, &c.

Condrieux—a town celebrated for its wines has a population of 2500. At Serrieres is a suspension bridge and good road leading to Annonay. On the right the St. Etienne and Marseilles road descends through an opening near Annonay, and crosses the Rhone by the suspension bridge of St. Vallier—Inns.—L'Ecu.

Standing on a terrace above the Rhône. Population, 3140. In the neighbourhood are some picturesque ruins, and St. Roche Taillée. Sailing from here we see to the left the Château de Ponsas, a splendid object, with frowning towers and battlements. Here, tradition says, Pontius Pilate ended his days. The valley of the Rhone is near; and as we approach, passing a lofty, round-topped hill on our left, called Table du Roi, on the south side of which is the celebrated vineyard l'Hermitage, we see Tain, a small town of 2400 inhabitants, connected by a suspension bridge of wire with Tournon on the right, one of the chief towns of the department of De la Rouche, with about 5200 inhabitants. Above the bridge are the picturesque towers of a castle. Below is the College Royal, founded by the Cardinal de Tournon, in 1542. The valley of the river Isère now opens up into a wide and monotonous plain; the vista through the valley being terminated by the snowy mass of Mont Blanc rising behind the Alps of Dauphiné, a splendid sight, though 110 or 112 miles distant. From here we sail in view of hills covered with vineyards; and the bare lime-stone precipices rising above the village of St. Peray, and surmounted by the picturesque castle of Crussol Diligences to Romans on the Isere, on the road to Grenoble.

Valence.—Hotels:—De France; Du Louvre. Pop. 18,710. An ancient walled town, on the east side of the Rhone, here crossed by a suspension bridge. It has a cathedral, containing the heart of Pope Pius VI., who died here a prisoner.

1799; and an artillery school, in which Napoleon I. studied, 1785; also river docks, and some factories. For Railway, see Time Tables, page 50.

The slopes of the hills all about are covered with vineyards which produce excellent wines.

On the right there is an ugly line of limestone cliffs bounding the right side of the Rhone valley, and further down on the same side, on the summit of the same escarpment, stands the ruins of Soyons castle. On the left the Roche Courbe, which, when first seen, appears a cleft with precipitous sides, but a little further down, a series of peaks.

L'Etoile, a sweet little village; near to La-voutte, a small town with a castle on the top of a hill over it.

Poussin—A small town, with a suspension bridge. At Cruas is a singular abbey on a hill.

Montelimar.—Stat.—Inns:—Post, Palais Royal, Lion d'Or.

An old town, of 12,050 inhabitants, surrounded by ramparts. Its chief source of industry is the manufacture of Morocco leather and soap. Opposite here is Theil, where the suspension bridge across the Rhone was swept away by the flood in 1840. At this point the scenery is brilliant.

Viviers—A small town of 2800 inhabitants. Its chief buildings are the college and cathedral. On the left we see the magnificent top of Mont Ventoux, the extreme point of the French Alps, seen on our route up to Avignon from here. Below Viviers the river widens up, and is intersected by numerous islands. A new bridge has been erected in place of the one destroyed in 1840. It crosses at Bourg St. Andéol—a town of 464 souls, built on the rock. Here persons leave the steamer for Orange. Opposite here, but 1½ miles distant, is Pierrelatte, named from the colossal mass of rock rising from out the plain in its rear. To the right the Ardèche discharges its waters into the Rhone. About two miles lower down, we reach Pont Esprit, and passing the mouth of the Drome, we reach Anconne, where the river makes a great bend. From here we proceed to Pont St. Esprit.—A small town, having a population of 5125, with a strong citadel, and one of the longest bridges in the world, 2718 feet long, built in 1310. It occupied forty-five years in building, and has nineteen arches, besides four small land arches. At St. Esprit the river becomes a rapid current; and after passing by the Aigues, a glimpse can be attained of a colossal structure on a hill. The next important town met with is Orange.—Stat.—Inns: Hotel des Princes, and De la Poste.—Pop. 10,000. See page 377.

An ancient town which gave William III. his title of Prince of Orange. Below Orange the Rhone traverses a wide plain. Roquemaure is seen on the right, and on the left Châteauneuf, shortly after leaving which, we see the spires and towers of Valson, fifteen miles N. E. of Orange, which has some curious ancient remains.

Avignon.—See page 354.

Avignon to Marseilles.—Distance, 74½ English miles—Quitting the Avignon Terminus, the railway runs in a direct course on the left bank of the Rhone, crossing the foaming stream of the Durance by a viaduct 646 yards long, three miles south of Avignon. The route proceeds from here through a country of rugged wildness and uninteresting scenery. Barbantane, and its extensive quarries are on our left, and running from east to west, the barren hills called Alpines, with the white-washed walls of the houses of St. Remy, and its two Roman monuments in their rear; while at the other side of the river, four or five miles distance, can be seen Aramon, a town with 2720 inhabitants. Rognonas and Cadillan stations are next passed. Not far remote we see the colossal squared castle of Tarascon on our left, with the large spire of the Gothic church rising above it; whilst on our right we see Beaucaire, nestled at the foot of a mass of naked rock. The railway junction to Nismes and Montpellier is at Tarascon.—Inn: Hotel des Empereurs.

A town with a population of 13,500, joined by a bridge to Beaucaire. It contains the Church of St. Martin, in the Gothic style of the 14th century, the southern portal excepted, which is circular, with deep mouldings. The crypt contains the shrine and marble effigy of St. Martha. The castle is a massive structure, erected in 1400 by Henri II., and for a long period the residence of King René, but now used as a prison.

Beaucaire.—Inn: Hotel du Luxembourg.

Is opposite Tarascon, at the mouth of the Canal du Beaucaire, connecting the Rhone and Garonne, and has a population of 9545. Beaucaire is celebrated for its Fair, at which usually assemble over 100,000 persons from all parts of the world. The ruined castle stands on the summit of a rock, its only remains being now a triangular tower, and a very old Romanesque chapel, in which St. Louis heard mass previous to his embarkation for the crusade. From it an excellent view can be had.

Excursions can be made to St. Remy and St. Giles, and to Les Beaux, a town without a modern building, having only 200 inhabitants, and being a perfect specimen of the towns of the middle ages. The deep debris of mud spread over waste land, on the right, close to the Bridge of Beaucaire, is the remains of the inundation of 1840, when the Rhone overflowed its banks.

Quitting Tarascon, the railway takes its course through a marshy plain. Segonnaux station is passed before our arrival at Arles, two miles from which, on the left, are the ruins of the great Abbey of Montmajeur, seated on a rock of singular form and ascent. On the north-east side, at the foot of the rock, is a chapel, in the Romanesque style, without ornament. On our left, two miles or so from Arles, the Rhone branches off into two divisions, the Petit Rhone flowing westwards, and crossed by a suspension bridge at Fourques.

Arles.—See page 353.

From Arles, south and east to the sea, nearly as far as Marseilles, stretches a wide and unbroken plain, which takes in the delta of the Rhone, and similar to that of the Nile, in climate and sand, marshes and lagoons, and variety of birds.

Departing from Arles, the railway leaves the Rhone, and taking a south-east direction, issues from the Aliscamp, and passes over a long viaduct, through a stony plain called the Crau, which stretches itself south to the Mediterranean. Leaving Constantine, it arrives at ST. CHARNEY station, a town on the Etang de Berre, with a population of 2500, having an old church. Just outside the town is the Pont Flavien, a Roman bridge that spans the Touloubère, with triumphal arches at each end. The railway in its course from here is carried over many ridges and ravines by tunnels and embankments, passing Berre, Rognac, and Pas de Lancier, previous to arriving at Marseilles, which it enters emerging from a tunnel 492 yards long.

Marseilles.—See page 372.

ROUTE 28.

Paris to Nantes, by Orleans and Tours.

THE DIRECT ROUTE TO TOURS LEAVES ORLEANS ON THE LEFT. See Time Tables.

From the terminus in the Boulevard de l'Hôpital, close to the Jardin des Plantes, and the Hospital of Salpetrière, the line directs its course along a pretty and picturesque country by the base of the slopes bordering the left bank of the Seine. It passes gardens, and houses on the river's bank; skirts the walls of Vitry and Joisy on the right, and reaches.

Choisy—a thriving and manufacturing town of 4650 inhabitants. Here is a china factory, and also the largest morocco factory in France. On the heights above, to the right, are the village and château of Orly. We approach the vine-clad slopes limiting the valley of the Seine, and pass Ablon to Juvisy Station—a very old spot, occupying the foot of a hill on the right.

Here the branch railway to Corbeil separates from the main line to Orleans, turning off to the left, and running near the high road to Lyons; but preserving its course along the Seine, it passes Itis Station, and cuts through a part of the park of Petit Bourg, arriving from Evry Station, at Corbeil on the Essonne.—Pop. 5220.

Leaving Juvisy, our main route curves a little to the west, crossing the high road to Orge, enters the valley of the Orge, traversing the gardens of Savigny—a small village with a handsome castle—and approaches by a viaduct EPINAY station; next, skirts on the left the Forest of St. Geneviève, and traverses a portion of the park of the Château d'Ormay before reaching St. Michel, whence the railway passes through BRETIGNY station, beyond which, it descends into the valley of the Juine, passes thence Bouray, Lardy, and Etréchy, and runs parallel with the post road before its arrival at Etampes, an old town, with a population of 8,220, carrying on a thriving trade in flour and wool. Its Gothic church, called Nôtre Dame, and the church of St. Martin, together with the remains of the royal castle, are worth seeing. The Hotel de Ville will interest as an old building. Omnibuses go twice a day to Pithivers, 23 miles south of Versailles.

Monnerville.—Here the railway crosses on viaducts the river Chalonette, ascends the valley of l'Hernery until it reaches the high plain of La Beance, and crosses the post road by a bridge before arriving at Angerville.—Coaches to Chartres. From here the railway runs side by side with the post road, passing Toury, Artenay, Chevilly, and Cercottes, and reach the station of Orleans, a little east of Porte Bannier.

Orleans.—See page 377.

From here to Tours the railway serpentines along the right bank of the Loire, whose course lies through a wide valley, barred a little by small hills.

La Chapelle; and ST. AY, a small town on the right bank of the river, with a population of 1200. Lord Bolingbroke lived here during his exile from England, and built the Château du Loiret. It has a very fine church, remarkable for the image of the Virgin in black marble, before which Louis XI., whose tomb is here, used to pray.

Meung Station.

Beaugency.—An old town, with a population of 5050, between two hills. The Keep of the Castle, and Hotel de Ville are objects of attraction. It carries on a brisk trade in wine, and brandy, and is the seat of several factories for woollen cloth, leather, &c.

Mer—A sweet village, delightfully ensconced in the midst of country houses and villas.

Menars.—Here is the Château which belonged to Madame de Pompadour.

Blois.—See page 357.

Leaving Blois, the railway wends its way down the Loire, through a fine and fertile plain. It passes Chousy, Onzain, and Limeray, and reaches Amboise.—See page 351. The chapel of the old castle is one of the most exquisite specimens of the profusely florid Gothic style in France.

Departing, the railway is carried along the Loire to Noizay and Vernan.

Vouvray.—Here it crosses the Loire by a bridge to the left bank. Mont Louis being passed, we arrive at Tours—See page 390.

The railway now directs its course by the left bank of the Loire, passes St. Symphorien on the right—a pretty suburb of Tours, adjoining the hamlet of St. Cyr, close to which, in a neat cottage, lived the poet Béranger—and arrives at SAVONNIERES station, whence it proceeds on to Cinq St. Mars, where it crosses the Loire over a bridge of 19 arches. Close to this spot is the very old and curious monument, known as La Pont Ung

Mars, a square tower built of brick, whose history is lost in the night of ages. It was originally pinnacled on each side. It is 92 feet high, and 13 feet wide; and has on the south side the bricks arranged in twelve compartments. From the last station of St. Savonnières the railway passes through a country full of villages hewn out of a yellow chalk rock. Langeais is a small but pretty town, at the mouth of the valley which opens into the Loire. It has at its rear very many limestone cliffs, on the summit of one of which stands an old Castle of the 12th century, where the marriage of Charles VIII. with Anne of Brittany was celebrated.

Adjacent to St. Patrice is the Château of Rochecotte, the property of the Princess of Talleyrand, niece to the celebrated French statesman.

The next station is Port Boulet. Our route hence lies through a country remarkable for its large number of windmills, fluttering on the heights on either side. Approaching Saumur, we see the church of Nôtre Dame des Ardilliers. On its cupola is a record commemorative of the suppression of religious freedom by Louis XIV.

Saumur.—Inns: Hotel Budan, and Belvidere. Population, 14,080.

A picturesque town, as seen from the river, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge. On the quay stands the Hotel de Ville, an antique building of white and black stone, made to serve the double purpose of market-house and town-hall. Its castellated character, and beautiful Gothic ornaments, will repay a minute inspection. The Museum, in its upper storey, contains a Roman trumpet five feet long, and several Celtic remains. Its chief church, that of St. Pierre, and the church of Nôtre Dame, which is older, will interest the antiquarian and architectural student.

The Castle rises prominently above the town almost in a perpendicular position, commanding a view of the Loire and outlying country. The prosperity of Saumur was destroyed by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, by which all the Protestants were expelled; and the population, which was 26,000 under the governorship of Henry IV.'s Secretary, Du Plessis, Mornay, the Protestant leader, became reduced to less than three-fourths.

A house built by King René of Anjou, called the Maison de la Reine Cicile, stands in the Quartier du Ponts; but so defaced, that no traces of its once beautiful front can be seen.

Not far from Saumur, on the south side, is the Dolmen of Pontigne, one of the most perfect and largest Druidical specimens in France. It is a kind of cot, measuring fifty feet in length, but yet built of only fourteen stones, the largest of which is 24 feet by 21 feet, and 2½ feet thick. The road by which these Druidical memorials are approached, leads over a pretty bridge, and by the village of Bagneaux, near which they are to be found.

Diligences go daily to Le Mans, Chinon, Cholet, Poitiers, and Bordeaux, to Neost and Sainte Rochefort.

The railway departing from Saumur passes St. Martin's station, and arrives at Les Rosiers.—On the left, just opposite this place, on the top of a hill, is the church of Gennes. Between here and St. Mathurin, on our left is the colossal convent buildings of St. Maur—historically interesting because of being the retreat of the learned Benedictine monks who, in 1621, compiled an immense number of valuable works, which have proved a treasure to literature.

St. Mathurin.—Here this road leaves the Loire, and does not again join it for a distance of twenty miles. La Bohalle Trélazé, La Paperie, places of no importance, are next passed. Below the latter the Loire is split up into channels, by very many islands which are crossed by bridges difficult to pass under or over.

In our progress towards Angers, we see on our right the bridge Ponts de Cé, near a village on the left bank of the Loire.

Angers—See page 352.

Angers to Nantes.—The railway from here runs parallel with the bank of the river. The first stations met with are Bouchemain and La Pointe.—A very pretty spot among white villas and cottages, belonging to the inhabitants of Angers. Close to this spot the railway crosses the Maine. The Loire deepens below its junction with the Maine, and its banks become higher.

Several unimportant stations are passed between here and Champtocé requiring no special notice: Les Foyes, La Poissonnière, and Chalons. Here, to the left, we see a beautiful eminence, surmounted by the ruins of the convent of Cordilliers.

Champtoce—A pretty village on the post road. Here are the ruins of the feudal Castle once owned by the infamous Gilles de Retzstein de Laval, called Barbe Bleue—the original of the well-known story called Blue Beard. Having impaired his constitution and fortune by excesses, he engaged an Italian, who pretended to restore them with the blood of infants and young persons. To procure the blood, numerous young girls were murdered by the ruffian himself, to the number of 160. The country rose up against him. He was tried, found guilty, and burned at the stake at Nantes, confessing his crimes.

Ingrande—A small place, standing on the line which formerly marked the boundary of Brittany and Anjou. Between here and Varades, on the right at Montrelais, are extensive coal-fields. On the left we see the hills of St. Florent, containing the large ruins of the Abbey of Montglonne, destroyed during the revolutionary fury; and immediately below it the church of St. Florent, at the side of a pillar to the memory of the Vendéean General Bouchamps, to whom a marble monument is erected within the church. Below St. Florent an island divides the river.

Varades—A town of 2360 inhabitants, where the remnant of the Vendéean army waited for their companions, on their crossing the Loire after their defeat, 1793.

Digitized by Google

Ancenis—Inn: Hotel de France.
A small town of about 4690 inhabitants, with the remains of an old castle at the water's side. To the left, on the summit of a hill, the ruined castle of Champtoceaux.

Oudon—Here is the black eight-sided tower of Oudon, five stories high, of the 15th century.

Clermont—Remarkable for its Castle, one of the most beautiful ruins on the Loire, but without any historical associations. The somewhat rugged heights now give way to gentle undulations, which below Maures change again into a flat plain.

Maures.—Shortly after leaving, the towers and steeples of Nantes are seen rising in the distance. We pass Thouare and St. Luce stations before arriving at Nantes—See page 375.

ROUTE 29.

Paris to Toulouse, by Orleans and Limoges.

Railway to Orleans.
See Route 26.

Orleans TO TOULOUSE.—Distance, 358 English miles.

The railway crosses the Loire by a bridge, and pursues its course almost parallel to the post-road, entering the tunnel of l'Allouet, 1236 metres long. It leaves the suburbs of Orleans through a country full of villages and pretty villas, crosses the Loiret by a bridge, close to which was the exiled Lord Bolingbroke's residence, in the Chateau of La Source. From here up to Vierzon, the railway passes through a country bleak, undiversified, and monotonous, arriving first at La Ferte St. Aubin—A small village; on the left of which is the Chateau of Lowendahl. The following unimportant stations are next passed: Lamotte, Nouan-le-Fuzelier, Salbris, and Theillay.

Vierzon.
Departing hence, the railway quits the cheerless scenery just passed through for the valley of the Cher, which is well cultivated, possessing many vineyards, and interspersed with some pretty scenery along its borders. We cross the Evre and Chur immediately after leaving Vierzon, and pass by Chery, Reuilly, St. Lizaigne, Issoudun, and Neuvy-Pailloux stations, before arriving at Chateauroux.

From here we traverse a very dreary country as far as Argenton, a small village on the Creuse, and thence, passing some unimportant stations reach Limoges—See page 371.

Travellers who desire to see a curious and remarkable church of the eleventh century, will find one at St. Junien, eighteen miles from Limoges. It contains an altar and sarcophagus, in the Byzantine style.

The next important station after

Thiviers, in Dordogne, where much earthenware is made. Pop. 2710. The fine Castle of Hautefort is in the neighbourhood.

Perigueux, on the River l'Isle. See p. 385.
Leaving this, the line passes Niversac, Thenon, and Condac, all unimportant, to Brive—Inn: Hotel de Bordeaux; Toulouse. Pop. 9850.

A town occupying a very pretty situation in the valley of the Corrèze, and remarkable for an old gothic house, and as being the birthplace of Cardinal Dubois and Marshal Brune. It is surrounded by a maize and vine country.

Our line from here passes through rather a hilly country, takes in on its course a view of the castles of Noailles and Turenne, the latter of which is located two miles east of the road, and is memorable as being the place of refuge of the great Condé's wife, where she concocted the civil war of Guienne.

St. Christophe.—Here the junction from Clermont, Ferrand, and Rodez takes place.

Viviez, or Viviers, on the Lot. About 15 miles lower down the river is CAHORS, a very old town (pop. 18,850), the chief place of Department of Lot, with a good Cathedral. Here Fenélon, author of "Telemachus," went to school. He was born at the Castle of La Mothe Fenelon, in the neighbourhood. Another remarkable person, Murat, King of Naples, was born at Bastide within a short distance. The dim outlines of the Pyrenees, though 150 miles off, can be seen on a clear day from the heights hereabouts.

We cross the Aveyron, and traverse a portion of the beautiful plain of Languedoc, before arriving at Montauban—See page 374.

Leaving Montaubon we pass into the suburb of Ville Bourdon, and enter on the grand route from Bordeaux to Toulouse.

Grisolles Station. Thence we proceed through a plain of astonishing fertility, nearly alongside the Garonne, and closing towards Toulouse, arrive at it over a bridge spanning the Canal du Midi, which joins the Garonne a mile or so to the right of the bridge seen in the suburbs—Arnaud St. Bernard. On our left an Obelisk, marks the central position taken by Marshal Soult at the battle of Tonlouse.

Toulouse—See page 390.

ROUTE 30.

Nancy to Metz, Forbach, and Ludwigshafen.

Distance—165 English miles.

Nancy.—See page 374.
The railway, leaving Nancy, proceeds through a country requiring no special notice, and at about five miles' distance from Nancy crosses the Moselle, a little before arriving at FROUARD, the junction with the Paris line; whence it proceeds on to Marbache and Dieulouard—places of little importance.

Digitized by Google

Pont-a-Mousson—Inn: Hotel d'Angleterre. Pop. 8,115. A pretty town, on the Moselle, which is here crossed by a bridge; it has a splendid Gothic church, richly ornamented with paintings of the Lorraine school. The old house, called Maison des Sept Péchés Capitaux, situated in the Square, deserves a visit. The next stations passed are places of no importance,—Pagny, Noveant, and Ars. The new German frontier is crossed before reaching Metz.—See page 444.

From Metz to Forbach the scenery is pleasing, and in many instances picturesque, but altogether devoid of objects of interest. Here the line passes through ground traversed by the German armies in their victorious advance towards Metz, in the month of August, 1870.

Courcelles.—Here the victory of Pange, or Courcelles, was obtained by them on Sunday, 14th August; after they had occupied Herny, Falkenberg, and St. Avold the stations which next follow. Near St. Avold the Lemberg line falls in.

Forbach, formerly the last town on the French frontier, which the Germans reached 6th August, after defeating General Frossard at Spicheren. Pop 4860. Woollen goods are made.

Saarbrücken.—i.e., the Bridge of the Saar—a town on that river, in Rhenish Prussia, now of historical note. Pop. 13,120. It was bombarded and carried by the French on the 2nd of August, in presence of the Emperor Napoleon and his son the Prince Imperial, who here received his "baptism of fire;" but the eclat of this but small success was soon lost in the German victories at Weissenburg on the 4th, and at Wörth, or Frœschwiller, on the 6th. It was immediately retaken by the Germans, and became the head quarters of the King of Prussia on the 10th August.

Rohrbach, and the adjoining country, as well as that surrounding Bexbach and Neunkirchen, is celebrated as a rich and productive coal-field. The railway then proceeds to Homburg, a small but clean town in Rhenish Bavaria, with a population of 3000. Its objects of attraction are the fortress on the Schlossberg, which figured in the Thirty Years' War; and a very pretty modern church. This town must not be confounded with the celebrated Baths of Homburg (now in Prussia) in the Taunus chain of hills near Frankfort on the Main.

From here there is a branch line to Zweibrücken. The next station is Bruchmühlbach. Then Landstuhl—A small town, containing a population of 1500. The ruined Castle of the Counts of Sickingen overhangs the town: it was partly hewn out of the rock, and had walls 24 feet thick. In it the chivalrous Franz Von Sickingen died, May 7th, 1523, having been grievously hurt by a falling beam. His bones rest behind the altar of the Roman Catholic Church. Part of his monument—a mutilated statue of a horseman—stands at the bottom of the tower. Another part, with the epitaph, stands behind the high altar.

Nothing of interest is met with from here to Kaiserslautern—Inns: Schwan.

Prettily situated, in Rhenish Bavaria, between pleasant hills, and containing a population of 13500 inhabitants. A castle was built here, in the twelfth century, by the Emperor Barbarossa, which was separated from the town by its fortifications, but it was destroyed in the war of the Spanish succession.

Kaiserslautern occupies an excellent position for trading purposes, and has considerable woollen manufactories. It is the seat of the central Prison of the Rhenish circle.

From Kaiserslautern the following stations are passed:—Hochspeyer, Frankenstein, Weidenthal, and Lambrecht.

Neustadt.—Inns: Post, and Goldener Löwe.

This Neustadt-an-der-Haardt, on the Speyer, a branch of the Rhine, is an old town, picturesquely seated at the foot of the Haardt mountains. Pop. 7600. A new church was opened in 1862. In its old church, of the 14th century, are many curious monuments of the Pfalzgraves, or former lords of the Palatinate. It is much frequented by invalids for the Grape cure, and is the centre of an attractive neighbourhood, abounding in ruined castles, and other objects of interest.

From this place, the Railway to Landau and Strassburg branches off.

The railroad, quitting Neustadt, proceeds through a splendid country, famous for its vineyards and the rich wines which they supply. Geologists will be attracted by the basalt rocks near Pechstein-Kopf mountain.

Hasloch.—

Bohl.—

Schifferstadt.—From this point the railway branches off to Spires.

Matterstadt is passed before arriving at Ludwigshafen, opposite Mannheim, on the Rhine. See page 432.

ROUTE 36.

1. Saragossa to Bagneres de Luchon, by Jaca.

Saragossa to Jaca 110 kilomètres (79 miles); Jaca to Urdos by Canfranc, 7 hours 40 minutes; Urdos to Etsaut (Route to Oloron), 45 minutes; Bedous, 1 hour 30 minutes; Escot, 1 hour. At Escot you strike off to the right, over the Col de Maria Blanca (a walk of 2½ hours); descend by Bielle to Pau Route. Proceeding by that road (1 hour) to Louvie Juzon, you hit a high-road taking you, by Bruges and Asson, to Lourdes. From Lourdes you reach Bagnères de Bigorre, by Arrean and Luchon. A good round of 11 days can be made from Saragossa by Jaca to Luchon, and back by Venasque.

2. Luchon to Saragossa, by Venasque.

You ascend first to Bach (3 miles), following the Pique; thence advancing through the fine forest of Charuga (4½ miles) to the French hospice, and rising 4½ miles to the Col de Venasque by a steep ascent. Further on is the Spanish hospice: and in 2½ hours, and descending the course of the Esera, 14 kilometres (9½ miles), you reach Venasque, from which another route also takes to Luchon.

Venasque has two inns—Pedro Farras and Brousseau's—8 to 10 francs per day. Position picturesque; height, 3700 feet; contains some curious old houses and an old church—that of Santa Maria—in the Romana style. This is the first day's work.

Second day, by Eriste, Sahaun, San Pedro, and Campo, to Santa Liestra, a village where the night may be passed.

Third day, by La Venta de Santa Lucia, Grans (1800 inh.) with a very old church, to Cinca, Enats, and Barbastro (6200 inh.); house of St. Vincent de Paul; Plaza de Toros: Cathedral. Pretty walks near. To Saragossa, carriages on rails drawn by horses to Selgua, thence 7 miles, thence by Barcelona line to Saragossa.

3. From Saragossa to Bagneres de Bigorre, by Barbastro.

Rail to Barbastro, 132 kilom. (86 miles); thence to NAVAL, 17 kilom. (12 miles). Old houses; narrow streets; remains of an Arab castle.

Ainsa, 34 kilom. (22 miles), formerly an important place; handsome streets; Moorish-looking houses. The two churches are ancient mosques, with immense vaults. The old Castle is quite an Arab construction in its original state. A venerated ancient monument of the early Christian kingdoms of Navarre and Aragon—the cross of Sobrarbe—is 2½ kilom. (2 miles) from Ainsa.

Route proceeds by Puerto, 15 kilom. (10 miles), whence two roads lead to France. 1. By Col de Sesa to Bielsa (6 hours), height 2465 metres, whence you descend to valley of Aure.—2. Over the Cinca and Cinqueta to El Plan, 15 kil. (10 miles); Customs' station. Here again the route forks. Left route by Port de Plan (height, 2457 metres); hospice of Kioumajon to Tramesaigues (valley of Aure), 6 hours' descent. Right road, 25 kilom. (17 miles) takes you to Gistain, and on by a pretty valley to Col de la Pez, at foot of Pic du Midi de Geno (2166 metres), whence through the valley of Louzon to Bagnères de Bigorre.

4. From Jaca, across the Pyrenees.

From Jaca you reach Oloron, Gavarnie, and Cauterets.

Jaca is reached from Saragossa by rail to Huesca, 73 Kilom., 48 miles, and from Huesca by diligence. The approach to Jaca is by very picturesque slopes. Pop. 3500. The Cathedral is overloaded with ornaments. Near Jaca an immense panoramic view is obtained from Pena d'Oroel (1940 metres). The monastery of San Juan de Pena deserves a visit, consisting of two churches; one subterranean, and containing the pantheon of the old kings of Aragon. A new monastery, surrounded by forests, has been built by the monks. The expedition takes a day.

From Jaca three routes lead to France. 1. By Canfrane to Oloron, 51 kilom. (34 miles). Canfrane is the great junction of routes from Aragon to France, three of them being especially frequented, viz., 1. Col de Somport; 2. More eastward, the Port de Jaca; 3. Col des Moines. Col de Somport leads to Oloron by Auberge de Paillette and Urdos. Oloron, 27 miles from Urdos.

2. Another route leads from Jaca to Cauterets; often very difficult, but much frequented in the fine season. This route takes you to a noted mountain basin on the French side, called the Gorge of Panticosa. A guide may be essential here. From Panticosa it is a nine hours' walk to Cauterets.

3. From Jaca to Gavarnie you pass by Panticosa, 86 kil. (24 miles), and thence, by a mountain path over the Sorrosal torrent, by Linas to Bujaruelo (12 hours). Fair inn. Hence you proceed, by a pass open even in winter (2 hours), to the Col de Gavarnie (2280 metres). Descent of 1½ hour to the celebrated Cirque de Gavarnie.

From Saragossa to Eaux Chaudes and Eaux Bonnes.—Proceed first to Jaca and Canfrane. From Canfrane, continuing either by Col de Somport, or nearer by Col des Moines. Hence to Vallée de Blous, whence a carriage road to Gabas, 1½ hour. Gabas to Eaux Chaudes, a fine walk of six miles. Eaux Chaudes to Eaux Bonnes by road, six miles.

ROUTE 37.

Barcelona to Montserrat.—(Three days' Excursion.)

First Day.—Barcelona to Martorell. Rail, 9 a.m. Fare, 10 reals. Arrival at 10 a.m. Omnibus to Collbato (5 reals). Arrive at noon.

Posada Nueva de las Cuevas.—Ascent to Grottoes takes 45 minutes (2 reals). Steep route with ladders. It requires 3½ hours, and takes 38 reals, to see all the curiosities. Dine and sleep at Collbato, which affords comfortable quarters.

Second Day.—Ascend San Geronimo (horse or mule, with guide, 18 reals). Provisions must be taken. Four hours up. Visit church, chamber of the Virgin, &c. Restaurant where you dine. Night quarters at Monastery.

Third Day.—Fine sunrise. Proceed to make visits to the various grottoes, hermitages, &c. Return by N.W. slope. Omnibus from Monastery takes you in one hour, by a fine road, to Monistrol (5 reals). One hour brings you from the town to the station. Train at 5.30 p.m. Reach Barcelona in half an hour.

The sights of the Mountain fall under three heads:—The Mountain itself; the Monastery; the Grottoes:—1. The Mountain is an assemblage of needle-shaped calcareous pinnacles of various colours, forming a solitary mass, rising from the plains of Catalonia, and split down the centre by a ravine, on the edge of which stands the monastery. The ruined hermitage of San Geronimo stands on the summit of the mountain, 3920 feet above the sea, and commands an immense horizon. 2. The ancient Monastery has perished, save a gateway in the Byzantine style. Much of the present building consists of a chaos of chambers, galleries, and cells for pilgrims. The church is elegant; the apse very fine.) Two good altar-pieces. St. Louis and St. Bruno; the venerated image of the Virgin is behind the altar. 3. The mountain is covered with a number of old hermitages, scattered in adventurous positions on overhanging precipices 800 or 900 metres high. The Grotto of the Virgin, the Balcon des Moines, and the Desgutalls, immense rocks from which drips a stream of crystal-clear water, deserve especial attention. The mountain is visited by 60,000 pilgrims yearly, especially the 8th September. It was plundered by the French in 1811 and 1823.

ROUTE 38.

Excursions from Malaga.

Malaga itself (see page 543) is a delightful sojourn at all seasons and the centre of numerous excursions. Of these we select the following:—1. To Ronda; 2. To the Baths of Carratraca.

1. To Ronda, you follow the road to Carratraca for 37 kilom. (24½ miles) to La Pizarra. Guides, horses, or mules can be found there. Road passes through the most romantic country. Casaborela, commanding an immense view, appears to rise as ont of a nosegay of flowers, so green, smiling, and beautiful is the valley in which it stands. Beyond it the route plunges into a maze of narrow winding defiles, amidst torrents, red granite rocks, &c. EL BURGO (6½ miles) has vestiges of Arab buildings; and soon after you approach the sublime, and almost awful, scenery of the Serrania, forming an immense circle of 28 miles, having in its centre a monstrous rock riven in two by a cleft 520 feet deep, through which a torrent rushes in a succession of cataracts. 6½ miles from El Burgo is Ronda, on two plateaux. (Pop. 15,950. Inn, Las Animas). Town in the most picturesque, striking position, divided into three quarters—the town proper, the Mercadillo, and San Francisco. Curiosities—La Casa del Rey Moro, with hanging gardens; La Plaza de Toros; the bridge across the Tajo, 325 feet high, &c. Great horse fair, 20th to 22nd May. Ronda breed of horses celebrated; and the people retain much of the old Spanish character and are great smugglers, and very dexterous in the use of the dagger. La Cueva de Gesto, 7 kilom. (4½ miles), is an excursion worth making; and Ronda la Vieja (Old Ronda) deserves another (9 miles), containing ancient remains, including an amphitheatre. Gibraltar can be reached from Ronda by San Roque, 11 leagues (33 miles), a day's journey. Another path leads by Osuna to Seville.

2.—To Baths of Carratraca.—Rail to Pizarra Station. Carriages and mules to be had there. Places can also be secured at the Diligence Office, Malaga, Fonda de los Tres Reyes (Berlin, 50 reals; interior, 40; banquette, 30). At Carratraca the office is at the Fonda de Calenco. Two hours from Pizarra to Carratraca, through picturesque mountains, de Aguas.

Carratraca.—Hotels—Fonda del Principe; Fonda de Caleneo; Parra; Perez. Height, 486 metres. 100 houses for bathers. One story, 40 reals to 6 reals per day; one room, 8 to 1 real. Two hotels comfortable. Table d'hôte, 20 to 28 reals. The bathing establishment, at the top of the village, contains all the salles d'attente, de service, bathing cabinets, douche salles, &c., required in such places. The Empress of France had a special reserved cabinet. The waters are pronounced to contain hydrate of soda, arsenium, bicarbonates, alkalines, and iron, yielding 768 litres per minute, or 1520 lbs. The smell is strongly that of sulphuretted hydrogen. Waters good for skin and rheumatic disease; bronchial, chest, and digestive and other complaints. Season from 15th of June to September. Cure varies from 15 to 30 baths.

TUNIS.

STEAMERS.—French Boats, from Malta to Tunis, three times a month, 22 hours. Rubattino's Boats from Genoa, via Leghorn and Cagliari; arriving every Monday. Valery's, every Wednesday, from Marseilles, via Bona.

Pop. 120,000. HOTEL:—

De Paris (Bertrand's), comfortable; good table d'hôte.

Money.—Piastre = 60 to 62 cents.

H. M.'s AGENT AND CONSUL GENERAL.—R. Wood, Esq., C.B.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—G. Heap, Esq.

Tunis (ancient Tunes) the Capital of a Regency, under the Turkish Sultan, stands on a Bay or Gulf of the African coast, near Old Carthage, inside Cape Bon; about 150 miles from Malta, 150 miles from Sicily, or Sardinia, and 500 miles east of Algiers. Principal buildings—the Bey's Palace, where Queen Caroline formerly resided; and the Citadel.

The Ruins of Carthage, 10 miles distant, are easily visited in a day by carriage, to be obtained at Tunis. The "Cisterns," and "Aqueduct," are the principal attractions, near the village of Marsa-ken. Carthage, the great rival of Rome, ruling over 300 cities and founded on a peninsula by Queen Dido, was destroyed in the Third Punic War B.C. 146, by Scipio Africanus, who landed at Utica, to the west. Hannibal and Terence were born here. It gave name to Carthagena in Spain. The Saracens took it A.D. 698. Several remains, now at the British Museum, were brought home 1861.

RUSSIA.

A vast empire, partly in Europe and partly in Asia. The larger, or Asiatic part, consisting of Siberia (mostly) and Central Asia (i.e., Kirghis Steppes and Turkestan), is so thinly populated that, while the relative area to Russia in Europe is as 5 to 2, the population is only 6 millions to 76 millions. Russia in Europe (including Finland and the Caucasus), with which we have to do in the present section, lies between 43° and 70° N. latitude, and 18° and 65° E longitude. Greatest extent from the south point of the Caucasus to the north coast of Lapland, 2,200 miles, and from the west border of Poland to the Ural Mountains, 1,700 miles. Area, 2 million square miles, including 1 million of larch, birch, ash, pine, and oak timber nearly all which belongs to the great plain which extends through the middle of Europe, from the North Sea to the Caspian Sea and the Ural Mountains. The highest point of European Russia, at Kremenetz, near the Galician frontier, is only 1,330 feet above sea. The Valdai Hills, on the St. Petersburg and Moscow line, at the heads of the Volga and Dwina, are 900 feet only.

Climate—of an extreme character, the winters being colder, and the summers warmer, than in the corresponding latitudes of Western Europe. The spring, however, is mild and temperate in the South, though the summer is of long duration, with oppressive heat and little rain. Autumn sets in rather late, and the winter is short, with little snow, though sometimes cold and severe. The Middle region, extending from 50° 8′ to 57° 2′, has a rough winter, and, in the more Northerly region, it is long and severe, during which travelling is practicable only on sledges over the frozen snow. At St. Petersburg winter ranges from the end of September to the beginning of May, when it all at once disappears. Here the average days of snow are 70. In the Arctic region, extending from 67° to 74°, the climate is very rigorous in winter, and warm in summer. The N. limit of trees is near the Polar coast, the sea near which is always frozen. Wolves, bears, reindeer, elks, and bisons are hunted.

Geology and Mineral Productions.—The predominating formations are the primary and secondary rocks, including a large space of old red sandstone, covered with shallow lakes. Gold, silver, platinum, copper, iron, and china clay are found in the crystalline and slatey rocks of the Ural range; coal is got near Kharkov, on the Donetz; marble in Finland.

Rivers.—Volga, Dnieper, Dniester, Don, and Dwina are the longest, the Volga being 2,400 miles to its mouth in the Caspian; canals unite them all. The Lakes are Ladoga (the largest in Europe), Onega, and many smaller, all in Finland.

Soil and Vegetation.—About 796,000 square miles possess a peculiar and rather remarkable soil, consisting entirely of decomposed vegetable matter, which forms a stratum varying in thickness from three to five feet. A great part of Western Russia is sandy, and intersected by extensive marshes and bogs. The middle region, from 50° to 70°, is the wealthiest and most densely peopled portion, and consists of wide, open, undulating plains, with very slight elevations to break the monotony. Beyond the Volga is an immense tract of poor desert land, called a steppe. The Russian forests are the most important of her vegetable productions, not only from their enormous extent, but from their supplying in profusion timber, tar, pitch, potash, and turpentine, which form a principal part of the commercial exports, and also fuel, in a country nearly destitute of that commodity. Population of Russia in Europe (1867), 76 millions; of which three-fifths were serfs down to 1863; 53 millions are Russian and Orthodox (or Greek Church); 3 are Roman Catholics; 2½ Protestants; and ½ Jews. Education is subject to the direct control of the Government. Including Siberia and Central Asia, the total population of the Russian Empire is 83½ millions.

Administrative Divisions.—Russia in Europe is divided into 60 Governments, including the Kingdom of Poland; besides 8 in the Grand Duchy of Finland, and 12 in the Caucasus.—Army, 1½ million Regulars, and ½ million Cossacks. Navy, 225 ships of 521 guns; 170 being in the Baltic and Black Seas. Revenue (1872), 66 millions sterling; against 68 millions of Expenditure. Debt, 255 millions.

Commerce.—Imports (1873) from England, worth 11½ millions. Exports, 21 millions; or more with England than with all the rest; chiefly wheat, rye, and other cereals, flax, hemp, leather, skins, tallow, pitch, furs, sturgeon, etc.; cottons and metal goods are sent to China; silk, cotton, and woollen spinning and weaving are carried on at Moscow; cotton and silk are raised in Turkestan. Railways open (1872), 8,500 miles. Telegraphs, 31,000 miles There were 2,450 Post towns (1868).

Money, Russian Currency.—100 copecks (1 silver rouble) 3s. 2d. Paper Money is the chief medium of payments; gold and silver coins are at a premium. The paper rouble is worth about 2s 6d. sterling; 8 paper roubles (equal to £1 sterling). Gold Coins—10, and 5-rouble pieces. Silver Coins—20, 15, 10, and copecks. Copper Coins—5, 3, 2, 1, ½, ¼ copeck pieces. Bank Notes—1, 3, 5, 10, 20, 25, 50, 100, 1000, 2000 roubles.—From "The Merchants' Handbook," Stanford: London.

The traveller can get good change at either Eydtkuhnen or Wierzbolof (Wirballen). "No platina money is now issued. The silver pieces of 25 and 5 copecks are so rare as to be collected for curiosities. A silver rouble is now not known; and the gold pieces rarely ever come into circulation. Scarcely anything but paper is seen. The coins below 1 rouble are silver and copper; but the silver is very much alloyed to bring it into proper relation with paper. The old silver rouble contained twice as much silver as a modern rouble made up of silver pieces. The value of the Rouble varies from 2s. 6d. to 2s. 10d."—J. E. G., Jan. 1873. Note.—Travellers should be on their guard in taking old Dutch ducat, which is in circulation all through Russia and Poland, many so reduced by clipping as not to be worth more than 7s. 3d. or 8s. 6d. in place of 9s. The Pood=36 lbs.

Cabs.—A bargain must be made for Cab fares. In almost all towns except St. Petersburg, the tariff varies from 40 to 50 copecks an hour; and 30 copecks for a drive through the town.

Time for Travelling.—The best time is May to June, or August to October. Winter is good for those who can stand it, and are able to enjoy the pure air, sledging, and other amusements. Hotels are dear, and railway fares are higher than Germany. Good saloon carriages run, containing every convenience. Refreshment stations are large and well provided.

Caution to Travellers.—Travellers, to save inconvenience, must procure the visa of the Russian Consulate-General in London to their passports (32, Gt. Winchester Street, E.C.) Subordinate officials in Russia do not as a rule understand English, whilst everywhere, even in the remotest parts of the Empire, the visa and seal of the Russian Consulate General is immediately recognised. The bearer of a Foreign-office Passport need not attend personally to obtain the visa. The Passport, which must bear his signature, may be forwarded to the Consulate per registered letter, enclosing the visa fee of 2s. in postage stamps or otherwise. Passports transmitted from the country should be posted three clear days previously to the visa being required. The letter must contain a fully directed stamped envelope, to cover the passport when reposted. Passports torn and illegible, and those more than say five years old, should be exchanged for new ones. To prevent delay, Foreigners naturalized in England must produce at the Consulate's office their letters of naturalization on transmitting their passports granted by the Foreign Office. Foreigners, not naturalized in England, must procure the visa of their respective Consuls before transmitting their passports to the Russian Consulate for the indispensable endorsement.

If the traveller intends to reside in the country, he must be furnished with a ticket of residence from the civil governor of the place; but if he only intends staying a short time, he may dispense with the billet of residence, which costs from four rubles and three kopeks to nine rubles and four kopeks, according to the rank of the person. At both Moscow and St. Petersburgh, his permission, is to be obtained at the Address-Office for Foreigners (Bureau d'adresse pour les étrangers). On the traveller leaving Russia, no advertisement of his intention is now necessary. Passports for departure, delivered by governments of the frontiers, are valid for three weeks; and those from governments of the interior for three months; after which, Passports must be reviewed by the Governor, to enable the Foreigner to pass the frontiers.

FOREIGN BOOKS.—All Books are examined by a committee of censure, and none are admitted unless they have been previously approved.

Routes to Russia.—1. LONDON to Ostend or Calais, thence to Stettin and St. Petersburg—a saving of 400 miles sea voyage. From Hull, by steamer, Stettin and Lübeck. 2 London or Paris to Petersburg, by sea from Dunkirk; or direct from London or Hull to Hamburg, thence by Railway to Lübeck, and on by steamer; or by Railway to Berlin, Frankfort-on-Oder, Kowna and Vilna; quick and direct; good buffets. 3. Observations.—Newspapers cannot be sent to Russia in the usual form—i.e., open at the sides. They must be subscribed for at a Russian Post-office, or got through a bookseller. Prices current and circulars may be sent in the usual form. Medical Practitioners, in order to practise, must first ob ain a diploma from St. Petersburg. Governesses must get a certificate of competency from the Russian Consul in London, which is granted upon production of testimonials of character and ability; fee, 5s. 3d. Tea—from the samovar—is a common drink, and is very palatable taken with sugar and a slice of lemon. Russian Days.—Old style, which is still used here, is 12 days behind the New style. Thus—10th of the month, Russian reckoning, is 22nd of the rest of Europe. The Alphabet numbers 36 letters, embracing nearly every possible sound; hence the Russians are good linguists.

Reigning Czar.—The present Emperor, Alexander II, was born 1818; succeeded 18th February, O.S. (or 2nd March, N.S.), and has an heir apparent, the Czarwitch, Alexander, born 1845, and married to a sister of the Princess of Wales. Serfdom was abolished 1863. The 200th anniversary of the birthday of Peter the Great, the founder of modern Russia, was observed 12th June, 1872. A grand council of the Empire and Senate have been constituted to assist the Emperor.

ST. PETERSBURG.—Pop. (1869) 667,030.

All vessels for St. Petersburg stop at Cronstadt (see below). Officers come on board and remain till the arrival of the boat at St. Petersburg.

Proceeding up the river, at some little distance, on the right may be seen Peterhoff, the summer home of the Imperial family; then the glittering domes of St. Isaac, the Garrison Church, and the thin needle-like spire of the Admiralty. Passing the bar, on the right are Mr. Baird's iron works, and the government Ship-building shed; on the left the Corps de Minss museum. Immediately after the steamer stops at the landing-stage, where luggage is examined.

Sentry-Boxes are seen at the corner of every street. Here are stationed the soldiers of the police for keeping order in the streets.

This splendid city, the metropolis of the Russian empire, is seated on the river Neva, near its entrance into the Gulf of Finland. Approaching by water you pass Cronstadt, (which is distant 17 miles,) with its forests of masts, towers, and forts, and then come in sight of the palace of Peterhoff, in its well wooded park. After a couple of hours' sail the traveller passes some majestic buildings, with the golden spires and domes of the city, and he is soon landed on the Quay, near the Academy of Arts. The ground on which the city now stands was a vast morass, occupied by a few fishermen's huts, on the site of which Peter the Great began to build, 1702, by erecting a small hut for himself, and some wooden hovels. In 1710 the Count Golovkin built the first brick house; and the next year the Emperor, with his own hand, laid the foundation of a house of the same material. From these small beginnings rose the Imperial city of St. Petersburg, which is now one of the handsomest in Europe, though consisting of great palace-like houses and mean hovels.

The best streets are broad and spacious; and three of the principal ones, which meet in a point at the Admiralty, are more than two miles long. The Nevski Prospekt is the Regent-street of St. Petersburgh. It is nearly three miles in length, of great width, has most elegant shops, palaces, churches, &c. on each side, and is the great artery of the city. Out of this street there is a large arcade or bazaar, very similar to the one at Brussels. The Kazan Cathedral, in this street, is a noble edifice of its kind. Two circular colonnades, similar to those in front of St. Peter's at Rome, lead to the entrance of the church, which is adorned with colossal statues. In the interior are fifty-six marble columns 52 feet in height, each one hewn out of a single block of marble. Walls and flooring of the same, all beautifully polished. There are here some choice paintings; but what attracts the eye most is the balustrade, pillars twenty feet high, beams, picture frames, &c., before the sanctuary, all of which are of solid silver, and highly polished. Our Lady of Kazan is covered with jewels of immense value; and the silver before-mentioned was a present to the Holy Mother, so called, from the Cossacks, after the campaigns of 1813-14. Isaac's Church was commenced a century ago by Catherine II.; but it is in the present Emperor's reign that it has become what it is. It is a massive building, in a simple style, with porticoes. The foundation alone cost upwards of £200,000. Fabulous sums are mentioned as the cost of this beautiful church; sums as high as £16,000,000, or £17,000,000.—Like all other churches here, it is built in the form of a Greek cross, of four equal sides. The pillars at the entrance are sixty feet high, and have a diameter of seven feet—all magnificent, round, and highly polished granite monoliths from Finland. The cupola is covered with copper, overlaid with gold, for the gilding of which forty-two measures, equal to fourteen English bushels, of ducats were melted down. The Altar screen is of immense value. The whole edifice is surmounted by the far-seen golden cross, which, with the cupola, glitters like the sun over a mountain.

Within the walls of the fortress, which is built on the Petersburg side (or old Petersburg), is the Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul, in which are deposited the remains of Peter the Great, and of the successive sovereigns, except Peter the II., who is buried at Moscow. Near the fortress is the hut of Peter the Great, protected by a building over it, in wood and glass, part being used as a chapel; the other half, containing the furniture and mementoes of Peter. On the south side of the Neva is Petersburg proper, so that standing on the ramparts, and looking over the river, you have before you the Summer Gardens, with the fine quay, on which are the Marble Palace, the residence of the Finance Minister, the Michael Palace, the French Embassy, Hermitage, Winter Palace, and other buildings. A little to the left is the West End of St, Petersburg, the residences of the nobles, &c., in the quarters called Lithania and Moscovskaya. To the right, is the Varsili island, with the Exchange at the extreme near point. On this island are situated the Academy of Arts and Sciences. The University, founded in 1719. The Corps de Mines, having a very fine Museum, rich in minerals, perhaps the finest in the world, such as emeralds, amethysts, &c.; a block of malachite, 4000 lbs. weight, valued at £19,000; a lump of gold, 80 lbs. weight, &c.

The river is as broad as the Thames, and, in many parts, much wider. It is deep, rapid, and clear. Its water is used by the inhabitants for all household purposes. The quays form noble uninterrupted promenades of miles on either side.

One of the most striking objects is an equestrian Statue of Peter the Great, erected by Catherine II. in 1782. It is of colossal size, and stands on a huge pedestal of granite, between the Isaac's Church and the river. On the opposite side of the church is the equestrian statue, erected by the present Emperor, to Nicholas—the bas relief in bronze, representing the principal episodes in his life. The Column of Alexander is also a very fine monument.

The Imperial Library on the Nevsky is a large building, and contains many valuable works. The public are admitted every day.

The Botanical Gardens, on Apothecary's Island, are well worth a visit, especially the palm-houses. The Datschas, or country villas of the nobility and merchants on the islands are nearly all built of wood, in every variety of style and colour, all detached, and standing in their gardens and groves.

In the Taurida Palace is the great ball-room, said to be half a mile in circuit; on one side of which is the Winter Garden, or conservatory, the whole length of the palace lined with statuary, and divided from the ball-room by a row of magnificent marble pillars, but otherwise roofed in, and forming part of the saloon itself. Enormous chandeliers, and silver branches for lights encircle the pillars, which with the plants and trees in the conservatory hold upwards of 20,000 wax lights. The Czarevitch and Czarevna live at the Anitchkoff Palace.

The Winter Palace, however, is of itself worth a visit to St. Petersburg. It was commenced in 1754, and finished in 1762, for the Empress Elizabeth, and stands on the banks of the Neva; its front—700 feet in length—is three stories high it is nearly square. When the emperor is residing in the palace, upwards of 7000 persons inhabit the building. Here the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh were married; the Prayer-book used by the Duke of Westminster being the one used at the marriage of George III., William IV., and the Prince of Wales. The Empress's reception room, or Golden Saloon, has its walls entirely covered with gold, and the white saloon has all its decorations of pure white, relieved only by gold. The Throne Saloon, or St. George's Hall, surpasses everything for grandeur and beauty, and is 140 feet long by 60 in width. The Hermitage, connected with the Winter Palace, was built by Empress Catherine, and is a most luxurious retreat, rich in works of art of all kinds, in antiquities, rare porcelain, Siberian curiosities, scientific instruments, miniatures, &c. The modern Hermitage, begun 1840, finished 1852, by Klenze of Munich, is in a light Grecian style, 515 feet long, 375 wide. The atrium, the galleries and the floor, present splendid specimens of columns, obelisks, candelabra, vases of granite, porphyry, marble, lapis lazuli, &c. Perhaps want of elevation is a defect in its construction. Salle VII. contains Greek antiquities of the Cimmerian Bosphorus, and Siberian curiosities, historical and natural. One of the most remarkable antiques is the Venus of the Hermitage (No. 343.) The Siberian collection (Closet L.) has a coat of mail of solid gold (3 lbs. weight). Early stone and iron instruments (Tartar) are in Closet G. The Porcelain Salle is No. 18. The Library has some archæological curiosities.

GALLERY OF PAINTINGS in the first story; it contains 39 chambers, and the following are its principal treasures.

1st Chamber, contains statuary, and a gallery of historical painting.

2nd Chamber, the Italian school, Nos. to 320.

21st & 22nd Chambers, Russian school, Bruloff &c.

27th Chamber is the Lodge of Raphael.

28th to 39th Chambers are devoted to the French school, including Poussin, Claude Lorraine, and Watteau.

The French gallery forms a separate collection in the old part of the Hermitage. The gallery of Peter the Great has, among other curiosities, the sword, telescope, books, cane, &c., of the great man, and many things made by him. There are also many foreign curiosities, Japanese, Chinese, &c. besides an Anglo-Saxon cup found in Russia, a glass cup with the name of Anne of Cleves in Latin, and another with the name of Francis Drake.

The Hermitage is generally open daily. Admission is gained by ticket from some resident merchant, or by paying one rouble to the porter. Visitors are recommended to go immediately the doors are open (10 a.m.), take a little lunch with them, and stay till the close (4 p.m).

Of the charitable institutions, the principal are—the Foundling Hospital, the Sailors' Hospital, the Lazaretto, the Asylum for the Blind, the Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb, the Humane Society, &c.

The manufactures are various, and some of them of considerable extent; and the commercial intercourse is important, from its extensive communication with the interior, this being the only great maritime outlet in the Gulf of Finland. The principal exports are hemp, flax, skins, leather, iron, tallow, &c.

One of the most pleasant Promenades in the city

s on the Cavalry Boulevards, leading to Isaac's Church, one mile in length, and perfectly level.

BRIDGES—Built on boats (some of them nearly half a mile in length), except the New Bridge, which is built of iron, has seven arches, and cost one million and a quarter sterling. This bridge was finished about two years ago, and is a magnificent structure.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR—His Excellency Lord A. Loftus, G.C.B. Secretary—W. Doria, Esq.

ENGLISH CONSUL—J. Michell, Esq.

AMERICAN CHARGE D'AFFAIRES—His Excellency C. Schuyler.

AMERICAN CONSUL GENERAL—General Pomutz.

ENGLISH PHYSICIAN to the British Embassy, Dr. Carrick.

ENGLISH CHURCH SERVICE every Sunday. Chaplain, Rev. A. Thompson, M.A.; Curate, Rev. S. Kingsford, M.A.

Service by Congregationalist Minister in the British and American Chapel, and also at the suburb of Alexandroffsky.

Excursions—To Tsarsko Selo by Rail. Here is a huge Palace built by Catherine II. with traces of profuse gilding outside. One room inside is lined entirely with amber, the gift of Frederick the Great. The grounds are very extensive, containing some of the best timber in Northern Russia. There is also an armoury containing rich suits of armour, fire arms, jewelled saddle cloths, a menagerie, a dining house, and a frigate on the lake for the Grand Duke.

From Tsarsko, take drosky to Pavlovsk, 3 miles, to the Imperial Park, which is undulating, well wooded and watered.

The upper storey of the Palace, rebuilt 1803, has many vases in Siberian jasper, lapis-lazuli, malachite, &c., immense mirrors, and splendid Gobelin tapestries. The palace has also many works of art, &c., produced by members of the imperial family. The gardens have many pavilions and little houses, ornamented with choice pieces of sculpture. Most of the erections in the park, are monuments to members of the Romanoff family. There is a pretty farm also, and an artificial cascade. Pavlovsk contains, beside the principal palace of Constantine, brother of Nicholas I., another belonging to H. I. H. the Archduke Constantine, brother of the reigning Emperor.

At the railway terminus a very excellent band, plays every evening during the summer; but there are certain fashionable evenings, which the visitor can ascertain from his landlord. Refreshments may be obtained, good but dear. English ale, 2 roubles the quart-bottle; porter, 1.50 do. Trains return at convenient hours.

Other Excursions may be made to Oranienbaum, Peterhof, the Convent and church of St. Sergius, Ropscha, Krasnoe Selo, and other places, besides Cronstadt and Lake Ladoga.

You reach Oranienbaum from Cronstadt by small steamers, running several times a-day. (Distance, 8 versts—2 leagues, or 6 miles). Palace built by Menschikoff in 1724, consisting of three blocks of building. There are several other palaces at hand; e. g., Serguiefka, the property of the Grand Duchess Marie, with a beautiful park and delightful views. Also a farm of Prince Oldenburg.

Peterhof, near Oranienbaum, was begun 1720, and was built by Leblond under Peter the Great. It is made to retain its original appearance, even its ancient yellow colour being continually renewed. The interior contains a variety of curiosities, such as porcelain, malachite, tapestry, paintings relating to victories in the reign of Catharine II.; and a collection of 368 portraits of women, painted by Count Rosali for the empress during a journey. All are in the national costume.

The gardens are full of Neptunes, Tritons, &c. The fountains are thought almost to equal those of Versailles. The park has many curiosities:—Marly, a favourite resort of Peter the Great; the cottage of the Empress Catharine, sumptuous and brilliant with gold and mirrors; the Palais de Paille; the English Garden, with a ball-room; and Alexandria, a collection of private cottages of the Emperor, requiring a permit from the governor of Peterhof to visit them.

The illuminations of the park on a fine evening, are managed with great skill, and convert all the leaves of the trees into so many dazzling stars, and the sheets of water into floods of molten gold. Peterhof was the favourite residence of the Empress-mother.

St. Sergius, near the Gulf of Finland, a little way from Peterhof (15 versts from St. Petersburg). Finished 1758. Consists of a convent containing four churches, and especially a cemetery, with many remarkable monuments of some of the first dignitaries of the state.

Ropscha is a palace founded by Peter the Great, rebuilt by the Empress Elizabeth. Peter III. was assassinated here in 1762 (July 6). It was completely reconstructed in 1785, by Mr. Engelmann, for 48,000 francs. The view from the Belvidere or tower is quite charming; including the brilliant cupolas of the capital, and the gulf of Cronstadt. The garden is filled with lakes, streams, cascades, &c.; and Mr. Engelmann did much to improve the position of the peasants, by rebuilding many villages, planting fruit-trees, regulating the course of the waters by granite sluices, paper manufactories, &c. The water-works at the neighbouring fortress of Schlusselburg deserve a visit. Ropscha was latterly the property of the Empress Alexandra, wife of Nicholas. The Fins of the neighbouring villages still sing national songs, recording their wars against the Russians.

Krasnoe-Selo (16 versts from St. Petersburg by railroad); on a hill, called the mountain of Donderhof. Splendid position. The Palace, built by Nicholas, is very singular, being in the shape of a vast isba, or peasant's cottage. Slope of the hills covered with fine fruit-trees. Regiments of the Guard, camp here in summer, the infantry being lodged in handsome tents, arranged street fashion. Tents of the staff and commander placed apart.

Cronstadt, the port of Petersburg, has 47,155 (1867) inhabitants, including the garrison of 25,000 men. The fortifications, begun by Peter the Great, 1703, have been greatly strengthened since the Crimean war. West Port is reserved for merchant vessels. Exports mostly tallow, cereals, hemp, and flax. Port open from May to November. Bar at mouth of the Neva, 8 to 10 feet.

Here are Docks, arsenals, granite forts, vast barracks, a double harbour, customs, &c., almost all made under Nicholas I., in the space of 30 years. The Mole is an interesting walk; it is also expedient to drive (1½ league) 5 or 6 versts beyond the barrier of the Citadel, when the visitor will get a better notion of the fortification.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—W. Maynard, Esq.
AMERICAN CONSUL.—Agent: A. Wilkins, Esq.

Lake Ladoga.—The best way is to proceed from Schlusselburg by Valaamo steamer, generally crowded with pious pilgrims, and carrying a few tourists, anxious to explore the wonders of the largest European lake.

Soon after losing sight of the towers of Schlusselburg, you find yourself launched on the broad bosom of this inland sea; and, after a voyage of 120 versts, you reach the island of Konewetz,—so called from the annual sacrifice of a horse by the ancient Fins on this spot. It is remarkable for the beauty of its pine forests, and contains a convent of monks, who devote themselves to fishing, as well as religious exercises. The principal church contains a silver statue of Saint Arsinius, the apostle of civilization in this district, and held in much veneration in the country.

Storms are frequent and furious. Steamers even are sometimes exposed to danger, many parts of the lake having rocks and breakers. The island Valaamo rises steeply from the waters, on granite rocks, covered with verdure and pine-trees. It is 30 versts round, in the middle of a group of islands, forty in number. The convent Church, in a delightful spot, is rich in all kinds of jewels, and in having a library containing rare books but no manuscripts.

The vast expanse of water, and the charming atmosphere of a northern summer's night, are the chief attractions of Ladoga.

Astrakhan.—Pop.—(1869) 47 840.

Capital of a Government (formerly of a Tartar kingdom), 200 miles from the nearest rail, on an island in the Delta of the Volga, where it falls into the Caspian sea, of which it is the chief port. It is irregularly built of wood, on uneven ground, and is a curious gathering of cupolas, minarets, bazaars, and trading factories, half Oriental in character. The leading merchant are Armenians, Hindoos, and Persians. At the annual fairs, the population is increased by 30,000. Here are markets for cotton, silk, and shagreen, and other goods, caviare, and isinglass, timber, and especially for the fish caught in the Caspian.

Kazan or Kasan.—Pop. (1867) 79,605.

HOTELS—Resanof, capital hotel. Russie: Hotel Odessa.

On the Kazanka, 10 versts from its mouth into the Volga, (474 versts from Nijni-Novgorod). Steamer 24 hours descending, 29 ascending the Volga. Kazan is a kind of point of contact between European and Asiatic Russia: and is a very interesting town, regularly built. Salons of the aristocracy as rich and elegant as those of Petersburg and Moscow. Life is merry at Kazan. Masked balls, routs, sledging parties, &c., are frequent, and the character of the population is hospitable.

English, French, and German generally spoken in good society. Supposed to have been founded by the Tartars in 1265, it became a flourishing city, till it was destroyed by Jouri Dmitrievitch. Rebuilt on seven hills, like Rome, by Oulon Achmet, it continued till 1552, when it was taken by John the Fourth, or the Terrible. It is now one of the handsomest towns in Russia, divided into two parts, the high and the low town.

CHIEF BUILDINGS.—Nôtre Dame; the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul; the church of the Annunciation, and that of St. Cyprian. The image of the Virgin of Kazan is in great veneration, in the church of Nôtre Dame. Gostinnoi Dvor, with a tower of admirable architecture; the theatre, University, founded by Alexander I. in 1805, and occupying a high place for the study of Oriental languages. Lectures are attended by a number of Persian, Mongol, Turkish, Tartar, and Armenian students. The Observatory is one of the best in Russia; the clinical department is vast; and the cabinets, museum, library, and botanic garden, equal the best in Europe. Numismatic collection, rich; and the cabinet of curiosities contains the costume of Lamas, a collection of Chinese paintings, &c.; while in the zoological cabinet will be found a quantity of Siberian birds and quadrupeds. Manufactories of cloth, leather, tiles, soap, anchors, steel goods, &c. The Kazan Fair lasting six weeks, is remarkable for its glass ware and china. Kazan is the head-quarters of the Tartars in Russia.

Kherson.—Pop. 40,000.—On the Dnieper; in daily communication with Odessa; eight hours by steamer (Saturdays excepted)

HOTEL NEW ODESSA (Maritchelli) best.

Large trade with Odessa; in grain alone 750,000 quarters annually; tallow, wool, &c.—Supplies all the Prussian ports of the Black Sea with timber, brought down the river from the governments of the interior. Six large saw mills, 10 wool washeries. Objects of interest: Howard's monument, cathedral, citadel, &c.

Kief or Kiew.—Stat.—Pop. 70,600 (1867).

HOTELS: GRAND HOTEL.

This town, the Jerusalem of Russia, held in very great veneration with the people generally, is supposed to have been founded by the Varangian heroes, Askold and Dyr. In 882, Oleg made it the capital, and mother of the Russian cities. Olga, regent of Kiev, embraced Christianity in 955. Kiew, long under the Tartars, and some time under Poland, and was ultimately ceded to Russia 1667.

Though fallen, it is still a most curious place to visit, with its Churches, and Catacombs, it is in fact a small Moscow. Its situation is picturesque, on the right bank of the Dnieper (the ancient Borysthenes); it consists of three parts: 1. the old town; 2. the new fort, Po charkoi; 3. the lower town, Podole, in the valley—all fortified. Finest part of town to N., inhabited by governor and best families, and shaded with fine trees. Notice, also, the Church of St. Basil, built by Vladimir the Great, stands on site of temple of Perounc, the Jupiter of the ancient Russians; Cathedral of Saint Sophia, built 1037, by the Grand Duke Jaroslaf; fine Byzantine mosaics of scripture subjects; tomb of Jaroslaf. Other Churches—The Desyatynnaia and St. George, built 1052; monastery of Petcherskoi, the first in Russia, founded 1055. Bazaar and Jews' quarter, near the fortress. The quarter called Podole is handsome, and regularly built. The University of St. Vladimir, founded in 1833, has a library of 100,000 volumes. The Suspension Bridge bridge over the Dnieper cost £360,000; was built 1848 to 1855, by Vignolles, and is 6755 English feet long. The Viaduct for the rail is equally striking.

GREATEST CURIOSITY.—Catacombs of St Anthony, founder of the monastery, cut in the rock by the river. Passage six feet high, very narrow; 80 bodies preserved in open coffins, and dresses adorned with gold and silver. Places still pointed out, where the martyrs walled themselves in, to pass the whole of their life there. Catacombs of St. Theodosius, smaller than those of St. Anthony. Number of pilgrims, 50,000 annually.

Moscow (in Russ., Moskva.)—Pop., (1871) 611,970.—HOTELS:—

HOTEL DE DRESDE, Place of Tverskaia. Rooms, 1 rouble and upwards. Dinner, 1 rouble 50 copecks, à la carte.

HOTEL HAMBURG (Hotel Bidet). "Moderate charges; much frequented by English."—B. & C.

HOTEL LABADIE (first class). Rooms, 1 rble. and upwards. Dinner, 1 rouble 50 copecks, à la carte. Baths and billiards. Monsieur Billo's Lubianka Street; frequented by French and English. In the latter, price for everything 4 roubles daily; attendance extra. HOTEL DU BAZARSLAVE, a large new one.

Omnibuses from rail to hotels. Droshkys a little dearer, but better than at Petersburg, 5 to 6 roubles a-day. DROSKIES.—The traveller should get his landlord or a friend speaking Russ to make a bargain for him, before he takes a drosky any distance. Sledges in winter very cheap. Best Restaurants, Moskovsky and Novo Tolczky.

The fiacre and street police regulations same as in Petersburg; pay of valets de place, and charge for cartes de sejour the same also.

Moscow the real metropolis of the empire, though not the seat of government, is a large city, on the Moskva, where the Neglina joins it at the centre of several rails. 400 miles S.E. of St. Petersburg, in 55° N. latitude, and in 37° E. longitude. In 1812 it was all but destroyed by fire, an event memorable in history, as being connected with the invasion of Russia by the French, under Napoleon. On the 7th of September the battle of Borodino (about 60 miles W.), took place and the Russians retreated, leaving Moscow to its fate. The city was set on fire by the governor, Count Rostopchin, and was in ruins when the French entered it on the 14th of the same month. In the fire 30,000 sick and wounded soldiers perished. This conflagration destroyed more than three parts of the town; but it is now all rebuilt, and considerably improved.

It has five divisions—the Kremlin, containing the ancient palace of the Czars, where Peter the Great was born; the Kitaigorod containing the university, the printing-house, and very many valuable buildings; the Bielgorod, or White Town; the Semliangorod; and the Sloboda or suburbs. The general effect of Moscow, with its golden cupolas and winding streets, is surpassingly interesting. Visitors should by all means gain the views of Moscow from the Tower of Ivan Velki in the Kremlin, from the Seminoff Monastery on the east, and from the Sparrow Hill on the south. Here the International Exhibition of 1872 was held.

The Cathedral of the Assumption, founded in 1325, and rebuilt in 1472, is decked out with gorgeous and extravagant ornaments. In this church the Emperors are invested with the ancient crown of the Czars.

The Cathedral of St. Michael, close to the former contains the tombs of several early czars, and a great quantity of splendid ornaments. The Church of the Saviour is one of the most ancient in Moscow, with the relics of Stephen of Perm, the first Christian martyr and missionary in Russia. The Arsenal is very interesting, containing an immense number of cannon taken from the French in 1812.

Towering far above all other objects is the tower of Ivan Velki, or John the Great. It is 270 feet high; and contains thirty-four bells, the largest of which is more than 124,000 lbs. weight, English. They are decidedly worth hearing, as they toll on Sundays and festival-days. The Great Bell of Moscow, cast in the reign of the Empress Anne, and weighing 443,772 lbs., has been recently raised from a pit, in which it was sunk for a century, and placed upon a pedestal. Though now cracked and useless, it is yet a great object of veneration with the Russians.

REMARKABLE BUILDINGS—The Kremlin standing on a hill, with a fine view from the terrace. Derivation of name and date of foundation uncertain. In 1339, it was surrounded by oaken walls. Consists now of an enclosure 7280 feet in circumference, with five gates, the principal being the Spaski Vorota, or Redeemer's Gate, having over it a picture of the saviour of Smolensk, held in high veneration. (N.B.—Take off your hat while passing under the gate). On the one side is the Church of St. Basil.

Entering the square you see the Churches, with the New Palace, built by the Emperor Nicholas (1838–49), with its handsome suites of rooms, and halls dedicated to St George (white), Vladimir (red), and St. Andrew (blue.) Salle of St. George, devoted to the military order of that name, is one of the finest. The picture gallery contains paintings by Raphael, Coreggio, and Guido. Notice the Banqueting Room, and the Council Hall of the Patriarchs. The Nicholas palace contains Treasury resembling that of the Tower of London, especially, ancient Russian and German armour, coronation chairs of different Russian czars, modern fire-arms, &c. The throne of the Czar Alexis has 1223 rubies, besides turquoises and pearls. Opposite is a globe, sent to the Prince of Kief by the Greek emperors Basil and Constantine, and containing 58 diamonds, 89 rubies, 21 sapphires, 50 emeralds, and 37 pearls. In the Wardrobe are, among other curiosities, the boots of Peter the Great, and a statue of Napoleon. Near this are the Arsenal, with its trophy guns and the Senate House. The general effect of the Kremlin is surprisingly quaint and gorgeous, combining every variety of structure; and by its golden cupolas, painted walls, strange kiosks, towers, and other buildings, seeming to represent the blending of Oriental and Western architecture.

English Vice-Consul.—Fred. Leslie, Esq.

American Vice Consul.—S. P. Young, Esq.

English Church in the Tchernicheffskoi Pereulok. Service at 11 a.m. Books provided. Rev. G. R. Penny, Chaplain.

Conveyances.—Railway to St Petersburg, 410 miles long, mostly through forest in 20 hrs. The carriages are fitted up with comfort and convenience, and ample time is allowed for refreshments. An interesting Excursion can be made to the Trinity Convent, one of the richest in Russia; but at some distance from Moscow (2 hours rail.)

Conveyances.—Railway. see pages 287—292.

Nijni-Novgorod.—Stat. Pop. 40,750(1867)

Hotels:—Hotels indifferent. They are, 1. Lobasheff's Hotel de Russie; 2. Nikita Egoroff, near the fair; 3. Bil et's Ville de Hamburg, near the fair. Rooms very dear during the Fair.

The town, 273 miles from Moscow, was founded in 1222, at the confluence of the Volga and Oka, and has been several times sacked by the Tartars. The government offices are in the Kremlin, which contains the monuments of Minin and Pojarsky, two patriots who delivered their country from the yoke of the Poles, 1612.

Principal Churches.—1. Cathedral of the Transfiguration, founded 1221; Minin is buried in it. 2. Cathedral of the Archangel, rebuilt 1620. 3. Church of the Nativity of the Virgin (1712); built in a peculiar style, and of a peculiar colour. The town has 59 churches. From the tower of Minin the spectator enjoys a splendid panoramic view. The whole town and its monuments is at your feet, and the fair (if in season) looks like another town; while the rivers Volga and Oka are alive with traffic, the roads are full of Tartar workmen, and the green walls of its roofs, the mixture of foliage, and the picturesque architecture of the Kremlin, present a delightful combination of attractive features. The Otkos, or terrace built by the Emperor Nicholas, also presents one of the most curious views in Europe.

The Fair is the greatest attraction of the place. The crowd reaches half a million, consisting of representatives of even remote Oriental nations, is at the centre of the Bazaar, which is composed of 50 streets of shops, containing the principal attractions of the fair—Persian silks, curiosities from Bokhara, geological specimens from Siberia, Russian iron ware of Touls, &c. The Tartar curiosities from Bokhara, include turquoises, malachite (lapis-lazuli) A good judge is required to know their value. The hotel of the governor contains a Restaurant. Behind is a boulevard, with the cathedral, a Tartar mosque, an Armenian church, &c. The fair is surrounded by a canal, to protect it against fires. The bazaar, built by the Emperor Nicholas, is too small for the fair, which has now extended to the lively banks of the rivers where some huge machines can be seen, sent from England and Belgium, to tow vessels. The navigation of the Volga embraces at present a fleet of 400 steamers. Business carried on annually at the fair, estimated at £16,000 000. Fair lasts from July 27th to Sept. 22

Odessa.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 162,811.—Hotels: Hotel de L'Europe, one of the best, near the Exchange.

Hotel de Londres; Hotel St. Petersburg, on the boulevard, overlooking the sea and port; Hotel Suisse.

Droeschkis, two horses, 50 kopecks the hour.

A fortified seaport in the Black Sea, 80 miles from Nicolaieff, in the government of Kherson, founded in 1792 by Catherine II. The harbour is an excellent and capacious one. The principal portion of the town is built upon the top of a long range of cliffs, which commands a splendid sea view. A public walk, planted with flowering trees and shrubs, extends along the top, having the governor's house at one end, the Exchange at the other, and a statue of the Duc de Richelieu, who planned the town, in the centre. Old Prince Woruntsoff, long since dead, was governor before the Crimean War. Houses in the best localities built of a soft, light-coloured stone, and roofed with sheets of iron, or painted wood. Its chief branch of trade consists of grain. Wool is also fast rising into importance. Three-fourths of the carrying trade is performed by English steamers, the balance by vessels of other nations. Chief imports are colonial produce, cottons, silks, coals from England, machinery, iron, in fact everything imaginable. The inhabitants are chiefly Polish Jews, Italians, Greeks, and Germans, with a few French and English. The former Richelieu Lyceum has now become the new Russian University. The Cathedral of St. Nicholas will repay a visit, its interior being sumptuously decorated.

lebastopol, passing by Inkermann, you can each Baktchiseral, half way to Simferopol, and he Alma. Near Baktchiseral half an hour's valk, are the Convent of Monastir, cut out in the ock, and the singular new town of Tschufut Kalé, capital of the Jewish sect of the Karaïtes. Baktchiserai. "Avambie's Hotel" in the uburb of Azise is the best. The Palace of the Khans of Tartary, the Apartments occupied by Catherine II, Alexander I, and Nicholas, the ombs of the Khans, Medsched, the Bazars, and other Mosques, with their tall Minarets, are the objects of interest. A delightful excursion may be made from Sebastopol to Aloupka, on the way beyond Balaklava. Aloupka is a most beautiful palace of Prince Woruntzoff, in a delightful situation near the Black Sea. The Wines of Mazaratch and Massandra growing near, are said to equal the best in France. The whole of the south coast of this part of the Crimea, is delightful, presenting remarkable exuberance of vegetation; including fig, olive, peach, pomgranate, and apricot trees. Nuts are of a prodigious size; shrubs, such as laurel, grow most luxuriantly; and the vine forms beautiful festoons among the other trees. Yalta is a pretty town, at the bottom of a bay. Two hotels; Galakoff and a French one. Road to Manjup-Kalé charming. Near Majaratch is the botanic garden of Nikita, with 300 kinds of trees. A little further you can ascend the Tschatir-Dagh (4000 feet), the highest mountain in the Crimea. Simferopol, capital of the Crimea, a most interesting, Hotel, Schnyder's. Kertch, near Sea of Azoff, interesting from antiquities, and its association with Mithridates. Notice the Old Tombs, and new Great Fort. ENGLISH CONSUL, P. Barrow, Esq. From here steamers run to the Circassian coast. Steamer leaves Batoum for Constantinople, by Trebisond, on Saturday.

Orenburg.—Pop. (1867) 83,435.

The capital of a government on the border of Europe and Asia, on the river Ural, 600 miles north east of Astrakhan. Besides the Governor's Palace, it contains two Cathedrals; a Turkish Mosque; Custom House, Exchange, and Bazaar; a Military School, Museum, &c.; and has a trade with Central Asia in silks, jewels, Chinese goods, &c. A direct Telegraph route to Pekin has been opened up via the Seven Lakes, instead of round by Kiachta. To Khiva, by way of Emba, and the border of Lake Aral, is 1318 versts, or 950 miles.

Revel.—Stat.—Pop. (1867) 37,325, mostly Germans.—HOTELS: Goldene Löwe, Wittestrand.

The situation of Revel, the capital of Esthonia, has been compared, with patriotic exaggeration, to that of Naples, by Russian writers. Still the views are fine, especially from the house of Tiesenhausen.

The visitor should take a droshky to the new villas on the heights, and down to the Baltic, where he can obtain good bathing in Summer.

OBJECTS OF INTEREST:—The Cathedral, first built in 1329, but many times destroyed by lightning; containing good specimens of Gothic, and some fine sculpture. At St. Nicholas' church is a copy of the Dance of death, similar to that at Lübeck; also the body of a duke, some 150 years dead, in perfect preservation, in rich lace and velvet.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL-E. G de Souncanton, Esq.

EXCURSIONS.—Catharinenthal has a little palace of Peter the Great, who planted most of the trees in the park. The valley of Catharinenthal is admirably arranged in shady walks. Fine view from Laksberg. Other walks near: Seywang cascades Fall, and garden of Merranoc (30 versts). Convent of St. Brigitta deserves a visit. A subterranean passage to the old monastery of Munchendorf is attributed by the legend to a knight, who made it in the course of years, to visit his mitress, who had taken the veil in the convent.

Riga.—Stat.—Pop. (1867) 102,050.—HOTELS: ST. PETERSBURG; DE LONDRES; KING'S ARMS.

On the Dwina, about five miles from its mouth, in a Gulf of the Baltic, called the Gulf of Riga, It is a very strong town, and is capital of the Government of Livonia. Its commercial position is next to that of St. Petersburg. Foreign merchants carry on its trade, and those connected with the English Factory there enjoy the greatest share of the commerce. Corn, hemp, flax, iron, timber, masts, leather, and tallow, with Riga balsam, form the principal articles of export. There is a large floating Bridge over the Dwina, 2,600 feet long and 40 broad; this is removed in Winter.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—A. Schwartz, Esq.

ENGLISH SERVICE, Chaplain, Rev. John Ellis.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Dunaburg and Witebsk, page 293, and thence to St. Petersburg, Warsaw, &c. To Bolderaa, see page 286.

Saratov.—Stat.—Pop. (1867) 93,220.

A large city on the right bank of the Volga, noted for a flourishing trade, and divided into the upper and lower towns. It has a handsome archiepiscopal Palace, several elegant Churches, a large Bazaar, a College, and an Ecclesiastical seminary. STEAMERS—Up and down the Volga.

Tiflis or Teflis.—Pop. (1872) 64,445, chiefly Armenians.

HOTELS:—Caucasus; De Paris; D'Italie.

Capital of Georgia, in the Caucasus, half-way between the Black and Caspian seas, in the valley of the Kurakuna. A rail is open from here down to Poti, on the Black Sea; and another is projected hence down to Petrovsk or Petrolvks, on the Caspian. In the lower town are Armenian and Catholic Churches, and several Mosques. The upper or Russian town is well built, and contains the Government houses, with squares and streets, barracks and fortified walls. Within a short distance, the ridge of the Caucasus, covered with forests and washed by snowy peaks (some volcanic), the highest of which is Elburz, at the head of the Kur, on the Circassian border, 18,495 feet above sea. The Kazbech is 16,546 feet. The average height is 8,000 feet. Here they hunt the Aurochs Ox of the mountains. The only Pass leads from Tiflis to Mozdock, on the north side. Cotton, rice, indigo, are among the products. About 150 miles, south west is Mount Ararat, 17,112 ft. high close to the frontiers of Turkey and Persia.

FINLAND.

A Russian Grand Duchy (ceded 1809) between the Gulf of Bothnia and Finland, divided into 8 governments. Pop. (1872) 1,832,138, chiefly of Gothic blood (allied to Swedish), and Lutherans along shore; but Finns and Laps up the country Area, 146,000 square miles, mostly all lake and forest in the interior, whilst the coast is a succession of granite islands. Marble is quarried. The Climate is rainy.

RAILWAY—Helsingfors to St. Petersburg, with a Branch to Tavastehus.

Finland Currency.—100 Pennis = 1 mark = 9½d. Paper Money is chiefly in circulation; no gold coins. Silver Coins—1, 2 Marks are 25 and 50 Pennis = respectively, 1s. 7d., 9½d., 4½d., and 2½d. sterling. Copper Coins—1, 5, 10 Pennis = respectively, 1-10thd., ½d., 1d. sterling. Bank Notes—100, 40, 20, 12, and 3 Marks of Finland State Bank, and 100, 25, and 15 Marks of one private bank. (See "The Merchants' Handbook of Money, Weights and Measures." By W. A. Browne, LL.D. London: Stanford).

STEAMER—The traveller from Stockholm to St. Petersburg has the advantage of seeing something of Finland. When he pays his fare, his Foreign Office Passport is taken from him, to be returned as he nears St. Petersburg. The sail is altogether a pleasant one, past innumerable small granite islands covered with wood; and the sea has the appearance of a lake broken continually by land. The boat first stops at Abo (pronounced Obo).—HOTELS:—"Society's House" on the quay, the best. A rest of 12 hours allowed here: meals are taken on board.

Abo, on the east side of the Gulf of Bothnia, covers a large extent of ground; its houses of painted wood, are low, the streets wide, and at right angles. A view should be obtained on the heights from the top of the Observatory. To the left is a glimpse of the Gulf, and almost all round the broken granite surface covered with wood.

OBJECTS OF INTEREST:—The Cathedral, an old brick building, contains a fine organ, chapels with good iron-work gates, frescoes illustrating Finnish history, fine interior. Tea gardens, where a band plays. Castle at the entrance of the river.

ENGLISH CONSUL.—W. Crichton, Esq.

During the season the Steamer usually arrives at 4 p.m., and leaves at 4 a.m., the morning following; in the evening it reaches Helsingfors.—Stat. Pop, 22,650.—HOTELS: The traveller will notice the intricacy of the channel off here. He passes close under the strong fortress of Sveaborg, gains a good view of the men-of-war in the harbour, gunboats, and stores, and soon arrives at the quay.

SOCIETY'S HOUSE.—HOTEL DU NORD, KLEBER.—Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, is a handsome town on a granite foundation, much frequented as a watering-place in summer. To see the fortress, obtain permission from the Commandant.

OBJECTS OF INTEREST:—The Cathedral, a new building in the form of the Greek Cross, situated in the great square, having a blue dome with stars, handsome pillars, approached by a double flight of wide granite steps; inside is a fine altar piece by Neff. Ascend by all means to the outer gallery on top of the dome, for a view of water, rock, vegetation, and houses, in fact one of the most pleasing in northern Russia.

The two sides of the square on leaving the church are filled to the right with the University, and to the left, the Senate House. The University has 5 Faculties and 31 Professors; a Museum, a good collection of Finnish Minerals, and a Library of 80,000 vols. Botanical gardens (free) and pleasant walks in the neighbourhood.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—C. Westrupp, Esq.

RAILWAY to St. Petersburg, &c., and to Tavastehus, a pretty little Finnish town, amidst charming lake scenery.

SWEDEN.

SWEDEN, or the East half of the Scandinavian peninsula, lying between 55°-77° N. lat., and 9°-31° E long, extends 1000 miles from N. to S., and 300 from E. to W., and is in general a very flat country. From Gothenburg, in the W., to Stockholm, in the E., there is scarcely an acclivity to be seen; but the line of division from Norway is marked by mountain ridges, rising 7,000 to 8,000 ft. high. Its coast is broken up by many inlets or fiords. Like Norway it consists of crystalline and granite rocks, corresponding to our Silurian.

The country is divided into three parts—Sweden Proper, Svealand; Gothia, Götaland; and Norrland; 24 provinces; and 12 stifts or bishoprics, under an Archbishop at Upsala. Area, 12,900 English square miles, of which ⅛ are agricultural, ⅓ forest, ⅛ lakes. Population, 4,297,972 (1873). The Lapps amount to 5,600. In 1862 there were 5,086 primary schools. The secondary schools were attended by 1,145 pupils. Two Universities, one at Upsala (1,081 students), the other at Lund, (432). Education is compulsory. Sweden has produced among many eminent men, Linnæus and Berzelius in science, Tegner, Atterbom and Frederica Bremer in literature, Tessin and Härteman in architecture, Fogelberg, and Sergel in sculpture, Ehrenstrahl in painting, and Jenny Lind.

Agriculture has latterly improved. It grows barley, hemp, oats, hops, potatoes, and wheat. Exports are corn, cattle, timber, in planks, frames, &c., tar, and pitch. The timber is mostly pine, fir, and birch. The Mines yield silver, copper, iron, which last is worked generally, the best at Danemora, near Upsala. Largest mines—Persberg and Yngshyttan (iron); Falun and Atvidaberg (copper). New but inferior coal has been lately found in Scania. Fisheries are important, especially cod, mackerel, oyster, lobster, and herrings, on the coast of Bohnslan. Good fishing in the lakes and rivers. Its Halmstad lax (salmon) are renowned. Game in the North, include grouse, partridge, hares, tetrao bonasia, &c. The elk is rare. Bears and wolves diminish: the reindeer is chiefly in Lapland. Nearly all the Rivers run to the Gulf of Bothnia; except the Klara, which runs to Lake Wenner. The Lakes are numerous, and mostly in the South, the largest being the Wenner, 2,015 square miles; Wetter, 716 square miles; Maelar, 472 square miles; all united by Canals and Railways. Climate—The air is cold and dry; mean temperature at Stockholm, 42°. Snow lies five or six months. There is hardly any spring.

Manufactures—Cotton, cloth, sugar, beer, and brandy. The Commercial navy numbers 2,460 vessels. Value of exports and imports, eight million sterling, one half being with England. Principal channels of navigation—Gota, Trollhätta, Strömshälm, Södertelje Canals. Railroads—West Line, Stockholm to Gotheborg, 46 Swed. miles; South, Falkoping to Malmo, 35 miles; North, Stockholm to Upsala, 6 miles; binding several lines, opened 1874, including Wexio to Calmar and Karlscrona. Total, 1,575 (1874) miles. There are 134 Electric Telegraph stations, and 4,900 miles of wire. Rates—England, rix dollars, 7—92.

Army.—In 1873, 151,000, including the land vär, with 234 guns. The Navy, 113 ships (37 being steamers) of 424 guns, with 34,600 men; chief stations at Carlscrona and Stockholm.

Government. In 1397, by the union of Kalmar, it was stipulated that Denmark, Sweden, and Norway should be ruled over by the same monarch, and hence Sweden became a tributary to the Danish kingdom. Gustavus Vasa rescued it from this dependence, and had the sovereignty conferred upon him in 1523, and the crown made hereditary in his line. On its failure (1818) Marshal Bernadotte was elected as Charles XIV. By the Treaty of Kiel (1814) Norway was united to the Swedish crown. The present king Oscar II., a grandson of Bernadotte, was born 1829, and succeeded 1872. The Crown Prince was born 1858. The Diet (Riksdag) consists of the Upper and Lower Chambers, elected by the people. The session lasts from 15th January to 15th April every year. Revenue, (1874) 5½ millions sterling Debt, 6¾ million. The Established religion is the Lutheran.

Hotels.—In Sweden and Norway the tourist is often surprised at having two bills to pay on his departure from the Hotels—the one for the apartments he occupied, and the other for the restaurant.

Posting.—The charge per Swedish mile per Horse is 1 Rixdollar, or 80 öre, at the country stations, and 1 Rixdollar, or 120 öre, at the fast stations, that is, when starting from the town It is usual to give the boy who accompanies, 5 öre.

Money.—By a convention, dated 19th December, 1872, Sweden, Denmark, and Norway adopted a common gold standard, with a decimal monetary system for the three Scandinavian kingdoms. The new monetary unit is a krondaler; it is about one-half a Danish rigsdaler, or a fourth part of a Norwegian speciedaler, or almost exactly a Swedish riksdaler, and worth 1s. 1½d. English. The moneys of account are as follows:—100 öre = 1 krondaler = 1s. 1½d. 18 krondalers are equal to £1 English, or to 25 francs, or to 20 new German marks. Gold Coins.—Pieces of 20 and 10 krondalers = £1 1s. 11½d. & 10s. 11¾d English. Silver Coins.—Pieces of 4, 2, & 1 krondalers = respectively 4s. 5½d., 2s. 2¾d., 1s. 1¾d.; and pieces of 50, 40, 25, and 10 öre = respectively 6¾d., 5½d., 3½d., and 1½d. English. Copper Coins.—Pieces of 5, 2, and 1 öre = respectively ½d., ⅓d., and 1-7th of a penny English. Bank Notes.—All notes are in denominations of gold crowns; and amounts above two gold crowns, or 10 krondalers, must be paid in gold when demanded.—From The Merchants' Handbook, by W. A. Bowne, LL.D. London: Stanford. Postage to England 2½ for ½ oz Measures.—The foot = 0·296 metres, 0·974 Eng. feet 1 Swedish mile = 6 miles .5 fur., 40 rods, or about 7 miles English. Liquids, kubikfot = 10 pots or kannor. 1 Swedish cubic foot = 0·924 Eng. cubic foot. Weights, 1 lb of 100 öre 1 swed. 16 = 0·937 Eng. lb.

Arboga.—Stat.— Pop. 3,020.

A town on the Malar Lake, noted for its beer. This Lake extends to Stockholm, and is remarkable for the great number of Islands with which it is studded, and for the beauty of its scenery. A canal joins it to Lake Hillmar.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Eskilstuna, Strengnäs, Westerås, Stockholm, and Orebro.

For Railway, see page 284.

Carlscrona.—Pop. (1878) 16,586.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers on the Wener to Christineham, and also to Stockholm, Wenersborg, and Götheborg. Railway, see page 285.

Christineham.—Pop. 2,735. A town at the N.E. of Lake Wener. Steamer to Carlstad.

Fahlun.—Stat.—Pop. 5,003.

HOTELS: Fala Hotel; Dala Hotel. Furnished Rooms: at Norstrom and Forsberg Rooms, 1 rixd. 50 oere to 2 rixd. per day.

POST-OFFICE and TELEGRAPH. Manufactures of paper, steam-saw, glass-works.

Capital of Dalecarlia, 175 miles N.W. of Stockholm. Its streets are long and wide. Direct communication with Korsnäs and Tuna by Lake Runn.

SIGHTS.—The churches of Kopparberg and Christinie, the latter built 1471. The School of Mines is very ancient, and contains a collection of minerals, and the Dalecarlian costume worn by King Gustavus III. in 1788. He was assassinated 1792. The whole district of Dalecarlia is full of associations with Gustavus Vasa. On Lake Runn (Rynkhyttan), is the barn in which he thrashed corn; and at Ornäs, a Swedish mile from Fahlun, the little house and room inhabited by the great king, of which a fac-simile was at the Paris Exhibition of 1867. Fee to view it, 25 to 30 oere.

Fahlun is in the midst of a region of copper mines, 28 miles in length and 7 in breadth, enclosed by rocks of reddish granite, the greater part of which is composed of iron and copper pyrites. During many centuries the annual yield was eight millions of pounds of pure metal. At present only a little copper, gold, silver, lead, and sulphur, are produced. The best ore yields 20, but the poorest only 1½ per cent. Railway to Gefle, see page 284

Gefle.— Stat.—Pop. (1873) 16,265, HOTEL: RAILWAY STATION HOTEL.

A flourishing town, at the terminus of Gefle-Dala Railway, on a bay of the Gulf of Bothnia, about 120 English miles north of Stockholm. Railway to Fahlun, see page 284.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—E Kükerits, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSULAR AGENT.—G. Haid, Esq.

Gothenburg or Gœteborg. — Stat.— Pop. (1878) 61,599. HOTELS.

GOTA KALLARE, the best; BLUMS.

HOTEL GARNI, distant from the Railway Station three-quarters of a mile.

CUSTOM-HOUSE near the Steamboat Pier.—Passengers' luggage is sometimes opened on its arrival by the Copenhagen steamer. The first train (Express) leaves an hour after the arrival of the Steamer from Copenhagen at 7 a.m. for Stockholm, arriving there at 9.22 p.m. (14½ hours). No public conveyances at this hour are visible, the only assistance the traveller meets with are porters and barrowmen.

A large and handsome commercial town, on the left bank of the Gothaelf, near the Rattegat, 245 miles W.S.W. of Stockholm. It has very active commerce in iron, steel, timber, &c. The Ship Canals through the town are spanned by tasteful bridges. The two Churches are noble buildings; in the grand square is the beautiful bronze statue of Gustavus Adolphus, the "Lion of the North," killed at Lutzen, 1632. This is a successful work of art. The visitor should climb to the rocks behind the town for an extensive and beautiful view. The ruins of Bohus Castle are in the neighbourhood.

H. B. M.'s CONSUL.—C. Engstrom, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL.— F. Bazier, Esq.

Here ends the

Gota Canal — The great artery running through Sweden from Stockholm, and forming one of the principal channels of communication between the different parts of the kingdom. It was begun in the year 1810, and ended in 1832; having a length of eight Swedish miles, and costing 13,713,346 rixdollars. The Canal joins the lakes Asplängen, Roxen, Boren, Motala, Wetter, Hottonsjön, Wiken, and Wener. The Canal begins properly at Soderkjoping; and the steamers that station at Riddarholmen, near Stockholm, reach it by Lake Malar, the gulf of Telge, the canal of Södertelje, the gulf of Trannö, and that of Slättbake, which leads direct to the Göta Canal. There are quick steamers on this canal between Stockholm and Gothenburg; the fare is not high, and the living is both good and cheap. Objects of interest on the Canal:—Some five hours from Gothenburg are the fine falls of Trollhattan; sufficient time is allowed to see these and the splendid locks. At Lake Wetter the scenery is, generally, somewhat flat, but there is good variety of lake and river, pretty islands, and bold promontories. At Roxen there is a succession of locks. Time is given to go and see the old Monastery, where many of the Swedish kings lie buried, and interesting relics are shown. At Motala the engine manufactory can be visited. At Söderköping is a mineral spring of considerable repute.

CONVEYANCE.—Railway to Stockholm, page 284.

Helsingborg.—Stat.—Pop 6,830.

A town on the Swedish coast of the Sound, opposite Elsinore. It is neatly built, near some mineral springs. The country behind is full of shallow lakes, with good roads, between wood fences. The Sound is frozen in Winter.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—C. Westrup, Esq. p 285

CONVEYANCE.—Railway to several places.

Hernosand.—Pop. 3010. An Episcopal city in Norriand, having a harbour, with a considerable trade; also a College, and a Press, from which mostly all the books for the Laplanders have been produced.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL, H. Sundelin, Esq.

Jœnkœping, or Jonkoping.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 12,086.

HOTELS: Jœnkœping Hotel, near the Station, large and tolerably comfortable; Teaterkällaren; Stadshuskällaren.

A rather pretty and flourishing town, at the southern extremity of Lake Wetter, and one of the oldest places of Sweden. Here the kingdom was divided, 1357, between King Magnus Smek and his son, Eric XII; and it was here that King Christian II. had the young Ribbings executed, 1520, when the executioner refused to do his office.

Steamers to Stockholm and Gœtheborg. POST-OFFICE in the Stora Torgee. Telegraph at Station.

CURIOSITIES.—The Church, finished 1587. Ruins of the castle of King Waldemar, rebuilt by Gustavus Adolphus, 1612. Court of Justice, with a curious Juridical Museum (1635). Good view from the park of Stora Linmgnen. Close to the town is an immense lucifer-match factory, exporting largely to England and France.

CONVEYANCE.—Railway, see page 284.

Kalmar, or Calmar.—Pop 9,120.

HOTELS: Gästgifvaregarden; Witt's Hotel.—Rooms, 1 to 2 rixd. per day. Post-Office. Telegraph at Sodra Wallgatan. Carriages on hire at Åkar Sjöberg.

A seaport on the S. E. coast of Sweden, opposite the island of Œland, or Oland, distant about 5 English miles.

Notice the Cathedral, with altar-piece by Ehrenstrahl, and a richly sculptured pulpit. The Castle, of uncertain date, was restored by King Oscar, with magnificent additions. It has stood 11 sieges.

Old Kalmar was burnt 1647, and the town transferred to present site. The island of Œland, with 45,000 inhabitants, is 16 miles long, and has many ancient churches. Old coins are found.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL, Captain Soderbergh.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Carlskrona, Carlshamn, Ahus, Ystad, Malmö, Landskrona, Helsingborg, Copenhagen, Gothenburg, Borgholm (Œland), Wisby, Oscarshamn, Westervik, Sodertelje, Stockholm, and Lübeck.

Kœping.—A town on the north side of Lake Mælar, so called as being a market, corresponding to our name Chipping. Distance to Stockholm, by land, about 14 Swedish miles; to Westerös, about 4¼ Sw. miles. See Orebro.

Linkoping.—Pop. 6,860.

A town, on the Stang and Lake Roxen, on the road between Jönkoping and Norrköping. It has a Gothic Cathedral of the 13th century; with a Castle, Town-hall, and House of Assembly.

Malmœ, or Malmo.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 28,375. HOTELS:—

HOTEL SWEA, HOTEL GUSTAF ADOLF, both good; the Swea nearest the Landing-place, and the Railway Station. Luggage from Copenhagen examined.

A fortified seaport in the south of Sweden, on the Sound, nearly opposite Copenhagen. Distance to Lund (pop. in 1873, 11,408), 1½ S. miles; to Ystad 6 S. miles.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL, T. Flensburg, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers daily to Copenhagen, &c. Railway to Stockholm. At Elmhult is a small wooden house in which Linnæus was born. On arrival of the Express Train at Cathrineholm, there is an excellent table d'hôte ready; abundance of every thing, and well conducted; charge 1 dollar 50 öre, 1s. 8d.; stoppage allowed 15 minutes. See page 283.

Mariestad.—Pop. 2,340.

A cathedral town, on the south side of Lake Wener, about 10 Eng. miles from the entrance to the Gotha Canal.

Motala.—Pop. 2,000.

On the N.E. side of Lake Wetter, with cutlery and engine works, and shipyards.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Stockholm, Gœtheborg, and Carlstad.

Norrkoping.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 25,982.

A good Inn.

A bustling town, in a fertile district, on the Motala: here a large, wide rapid stream, near the Baltic, crossed by a timber bridge. Houses of wood, covered with copper. It has a handsome Town-hall, with numerous saw, oil, and other mills on the islands, besides factories and shipyards. Rail to Stockholm.

Orebro, or Œrebro.—Stat.—Pop. 9,010.

A timber-built town, at the west end of Lake Hielmar, containing the small house from which Gustavus Vasa was called to the throne, 1523. Distance to Stockholm, by water, 27 Swed. mls.; by land, 20 Swedish miles; to Christineham, six posts, about 10 Swedish miles.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway to Stockholm, Gothenburg, Alingsäs, Borås, Sköfde, Falköping, Jönköping, on the Lake Wettern, Arboga on Lake Mälar, to Nora, and to Lund and Malmö. Steamer to and from Stockholm twice-a-week.

Philipstad.—Stat.—About 6 Swed mls. N.E. of Carlstad, and the same distance north of Christineham. See Carlstad.

STOCKHOLM.—Stat.—Pop (1873) 147,219; now about 150 000.

HOTELS:—GRAND HOTEL, (new 1874), East side of Grand Canal, (Nowastrüm), fronting the royal Castle (easterly); 400 bedrooms, dining, coffee, and reading rooms, billiards, telegraph; gas, and water in very apartment. Steam elevators. Meals à la carte, or otherwise. Dining rooms open from 8 o'clock a.m. to 12 o'clock p.m. Prices moderate. HOTEL RYDBERG.—Gustav Adolfs Torg, (or Square,) fronting the Royal Castle (northerly); 150 bed rooms, dining rooms, reading rooms, &c.

HOTEL KUNG CARL.—(Brunkebergstorg); 50 bed rooms, restaurant, &c. At the hotels it is best to order rooms beforehand by telegraph.

Besides these first class hotels, Stockholm has a great many second class lodging houses, (Rum an hyra), where you can get lodgings only, without board. However, eating-houses (källare) are found everywhere, though they are not recommended to strangers, as the attendants speak only Swedish, and the charges are nearly the same as in a first class Hotel.

Common dinner throughout Sweden, soup, raw herrings, turnip radish, salad, gin (a decanter is placed on every table where food is present, a small glass of which is taken before dining), butter, different kinds of fish, pudding, roast and boiled beef, potatoes, and celery, in the order enumerated. Warm baths 1 rix dollar, cold baths 25 öre.

Cab or Droshky Fares.—1 riksdaler, the single course; 1 r. 25 öre, by the hour. Out of town, 50 per cent is added. The price is the same for one or two persons.

Restaurants.—Rydberg; Kung Carl; Hotel Royal; Svensson's källar; Reisen's källar. South Suburb, Kahn's källar. At Djurgården, Pohlsso and Blåporten. Near Stockholm, Ulfsbro, Hagalund, Norrbacka, Hasselbacke, near the Djurgård, one of the best.

Cafés.—Blauch's Cafe, (Kungsträdgården, a pleasant spot with a good military brass band playing the whole evening. In Kungsträdgården are the statues of Charles XII., and Charles XIII; also the beautiful fountain by Professor Molin.

Bern's Cafe, in the Berzeli Park; good music by a full orchestra, every night. In the Park stands the statue of Berzelius. Steamers from here to "the Park" every 15 minutes.

Strömparterren, a lovely spot on an island in Nowström; surrounded by the water-works of Lake Mälar; music; with a garden illuminated every evening. From here, small swift steamers run over to the Djurgarden every five minutes.

Post-Office.—General office, Lilla Nygatan, No. 6. Poste Restante office, open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m; Sundays, 9 and 11, 1 to 2, and 7 to 8. Give your passport and name, and all letters to your address are delivered to you. Stamps sold in most tobacconists. Letter-boxes in most streets. Theatres.—Grand Royal Theatre, (closed July and August); Operas 5 times a week. Royal Dramatic Theatre, (closed July and August); performance 6 times a week. Petit Theatre.—Vaudeville; open all the year round. Also 5 or 6 Theatres of lesser value, some of which are open only during the summer season. A circus, (perambulatory,) is open during the summer months.

Telegraph.—Skepsbron, No. 2, open day and night. For price of telegrams, see introductory remarks.

Steamboats in all directions, every five or ten minutes. Get "Fullständig tabell öfver Kommunikationerna incom Stockholm och dess närmaste omgifningerna," at all libraries, price 25 oere. Most of them start from the Packhuis (Custom-House).

To Kungsholmen, every 10 minutes; fare, 5 oere. To South Suburb, Ragvaldsbro, every 5 minutes; 3 oere. To Ladugårdslandet, every 10 minutes; 5 oere. To Tegelviken, every 15 minutes; 8 oere. To Skepsholmen, every 5 minutes; 3 oere. To Blåsiholmen (National Museum), every 3 minutes 3 oere.

There are fifty Steam Boats plying between different parts of the town and to the environs. Four days a week steam-boats start from Stockholm to Smedjebacken (in Dalecarlia) by the Lake Mälaren, the Stromsholms Canal (with 26 locks and fine waterfalls), a number of small lakes. From Smedjebacken a railroad leads to Lake Wessman, on which a steam-boat runs as far as Grangardet. This is one of the prettiest channels in Sweden, and the whole of the trip can be done in three and a half days; every Sunday and Wednesday a steamboat starts at 9 a.m. for the Castle of Gripsholm, where the prisons of Eric XIII., John III., and Gustavus IV. (Adolph) are shown. A great number of historical portraits are kept here. The steamboat is back in Stockholm by 8 o'clock p.m.

Stockholm, the capital, 40 miles from Upsala, 320 from Copenhagen, 800 from Tornea, standing in a situation remarkable for its beautiful scenery, is long, and irregularly constructed occupying seven rocky islands, besides two peninsulas lined by good quays. Travellers all concur in opinion that it is one of the finest cities in Europe in position; it is not uncommon to call it the Venice of the North. Numerous rocks of granite, rising boldly from the surface of the water, create a variety of beautiful views. The harbour of Stockholm is a very fine one, admitting ships of the largest burden. At its extremity rise several streets, one above the other, in the form of an amphitheatre; and at the summit is the Palace—a magnificent building. The principal objects of attraction are the Cathedral, Bank, House of the Diet, Royal Academy of Science, and Royal Academy of Arts. The Arsenal has within it an immense number of trophies and standards taken from different nations. The two principal streets are those of the Regency (Regeringsgatan), issuing in the Gustav Adolph square and the Queen's street (Drottning gatan), running from the Quay north to the Observatorii place. Along the latter are many public buildings devoted to charity and science, especially the Academy of Sciences, founded 1739; including 175 members, divided into seven classes. This fine building contains a Portrait Gallery, a Library (35,000 vols.), open Wednesday and Saturday; a Zoological Museum and a Cabinet of Natural Philosophy, the largest in Sweden, open Saturday, 12 to 2.

Manufactures of glass, china, silks, woollens, &c., are carried on.

Points of View.—The visitor should gain the view from the tea garden at Mose Backe of the numerous islands dotting the clear sea below; the ships moving in or out: the beauty of the spires: above all, the noble Palace which towers above everything else, and is always a handsome object from every part.

City Statutes.—To see these, the best way is to hire a carriage from the hotel; which, for two persons, will cost 15 riksdalers (besides something for the driver), and will occupy about four hours.

Guides may be hired from the hotel. The round tables in the following:—Carlberg Castle, erected by Charles XI., now a military academy. Out of its park you pass Solna Kyrka, an ancient structure of the 11th century (still in use). You then enter the park of the Haga, with a castle of the same name, the summer residence of the Queen Dowager, alongside the lake of Brunnviken. You pass the King's horticultural gardens; and, after a few minute further drive you are in the park of Ulfvicsdale, the favourite resort of the late Charles XV., of whom several traces are to be seen here. Close to the Church erected by him stands a curious-looking old house (also by Chas. XV.), representing a facsimile of Rankhyttan, the original in Dalcarlia, where Gustavus Vasa, in 1521, found refuge, and where he planned and ultimately liberated his country, then oppressed by the Danes. Further on in the park you will find several orangeries, and hothouses with rare collections of tropical plants near a good inn. You pass then through the pine forests, by the way of Tivoli and Alkhsan Queen Christine's way. Tiskartorpet (a hunting nut occupied formerly by Charles XI., and Charles XII., when a boy) and Charles XV.'s Ladugårdsgårdet (a place for military review), viâ Djurgardsbrunn (inn), over a bridge, and you are in the *Djurgård*n, or the Park proper, with its multitude of cottages and private residences. It is the haymarket of Stockholm and abounds in cafés, restaurants, concerts, etc., etc., and is the place where the people, on a fine day or Sunday afternoon, "do most congregate." In the centre of the Park stands Rosend'al, a royal summer residence, with beautiful flower gardens, statuary, vases, etc., etc. After a few minutes more drive along the shore of Djurgårdsvikea, you enter the city again, but from an opposite direction to that by which you left.

The Royal Palace stands on an eminence, commanding a delightful view of land and water. It consists of a great quadrilateral, 391½ feet by 418½. At each angle is a wing 161 feet by 51, except the S.W. one. South façade is the richest. Chapel on this side is particularly ornate, containing marble pillars, paintings, and stucco work, by Swedish artists, and a carved pulpit. Notice,—1st, the State Apartments, 2nd storey (Festvitetsvåningen), with a great gallery, 162 feet long, 23 wide, much admired for its mythological and symbolical ornaments; prettiest group, Venus and Cupid, by Byström.—2nd, the King's Private Apartments (Konungen's mindre eller enskilda våning), N.W. angle. The Salle des Armes has a valuable collection, including Russian flags from the battle of Narva, gained 1700, by Charles XII.; a sword, richly incrusted with gold, &c., once the property of Gustavus Wasa.—3rd, The Queen's Apartments; note especially the Salle des Miroirs, profuse in gilding, glasses, and embroidery. Lighted up, the effect is magical. 4th, The King's Great Apartment, with views over Lake Mälar. Salle Victoria contains a present of Napoleon III to King Oscar, a large mirror, and a wonderful Norwegian clock.—5th, Former apartment of King Oscar.—6th, Apartment of Dowager Queen Josephine, Salon Rouge has many portraits of the royal family. Cabinet Rouge and Cabinet Jaune contain works of art by royal personages. The Oratory has many paintings of Rubens and Van Dyck. The Royal Library (north façade) deserves special attention (open 11 to 2, except Saturdays and Sundays). Its curiosities are, Codex Aureus of the four Gospels, in gold letters, on violet and white parchment, with an Anglo-Saxon note, saying it was bought from Pagan pirates. Also, the Gigas Librorum, a wonderful collection of MSS. by Benedictine monks, on 300 parchments; a Latin bible (1529), with autograph notes of Luther; a Cicero de Officiis, printed by Fust, 1465 &c.

The Cathedral, a mixture of architecture more curious than beautiful, contains the sarcophagi and trophies of Gustavus Adolphus, several Charleses, including Charles XII., Charles XIV. (Bernadotte) also Fred. I., Adolphus Fred., Gustavus III., Oscar I., with their wives and children, and several persons of historical note, with the crests of the knights of the Seraphim Order.

Church of St. Nicholas (near the Palace), the oldest church, has a fine altar piece, the helmet and spurs of St. Olaf, on a pillar, and frescoes by Ehrenstrahl. Here the kings are crowned. Other churches are St. James, St. Clara, St. Catherine (with a good dome), on the Mose Hill, the highest point of view, from which there is a fine panorama of the city (as above-mentioned). This handsome church is built on the spot called the Blood Bath, where 97 of the most eminent citizens were put to death by Christian II., in 1520.

In front of the Riddarhus or House of Assembly for the Nobles, is the statue of Gustavus Vasa. Near this place is the statue of the founder of Stockholm, with part of the oldest remaining house.

The National Museum, the finest building of Stockholm, stands on the Blasiholmen, opposite the Royal Palace, near the Grand Hotel: and was planned by Stiller; it is 260 ft. by 170, and 90 high, consisting of three stories. The principal façade is adorned with statues of eminent Swedes, Linnæus, Tegner, Berzelius, &c. The vestibule on the first story has statues of northern gods, Odin, Thor, and Balder, by Fogelberg. On the ground floor are the Museum of Antiquities and the Numismatic Cabinet. First room is the stensalen (stone-room), containing relics of the Age of Stone; 2nd, the Bronze and Iron Gallery (Brons och Jerngalleriet), with objects of the Ages of Bronze and Iron. The Pillar salen is consecrated to curiosities of the Middle Ages, including clothes of Gustavus Wasa, Gustavus Adolphus, Charles XII., and a sepulchral stone with Runic characters. The Numismatic Cabinet contains among other curiosities 5000 Anglo-Saxon coins. On the first story are Sculpture and Arms, besides drawings of Raphael, Correggio, and Titian. There is a beautiful Endymion from Adrian's Villa, near Tivoli; also much fine Majolica porcelain. The collection of paintings in the 2nd story is not yet completed. Stockholm is very rich in scientific and artistic societies.

The Södermalm, or south suburb, deserves a special visit on account of the house No. 24 Hornsgatan, formerly inhabited by the great necromancer Swedenborg, and because of the view from the Mosebacke.

EXCURSIONS.—To Upsala, by rail, 2 hours; by steamer, 4 hours; can return the same day. Beautiful old cathedral, university college, large library, botanical gardens, old castle, heathen mounds (see below). To Gripsholm an ancient castle in Lake Mälar, with a fine collection of portraits and paintings, and a beautiful neighbourhood. A steamer leaves Riddarholm quay on Wednesdays and Sunday mornings, at 9 o'clock a.m., returning at 5 o clock p.m., fare, 3 rixdals. To Drottningholm (daily, every hour), the present King's summer residence, in a beautiful park, with collections of paintings, and curious castle of imposing dimensions, containing statuary, fountains, and a swannery, etc.

ENGLISH MINISTER.—His Excellency Hon. E. Erskine, Secretary of Legation, G. F. Gould, Esq.

AMERICAN MINISTER.—His Excellency C. C. Andrews.

H. B. M.'s CONSUL.—W. Segrave, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL.—N. A. Elfving, Esq.

ENGLISH CHAPLAIN.—Rev. R. Blakey, M.A.

CONVEYANCES.—Stockholm is reached from Hull or London in about 60 hours, viâ Gothenburg, by three weekly steamers. Copenhagen to Stockholm, by rail (after crossing the Sound), 18 hours. In 1874 the direct line, viâ Linköping, will shorten it to 15 hours. Malmo to Stockholm, 13 to 17 hours; to Gothenburg, 12 hours; Stockholm to Gothenburg 12 hours; Stockholm to St. Petersburg (Russia), by three-weekly steamer, viâ Abo and Helsingfors, from 50 to 60 hours; at Helsingfors also communication by rail to St. Petersburg; Stockholm to Stettin (Germany), once a-week, 50 hours; to Lubeck (twice-a-week), also by steamer, 44 hours.

At least one steamer leaves daily for the northern part of Sweden, viâ Gefle and along the coast of the Bothnian Gulf, touching at various seaports till you reach Lapland and the City of Haparanda, the most northern town in the Baltic; after a ride of a couple of miles you reach, on a mountainous table land, the village of Aavasaxa, from where the view of the midnight sun can be observed during two or three weeks in high summer.

N.B.—Stockholm is the cheapest place in Europe to buy furs etc., etc.

Trollhattan, or Trolhætta.—Pop. 1000. A straggling place, 5 hours from Gothenburg, the people of which live in red coloured houses, neither town nor village, carrying on a brisk trade in timber and iron. The Waterfall, or rather succession of rapids here, is very fine. Height 112 feet, divided into four separate falls, in a gorge, within a distance of 3,600 feet. The second fall, Toppöfallet, is the most interesting, being 44 feet nigh. The whole neighbourhood is grand and savage.

The Göthaelf river is navigable from the sea to the Falls of Lilla Edet; from which a canal and locks lead past to Akerström and to the Falls of Trollhätten; where the navigation is continued by a canal of three miles along the river, close to a range of saw-mills belonging to a Glasgow Company.

Upsala.—Stat.—Pop. (1873) 12,138.—HOTELS: Stadshotellet, in the Drottning-gatan, No. 9. Hotel Upland, near the Dornbron bridge. Price of rooms about 1 rixdol. per day.

RESTAURANTS—Löf's Källare; Vestra Agatan, No. 8. Cafés—Stadshotellet, Norberg's Schweizeri, &c.

POST-OFFICE, Ofre Slottsgatan, No. 1. Telegraph near the Station.

CARRIAGES can be hired at Stadshotellet and Drottninggatan, Nos. 6 and 10. Prices—To the mines of Dannemora and Osterby, 1 horse car 10 to 12 rix dol; 2 horse car 20 to 25 rix dol. (30 to 36 hours). To Old Upsal and back, 2 or 3 hours, 1 horse car, 2 rix dol; 2 horse car, 4 rix dol. Near Dannemora good quarters at the hotel of Osterby (Osterby Värdshus).

The town, built of wood, on a fine plain watered by the Sala, is an Archbishop's See, of very ancient date, and was a great centre of Pagan superstition before the conversion of Sweden. It was originally called Aros.

PRINCIPAL OBJECTS OF NOTICE.—Governor's Palace, Ecclesiastical Seminary, the Cathedral or Domkyrka (the largest in the North), is of brick. 370 feet long, 141 wide, 115 high: begun 1289 by Etienne Bonneuil, a French architect; finished 1435. Its proportions are defective, and a reliquary said to contain bones of St. Eric; the handsomest pulpit in Sweden. Here coronations took place. It has numerous monuments, especially of the Gustavus family. One in marble of Gustavus I. with frescoes, represents events in his life. In the Bauer mausoleum are the remains of Linnæus. Oxenstierna, Brahé, &c. On the Odins Lund Avenue is the obelisk to the memory of Gustavus Adolphus. The University of Carolina Rediviva, founded 1477, stands well at one end of the Drottning gatan, and contains the Library, the largest in Sweden, with 50,000 vols. and 7,000 MS., especially the Codex Argenteus, or Gothic Gospel of Bishop Ulphilas (318 to 388), of silver letters on purple vellum; also the Adantica of Rudbeck, and the sacred book of the Druses, with the Edda MS. Behind the Carolina is the Park, with a splendid building devoted to the study of chemistry and physics. The Botanical Garden has many rare plants and the bust of Linnæus. In the Gustavianum is a Museum of Art; an Observatory is attached to the University.

Near Upsala are the vestiges of the old city, or Gamla Upsala, with remains of a temple of the Æses (a mythical giant race), supposed to be among the most ancient remains in the North of Europe. There are also ancient tumuli 60 feet high and 732 in diameter. The mines of Dannemora also deserve to be seen, having been worked since the 13th century. The deepest, the Jungfrugrufran, is 510 feet down. One of the largest pumps is worked by a hydraulic wheel, distant 4,000 feet. The mine is on the surface, and can be descended by ladders or by the basket. Its iron is the best Steamers to Stockholm every day, by the Mälar ake. Railway to Stockholm, page 283.

Wenersborg, or Elfsborg.—Stat.—Pop. 4,070.

On the S.W. extremity of Lake Wener, and reached by the steamers from Gœtheburg, contains an uninteresting church. The place has a busy aspect, but there are few streets and little scenery.

Rail—See page 285.

Wener Lake is the largest in Sweden, having a length of 15 Swedish miles, and a width of 7; height above the Baltic 145 feet; depth, 359 feet; with several islands—Thorsö, Bromö, Arnö, &c. It receives 80 rivers. On its banks are several towns, Christinehamn, Carlstad, and Amal. The steamers of the Göta Kanal pass across Lake Wener.

Westeros or Westeras.—Pop. 4,660.

HOTELS: Gästgifvaregården; Hotel Kraak. Rooms, 1 rix dollar 25 oere to 1 rix 50. Post-Office and Telegraph. Manufactures—Tobacco, pottery for stoves, &c.; and shipyards.

A town on the north side of Lake Mælar, distant from Stockholm about 13 Swedish miles.

OBJECTS OF NOTICE.—Domkyrkan, or cathedral, with tower 328 feet (date 1271). Splendid altar-piece, given to the church by Svante Sture, who is buried in its vaults, which also contain remains of king Eric XIV. Old Castle, built in the 12th century by Bishop Ilianus; Town-hall, and an ancient College, with library of 11,000 vols. Near Westeräs is the great Stromsholm Canal, begun 1777, crossing several lakes, and lined with forges and furnaces. The passage of this canal is one of the most interesting in Sweden.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Stockholm, Streng näs, Arboga, and Eskilstuna.

Wetter Lake—On the direct course from Stockholm to Gothenburg, communicating with Lake Wener and the Göta Kanal. The steamers that follow this route are noticed under Gothenburg, which see. Lake Wetter covers 17 square Swedish miles, and washes the banks of four provinces. Its water is very transparent and subject to furious sudden tempests. The depth is given as 420 feet, and it is 297 feet above the sea. It receives contributions from nearly 100 streams, and has several islands, especially the Jungfrun, with romantic traditions. Six towns stand on its banks, Motala, Jönköping, Askersund, Wardstena, Grenna, and Hjo.

Wisby.—Pop. 50,000.

HOTELS:—Lindby's, Gothland, Wisby. Rooms, 1 rix dol. per day. Post-office and Telegraph. Carriages at Hellgren's.

MANUFACTURES.—Breweries, distilleries, shipbuilding.

Capital of the island of Gothland in the Baltic, with regular steam communication to Stockholm and Kalmar. This is a very interesting trip to the antiquary and the botanist, the flora of Gothland being very rich.

Wisby was in the middle ages one of the most important towns of the Hansea league. In the 13th century it had 12,000 burghers besides workmen; 18 churches, and five convents. It was robbed of much of its wealth by King Waldemar, 1361, and has never recovered itself.

Notice the Cathedral, a strange mixture of the Byzantine and the Gothic styles, founded 1190; 192 feet long and 75 broad. Highest tower, 200 feet. The other ancient churches are in a ruined state, including St. Catherine, the finest of all, belonging to the Franciscans; St. Nicholas, with statues of the Saint and of St. Augustine St. Drotten; St Clemens, &c. Soderby, Högklint, &c. are places that deserve to be visited ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—C. Falk, Esq.

LAPLAND.

LAPLAND, belonging partly to Sweden and Norway, and mostly to Russia, extends from latitude 64° N. to the Arctic Ocean, and from the Atlantic coast to the White Sea; which latter washes the eastern shore, opposite Archangel. Area—Russian Lapland, 100,000 square miles; Swedish (including Lapmark and Finmark), 50,000. Population, 18,000. They are an undersized race, of Mongolian blood. The country is traversed by a chain of mountains, of the primary formation, giving rise to many rivers, running into the Arctic Ocean and the Gulf of Bothnia. Some of the peaks in this chain exceed 6,000 feet in height. Most of the country is covered with dense forest, broken by rivers and lakes, some of vast extent. The country abounds with game of all sorts, and in many of the forests are found bears, wolves, elk, &c.; while the rivers teem with fish. Agriculture is little practised, the Laplanders living mostly on fish and the produce of the reindeer, which is also bartered for rye, &c. They make moss bread and cakes of pine-tree bark.

The Language is of Asiatic origin, but Swedish is understood in Swedish Lapland, and Norsk in the N. W. part. Although the climate during the nine winter months is intensely cold, the summer is warm, and generally fine.

Money in use is that of the countries to which Lapland belongs.

Books.—Particulars of points of interest, routes, &c., are given in "Up in the North," published by Chapman & Hall. See also Captain Hutchinson's "Try Lapland."

The principal towns are—

Hammerfest, in the Island of Qvaloe (whale island), on the Arctic Ocean, 60 Eng. miles S.W. of the North Cape, in Norwegian Lapland; lat. 70° 38' 22" N., long. 23° 43' E., is the most northerly town in Europe, and has an important fishery. The streets are watery ways, with boats for carriages. Reindeer and eider duck shooting. Arctic birds and the white bear are found. Here the midsummer sun never sets for about ten weeks, and the winter sun never rises for the same time. Communication by STEAMERS during the summer with Throndjem and Christiania.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL—C. Robertson, Esq.

Lulea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, 62 miles S.W. of Tornea, on the border of Swedish Lapland, at the mouth of the river of the same name, which has a S.E. course of 200 miles. Pop. 1800. It has a large trade in timber, tar, &c. Communication by well-appointed Steamers, running about twice a week during the summer months to Stockholm, calling at many towns on the Gulf.

Pitea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, 30 miles S.W. of Lulea. Pop. 1500. A good harbour and shipyard.

Tornea, in Russian Lapland, at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia, and at the mouth of the river of the same name; lat. 65° 50'. It has a large trade in fish, fur, iron, timber, tar, hemp, &c. Pop. 800. On the opposite side of the river is Haparanda, which may be considered part of the same town, although belonging to Sweden.

NORWAY.

In NORWAY the Railway is called Jernbane (iron rail).

NORWAY, an independent Kingdom under the Swedish crown, on the west side of the Scandinavian Peninsula, of which it fills one-third, and is about 1100 miles in length, from the Naze, in lat. 57°30', to the North Cape, in lat. 71°10'. Its breadth varies from 7 to 280 miles. It is almost entirely a compact mass of mountains, or mountain "plateaus," with small erosions for the valleys and plains. It is naturally formed into two divisions, namely, Northern and Southern. The Eastern half of the Southern portion is covered with forests and lakes. Area—About 148,000 English square miles, of which one-tenth are arable, one-fourth forest, 1-40th snow; and divided into 20 amts and 5 stifts. Population (1873), 1,753,000, of whom 25,000 are Finns and Laplanders. About 13,000 emigrants leave yearly. The largest towns are Christiania (pop. 66,700), and Bergen (pop. 36,800). Norway is not populous in proportion to its extent, owing to its mountainous character and northern position. The valleys are generally occupied by firtas or lakes, bordered in the lower parts, in the Southern part of the country, with meadows and cornfields, which extend upwards as far as the first acclivities of the mountains; then, as the ground becomes steeper, the pine forests raise their tall heads among inaccessible cliffs, and over all are seen the peaks covered with snow, or enveloped in clouds.

The Mountains bordering on Sweden are a series of Silurian table-lands, (called fjelds, or fields—the j sounded as y)—2,000 to 4,000 feet high, covered with heath and trackless forests, edged by winding valleys. On the middle one, or Doverfjeld, dividing the country into Northern and Southern, is the Schnechatten, 7,620 feet high. In the Northern half are the Kjolen Mountains, 6,200 feet high at Sulitelma, near the North Cape; and in the Southern is Skagastölstind, 8,670 feet high, with other peaks from 4,000 to 6,000 feet, under the names of Langfield, Lognefield, and Hardangerfield. Numerous islands line the broken coast, which is indented by deep narrow fiords, between vast abrupt cliffs, sometimes many thousand feet high. The coast is comparatively mild and rainy, and free from ice all the way to the North Cape. Bergen has 80 inches of rain yearly. Strong currents run in and out; one of which, at the Lofloden Islands, called the Maelström, is a whirlpool of fabulous strength, at which the Norway skippers only laugh, though they believe in the Kraken, or sea serpent.

Lakes.—About 3,000 large and small, generally narrow along the course of the rivers; some are of a Swiss-like character. The largest are Mjösen, or Miösen, 77 miles long, and Randesfiord, 30 miles long.

Rivers.—Numerous, but short, the longest being the Glommen, 310 miles. They are generally turned to useful account in the shape of water-power to drive the saw-mills. Several Falls are seen tumbling over their steep sides, some 500 to 900 ft. high. The Vossevangar Falls is 1,225 ft. high.

Among the Products are flax, hemp, hops, barley, oats, and potatoes. Grain succeeds up to lat. 70°. Rye bread is a common diet. Trout, char, venison, cloudberries and cream, may be got at the inns. Timber comprises pine, Scotch fir or deal, oak, larch, Norway spruce, birch, wild apple and cherry. Most of the houses are timber, on a brick foundation; they are dry and warm, and last for centuries. For the Sportsman there are the bear, wolf, lynx, golden eagle, red deer, reindeer, elk, grouse, and blackcock; with wild geese, eider duck, salmon, and seal; and no game laws, except that the elk must not be hunted from November to July.

Chief Minerals are iron (at Kaafford, &c.), copper, lead, silver; of which last the richest mine s at Kongsberg.

In Climate it is less cold, but more moist and changeable, and generally less salubrious, than weden. Snow lies from November to March. Summer lasts for three months, and is delightful, nd very warm; the air is fine and bracing on the fields, but the mosquitoes bite. Among the ountains the winter is long and severe. On the west coast the climate is milder than in the interior f the country, and the western and northern harbours are open the whole year: the weather is enerally steady, being either good or bad for considerable periods. The Fisheries, particularly on the est coast, find employment and wealth for the natives, and supplies sailors for the Norwegian fleet: he finest sailors, however, come from the S.E. coast. Principal fish are cod, herrings, salmon, and obsters, employing 16,000 men, and 3,000 boats. Exports are dried fish, timber, planks, cod oil, seal kins, cobalt, Prussian blue, copper, iron, and ice.

Government.—Norway was formerly governed by its own hereditary sovereigns. On the death f Haakon V. in 1319, without male issue, his grandson in the female line, Magnus Smek, united the ingdoms of Sweden and Norway. Olaf V., son of the celebrated Margaret, united the kingdoms of Norway and Denmark. In 1814, Norway was ceded by the King of Denmark to Sweden; to which, fter some resistance, the Norwegians consented, on condition that Norway, though governed by the ame King as Sweden, should be an independent state, preserving its constitution and laws, army, avy, customs, frontier, &c., as at present.

Norway was the original seat of the Normans, or Northmen, who settled in England, France, Sicily, tc. One of them, Rolf Ganger, or Rollo, of Aalesund who settled in Normandy, was the ancestor of William the Conqueror. The exploits of the early Vikings (Vik-ings) are related in the Sagas.

Revenue (1874) about £1,850,000; with a Debt of 1¾ million. Value of imports and exports etween Norway and England, 5½ millions, out of a total of 8 millions. The Mercantile Shipping umbers 7,000 vessels, of 1½ million tons.

Navy, 125 ships (27 being steamers), of 320 guns, and 6,500 men. Chief port, Horten, in the ulf of Christiania, where there is an Arsenal, with a Naval School.

Army, about 18,000, when of full strength, besides volunteers and riflemen. The Military School t Christiania. Education is universal and compulsory.

Railways—About 310 miles open (1873.) Telegraph, 3,750 miles, with 100 stations. Post Offices, 720 – Postage to England 2½d. for ½oz. The Trunk Railway was made by R. Stephenson.

Money.—For new system of money see Sweden, page 635. The old system, which will for ome time be useful for reference, is as follows:—24 skillingen = 1 ört or mark = 10½d. English. Gold Coins—These were no gold coins in the currency, and for sums over 1 ört the chief medium of ayment was paper. Silver Coins—Species-daler = 4s. 5½d.; half species daler = 2s 2¾d.; and ört, half-ört, and quarter-ört pieces; and pieces of 4, 3, and 2 skillingen. Copper Coins—2, 1, ½ skillingen pieces —8-9ths, 4-9ths and 2-9ths d. English. Bank Notes—The bank notes were on ifferent coloured papers, and were 100 (red), 50 (green), 10 (yellow), 5 (blue), and 1, ½, and ¼ white) species dalers.

Weights.—16 skaalpund = 1 lispund; 20 lispund (or 320 skaalpund) = 1 skippund. Butter, neat, and most of the products of the country are sold by the following weights:—2 mark = 1 skaalpund: 12 skaalpund = 1 bismerpund; 3 bismerpund = 1 vog. Last—2 tons English.

Measure.—30 inches equal to 31 English. The most common measure is the Alen:—12 inches = 1 foot; 2 feet = 1 alen. Norway mile = 7 English miles nearly.

Posting.—The charge is 24 sk. spec. per Norwegian mile per horse, at the country stations, and t the fast stations 36 sk. spec.; and 48 sk. from towns., besides about 6 sk. for the carriage, if the raveller is not provided with one himself. It is usual to give the boy who accompanies the carriol 4 sk. er mile for 1 horse; but should he have the care of more than one horse, 3 sk. per mile for each horse.

Passports are entirely abolished. The Luggage of a traveller is very slightly examined in his country. The language spoken is Norwegian, which is very similar to Danish. English Vice-Consuls are to be found in all the principal towns in Norway—Christiania, Bergen, Frondhjem, Christiansand, Stavanger, &c.

Maps and Books.—Good Maps may be procured at Christiania. The traveller will find them very useful in journeying through this country. "Bennett's Handbook," is printed and sold by T. Bennett, 17, Store Strandgaden, Christiania, annually; price 3 marks, equal to 2s. 8d. It contains all the posting and boating stations on all the highways, their distances and charge for posting, (regulated by law.) It takes little room, being less than 100 pages. It may be bought at Christiansand, Bergen, and Frondjhem.

Fishing.—This country is very much visited by anglers for the salmon fishing. In the north, the Tana, the Alten, and the Namsen; and, in the south, the Rauma near Molde, and the Topdals rivers are among the most noted. There are also many others well known; some but slightly; besides numbers still untried. In one or two rivers, as much as two or three thousands of pounds weight have been taken in a season with the fly, by a single rod. But, except to those who come very early, settling themselves in the best places, and who know the country well, the known good rivers will be found occupied, (some few are let) and many may be tried without success; so that possibly the season will be spent taking only two or three fish. Excellent trout fishing is to be met with in almost all parts. The lake fishing is also very good.

A FEW HINTS FOR TRAVELLERS TO NORWAY.

The most convenient way for Englishmen going to Norway is by Steamer from Hull, every ten days to Bergen, and another every Friday evening to Christiansand and Christiania; or from London by Breslauer and Co.'s Steamer "North Star." The Steamer from Hamburg to Bergen touches at Christiansand (but does not wait the arrival of the Hull boat). Should you go to Christiania first, it will be advisable either to buy or hire a Carriole there; for although at many of the posting stations these conveyances can be procured, yet, if it happen that none are to be had, the traveller will regret when he is jolted along in the "Stol-kjærre" or common cart of the country, that he is not in his own Carriole. Besides which, the inconvenience and trouble of removing his luggage from one vehicle to another at every station, will take away much from the pleasure of the tour. No vehicles are better suited for carrying a large quantity of luggage than the Carriole; portmanteaus of almost any size can be fastened upon them; and very small carpet bags, containing the necessary articles for passing the nights from town to town; large carpet bags are awkward, but can be taken. Every traveller should procure Bennett's Handbook, above-mentioned, as the various stations alter so much every year, while new steamers are put on lakes, and new roads and railways are constructed, this book is almost indispensable. The Officers in the Steamers speak English.

Routes.—The principal and most desirable routes for visitors to follow are those leading from Christiania to Bergen, from Christiansand to Bergen, and from Bergen to Drontheim. Three main lines of road connect Christiania and Bergen:—1. By Vang and Fille Fjeld, 48 Norway miles: journey of 7 to 8 days. This route passes the celebrated Falls of Voeringfos, among the finest in the world (noticed further on), and the Glaciers of Justedal. 2. By Lake Mjoesen or Miösen, presenting in its upper reaches scenes reminding you of Swiss waters; 49 Norway miles. Rail, steamer, and posting road; 7 to 9 days. 3. By Sundvolden and Hallingdal; 43 Norway miles. Post road; 8 days. Passes by the superb Falls of Hoenesos.

Four roads lead from Christiansand to Bergen:—1. By Arendal; 58 Norway miles. Posting road. This route passes the three splendid falls of the Nid, and the highly romantic Lake of Nisservand, 34 English miles long. 2. By Forsgrund; 63 Norway miles. Post road, steamer, and mountain path. This route passes the foot of Goastafjeld (1600 metres, 6000 feet high), with a magnificent view, and the Falls of Rukanfos, noticed further on as one of the finest in Europe. 3. By Stavanger, 45 Norway miles. Carriole roads, steamers on the Fjords in summer, or row boats. This route passes beautiful lakes of Syredals, Vaud, and the curious ravines of the Mathe Fjord. The fourth road is by Saetersdalen. Horse route. Cars can only go as far as Valh. Passes Cascade of Helfos; but this route is not so remarkable as the others.

From Christiania to Drontheim, or Trondjhem, there are two principal routes. 1. By Roeraas, 45 Norwegian miles. Rail and posting road, not much used. This road passes the interesting copper mines of Roeraas, yielding 250 tons of copper yearly. Mines 1600 feet deep. Route also passes fine lake of Oeresund. 2. By Lillehammer through the fine valley of Gulbrandsdal, the garden of Norway; 46 Norway miles. Rail, steamer, and post road. Passes Falls of Huanefos, Vitj, birth-place of St. Olaf, and takes you to foot of Snachaetten, frequently ascended (2313 metres). A railway 346 miles long, is projected across the Dovrefeld.

From Bergen to Drontheim there are two routes, one by sea and the other by land. 1. The land route, 57 miles. Carrioles, steamers over the Fjords. Near Loervig the scenery is quite magnificent. Pass near the Justedal mountains; wild defiles, fir forests, and Fjords abound. 2. By sea, 80 Norway miles; 4 days. Price 10 species. You follow many Fjords, and between the main land and reefs. Promontory of Stadland, covered with glaciers, is the most remarkable point.

Some Shorter Routes are:—1. From Christiania to Molde, 42 miles. Rail, steamer, and post roads. This route coasts the fine lake of Lessaee. The neighbourhood of Molde has some of the finest scenery in Norway. 2. Christiania to Lake Mjoesen, 6 miles. Rail, 3 hours. Fares, 144 sch. 1st class, 96 sch. 2nd class, 60 and 40 3rd class; 100 lbs. luggage to 1st class, 50 to others. 3. Christiania to Kongsberg, 7 miles. Post road. Kongsberg has some silver mines, yielding 100,000 specie dollars per annum.

Two other Excursions deserve notice: 1. Drontheim to Hammerfest. Steamer, 6 days. Fare, 15 species. You pass the Polar Circle at the Troenen Isles. At Hestmendsoen the coast presents a fearful chaos of rocks. Bodoe is the first important station where the steamers stop, 58 miles from Drontheim, in 69° north latitude. The Loffoden Islands, near here, are the great seat of the cod fishery, the annual take being 16,000,000 fish. Hammerfest, the most northerly town in Europe. Much whale and seal fishing in winter. Excursion to the North Cape.—See "Lapland Section," above. 2. Drontheim to Fiskumfoss by Levanger, 24 miles. Post road. Fiskumfos is one of the finest waterfalls in Norway. Or by land through Kongsberg, taking the opportunity of visiting the celebrated silver mines, the rifle manufactory, and the mint, which supply the bank with money, and the army with rifles. If the traveller's time be unlimited, he might go from Throndhjem by a weekly steamer to Hammerfest (as above); thence to the North Cape, to Vardo, the most northern fortress in the world, and to Vadso, not far from the Russian frontiers, the whole distance taking about a fortnight.

In these northern regions, viz., at Bodo, Tromso, Hammerfest, Alten, Vardo, and Vadso, the sun never sets for some weeks before and after midsummer. There is no Steam communication between Vadso, on the Norwegian frontiers of Russia, and Archangel; it is necessary, therefore, to return the same way, unless you prefer making a very troublesome journey with reindeer through Finmarken and Swedish Lapmark, down to the Gulf of Bothnia, when the Swedish and Finnish steamers are to be met with.

Bergen.—Pop. (1871) 30,255.—Hôtel Scandinavia; Du Nord; and a good lodging-house kept by Mr. Sontum.

A city and seaport, at the head of a deep bay on the North Sea coast, protected by several forts, 306 miles north-west of Christiania. Almost all the houses are built of wood and neatly painted, and, when viewed from the sea, have a picturesque appearance; the churches and some few of the houses are built of stone. It contains a Cathedral which is a fine old building, and six other churches; a Castle, or rather fort; three hospitals, a prison, a correction-house, six establishments for the poor, a good national museum, containing Scandinavian antiquities and Runic inscriptions, five public libraries, a naval academy, a college, and various schools. It has manufactories of tobacco and porcelain, many distilleries, and some extensive rope-works. The fishery is, however, the principal business. The harbour is safe and commodious, with deep water; but, owing to the rocks, is difficult of access. Trade in skins, tar, and dried fish.

English Vice-Consul—J. Greig, Esq.

American Consul—A. Gran, Esq.

Steamers up the Hardanger fiord, where some of the most romantic scenery is to be found; to the falls of Vöringen; also up the Sogne to Lærdalsören. Weekly steamer to Hammerfest calling at the principal places.

CHRISTIANIA. — Stat. — Pop. (1870) 66,660.—Hotels:—

Hotel Scandinave, situated in Carl Johan's Gate, near the Railway and Steamboat Stations; Smith, proprietor.

Victoria Hotel, P. O. Persen, proprietor; Du Nord; D'Angleterre; Hotel Copenhagen.

The capital of Norway, covering a considerable extent of land, at the extremity of a picturesque and fertile valley, or semicircular bend along the shore of the Bay of Björviken, which forms the northern extremity of the Gulf or fiord of Christiania, nearly 80 miles from the sea in the Skagerrack. It is divided into the City, the suburbs of Vaterland, Pepervigen, and Fierdingen, the fortress of Agershuus, or Aggerhuus, and the old town of Oslo. The City was rebuilt in its present situation by Christian IV., after a plan designed by himself, and named after him. The streets, which are 40 feet broad, run at right angles to each other, with cisterns at the corners. Many of the houses are of brick. The castle of Agershuus is built on a rocky eminence on the west side of the bay, at a short distance from the city. Oslo was the site of the old city, burnt in 1624; it contains the episcopal palace. The Royal Palace is the principal building, erected at a cost of £300,000. Here are the Storthing or Parliament House; the government departments, court of law; and the public seminaries; the principal of which is the Military Academy, or Cadet Institution, with an excellent library, a collection of models of mines, bridges, &c., and of all sorts of minerals. It has 84 pupils, divided into four classes, who enter the army after having studied for four years, and passed a very rigid examination. The University is a handsome new building, in which is the Museum of Natural History and of Northern Antiquities, including idol gods, altars, arms, &c. The National Gallery has some good paintings, and a library of 130,000 volumes.

Christiania possesses an excellent harbour, and its principal exports are iron, deals, and oil cake. Oscarshald, a beautiful château belonging to the nation, about 3½ English miles by land, and about 1½ by water, deserves a visit, it has pictures by Tidemand.

At Horten, 82 miles S., in the Gulf, is the chief Naval Dockyard, with School and Arsenal.

H. B. M.'s Consul-General—Sir J. R. Crowe, C.B., Munkedammen.

American Consul—G. Gade, Esq.

English Club Room, 17 Store Strandgade.

English Church, Store Strandgade. Service every Sunday at 11 a.m.

Post Office in the Möller Gade.

Railways.—The Norwegian Trunk Railway begins at Christiania and ends at Lake Mjosen, which extends towards the north-west 77 English miles, in a straight line through some of the most fertile and beautiful tracts of the country, up to the town of Lillehammer, in Gudbrandsdalen. This is a mountain valley, rich in interesting scenes of nature, through which goes the main road to the most northern regions of Norway. From the town of Hamar, on the Mjösen, (in the neighbourhood of which are the picturesque ruins of the old Hamar cathedral), another railway goes eastward to Elverum in the valley of Osterdalen, on the river Glommen. Rail to Stockholm. Baggage is examined at Charlottenberg on the Swedish side, going to Stockholm; and at Kongsvinger, on the Norwegian side, on the return journey. A northern line to Drontheim, 340 miles, has been voted by the Storthing.

Steamers.—Offices of the Hull Steamer are at Brunn's Gaard, in Store Strand Gade. Steamers run on the Mjösen Lake during Summer, in connexion with the Trains. An interesting journey of 133 English miles can thus be made in one day; 146 skillings, 1st class; 100 skillings, second class.

Christiansand.—Pop. (1870) 11,470.

A seaport, and considerable trading town, capital of a province of the same name, which is famous for iron mines. It is situated on the Skager Rack, facing Denmark, 37 miles E.N.E. of the Naze, or Lindesnaes, with a fine fortified harbour, and a quarantine station, and is 210 miles from Christiania. It contains a college, a library, and a museum.

English V. Consul.—F. Reinhardt, Esq.

American Consul Agent.—O. Reinhardt, Esq. (and for Christiansund.)

Christiansund.—Pop. 4300.

A port on the Atlantic coast, in the district of Romsdal, built on 3 islands, with a commodious harbour and wharf. Trade in timber, salmon, ice. It is 58 miles N.E. of Bergen, and 36 miles from Drontheim. The fisheries flourish here, and there is also an agricultural society. Steamer to Hull.

English V. Consul.—J. Allen, Esq.

Drammen.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 18,460.

A great port for the timber trade, on the Drammen fiord, in the Bay of Christiania, about 20 miles S.W. of Christiania, consisting of two ports joined by a bridge. A great fire, 11th-12th July, 1856, swept the town from end to end, nearly two miles, burning most of its log houses, factories, and public buildings.

ENGLISH CONSUL.—W. Melhuus, Esq.

Drontheim, or Throndhjem.—Stat.—Pop. (1870) 20,860.

HOTELS:—Hotel d'Angleterre & Hotel Bellevue. There are plenty of good lodging houses.

Formerly the residence of the Norwegian kings and on the shore of a winding fiord, founded in 997 by Olef Trigvason, on the site of a celebrated ancient city, Nidaros, with a temple dedicated to Thor and Odin. It has been burnt several times; but since the last great fire in 1841, all the new buildings are of brick and stone. The most interesting monument is the venerable Cathedral founded 1182, and now partly ruined; the choir and transept, only being retained for divine worship. It is to be restored. A copy of the grand statue of our Saviour and twelve Apostles, by Thorwaldsen, on the altar. The Museum has a library, and many remains relating to ancient Scandinavia, such as armour, &c.; besides Norwegian minerals, birds, &c. Many ships are built at Drontheim, whose exports consist of fish, copper, and timber. Here are the Bank of Norway; also, a College, a Royal Academy of Sciences, a seminary for the instruction of the Laps, and other institutions.

The environs are very beautiful, including the Leerfosses, i.e. the falls of the river Nid, about three miles south of the town. Good salmon fishing in the neighbourhood.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—H. Backke, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL AGENT.—M. Lundgreen, Esq.

POST OFFICE and TELEGRAPH OFFICE.

RAILWAY, see page 282.

Frederikstad.—Pop. 2700.

Situated at the entrance to the Christiania Fiord, close to the remains of the strong fort of Frederickshald, on the Swedish frontier. Here the warlike Charles XII. was killed in the siege of 1718. Excursionists can visit the falls of the Glommen (Sarpfos) about a Norwegian mile distant.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—C. Well, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Frederikshald, Moss, Dröbak, and Christiania (9 hours).

Hammerfest.—See "Lapland Section."

Lillehammer.—Stat.—Pop. 900.

A small town at the north end of Lake Mjösen, on the high road to Throndhjem, 33½ Norwegian miles distant, or 9 from Minde, on Lake Mjösen. The road from Lillehammer to Throndhjem passes much interesting scenery, including especially the passing of the Dovre Fjeld. At the inn of Hjoerkin (31 miles) it is usual to stop, in order to attempt the ascent of the Snehoetten (8674 feet), the highest point of the Dovre Fjelde, and generally considered as the highest summit of Scandinavia. At the summit opens a vast crater, having as the bottom a frozen lake. Further on, near Rongsvold, you pass three fine Cascades.

Molde.—On the N. W. or Atlantic coast, on the route to which some of the finest scenery in Norway is to be found. The Dovre Fjeld and Romsdal Valley can be reached from here. Distance to Christiania, about 44 Nor. miles; to Christiansund, 5½ N. miles; and to Aalesund, 6½ Nor. miles. Near this place is the island of Aalesund, at the mouth of the Stoer Fjord, whence Rolf Ganger or Rollo, ancestor of William the Conqueror started to conquer Normandy, 905.

On the way from Christiania you pass the fine lake of Lesse, whose waters flow into the basin of Glommen on one side, and the ocean on the other.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Bergen, Christiansand, and Hammerfest.

Riukanfoss Fall.—This noted waterfall is on the road from Christiansand to Bergen, by Porsgrund. (Distance, 63½ miles, post road, steamer, and mountain path.) The Route passes by Tinoset, on the banks of the splendid lake of Tind or Tindsoe, surrounded with snowy and woody mountains (4500 to 5000 feet high). Advancing up the valley of Westfjorden, you come to Goustafjeld (6000 feet), from which a grand view is obtained. And at 12 miles from Fjostrand are the Falls, formed by the Maan, a tributary of the vast lake of Mjoesvand (34 miles long), and falling 862 feet.

This route is one of the most interesting in Norway, as it takes the traveller over the vast snow fields of Gutefjeld (1650 metres high), 41½ miles from Christiansand, and to Odde at the Stoer Fjord, a branch of the Hardanger Fjord, from which an excursion can be made to the glaciers of Folse Fonden (5600 feet high), according to Professor Esmark, at the highest point, and commanding a splendid view.

Stavanger, or Hongesund.—Pop. 17,655.

A port on the Bukke-fiord, out of the North Sea, on the west coast, 18½ Nor. miles S. of Bergen; to Christiania, by Flekkefiord, Christiansand, Porsgrund, Hortesund Drammen, 88½ Nor. miles. It has a timber and fishing trade, and a good Cathedral, near which is the grave of King Harald Haarfager, (or fair hair), who defeated the petty Vikings here in 872. The site is marked by a national Pillar, opened July, 1872, by Prince Oscar at the 1000th anniversary of this event. His descendant, called Harold Harfager, who reveraged the Yorkshire coast, was defeated at Stamford Bridge by Harold, King of England, 1066.

ENGLISH V. CONSUL.—H. Hansen, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL AGENT.—T. Falck, Esq.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers to Bergen, Flekkefiord, Christiansand, Christiania and Hamburg.

Vossevanger.

A place 40 Nor. miles from Christiania, on the road to Bergen by Vang and the Fille Fjeld, 68½ miles; (7, 8, or 9 days), noted for the herculean strength of its male population, and for being an excellent centre for excursions, especially to the Cascade of Voeringfos. The stream has more water than the Handeck, and falls 1245 feet, being one of the finest in the world. Two other splendid Cascades are at hand: Skyttlefos, 800 feet, and Osteraasfos, 750 feet, by the Hardangerfjord. In the earlier part of the route from Christiania, the principal objects of attraction are Fille Fjeld Col at Nystuen, where reindeer are sometimes seen, and Lierdalsoeren (good inn), centre of excursions to the glaciers of Justedal, to the vast snow fields of Snee Breen, the valley of Aardal, and the ascent of the Skajtots Tind, or Skagastolstind, (8670 feet high). Lierdalsoeren is 80 Nor. miles from Christia

DENMARK.

A little Monarchy, (formerly much more extensive,) between the North Sea and the Baltic, divided into two parts, Continental and Insular. The Continental part consists of the N. half of the peninsula of Jutland (ancient Cimbrian Chersonese), projecting out of Germany, to which the S. half, or Schleswig-Holstein now belongs. The Insular part comprises a number of Islands,—Seeland, Funen, Laaland, &c., lying across the mouth of the Baltic, towards Sweden, and threaded by the Sound, the Great Belt, Little Belt, and other passages.

Area.—14,800 sq. miles, of which 9800 are in Jutland; with a coast indented by shallow fiords, and and a surface almost uniformly level; but green and picture-que pasture is common. The highest parts are only 400 to 500 feet above sea. Population.—(1874,) 1,861,000; mostly Lutheran and Danish, and very English-looking; as might be inferred from the common ancestry of the two people; for from hereabouts came the first Danes and Anglo-Saxons who invaded England. About 7000 emigrants to America leave every year. Area of Colonies.—(Iceland, Greenland, Faroe Islands, St. Thomas, &c.,) 44,300 sq. miles; Population, 129,000. The Guinea and E. Indian possessions have been ceded to England.

Climate—mild and wet on the whole. The Channels of the Baltic are frozen in winter, and ice lasts for several months. Products—are chiefly agricultural,—rye, oats, barley, hemp, hops, potatoes, &c. Exports to England, (value 2½ millions sterling) are grain, cattle, horses, sheep, oil cake, tallow, bones, &c. Fish and game are abundant. Black bread is a common food. The rivers are not worth notice. A little coal is found in Bornholm.

Sovereign.—The King, Christian IX., was born 1818, and succeeded 1863. Prince Frederic, his heir apparent, was born 1843. His eldest daughter, Alexandra, is our excellent Princess of Wales.—

> "Saxon, and Norman, and Dane are we,
> But all of us Danes in our welcome of thee,
> Alexandra!"

another daughter, Dagmar, is wife to the Czarewitch of Russia. Denmark is an ancient Monarchy, some time (1397) including Norway by inheritance, and Sweden by conquest, under Queen Margaret. Norway was ceded to Sweden 1814. Schleswig-Holstein was ceded to Prussia, after the winter of 1864, along with the Kiel Canal, a work 15 miles long, from Rendsburg to the Baltic, begun 1777, and finished at a cost of £600,000. Under the constitution of 1866, the government consists of a Rigsdag, or Diet, composed of a Landsthing or Senate, (66 members), and a Folksthing or Commons, (1 for every 16,000.)

Revenue.—2½ millions sterling (1874), with a Debt of 12 millions. Army—36,000 on the peace footing. Navy—61 vessels, 32 being steamers, with 245 guns. Mercantile shipping.—2710, of 179,000 tons. Exports and imports from and to England (1873) 3 millions and 3¼ millions respectively.

Railways run from Fredericia to Aarhuus, Aarborg, Viborg, &c.; and from Fredericia across the islands to Copenhagen; made 1864-6, by Peto and Brassy. Later lines connect Copenhagen with the islands of Falster and Laaland. Total (1873) 600 miles. Telegraph Lines, about 1530 miles.

Education.—There are 4000 Schools, with several Colleges, under a University at Copenhagen. Education is compulsory for every one between 7 and 14. In modern times, Denmark has produced the great sculptor, Thorwaldsen, and authors such as Oelenschlager and Andersen, besides Holberg, the founder of the national theatre. Shakespeare is very popular here.

Money.—For the new Monetary System, see Sweden, page 635. The old system is as follows:—96 Skilling = 1 Rigsdaler, = 2s. 2d. 7-20th. GOLD COINS.—Christian d'or, and Frederik d'or = 7 Rigsdaler 36 Skilling, = 16s. 2½d. SILVER COINS.—Dobbeltdaler = 4s. 4d. 7-10th. Rigsdaler, and 48, 16, and 4 Skilling pieces. BRONZE COINS.—15 Skilling and half-Skilling. BANK NOTES.—1, 5, 10, 50 and 100 Rigsdalers.—[From "The Merchant's Handbook."—By W. A. BROWNE, LL.D. London: Stanford.]—Postage to England, 2½d. for ½oz.

Assens.—Pop. 3600.
A town in Funen, on the sea coast. A constant communication is maintained between this and the Schleswig coast across the Lille (Little) Belt. See Nyborg and Odensee.

COPENHAGEN.—Pop. (1874) 193,000
HOTELS:

HOTEL ROYAL.
RAILWAY STATION immediately outside the Fortification, and close to the Tivoli Gardens, distant from the principal Hotels (Phœnix and Angleterre) and the Steamboat Quay three-quarter of a mile or a mile. Droskeys at the Station.

This city is situated in a flat spot on the east coast of Zealand, or Seeland, in the Sound, (opposite Malmö in Sweden,) where the small isle of Amack forms a superb Harbour, capable of holding 5000 ships. It is one of the finest cities of Europe, with houses in flats, laid out in regular, though narrow, streets, paved with granite, and adorned with very fine buildings, viz., several palaces, churches, the hospitals, town-house, Exchange, and mansions of the nobility. It is defended by a citadel, said to be impregnable; and also by several strongly defended forts, mounted with 1680 cannon. In the vicinity are very many beautiful and picturesque sights. The city itself is entered by four arched gateways having drawbridges across the moat, guarded by soldiers. A toll is demanded for horses and vehicles entering the city.

The Gother Strasse, in the Alt Stadt, is 4000 paces long. The town has 16 squares, especially the Kongens Nytorv, from which 13 streets branch off. The Exchange is a beautiful Gothic building, built of brick, and stone quoins, after a design by Inigo Jones. It is also surmounted by a singular spire, representing in its formation four dragons, with their twisted tails tapering upwards, after the fashion of a corkscrew, with their heads turned to the four points of the compass, and it has recently undergone thorough repair; the colouring in the large room is very chaste. The Church of the Trinity has a very fine tower 200 feet high, and on its top there is an observatory. The Saviour's Church has a very curious winding staircase, and is surmounted with a tower 288 feet high. The Churches of the Holy Ghost, and Notre Dame, are very fine buildings. The interior of the latter has beautifully wrought marble statues of the twelve Apostles, Christ, and a kneeling Angel. They were executed by Thorwaldsen, and are supported by pedestals in full view.

The prospect from any of these churches takes in the city and harbour, surrounded by their bastions and windmills, the citadel, line-of-battle ships, frigates and corvettes, dockyards, arsenals, warehouses, palaces, parks, gardens, plantations, squares, streets, canals, and market-places. A long wide plain, interspersed with forests and lakes, is seen to the westward; whilst towards the east appears the blue sea, covered with craft of all description, with the coast of Sweden in the background.

A great many Bathing places are to be found at at Copenhagen. The water of the Baltic is half salt and half fresh.

Another object of attraction is the Royal Palace of Christiansborg, on the S. of the town, in a deer park with fine trees, on the straits of Kallebö strand it has been rebuilt twice. The present edifice, erected 1830, is of a rather ordinary style of architecture, with many windows; but its principal façade, N.E., is redeemed by some statues of Thorwaldsen. In the antechamber to the Riddersaal is the celebrated Frieze of the great Danish sculptor, representing the entrance of Alexander into Babylon, including 300 figures, and extending 390 feet. The chapel is simple but elegant, with bas-reliefs planned by Thorwaldsen. The most interesting things to visit in the royal palace are the library and collection of pictures. The royal library (open every day 11 to 1), contains 450,000 printed books, and many archives and manuscripts. The picture gallery contains 565 paintings, especially the Adoration of the Magi by Raphael, the Marriage of Cana by Tintoretto, Gamblers by Caravaggio, St. John and the Madonna by Annibale Carracci, the Apostles at Emmaus by Rembrandt, and other pieces by Reubens Salvator Rosa, Van Dyck, Dow, &c

The eye will be taken by the four colossal statues ornamenting its stupendous façade. Coloured silk damask and silver ornament its empanelled walls. The Ball Room should be particularly noticed; its walls and arched ceiling representing a pure white marble and gold. A colonnade is formed by the Corinthian columns on either side; chandeliers, with cut glass pendants and spangles, suspended from the ceiling and adorning it; the whole being reflected by the plate glass at either side. The floors are of oak, maple, and ebony, diamonded. The Stables should also be visited: they contain stalls for 200 horses.

The Palace of the Princes situated near that of Christiansborg, contains especially the Museum of Northern Antiquities (open Monday 5 to 7, Thursday 11 to 1), one of the most remarkable of the kind that exists. It is on the first story, and is admirably classified in 12,000 numbers. In the first rooms nothing is seen but implements of the Age of Stone, arrow heads, chisels, &c; next come the bronze arms and instruments, such as swords, shields, vases, &c.; 3rdly, you reach the Age of Iron, extending from A.D. 600 to 1000. The Ethnological Museum (open Wednesdays 5 to 7 p.m., and Saturdays 12 to 2) is on the third story, and embraces 35 salles, including Greenlandish, Chinese, Japanese, and other curiosities, admirably classified. There are other collections; that of Natural History is in the next street (Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday, 11 to 1 p.m.

The Exchange is in the Gothic style. The Amalienborg Palace deserves to be visited on account of two beautiful statues of Thorwaldsen, Terpsichore and Euterpe, in one of the salles. Near the palace is the statue of the great Danish poet Oehlenschläger, erected 1861.

The Chateau of Rosenberg, built by Inigo Jones 1604, in the Kongens Have, contains the sword of Charles XII., tapestries, old furniture gold tables, orders, jewels, and a throne of massive silver at the end of the Riddersaal

The University, founded 1478, an old looking quadrangle, and is attended by about 1050 students, mostly theological, and contains an Anatomical museum and a Botanical museum, a Botanical garden (entrance, Thursday 8 to 2 p.m., and 4 to 7), a library of 30,000 vols., and an observatory.

Near the Palace is Thorwaldsen's Museum, open twice a week from 11 o'clock till 2, which is well worth a special notice, and the visitor will be able to spend hours in contemplating the beauty of the sculptor's work. The Museum itelf is a hollow square, the outer walls are coloured n yellow ochre, with the reception of the sculptor ind his works from Rome depicted on them. It ontains an immense collection of works, all being he creation and bequest of one man, who is thus spoken of in a work, entitled, A Trip to Denmark.

"Albert Thorwaldsen, the son of a poor ship-carpenter from Iceland, was born in Copenhagen 770. His genius, at an early age, impelled him to Rome, where he arrived almost penniless; but, having soon afterwards obtained employment in Canova's studio, his talent very quickly developed itself n the beauty and genius of his designs. Ultimately, he took a studio of his own, and modelled his famed tatue of Jason, but, as he obtained no order for t, he, in despair, determined to quit Rome, and eturn to Denmark. All his arrangements were nade for that purpose, when Mr. Hope, of London, seeing the cast of Jason, was so much struck with ts beauty, that he immediately ordered it in marble.

"This turned the tide of Thorwaldsen's fortune rom that time his fame was established and commissions poured in upon him. He then fixed his residence in Rome making occasional visits to Denmark, and finally settled in Copenhagen in the year 1838. "He had apartments allotted to him n the Palace, where he died, 1844, and is buried n a simple grave, in the midst of his works."

SIGHTS.—The visitor should ascertain immediately on his arrival the days and hours the various exhibitions are open. It is said of Copenhagen, that "there are too many things to see and too few to see them," so the visitor will perhaps find that the Scandinavian Museum which he so much wished to see will not be open again during the next four days. At present the Scandinavian Museum and the Thorwaldsen collection are open twice a week. The woods at Charlottenlund are very fine. Open carriages start frequently on Saturday and Sunday afternoons from near the citadel, fare according to the number of passengers. A trip should be made to Elsinore by steamer or by rail.

Railways, see page 280. See also under Kiel.

Elsinore, or Helsingœr.—Stat. — Pop. 8,000. HOTELS:—NORDEN, ORESUND.

A town of some commercial importance and great historical interest, from its connection with the history of Shakspeare's Hamlet. Elsinore commands the passage of the Sound, and is opposite the Swedish town of Helsingborg (distance, 1¼ mile, in a direct line). The toll for passing the Sound was done away with in 1857. The Sound is completely frozen in winter. In summer the view from the Lighthouse is splendid when the Sound is animated by the passage of fleets of vessels. The Cathedral has some remarkable monuments: but the most interesting spot is the Gothic Castle of Kronborg, built 1574 and 1584, by Frederic II., but much modernised—with a chapel, picture gallery, and light-house, with fine view over Denmark and Sweden. Half an hour north-west of Kronborg is the royal castle of Marienborg, where some stones are described as Hamlet's Tomb. The ghost scene in Hamlet is placed on the battlements of Elsinore castle. George Third's unfortunate sister, Queen Matilda, was confined here for some years.

Steamers and Rail to Copenhagen. See page 280. The vessels also to and from Gothenburg and Copenhagen land and take in passengers here.

Steamer to Helsingborg daily at 6.45 and 11.30 a.m., & 6.15 p.m. Time ½ hour Fare, 48 & 40 skgs.

BRITISH VICE-CONSUL.—W. Lariham, Esq.

AMERICAN CONSUL—H. Bendell, Esq.

Kolding.—Pop. 4,000.

A walled town on the Little Belt, in North Jutland. The ruins of the Castle are worth visiting. Kolding lies on the road to Christiansfeldt and Hadersleben on the one hand and Middelfart and Odensee on the other.

Korsœr or Corsœr.—Stat.—Pop. 3,000.—HOTEL.—A good one, "Store Belt," clean, comfortable, and well supplied with viands; and one waiter speaks English. It adjoins the booking-office.

A seaport in Sjælland, or Seeland, on the Great Belt, opposite Nyborg. RAIL for Copenhagen in 3¾ hours; there are stoppages averaging from 10 to 15 minutes at Ringsted and Roeskilde. See page 280.

Moen.—An island, called the Switzerland of Denmark, between Zeeland and Falster; having a Lighthouse at the S. E. corner, with a limestone Cliff, called Mœnsklint, 500ft. high at one point. Population about 12,000. It can be reached from Wordingborg in Seeland. The steamers from Copenhagen to Kiel call at Wordingborg, and at the islands of Moen and Falster.

Svendborg.—Pop. 5,540.

A town with Shipyards distilleries, &c., in the island of Fuhnen, well worthy of a visit. From this place the traveller can ferry over to the island of Thorseng, about half an English mile.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN.

A province of Prussia, in the south part of the Cimbrian Chersonese, north of the Elbe; composed of Schleswig (or Slesvig) mostly Danish-speaking, and Holstein mostly German; the two being divided by the Eyder. Pop. (1871) 995,875. Area 6,809 square miles, including the island of Alsen in the Little Belt and the Frisian islands in the North Sea. Surface flat and well cultivated, producing cattle, horses grain, butter, &c., much of which is exported to England. It was a Duchy belonging to Denmark previous to 1864, when, after the capture of the Dannewerke (or line of defence), Düppel &c., it was over-run by the Austro-Prussian forces, and was finally annexed to Prussia, 1866, along with the little duchy of Lauenburg.

Altona.—Stat.—Pop. (1871) 74,130.

The old capital of Holstein, seated on the north bank of the river Elbe, contiguous to Hamburg, which it was intended to rival, and is built on the side of a hill, which gives it the appearance of an amphitheatre, when viewed from the side of the river. The commerce both inland and foreign, is considerable. It is the terminus of the Schleswig-Holstein Railway, and is connected by it with Kiel, on the Baltic.

Tourists' baggage is scarcely examined by the Customs officers.

Conveyances.—Railway to Kiel in 3½ hours, p 164; via Hamburg to Berlin, see page 164.

Flensburg.—Stat.—Pop. 18,500.—Hotels.

Rasch's Hotel, much frequented by English.

Stadt Hamburg, a very well-conducted commercial house.

The seat of government, and chief town of the duchy of Schleswig; most beautifully situated on an arm of the Baltic, with a fine deep harbour. It has a considerable trade with the Baltic, Sweden, England, and West Indies.—19 oil mills, 2 corn mills, breweries, distilleries, sugar-refineries, iron-foundries, rope-works, &c., &c., and, especially since the introduction of English capital in the shape of railway, steam-ships, and gas-works, has become a place of great life.

Rail to Hamburgh, Rendsburg, Copenhagen.

Hadersleben.—Stat.—Pop. 9,000. Hotels:

Hotels:—"Höppners," clean, moderate, and most obliging. Over it is the following quaint inscription:—

"Straft Gott die Stadt mit gluth und Brand
Und stürzt in Zorn die Hallser nieder
So hallet seine Segen's Hand
Und Friederich's Huld die Schöner wieder.
1760."

A clean flourishing town, one of the most ancient in Schleswig; containing iron, bone-manure, and flax manufactories. Its church is interesting and ancient.

Husum.—Pop. 5,000.

A well-built town, in an extentensive cattle-feeding and agricultural district in Schleswig.

TURKEY.

Routes from London.—There are several routes to Constantinople, which offer peculiar attractions to the general traveller, particularly that vid Paris and Vienna, and thence down the Danube, to the Black Sea, and the Bosphorus. Vienna to Constantinople, in 96 hours. By rail, to Basiasch, Danube steamer to Rustchuck, rail to Varna, and Austrian Lloyds' Steamer to Constantinople; arriving at Constantinople Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday; returning from Constantinople, Saturday, Monday, and Thursday, at 5 p.m. Or Austrian Lloyds' Steamer to Constantinople, arriving every Wednesday and Saturday morning; returning from Constantinople every Tuesday and Friday at 11 a.m., in 105 hours. Fare—1st Class, about £13. A new route has now been opened by Odessa. The Russian Steam Navigation Company's steamers leave Constantinople every Monday and Thursday at 4 p.m; returning Monday and Friday. The time occupied by this route is, from Constantinople, 6 days to London; 6 days to Paris; 5 days to Berlin; 4½ days to Moscow; 5 days to St. Petersburgh; 4 days to Vienna. The Company's Offices in Constantinople are at Mounhane; Baron Stogar, Local Director.

Passengers by the Danube in summer should be prepared with mosquito curtains. The route up the Danube against stream is in summer tedious. The routes vis Vienna and Trieste, and thence by the Austrian Lloyd's Steamers to Constantinople: or by the Rhine, Switzerland, Italy, and Malta, are very pleasant; but too fatguing and circuitous. The mere amateur tourist will find the Paris and Marseilles route agreeable and cheap.

Passengers by this route should time their arrival at Marseilles so as to catch one of the direct steamers plying between that port and Constantinople. Those steamers leave Marseilles every Saturday at 4 p.m., calling only at Messina and Piræus (Athens), and make the passage in about eight days; so that a traveller need not be longer than ten days on the road.

The various routes from London to Paris and Marseilles being fully specified elsewhere, we have only to add that the journey from London to Marseilles (890 miles) can now be accomplished in 32 hours.

Passengers may stop at Dover and Calais (or Folkestone and Boulogne), Paris and Lyons.

London to Constantinople, including railway to Marseilles, vid South Eastern Railway, 1st Class vid Calais, £20 11s.; vid Boulogne, £20 5s.; 2nd Class vid Calais, £14 18s.; 2nd Class vid Boulogne, £14 13s.

By way of Cologne, Magdeburg, Leipsic, Prague, Vienna, and Trieste, the expenses will be, 1st class, about £20; 2nd class, £13 10s.

An excellent line of steamers from London for Constantinople, fortnightly, calls at Gibraltar, Malta, Smyrna, and occasionally as Syra. Fares:—First cabin, £15; second, £10. Agents in London, A. Carnegie, Westcott, and Lawrence; at Constantinople, Keay and Donald, opposite Galata Custom House.

Steam from Liverpool.—Messrs. Burns & MacIver despatch steamers every ten days, calling at Gibraltar, Malta, and Syra. Fares, about £20. Passengers can take a ticket for the voyage out and home for £40, paying in addition, 5s. per day while staying at the different ports where the steamer calls, in case the passengers prefer living on board. This is of great advantage to invalids. The average passage to Constantinople and home, including stoppages at intermediate ports, is under six weeks. These steamers carry stewardesses. Agents at Constantinople, Messrs. C. & E. Grace 5 Rue Bikir Perchembé Bavari Galata.

"A duty of 8 % is charged upon goods brought coastwise from one part in Turkey to another. If therefore the traveller buys carpets, &c., at Smyrna, and intends to go to Beyrout, he should despatch them by steamer to England from Smyrna; not take them with him to Beyrout, and there despatch them. There does not seem to be any system of landing goods. An export duty of 1 % is charged, unless one produces a paper from the seller, shewing that the duty (if the article comes from another country, as in the case of Persian carpets,) has been paid. Bakshoesh will often get over all difficulties, however."—G. H. (October, 1871.)

Travelling—Travellers careful of their health should recollect that the climate in summer changes from one extreme to another, and that the same day, even the same hour, may be intensely hot and cold. They should wear cotton shirts and flannel; their outer dress should be of light make and colour, as for India, but they should have some very warm and portable outer clothing, to provide against a sudden change of temperature. On coming here they should not adopt the fez, which exposes novices to a coup de soleil, but they should wear white hats or caps, of such a make as to shelter the head and keep it cool. It should be recollected that the climate of Constantinople, with its thin, pure, and exciting air, is salubrious, but also very dangerous, and that persons of a full habit, or those that are intemperate, are liable to acute diseases of an alarming character. Catching cold very frequently leads to bronchitis or pneumonia; intemperance produces dysentery.

Money.—The money in circulation consists of the copper piastre, (Groosh,) of 40 paras, and ½ and ditto. The silver coins are 30 paras, 1 and 2 piastres.—Turkish shilling and silver Mejidieh, (1 Turkish lira) =20 piastres The gold coins are the Turkish lira, ½ and ¼ do. The gold moneys of all European countries pass. The Ottoman Bank issues paper money of £5 T and upwards, which can be got in London. The Turkish lira passes for 100 piastres (18s.); the English Sovereign for 110 piastres; the Russian half imperial 93 piastres; the French Napoleon, and Italian 20 franc piece, for 88 piastres.

The coinage is easy to understand:—Pound, 18s.; Dollar, nearly 4s.; Shilling, nearly a shilling. Twopenny piece, little more than 2d.; Penny piece, 1d.; Halfpenny piece, ½d.; Farthing piece, ¼. The traveller should avoid bargaining in English money or francs; but bargain in Turkish currency which will generally save him 10 per cent. There is a debased currency called Vesillete in circulation. The Vesillete 5 piastres is equal to the Turkish shilling. Gold is generally at a premium.

Postal Regulations.—There are separate post offices established by the British, French, Austrian, Russian, Egyptian, and Greek governments. 1. The Turkish post office, which is situated in Stambool, only receiving letters and papers for Turkey.—2. The British post office at Galata despatches a weekly mail every Wednesday, via Marseilles for England, the British Colonies, China, the United States, South America, Spain and Portugal. The rate of postage to the United Kingdom is 2½d. for ½ oz.: letters can be registered on payment of an additional 4d. Newspapers are charged 1d. per 4 oz. Books and printed matter 1d. per 2 oz. The postage of ½ oz. letters, new spapers 1

During the season, from March to November, mails are despatched for all parts of Europe, including England, by the Varna route every Saturday, Monday, and Thursday; Postage, 2½d per half ounce; may be posted up to four o'clock p.m., at the English, Austrian, and North German post-offices, arriving in Constantinople Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday. Greek mails despatched by French mail steamers. 5. An Austrian overland post is despatched every Wednesday, at 6 p.m., and for Gallipoli, Dardanelles, Mytelline, Smyrna, Scio, the Syrian ports, and Alexandria, on Wednesday, at 4 p.m., returning to Constantinople on Mondays. A French mail is despatched for the same ports, except Alexandria, on the 3rd, 13th, and 23rd of each month, postage 40 centimes per ½ oz., arriving in Constantinople on the 1st, 10th, and 20th.—6. The Russian post-office is situated in the Consulate, Grand Rue de Pera; mails are despatched by all the Russian steamers, except those proceeding to Marseilles and London. —7. The Greek post-office is at Moomhaneh, Kapoo; mails are despatched from this office by the Greek Company's steamers.—8. North German post-office, Rue Tschoukour Djouma.—9. Italian post-office behind the French. The French Messageries and Austrian Lloyds steamers convey mails to all the ports they visit, and also for Jerusalem, via Jaffa. The Turkey in Europe posts are despatched from the Imperial post office, every Monday evening at sunset; the Asiatic posts on Wednesdays. Letters must be prepaid. Registered letters charged double. Remittances in specie are transmitted by the different posts, and the amount insured at the Central Office. The Turkey in Europe posts are due at Stamboul on Sundays, and the Asiatic ones on Tuesdays. A local post has been established, the delivery extending to the various villages on the Bosphorus, the islands, and the vicinity of the capital; Postage, one piastre per half ounce. A Turkish steamer with a mail for Brousa, is despatched for Moodamah and Ghemlek, on Tuesdays and Fridays, returning on alternate days. The Ismidt Steamer is despatched every morning at 8 a.m., arriving in Constantinople in the afternoon.

Railways.—Roumelian Line. Stamboul to Adrianople, Philippolis, and Bellova, opened June 1, 1873: 300 miles long. Pandek and Ghibzeh section of the Scutari and Ismidt Line, in Asia Minor; 12 miles; opened January, 1873. Extensions in 1874 include lines from Saloniki to Uschkah, in Europe; and Kassaba to Alasschehr, in Asia.

Telegraph Service.—Telegraph communication is open between Constantinople and all parts of Europe, the Ottoman Empire, Persia, and India. Telegrams for London are charged 11 francs; to all other parts of the United Kingdom, 12 francs; Belgium, 8 fr.; Denmark, 8 fr. 50 c.; Egypt via Syria, 20 fr.; France, 10 fr.; Germany, 7 fr.; Greece, 4 fr.; Italy via Avlona, 7 fr.; via Nissa, 10 fr.; Moldo-Wallachia, 5 fr.; Norway, 13 fr. 50 c.; Portugal, 13 fr. 50 c.; Russia in Europe, 9 fr.; in Asia, 12 fr.; Servia, 4 fr.; Sweden, 11 fr. 50 c.; Switzerland, 8 fr. 56 c.; Malta via Avlona, 22 fr.; Tunis and Algiers, 19 fr. The same rates are charged from the different countries. Messages may be sent in English, French, German, and Italian. Cypher messages pay a double tax TELEGRAPH AGENCIES.—Reuter's, No. 11, Rue Tom-Tom. Bordeario's, Rue du Journal. Pangalo's, 19, Rue Hendek, Pera.

Dardanelles.—With the exception of one or two stoppages at the entrance of the Straits, there is very little to interest the tourist in the scenery through the Dardanelles. The shores are a succession of low hills, bare and monotonous, presenting no novelty to excite attention until the steamer reaches the now important town of Gallipoli, situated on the European side of the strait. A short distance beyond this the Dardanelles gradually enlarge until the steamer enters the Sea of Marmora, when the tourist will obtain his distant but first sight of Constantinople, situated on a tongue of land running into the sea. On the right are the Prince's Islands.

Bosphorus.—As the steamer dashes on apparently with increased speed at the sight of the Queen of the East, the white buildings and minarets glittering in the sun are seen more distinctly, until the traveller distinguishes the celebrated mosque of Santa Sophia, the Sultan's palace, the entrance to the Bosphorus, and then the steamer suddenly turns a jutting point of land called the Seraglio Point, and glides at half speed into the Golden Horn, or splendid harbour of Constantinople. At this moment, if the weather be fine and clear, the gorgeous panorama that opens to the view of the voyager is one of the sea-views, the coup d'œil of the Golden Horn will elicit unqualified admiration. It is a bay or amphitheatre, surrounded by hills which are covered with buildings, domes, minarets, and fairy-palaces, down to the water's edge; those on the summits being intermingled with the foliage of cypress groves, and those on the shores appearing through the floating panorama of a thousand vessels in the harbour: ships, steamers, feluccas, and myriads of caïques, skimming in all directions. Added to which a clear blue sky, equally blue water, and a brilliant sun shining over the whole prospect, produces one of the most magnificent views in the world. The landing takes place in the Turkish Wapping, from which the handsome Frank quarter of Pera is reached.

On arriving in the Bosphorus the best mode of landing is in one of the large boats, not a caïque; the latter are exceedingly difficult to enter, particularly for ladies. Passengers' luggage has to be landed at the Galata custom-house. Passengers by the Marseilles steamers land at the French custom-house, attached to the offices of the Messageries Imperiales. Commissionaires from the different hotels are always on board the steamers on their arrival. The stranger should determine on the hotel he intends to stop at previous to landing, and inquire for the commissionaire of the hotel; who will render him what assistance he may require in landing his luggage, passing through the custom house, and engaging hamals to carry it. The Galata custom house is troublesome, but with a little civility and abstention from bullying, the passenger gets through with mere tumbling of his luggage. No stranger should try to land without a commissionaire to look to the customs and his luggage. A great improvement has taken place of late in the management of the hotels in Constantinople. The traveller will now find every attention paid to his comfort. The system is to charge so much per day for room, breakfast, and dinner; the price ranges from 12 to 17 francs; in addition there are in general, some extras which the traveller ought to ascertain on arrival. His merely saying the word is quite enough.

Persons residing in lodgings will find it best to take their meals at a restaurant, of which Pera has several; the prices charged are reasonable, and the cuisine in the greater number French, Italian, or Levantine.

Reigning Sultan.—Abdul Aziz, born 1830; succeeded 1861. Population of Turkey in Europe and Asia 40 millions, to 1,860,000 square miles Army, 922,000, Navy, 165 vessels (115 being steamers), with 2,090 guns. Revenue about 18½ millions sterling. Debt, 160 millions. Imports and Exports from and to England, 5½ and 3½ millions respectively.

Constantinople.—Pop. 600,000 to 1,000,000? (With Map in Special Edition.)

The immense increase which has taken place in the number of visitors to this capital, renders the present hotel accommodation totally inadequate; A grand hotel on the scale of the large establishments in London and Paris is shortly to be commenced. A special firman having been obtained from the Sultan, parties embarking in this enterprise will find a very handsome return for their investment.

HOTELS.—Hotel d'Angleterre, under the direction of M. J. Missirie under whose skilful management the tariffs have been carefully readjusted, and the comfort and convenience of the various classes of travellers carefully attended to; travellers are advised to telegraph for rooms. Hotel d'Angleterre at Therapia, by Petala; Hotel de Byzance, Rue de Pera, spoken of as excellent; Hotel de France Petits Champs, Pera, a quiet respectable house; Hotel de Pesth, Grand Rue, Pera; Hotel de l'Europe, Rue Dervich, and at Buyukdéré; Hotel des Etrangers, Grand Rue de Pera; Hotel de Paris, Rue Yeni Tcharsi; Hotel d'Amerique, Grand Rue de Pera; Hotel Luxembourg, Grand Rue Pera. Lodgings are numerous, and cheaper than hotels. Stone houses preferable, because safer in the frequent fires.

RESTAURANTS—Luxembourg, déjeûner, 3fr. 50c.; dinner, 4 fr. 50 c. Boarn's, Hotel des Etrangers; Amerique; St. Petersburg; opposite Russian Embassy, Jardin de Téké.

IN GALATA:—Chamber of Commerce, Rue Omar; Arnold's, Rue Tchesme; Perchembé Bazar, vis-a-vis Hanson & Co., Bankers; Bowley's, Rue Quarantine. Vogel (German beer), Rue Voivode, next to Omnibus station; Tobias, (German), Rue Voivode; Babylon, near Custom House; Phœnix, Main Street.

CAFES.—PERA—Valauri's; Lebas; Couronne de Fer; Luxembourg; Louvre.

CAFE CHANTANTS, PERA.—Concordia Gardens; Palais de Cristal; Flaunns; Croissant; Take Gardens. At the Municipal Gardens, Taxim, there is a Musical Promenade during the summer season.

GERMAN BEER HOUSES, PERA.—The Den, and Otto's, Rue de Pestes.

THEATRES.—Theatre Francais: comedies and vaudevilles four times a-week. Armenian Theatre: representations in Turkish and Armenian. There is at present no Italian opera in Pera, the theatre having been destroyed in the great fire of 1871. A new building is about to be erected.

DRAGOMANS or CICERONI.—Paid 7 francs a-day; mostly very ignorant, but necessary. Visitors should employ only those attached to the hotels. In making purchases, be on your guard.

CAIQUES—By water in the Caiques is the most delightful and easy way. The Caiques or the steamers will take you almost anywhere. They are the Bosphorus gondolas, elegant light skiffs, unsteady as a wager boat. Follow the directions of the caiquedji, and sit quiet at the bottom of the boat. The caiquedjis are a manly, hardy race of boatmen. Charges vary. Top-Hanè to Scutari, if several are in one party, 2 piastres. If alone, 10 piastres, and 4 or 5 for a row in the harbour. If you go a considerable distance, fix the price first. Fares vary according to distance, and number of rowers. A caique with 2 or 3 rowers, 80 or 100 piastres (16 to 23 francs), to Buyukdere (takes the day).

Tramways.—On both sides of the Golden Horn there are now well arranged lines of Tramways, opened in 1872. On the Stamboul side the lines run from the Karakieu bridge, passing a considerable distance to Ak-Serai and Ou-Capou. On the Galata side, from the second bridge in the Inner Horn, Asap-Capou, running along the main street of Galata. Tophanah, Cabatash, passing beside the Sultan's palace at Dolma Bakteh, through the village of Bechiktash to Ortakieu, a distance of about 4 miles; the fare for the entire distance 3 piasters.

Omnibuses.—Well appointed Omnibuses belonging to the Tramway Company now run on both sides of the Golden Horn. In Stamboul from Karakieu bridge, to the beautiful Turkish suburb of Eyoub. In Galata, every five minutes from the Rue Voivode, in the immediate vicinity of the main street of Galata, running a distance of 5 kilometres, passing by the Petit Champs of Pera, the Grand Rue, Pera, the Taxim, Pancaldi, by the Protestant and Catholic Cemeteries, and Tchili; the fare is 2 piastres.

Carriages.—The Tramway Company has further supplied the wants of the public with a large number of well appointed Carriages for hire, which leave nothing to desire. Fares—a course, either in Stamboul or the Galata side of the Golden Horn, a quarter of a medijieh, (about 11 pence), and half a medijieh per hour.

The introduction of these very great improvements has been attended with the most extraordinary success. The traffic for the Tramways, Omnibuses, and the Carriages has far exceeded the expectations of the parties who have carried out the affair. The circulation of all classes of the Turkish population is immense, and the Company, although it has now been working but a short time, finds great difficulty in providing an adequate supply of vehicles, notwithstanding the large additions they are receiving from Vienna. The Tramway Company has been the greatest financial success of any undertaking ever brought out in Constantinople, and to those who have had any experience of the great inconvenience the population was subjected to before, from the difficulty of getting about, except on foot and horseback, and this not always easy even for persons who could manage to use such means of locomotion, it will be easily understood what a marvellous change there is for the better. Travellers will no longer have to complain that carriages are uncomfortable and expensive, and as Constantinople is now placed in so satisfactory a position, we may look forward to all other needful improvements following as a matter of course.

Railways.—(See Time Table, page 218.) The Adrianople station is in Stamboul, near the Karakieu bridge. Scutari and Ismidt, on the Asiatic side at Scutari, from whence there is a steam ferry conveying passengers, carriages, horses, &c. Omnibuses and carriages at Scutari.

Steamers.—From the Golden Horn for Scutari, every half hour, 15 min., 1 piastre. There are 16 departures from the bridge daily, mounting the Bosphorus on the European side, in addition to 12 to the shorter station of Arnoutkeiu, and 8 on the Asiatic side. The descents from Buyukderé (Europe), and Beicos (Asia), being the same number. Travellers are recommended to take the steamers going either side, and return by the other; they will thus have the best opportunity of seeing the unrivalled beauties of the Bosphorus. Mounting by the European side, after clearing the crowded shipping of the Golden Horn, the steamer passes the Imperial Gun Factory of Tophanah, and soon after the magnificent Palace of Dolma Bakteh, within a short distance of which comes the recently erected Palace of Tcheriglan. At the landing place at Ortakiero, is a very beautiful mosque, the proportions of which are very striking. The steamer keeping close in shore, next passes the column of the celebrated Barbarossa. Leaving the next stopping place Arnoutkieu, the extraordinary force of the current, running here at the rate of 5 knots, will be noticed. Next comes the picturesque Bay of Bebek, the residence of a number of English and other European families. Immediately afterwards is reached as a conspicuous object the splendidly placed American College, on the heights of Roumelie-Hissar. This admirable institution, founded by a philanthropical American, Mr. Roeert, of New York, has been now opened for a few years, under the presidency of the Rev. Dr. Hamlin, assisted by an able body of professors from the United States, a sound general education is given. The greater proportion of the students, of whom there are about 150 are chiefly Bulgarians, and the college has already exercised, and is likely to continue to have a remarkable influence over this community.

The kiosks and residences of the Pashas, the retreats of opulence, line these favoured shores, and these dwellings succeed each other quite as numerously as the houses on the road from Hyde Park corner to Hammersmith, and at places such as Therapia and Buyukderé, they are dense enough to form large villages, provided with hotels, shops, cafés, and lodging-houses. The waters abound in fish, and droves of porpoises and dolphins disport in myriads on the surface of the Bosphorus, splashing and playing about in the plenitude of their strength and security, till a sword fish takes a dig at them, and sets them off curvetting and snorting like sea-horses. The shores of the Bosphorus are enlivened by the innumerable wicked-looking felucca-rigged craft, darting by in all directions, and manned by wild, swarthy looking men, reminding one of Greek pirates, &c.

The prettiest spot to land at is a little village on the Asiatic side of the stream, above Therapia and Buyukderé, at the bend of the Bosphorus. From the summit of the hill above this village there is a fine view of the opposite or European shores of the Bosphorus, and even of the Black Sea, whence

"'Tis a grand sight, from off the Giant's Grave,
To watch the progress of those rolling seas
Between the Bosphorus, as they lash and lave Europe and Asia."—Byron.

The return to Constantinople down the Bosphorus is delightful, going with the stream, and keeping close to the Asiatic side—glowing with all the purple glories of an Eastern sunset—the prospect most enchanting the whole distance to the angle of the Golden Horn, and the landing-place of Tophana.

EXCURSION TO THE BOSPHORUS.—Every visitor from England who does not object to the great fatigue, will, no doubt, enjoy a sail up this celebrated strait, in one of the pretty little caïques, rowed by a couple of stout Turks. These men row very well and the trip is exceedingly pleasant. Or the excursion may be performed by the steamer. No voyager or artist has yet done justice to the beautiful scenery of the Bosphorus. The rounded outlines of the hills, the light rich green of the vegetation, the luxuriance of tree and flower and herbage, resemble the banks of Killarney or Windermere. For thirteen miles, the waters escaping from the Black Sea, now compressed by swelling hillocks to a breadth of little more than a mile, then expanding into sheets of four times that space across from shore to shore, rush along in a flood of dark blue, like the Rhone as it issues from the lake of Geneva, till they mingle with the sea of Marmora; passing in their course by a succession of wood and dale, ravine and hill side covered with the most profuse carpeting of leaf and blade; while kiosk and pleasure grounds, bastions and loopholed curtains, gay gardens, villas, mosques, and noble mansions, stud the banks in unbroken lines, from the very foot of the forts which command the entrance up to the crowning glory of the scene, where the Imperial city of Constantine, rises in many coloured terraces from the verge of the Golden Horn.

The hills strike abruptly upwards to a height varying from 200 to 600 feet, and are bounded at the foot by a line of quays, which run along the European side from Pera to Buyukderé, about five miles from the Black Sea almost uninterruptedly. These quays are very numerous on the Asiatic side also. The villages by the water side are so close together, that Pera may be said to extend from Tophana to the forts beyond Buyukdere. All along the water's edge there are a succession of villas and palaces, and small kiosks, which remind the traveller of an Italian lake—Como or Orta. There are several palaces belonging to the Sultan, situated on such eminences as one sees on the Rhine or the Moselle, wherever a beautiful view is to be commanded. In the absence of all artistic impressions, the Turks are great admirers of nature. Fields and forests, blue water and skies, sunny air and bright flower gardens, are the great sources of their happiness. The state of listless dreaming into which the contemplation of these objects throws them they call kef. These little kiosks, dedicated to the idlest inactivity of mind and body, are perched about the hills of the Bosphorus, and there the Turk dreams away his leisure time, drinking in the bright and lovely prospect around him, with only the bubbling of the narghilè to assist rather than intrude upon his contemplation.

Roumelie-Hissar is the narrowest part of the Bosphorus, and the submarine cable from Europe to Asia is laid here. The old Turkish fortifications are worth noticing. Shortly after the truly princely residence of the Khédivé of Egypt, at Enghiari, is reached; among extensive and exquisitely laid out gardens, which are unequalled on the Bosphorus. The steamer next touches at Yenikieu, and then at Therapia, the summer residence of a number of leading families. The English embassy, situated close to the water side, is a very unsightly structure, not only bad in design, but erected with a recklessness of expense that is anything but creditable to our Board of Works. Beside the English Embassy is the quieter looking residence of the French Ambassador. At THERAPIA there are two excellent hotels—Hotel d'Angleterre, kept by Mrs. Petalis, an Englishwoman; and the Hotel des Ambassadeurs. The scenery about Therapia is very lovely. The steamer in a few minutes crosses the bay to BUYUKDERE a large and populous village, in every respect a most enjoyable summer residence, so far as purity of air, magnificent scenery, and all that can make life agreeable are to be had. The traveller is recommended to spend a night, or, if possible, a little more time, here. There are three Hotels at Buyukdéré: Lafleuses, surrounded by an extensive garden, bath-(recommended), Hotel Bella Vista, and Hotel de l'Europe, near the landing-stage. There are many objects of interest about the place.

At the end of the bay is the celebrated plain where the Crusaders encamped under Godfrey de Bouillon. The immense plantain trees on the plain are very remarkable. Belgrade forest, celebrated by Lady Mary Wortley Montagu in her Letters, is near Buyukdéré and there is an excellent macadamised road to it, which passes the viaduct that conveys the very insufficient water supply to Pera from the bends at Belgrade. At Buyukdéré there is a very fine promenade along the water side, on which is situated the Russian Summer Embassy, and the handsome residences of the wealthy bankers and government functionaries of the capital. A band plays on the promenade during the evening; there is also a public garden. From Buyukdéré agreeable excursions may be made to the Giant's Mountain on the opposite side, commanding a splendid view, and to the Black Sea, a few miles distant.

Leaving Buyukdéré travellers can cross by steamer to BEICOS, and descend the Bosphorus by the Asiatic side. In the immediate vicinity of Beicos will be noticed the celebrated valley of Unkiar-Iskelessi, and the charming kiosk, built of marble, presented by Mehemet Ali, Viceroy of Egypt, to the late Sultan. The view from the kiosk is one of the best on the Bosphorus. The steamer keeps close in shore, affording an opportunity of a close view of the beautiful gardens and residences built close on the water. Passing Pashabaktche and Canlija, where the Yalis (summer residences) of some of the principal Pashas are situate, we arrive at Anatolie-Hissar, opposite to Roumelie-Hissar, where there are also the remains of old Turkish fortifications. After this is noticed a handsome white marble imperial kiosk at the head of the valley of the sweet waters of Asia—a favourite promenade of the Turkish ladies on Fridays (the Turkish Sunday). The next calling place is Candili, the residence of the numerous Hanson family, the English bankers, and her English families. Coasting along by Vaniou, Tchenghelkeui, the Sultan's palace of Bey-rbey is reached—an object of such attractiveess as cannot fail to leave a very strong impres-on on the beholder. The palace and grounds rm a tout ensemble which must be seen to be Constantinople or Stamboul, the city of the Grand Signor, stands on the Western shore of the Thracian Bosphorus, and its situation is equally remarkable for beauty and security. A gently declining promontory, secured by narrow seas, at the S.E. corner of Europe, stretches out to meet the continent of Asia, from which it is separated by so narrow a strait that in a quarter of an hour a boat can row from one continent to the other. This channel, which is called the Bosphorus, running about 20 miles from the Black Sea, looks like a stately river, until it sweeps by the angle of Constantinople, and enters the Sea of Marmora. But just before it is lost in that sea it makes a deep elbow to the right, flowing between the triangle of Constantinople Proper, and its suburbs of Galata and Pera, and forming the port the Golden Horn. At this corner of Thrace, the Megarian leader, Byzas planted the City of Byzantium, about 660-70 B.C.

It was taken by the Romans A.D. 73; and here
Constantine fixed the Eastern Seat of the Roma-

Digitized by Google

Empire in 330, calling it Constantinopolis, the City of Constantine, of which the Orientals make Stamboul. "Room or Rome" is also a popular name for it to this day; and the province in which it stands is Roumeli. The line of Greek Emperors terminated with its capture by the Turks, under Mahomet II, 1453, after 53 days' siege.

Stamboul, like its prototype, is said to be built on seven hills, which appear to rise above one another in beautiful succession. The ridge of the first hill is occupied by the Seraglio, behind which, a little on the reverse of the hill, the dome of Santa Sophia can be seen. The second hill is crowned by the mosque of the Osmanieh, whose dome is strikingly bold and lofty. The still grander mosque of Soliman the Magnificent, towers on the third hill; whilst an ancient Aqueduct, whose bold arches have the happiest effect, unites the summits of the third and fourth hills. All these, intermingled with houses painted of different colours, the gilded domes, and the elegant and slender minarets crowned by the shining Crescent, impress the beholder with a high idea of the magnificence and splendour of Constantinople. Its situation upon these hills is not only the cause of its beauty, but of its salubrity, as it catches all the pleasant breezes from the Bosphorus, the Marmora, and adjoining plains of Thrace. It occupies the whole of a triangle, whose outline is fringed by old walls flanked by towers. Those on the side of the Sea of Marmora, and in some parts of the Golden Horn, have entirely disappeared. But on the land side there is a treble line of formidable ancient walls Much of Stamboul was burnt in 1865, and is now being laid out with wide roads and streets.

Galata lies on the water-side, and is the chief business quarter for European merchants, who are confounded under the general name of Franks. It resembles the very worst part of Wapping and other sea-faring purlieus on the banks of our own capital, and contains many bad characters, male and female. The steep street up the hill leads to Pera, which is situated immediately above Galata, and stretches for more than two miles along the summit of a lofty hill. Pera has long been appropriated for the residence of the Corps Diplomatiques from the different nations of Europe, who have each of them a palace here. It is also the residence of the most wealthy merchants, and is only poorly built and lighted with gas In June, 1871, a tremendous conflagration destroyed the greatest part of Pera, upwards of 6000 houses were burned down, including the British Embassy, which being considered fire-proof, no precautionary measures were taken, and the building soon fell a prey to the devouring element. It is to be hoped, as the building is being restored, a proper fire-proof roof will be placed on the edifice. The general re-building of Pera is now going on. Stone and brick dwellings are taking the place of the former easily-ignited wooden shops and houses. It is, however, much to be regretted that no attempt has been made to lay out the streets in an improved manner. The greater part of the Grande Rue, Pera is so wretchedly narrow that two carriages can only pass with difficulty, and at only a walking pace, while the foot passengers scramble on by the wall as best they can—in some places hustled about by loaded porters and strings of pack-horses and donkeys carrying all kinds of building materials.

Pera is well supplied with Shops where the traveller can procure anything he may require. Among those which can be recommended are George Laurie, Tailor to H R.H. the Prince of Wales, in the Grande Rue, Pera. At the English shops of Hayden and Streeter, G. Baker, Hadley and R. Williams all descriptions of drapery goods can be had at reasonable prices. Mesdames Costello and Dalton have a well-supplied millinery establishment next the Derviches, in the Tê é At Galata, H. Arnold A Stampo, N. Carnano have well-stocked stores of British comestibles and drinkables. Minassian's American store, in the same quarter, has a large variety of articles from the United States. There are several booksellers, and some first-rate Photographic establishments in Pera. That of Abdullah Frères is considered the most perfect in existence. The visitor can supply himself at several shops with excellent views of the Bosphorus and environs of the capital.

Sights.—The following brief catalogue of the sights of the capital, and directions how they may be most economically seen in point of time, will be of assistance to tourists.

The first thing will be to hire a valet de place, interpreter, or dragoman. These men, however, are very ignorant and impudent, and cannot be relied upon, except they are recommended by the Hotels. As the seraglio, the principal mosques and bazaars are situated in the city of Constantinople, the traveller must descend the hill from Pera to Galata, and thence over the bridge of boats across the Golden Horn to Stamboul. The scene on this bridge defies description, from the strange combination of magnificent views with the extraordinary oriental crowd passing over the bridge jumbled together.

On one day, travellers can visit the Bazaars and Hippodrome, and ascend the tower of the Serashier, or ride on horseback round the walls of the city. In the latter case they may procure good horses and carriages in Pera, or they can obtain horses at the extremities of the bridges. They should ride to the Mosque of Eyoob, and visit its fine tombs; taking care not to attempt to enter the Mosque, which is of such superior sanctity in the eyes of the Mussulman population, as to close it against Christians. The view of the Golden Horn from the Hill above Eyoob, is extremely beautiful. After this, the excursion round the city walls, as the Seven Towers is very interesting, and near the latter the Greek Church of Bayaklise is worthy of a visit.

On another day a visit may be made to the old Seraglio, the Mint, and the Ancient Costumes of the Janissaries. This can only be done by Firman, to obtain which from an Embassy is a great expense and trouble. A party is made up at the hotels once a-week, at an expense varying according to season and bargaining from 10 francs to 25 francs. On visiting St. Sophia, and other places of a similar description, the visitor must take off his outer boots and walk in slippers, which he ought to bring with him, or the dragoman will charge him two francs; no Turkish gentleman or decent person enters any house with dirty boots, or without taking off his galoshes or outer shoes. The Firman admits to the Seraglio and the Imperial Mosques.

The Bosphorus is a chief point of attraction of Constantinople. It is best seen in an excursion up it in a steamer or caique; a good caique with three pair of oars will hold four persons comfortably, and will row to Buyukdéré in favourable weather, in two and a half to three hours. In a larger boat, such as an Island caique, a party of travellers may go into the Black Sea as far as the Cyanian Rocks. Returning, they may land at the Sultan's Valley, (Unkiar Skelessi, which gives name to the Russian Treaty of 1833), on the Asiatic shore, drive up in a carriage, ride on horseback, or make a foot excursion to the summit of the Giant's Mountain, whence there is a splendid view of the Black Sea and Bosphorus. At Therapia and Buyukdéré there are excellent Hotels. At the first named the Hotel d'Angleterre; and at the latter, Lapierre's, where the traveller is recommended to pass a night, returning by steamer (leaving every hour) in the morning.

After an early breakfast, travellers may cross over to Scutari, in a steamer from the bridge, or take a caique with two pair of oars at Tophaneh. At the wharf where they land they will find Arabas (carriages) and horses for an excursion through a part of the great Turkish Cemetery to the summit of Bulgarlu, whence is a magnificent view of Constantinople. At one o'clock the Ruffayee (Howling) Dervishes hold a service in their convent, which is very desirable to see. A walk to the Great Barracks of the Sultan Selim affords a view of its vicinity. These Barracks are interesting from their connection with the name of Florence Nightingale, who superintended the Hospital, to which purpose the building was appropriated during the Crimean War. Immediately adjoining the Barracks the English Military Cemetery is situated, where upwards of 8000 of our countrymen are interred. Baron Marochetti's memorial column looks like a great chimney.

On Friday, the Sultan, as Caliph of the Mussulman world, attends Mosque at noonday. Information respecting the Mosque which his Majesty deigns visiting, can be procured in the morning of a policeman, or at the hotel. After witnessing the passage of the cortège which accompanies the Sultan, a visit may be made to the neighbourhood of the Heavenly Waters (Gewk Soo) of Asia, where generally from 1st July to 30th October, there is a large concourse of Mussulman visitors of both sexes.

The Traveller can go by a steamer in the evening to the Princes Islands in the Sea of Marmora, delightful spots, frequented in summer by the ton of Pera society. At Halki the best Hotel is the Hotel d'Orient; and at the neighbouring island, Prinkipo Giacomis is good although dear. The college at Halki, and the grave of Sir E. Barton, the first English Ambassador, adjacent to it, are both entire. The Monasteries at Prinkipo are also interesting.

Seraglio.—On the eastern promontory stands (what remains of the palace, which was destroyed by fire in 1865) the palace and gardens of the Seraglio, which cover one of the seven hills. The imperial palace was enclosed with lofty walls, and the whole space covered with suites of apartments, mosques, baths, gardens, and cypress groves. So many glittering domes, rearing their lofty heads above the verdant foliage and painted terraces, produce at a distance a very beautiful effect. The principal entrance, at a part which escaped the fire, is on the west, through the Babiheomyeon, or Sublime Porte, which is built of marble, and gives the Turkish Government its official designation. Within is the first court, which contains the Mint and the Vizier's divan; opposite is the Babi-i-Salem, or Gate of Health, which leads to the second court, where is the Audience chamber, in which Foreign Ambassadors were received by the Sultan in person. In this chamber is the Throne, which resembles a large four-post bed. The gate which terminates the second court is called Babi-i-Saadet, or the Gate of Happiness.

The Mosques. — There are fourteen imperial Mosques; sixty ordinary mosques, varying in size and beauty; and two hundred and more inferior mosques and mesjids; which latter are only distinguished as being places of worship, by having little minarets or towers contiguous to them. Of the mosques, the first place, both for magnificence and elegance of architecture, is due to the Church of Santa Sophia, situated near the principal gate of the Seraglio. It was dedicated, A D. 360, to "Holy Wisdom," (or Santa Sophia), by Constantius II., the son of Constantine the Great; and was rebuilt, 532-7, by Justinian. Among the numerous pillars which adorn this mosque, are six of green jaspar, which once supported the famous Temple of Diana at Ephesus; and eight of porphyry, that had been placed by Aurelian in the Temple of the Sun at Rome, but were removed hither by Constantine. The visitor should ascend the stairs and go up to the gallery, whence the view is exceedingly fine. The immense size of the building — the stupendous concave of the Dome, which is adorned with mosaic work—the magnificence of the columns and varieties of marbles —the singular manner in which it is illuminated with globes of crystal and lamps of coloured glass, and ornamented with ostrich eggs, &c., produce a striking effect. On looking down, and observing the number of believers at prayers, kneeling in rows across the body of the mosque, with their faces towards Mecca, who are constantly bending up and down, touching the ground with their foreheads, and springing up again on their heels, the impression is by no means favourable to a European's gravity, however grave may be the effect on the Musselman.

The most interesting mosques after St. Sophia are—the Ahmedieh, the Mohammedieh, the Suleimanieh, the Bayezidieh, the Osmanieh, and the turbé of Sultan Soliman, and the tomb of Ahmed.

1. The Ahmedieh, on the Et Meidan (built 1610) by Achmet I.), has six elegant minarets. Grand simple interior; dome supported by four enormous pillars.

2. Mohammedieh is an immense mosque. Has a vast dome, four half cupolas, and two minarets. Interior has three naves. Very simple, but grand in general effect. Contains a great number of establishments.

3. Suleimanieh—near the Seraskierat on the third hill—has four minarets, a great dome, and a number of little domes. Interior has three naves, and two enormous columns of Egyptian granite. Cupola 17 feet higher than that of St Sophia. The Mihrab and pulpit are beautifully worked. Tomb of Sultan Soliman, splendidly adorned with lustres, porcelain, &c. Schools, libraries, and charitable institutions within the enclosure.

4. Bayezidieh, on the great square of Bajazet Two minarets. Great gate is of marble, cut like stalactites. One great nave; two side naves.

5. Osmanieh, on the second hill, has two minarets, and contains a large red porphyry sarcophagus, considered the tomb of Constantine.

Every mosque has, in general, a large area in front, surrounded by a lofty colonnade of marble, with gates of wrought brass, and in the centre a fountain of polished marble. Adjoining to each is the sepulchral chapel of its founder, where his remains are deposited. Some of these Tombs, where the sultans, viziers, and great personages repose, are exceedingly good. In looking through the grated windows of these, the coffins, surmounted by shawls and turbans, and slightly elevated from the floor, with little lamps continually burning, and immense wax torches ighted on particular occasions, strike the eye with peculiar effect. The Tomb of Sultan Mahmood is a beautiful building, entirely composed of white marble, and only recently erected. The room is like a large saloon, well fitted up and carpeted; in the middle is the coffin or catafalque, surrounded by railings of mother-of-pearl, and covered with red velvet richly embroidered in gold. Four magnificent cashmeres are laid on the coffin, and generally there are crowds of women there at their prayers, with their yashmacs lightly folded, and only their eyes visible. A number of Turks in various costumes are also to be seen at prayers on their carpets. This is the most handsome tomb in Stamboul

THE MINARETS form one of the most pleasing and striking features in the architecture of Constantinople. Nothing, indeed, can surpass the effect produced on the nights of illumination at the Turkish capital, when long strings of lamps are hung in festoons from one to the other of these slender lofty towers. Near the summit of these minarets there is a little gallery, from which, at the five appointed seasons in the four-and-twenty hours, the Muezzin calls the Mahometans to prayer. Some of the grand mosques have two, others four, and one has even six of these minarets.

FOUNTAINS.—After the mosques, the public fountains are among the chief ornaments of this remarkable city. Some of these, indeed, with their marble fronts, elaborate arabesque ornaments, and Chinese-like reeds, are most beautiful objects. Their number is extraordinary. They meet you whichever way you direct your walk; they stand by every mosque—for before a Turk prostrates himself in prayer he must perform his ablutions. The immense quantity of water required to supply these fountains is brought from artificial lakes near the forest of Belgrade, about twelve miles from the city. It is conveyed by means of subterranean aqueducts, and souterari, or hydraulic pyramids, which latter are placed at regular distances, and ingeniously contrived to overcome the inequalities of surface presented by the country.

THE BAZAARS, where all the business of Constantinople is transacted, are very extensive and numerous, and essentially Oriental in appearance. They consist of lofty cloisters or corridors built of stone, and lighted by domes, which are admirably adapted for the climate, and in summer afford a pleasant retreat. Every trade has its particular quarter; and each dealer has a small shop in front, with a room behind for his wares. In one street nothing is to be seen but arms of different kinds; another is filled with jewels, diamonds and precious stones; some are lined with India stuffs, cashmeres, with brocade of silver and gold, &c.; while numbers of streets are occupied by shoe makers, furriers, pipe makers, cooks, or confectioners, each being confined to a distinct district. The different trades are also appropriated to different nations, and each has the proper custom of his respective country. The Turks with their immense rolled turbans; the Persians with their high sheep-skin conical caps, and every other variety of head-dress. Then the passengers in every Oriental costume—Turks, Albanians, Egyptians, Circassians, merchants, sheiks, dervishes, slaves, and water-sellers, &c.—give such a motley, yet picturesque appearance to these Bazaars, that they afford a constant source of amusement to the European. No spot in the world can boast of such an accumulation of valuable merchandise as the great Bazaars of Constantinople. They are perfect thorough-fares for horses, as well as for foot passengers. Not the least singular attraction are a number of Turkish women continually thronging these bazaars, in their ferijee, or folding mantles, peeping through their yashmac, or veil.

DANCING DERVISHES.—The Mevievee (or Dancing Dervishes,) have service in their Convent at the Tekeh every Wednesday, and at Cassim Pasha every Sunday at 2 o'clock. There are about twenty performers, with high, round, felt caps, and brown mantles. At a given signal they all fall flat on their faces, and rise and walk slowly round and round with their arms folded, bowing and turning slowly several times. They then cast off their mantles and appear in a species of long, full, bell-shaped petticoats, and jackets; their feet bare, and one after the other begin to spin; revolving, dancing or turning, for fifteen minutes with extraordinary velocity.

A HAN or KHAN is a square surrounded by buildings with galleries all round, a tree or two in the middle, and a fountain or coffee-house in the corner. There are nearly two hundred of these places in Constantinople for the accommodation of merchants arriving by caravans. No charge is made for their use; but the rooms are entirely unfurnished, so that the occupier must bring his mattress, his little carpet, and such humble articles of cookery as he may require Antiquities.—The obelisk of Theodosius, a monolith of rose-coloured Syene granite, 110 feet high. Well preserved hieroglyphs; rough bas-reliefs relating to the Emperor Theodosius, A.D. 390-5.

2. The hippodrome (Et Meidan), 250 paces long, 150 wide, south of Saint Sophia; few vestiges left save an obelisk and pyramid.

3. Column of Arcadius, a fine monument, raised to Arcadius and Eudoxia; nothing but pedestal left; calcined by fire. Fine view from it.

4. Aqueduct of Valens (Bozjohan Kemeri), about A.D. 370. Many remains of this work left.

5. Cistern of the Thousand Columns (Bin Bir Derek); has only 284 columns. People have met with accidents in visiting it. Several other ancient cisterns, and other ruins, can be visited by the antiquary.

Broussa, or Prusa.—Hotels:

Hotel d'Olympe, well situated and comfortable.

Stores, clean, comfortable, and moderate.

Broussa,—the ancient Prusa, ad Olympum, in Bithynia, Asia Minor, and the seat of the Turkish Sovereigns before they took Adrianople,—is brought into easy reach of all travellers to the East, by the establishment of a line of steamers from Stambool, which make the trip in about six hours to Moudania, (its port,) where horses and arabas are always to be had, with which they arrive here the same evening; and Ghemlek in eight hours: from the latter a good road has been constructed to Broussa. It is as celebrated for the beauty of its position, at the foot of Mount Olyinpus, as it has always been famous for its hot sulphur and chalybeate baths, which are much resorted to by the natives and residents at Stambool, but have not yet attracted sufficient attention in England. The invalid will here find three Hotels where every comfort may be had, and especially in that lately erected close to the baths, in a most picturesque locality. The bazaars of Broussa are worth notice. The place is celebrated for its silk: beautiful tissues of this material can be procured at reasonable prices in the bazaar. The traveller is recommended to ascend Mount Olympus, 8 miles distant, the view from the summit being exceedingly beautiful, and amply repays the fatigue of the journey up. Homer's Olympus is in Thessaly.

Broussa has a post to and from Constantinople twice weekly; it is also connected with the capital by telegraph. Travellers are recommended not to visit the city during the hot season. The wine-cellars—natural caves under Mount Olympus—of Mr. Falkheisen (a Swiss) are worth a visit. The delicious flavour of Broussa wine is well known.

Besides excursions up the mountain, there is much in the town of great interest in the study of Oriental life in all its freshness. The traveller should always bring sovereigns with him, as it is the coin most in repute.

Scutari.—It is a mile and a half across the Bosphorus from Galata to Scutari, which is situated on a sloping ground, and has a very picturesque appearance, from the mixture of trees, houses, mosques, and minarets, and is the most Oriental part of Constantinople. It usually serves as a rendezvous and an emporium to the caravans of Asia. The barracks used as the English military hospital during the Crimean war, the scene of Miss Nightingale's memorable labours, in ministering to our sick and wounded soldiers, is situated at Scutari and is well deserving of a visit. Steamers cross the Bosphorus every hour to Scutari and Kadi Kiou. Scutari contains very extensive burying grounds, which are the handsomest in Turkey. These cemeteries extend for miles on the East and South of the town, towards the sea. Above these is the hill of Bulgariu, from which there is the finest panorama of Constantinople. Far as the eye can reach over the ridge of hills rolls the Black Sea; Therapia and Buyukdere on the Bosphorus; the castles of Europe and Asia, the Golden Horn, Pera, Galata, and Stamboul, all in one beautiful encircling panorama. It is the ancient Chrysopolis, where Constantine defeated his rival, Licinius, A.D 325.

THE LEVANT.

(Chiefly in Asia Minor, belonging to Turkey.)

Smyrna.—Stat.—Pop. 150,000—Hotels:—

Hotel des Deux Augustes (Mille) the best; Herbert: Hotel Muller; Hotel de France.

Restaurant—Picöin (Picheen,) Marina.

There are European and Greek casinos with Reading, Billiard, and Ball-rooms. Opera-house for Italian opera and comedy; Armenian and some small theatres for occasional Italian and Greek comedy; Café Chantant, on the English Quay; Jardin des Fleurs; Janson's and Castellan's Libraries.

The second city, in Turkey, and the great port of Asia Minor, with a population including 60,000 Turks, 90,000 Greeks, 10,000 Jews, 8000 Armenians, 10,000 Levantines and Europeans, &c. The Byzantine Castle is on the site of the Acropolis, and has in it many remains; the corner nearest the city is Cyclopean, and the further walls were built by Lysander. The antiquities remaining in Smyrna, except the "burnt columns," are scattered. The Frank, Greek, and Armenian quarters are well built. The Turkish and Jewish towns and bazaars are extensive and picturesque; and the city, with its strings of camels and various population, presents constant scenes of interest. Here are English college for boys; Deaconesses Institution for English and other girls; Colleges for the various denominations; English and other hospitals

English and other Masonic lodges; English Jockey Club, with Spring and Autumn races; Turkish baths. There are many warehouses for Turkey carpets and other local manufactures.

Smyrna claims to be the birth-place of Homer. Here Polycamp was martyred A.D. 169. Patmos, where St. John wrote the Revelation, lies in the direction of Rhodes.

The Smyrna district is very rich in archaic remains. It is the nearest point at which rock-cut monuments of Assyrian character can be found. These are the Pseudo-Sesostris and Niobe, mentioned below, and a colossal head outside the Caravan Bridge.

Smyrna has long been a capital for numismatists and coin forgers. The traveller must be on his guard against the latter. There are several valuable collections, including that of Mr. James Whittall. Mr. Lewis Meyer is the chief dealer.

Smyrna is a steam and telegraph centre for the whole Levant; and, on account of the fruit crops, has numerous steamers to Liverpool and London. (See Alphabetical List and Advertisements.) It is the great point of departure for the scenes of antiquarian interest in the interior: and has two stations, one at the northern extremity of the town for the Aidin Railway, and the other built on the site of the old calico printing establishment, called by the Turks Basmakhané, near the centre of the town, for the Smyrna and Cassaba Railway. From Smyrna, one of the Seven Churches, five others are accessible by rail (as below); the seventh, Laodicea, now called Eske Hissar, is about 50 miles from Philadelphia.

Excursions can be made to the Baths of Diana; the Lake of Tantalus; the Cyclopean cities of Sipylus and Nymphæum, the rock-cut Niobe, near Magnesia; Pseudo Sesostris, near Ninfi; the cave and Chair of Homer; the Baths of Agamemnon, (sulphureous); the Sepulchres and remains at Boornabat, Boojah, and Karatash (a bathing-place the bay). In the summer, the wealthy retire to the neighbouring pleasure towns and villages of Boudja, Bournabat, Narlikoi Hadjelar, Bournarbashi, Cordelio, Boldjah, and Sevdikoi to all of which the railway affords easy access. M. Consenry's silk filature is a large work.

N.B.—The environs are unsafe for walking, unless armed or with a party.

The Smyrna and Cassaba Line (see page 293) to Boornabat Cordelio, Menemen (for the ancient cities of Fogia, Pergamos, Avealy, and Edrenid), Magnesia (for Thyatira), and Cassaba (for Sardis and Philadelphia).

Aidin.—Stat.—Pop. 50,000, mostly Turks. No hotel.—There is a new Locanda or inn, kept by a Greek,—very dear. Travellers can get good accommodation by applying to the Railway Agency. There are Turkish khans.

This bustling and picturesque city, 91 miles from Smyrna, near the Mæander, abounds with fine fragments of the ancient city of Trallea, particularly the Uch Gueus, or Three Eyes, on the hill near the house of Dr La Chapelle. The Austrian Consul and Greek apothecary have small collections of antiques. It is a great cotton centre.

Conveyances.—Post-horses to Sultan Hissar, Nasli, Denisla, and the interior.

Baindar.—Pop. 15,000.—No hotel.—Good accommodation can be had by applying to the Railway Agency.

A large Turkish town, 53 miles from Smyrna, reached by railway to Toorbalu, and post-horses.

Boudja, or Boojah.—Stat.—Pop. 4000.—Hotels:—

Manoly's and Alexander's.

A summer town, 5 miles from Smyrna, with a few English residences, English Catholic, and Greek churches, English lady's school. It is reached by railway, viâ Paradise, omnibus, hired carriages, or donkey. It is cool in summer time, and free from mosquitoes. On the plain are fine drives, and the Grand Stand and course of the Smyrna Jockey club, where the Spring and Autumn races are run. The Sultan's Plate is run for in Autumn. There are good pic-nic places, particularly at Homer's Cave on the Meles, near Great Paradise. The branch line is continued to Seidikeuey.

Boornabat.—Stat.—Pop. 12 000.—The small hotel of Petraki; and likewise another.

This is a cool summer retreat, on the Cassaba branch railway, 5 miles from Smyrna, with many good English residences, including the Villas of Mr. Whittall, visited by the Sultan in 1863, and of Mr. Paterson; also a handsome English church, built by Mr. Whittall and the English college of Mr. Turrell, &c. There are ancient remains in the mosque and cemeteries. A good turnpike road from Smyrna is planted with trees; and omnibuses, carriages, and donkeys, can be hired, for visiting the beautiful villages in the neighbourhood.

Cassaba.—Stat.—Pop. 12,000.

A large town on the Smyrna and Cassaba railways, carrying on a considerable trade. It is the Station for Sardis and Philadelphia, two of the Seven Churches, 25 miles and 47 miles distant; a third, Laodicea, is 50 miles from Philadelphia.

Cordelio.—Stat.

A pleasure village and bathing place, six miles from Smyrna, said to derive its name from Richard Cœur de Lion. It is accessible by rail or water.

Endemish, or Odemish.—Pop. 10,000—No hotel. For accommodation apply to the Railway Agent

A Turkish town at the foot of Mount Timolus, 70 miles from Smyrna, reached by post-horses from Turbail station, having a few remains of antiquity. The ruins of Hypæpa on the pass to Sardis, are near.

Ephesus, or Ayasoulouk.—Stat.—Pop. 500

Refreshment Room at the Station, kept by an Englishman; comfortable accommodation; horses can be hired. The ruins are ½ mile to 1 mile distant.

Special Trains from Smyrna may be hired.

This is the ancient metropolis of Ionia, the birthplace of Diana, the sacred city of Pagans and Christians, and a capital of the Saracenic Sultans. Mr Falkener's fine work on Ephesus, Mr. Hyde Clarke's guide and plan, the views of Mr Svoboda and the admiralty's plan, may be had of Castelan's, Frank street Smyrna.

The Ruins are spread over a wide district, in which are pointed out the Cyclopean city of the Amazons; the refuge of Latona, and birthplace of Apollo and Diana; the place of metamorphos's of Syrinx into a reed: the lurking place of Pan, the asylum of Apollo on Mount Solmissus, the deathplace of Orion at Ortygia; the Panionium under mount Mycale; the Temple of Diana "of the Ephesians," one of the Seven Wonders of the world, built in Alexander's time, remains of which discovered by Mr. J. Wood, are now in the British museum; the theatres; the so-called prison of St. Paul and other sites connected with the apostle; the tombs of St. John the Virgin Mary, St. Timothy, and Mary Magdalen, &c.; the school of Tyrannus, the baptistery of St John; the portico of the Agora, where Justin Martyr disputed with Tryphon the Jew; the cave of the Seven Sleepers; the so-called Mosque of Sultan Selim.

The Gymnasia are among the most remarkable remains. The great Mosque is a fine example of Saracenic architecture. Among names connected with Ephesus, not already mentioned, are Bacchus, Homer (by some writers reputed to be born here), Crœsus, Artemisia, queen of Caria, Alcibiades, Apelles the painter (born here), St. Onesiphorus, St Priscilla, St. Tychicus, St. Trophimus Julian the Emperor, Tamerlane, and Sultan Soliman. The council of Ephesus was held here. The present Sultan visited it in 1863 and inaugurated the new railway works. Some of the Columns of the temple of Diana are now in the Mosque of St. Sophia, Constantinople.

The visitor should telegraph from Smyrna for horses to visit the ruins. In 1863 some remarkable stalactitic caves were found in the hills.

Conveyances—By post to Aidin, Sokia and (for Samos).

Kookloojah.—A summer residence, 5 miles from Smyrna, by a carriage road, having some clean coffee houses. The view from the cliff above (1000 feet high) is very fine.

Magnesia.—Stat.—Pop. 45,000.

There is a small Inn.

A town 41 miles from Smyrna, founded by a Hellenic tribe of Magnetes, who established themselves at the foot of Mount Sipylus on their return from the war of Troy. Hence its full name was Magnesia ad Sipylum. It became the capital of the Byzantine empire in the thirteenth century: and in 1389, it fell into possession of the Turks. Sultan Mourad III. gave the town in 1591 several useful public edifices that still exist

Magnesia, seen from the plain, offers the appearance in every respect of a large city; the great commercial activity between it and Smyrna, especially since the opening of the railway, renders it very animated, and the rugged and picturesque mountain, towering above the city, forms a background of uncommon beauty. The great plain of Magnesia, watered by the Hermus, is very fertile and well cultivated. It is the last Station for Thyatira, one of the Seven Churches. Seven miles from Magnesia is to be seen the celebrated Statue of Niobe, chiselled in the rock; the figure is from six to seven yards high, and the ascent to it easy.

Conveyance by post-horses.

Menemen.—Stat.—Pop. 6,000.

An agricultural town 20 miles from Smyrna, the resort of the Armenian population, who appreciate its cool nights and mornings during summer, and the digestive properties of the water. It produces barley and melons in great perfection It is the Station for Pergamos, as below, one of the Seven Churches.

Mitylene.—A Turkish Island accessible by Austrian steamers from Smyrna, in 7 hours. No inns.

Nasli.—Pop. 5,000.

A town 30 miles from Aidin, and 110 from Smyrna, with many remains of antiquity. Accommodation at the railway agency.

Conveyance.—By post-horses from Ephesus station, or Aidin.

Nimfi.

The ancient Nymphæum, about 20 miles from Smyrna, beyond Boornabat. Here are the remains of a Cyclopean citadel, a romantic glen with springs rising, and a dripping cave. Some distance beyond is the monument of the Pseudo-Sesostris.

CONVEYANCE by post-horses.

Patmos, an island in the Turkish archipelago, to the south of Samos, on the way to Rhodes.

Pergamos, now Bergama.—Pop.—

One of the Seven Churches, 20 miles from Menmeen Station. Its architectural ruins are amongst the most striking and interesting of Asia Minor. In the centre of the city is the ruined Palace of a Roman emperor; the site of the Theatre commands a magnificent view of the plain and chain of mountains; and amongst the mosques is one that from its style, is doubtless a church of the early Christians. The Amphitheatre is a fine structure of beautiful workmanship and has a river running through it. From the castle the sea is visible

Philadelphia—Pop. about 12,000.

One of the Seven Churches now called ALLAH SHEHR, or "city of God", 47 miles from Cassaba, beautifully situated at the foot of Mount Imolous Its old name signifies "Love of brethren". It contains about 3000 houses, with several mosques, bazaars, baths, and khans, a liquorice and a cotton ginning factory; and some hot mineral springs in the neighbourhood. The walls of the ancient city are still standing, as well as some immense ruins of primitive Christian churches It is the residence of a Greek bishop. The railway is in progress to this interesting city.

Laodicea, one of the Seven Churches, and now called Eske Hissar, is 50 miles distant.

Samos.—Pop.

An island on the Coast of Asia Minor, — hours, by Steamer. It can also be reached in 7 to 10 hours, by way of Devellikeny Station (18 miles); thence by horse to Giagorkeui, and so by boat to Vathi; or by railway to Ephesus station (48 miles) thence by post-horses to Skala Nova, and so by boat either to Vathi or Tigani. Vathi is a good sized town, but the chief objects of interest are at Tigani, where is the Acropolis of Samos, and near it the Temple and birthplace of Juno. The accommodation is inferior.

Sardis,—Pop.—

One of the Seven Churches 25 miles from Cassaba, formerly the capital of Lydia, the residence of Crœsus, the seat of a bishop, and for generations the meeting place of General Councils. The remains of the theatre, stadium, and temples, attest its former grandeur. The House of Crœsus is in singular preservation; two Ionic columns of the colossal Temple of Cybele are standing; and the ruins of others are near. On the defeat of Crœsus by Cyrus, 545 B.C., it passed to the Persian dynasty; after the battle of Granicus it surrendered to Alexander the Great, and remained under Greek sovereigns until it was given up to the Romans by king Antiochus; in the 11th century it fell into the hands of the Turks; was taken and destroyed by Tamerlane, in the reign of Bajazet, and has since gradually fallen to decay. The Cygæan Lake and tumuli of the kings and people of Lydia are near: that of Allyattes, the father of Crœsus, remains, as described by Herodotus 2000 years ago. The railway, in course of construction, will pass within a mile of this ancient capital.

Sevdikoi.— Pop.—2,000

Coffee-houses and a small tavern.

It is a summer residence, 10 miles from Smyrna with some English residences. It is reached by railway, horses, and donkeys.

Scala Nova —Pop.—10,000.

Only small taverns.

A port opposite Samos, 60 miles from Smyrna and reached from Ephesus station by post-horses.

Sokia.—Pop —8000.

A town 65 miles from Smyrna, reached by post-horses from Ephesus station. Here are the large liquorice factories of Messrs. Clarke and Messrs. Forbes.

Scio.—Pop.—Only poor inns.

An Island in the Archipelago reached by Russian and Greek steamers from Smyrna weekly.

Thyatira.

One the Seven Churches, now called AKHISSAR, 30 miles from Magnesia, and full of the relics of a splendid city, though no trace of the site of any early building remains. The mouths of the wells are everywhere formed by the capitals of Corinthian columns. The country is rich, well cultivated, and picturesque.

Turbali or Toorbalu.—Stat —

A fair tavern.

Small village, railway and posting station. 29 miles from Smyrna; much frequented by sporting parties, and also by travellers to Bainder, Tireh, Endemish, Sardis, and Philadelphia. Near are the ruins of Metropolis, an ancient city so called.

GREECE.

ACCESS—1. The nearest and easiest way for English travellers, is through Paris and Marseilles. The steamers of the Messageries Maritimes start from Marseilles on Saturday at 5 p.m. The passage lasts five days; 1st class, 298 fr.; 2nd, 225 fr.; 3rd, 132 fr.; 4th, 79 fr. (including omnibuses on starting, and food on board). They put in at Naples; stay there a little; and 40 hours after, reach Cape Matapan; and thence, coasting the Morea near the Cyclades, reach Athens, passing Egina and Salamis.

The Boats of Fraissinet & Co., (p. 719), run from Marseilles to Piræus on Thursdays and stay 24 hours at Naples. Fares 1st class, 200 fr.; 2nd, 120 fr. The Italian Trinacria Line may also be used. 2. From Brindisi, the Austrian Lloyd and the Italian boats run to Corfu, and thence to Piræus; either round the Morea, or by Greek Steamers, (cheaper and more expeditious) up the Gulf of Lepanto, and over the Isthmus of Corinth. These last are indifferent; fare 88 drachmes, including table. Leaving Corfu at 5.30 p.m., they reach Cephalonia at 5.0 a.m., Zante 10.0, Patras

(page 667) 5.0 p m., and New Corinth (page 665), at 5.0 a.m. Thence, the drive across the Isthmus is charming. The road is guarded by soldiers. As no baggage is allowed in the cabin, the traveller, on a flying visit (2 days) should take a handbag. (See page 666 for the return trip.)

3. Through Germany or Switzerland to Trieste; thence by the Austrian Lloyd's, on Tuesday and Saturday, to Corfu (where an excellent hotel, "St. George's," is kept by Mr. Muzzuchi), Zante, and Patras, to Syra and to the Piræus, reaching it 4 days after, in the evening. Boats reach Corfu two days after starting from Trieste. Passports are necessary. November and December are cold and rainy. With respect to travelling in Greece, a correspondent (Major M.) writing in 1875, says that he met two quiet Englishmen who had walked everywhere. Their report was, that "Travellers all over the interior of Greece may, with a slight knowledge of modern Greek, be as happy as possible. They will meet with great hospitality and kindness from the people; and there is no fear of banditti." They will require one or two lette a of introduction, to be obtained either in England or Athens. A stick should be carried as a protection against dogs; and a pocket revolver (if carefully concealed) might be useful against a solitary tramp; though, of course, it would be useless against brigands. The traveller must rely upon the honour of the people.

Piræus.—Stat.—Pop. 6,500.

Hotels at the Piræus (indifferent): Europe; and the Allied Powers.

BOAT to land, 1 drachma, (rather less than a franc). Italian is a useful language in the East and in Greece.

CONVEYANCES.—Railway from Athens to Piræus see pages 298, 297; 1st Cl., 1 drachma. Or by Calèche, from the quay, 5 to 6 drachmas.

ENGLISH CONSUL.—C. L. Merlin, Esq.

GUIDE and INTERPRETER.—Miltiades Vidis.

The Piræus is a pretty town with regular streets; and a small, but good port, with 10½ fathom water, muddy bottom. Principal antiquities:—Between Piræus and Mynichia, a ruined Temple, sepulchral cavern, remains of a theatre. Mynichia is ten minutes from Piræus. Tomb of Themistocles, 45 minutes from Mynichia. Vestiges of the walls of Themistocles, joining Athens and Piræus. At 45 mins. east of Piræus, are the channel of Salamis, and the site of throne of Xerxes during the battle of Salamis (B.C. 480).

Athens.—Stat.—7 miles by rail. Dusty road. Leave to the right the temple of Theseus, and enter Athens by the street of Hermes.

HOTELS.—Avoid the numerous second class hotels. One of the following may be selected:—NEW YORK HOTEL, in Æolus street, (English Proprietress); comfortable and moderate.—HOTEL DES ETRANGERS; HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE; HOTEL DE BYZANCE; HOTEL DE GRAND BRETAGNE; all good, and all situated in the Place de la Constitution, top of Hermes Street, near the Palace.

Hotel expenses are 10 to 12 fr. a day.

CAFES. Solon's (the best) Place de la Concorde Café of The East (ἡ Ἀνατολή), close to HOTEL D'ANGLETERRE. Coffee is good.

PENSION.—Mrs. Chrysicopoulos (a German lady, who speaks English). House of 'Epeedes," close to the Gendarmerie, (χωροφυλακεῖον), and near the English Church.—Comfortable and moderate; 6 to 7 francs a day, all included.

POST-OFFICE.—Stadium street. Postage to England. 2½ for ½ oz.

CAB STAND.—Place de la Constitution, in front of the Palace; 2 drachmas per hour, for a two horse carriage.

SHOPS, in Eolus street and Hermes street—Fine gold and silver embroidery can be got here. Make your own purchases for everything; if done through a guide, you will pay 25 per cent. extra. Consult your friends as to dictionaries, &c.

BATHS.—Turkish &c., not recommended.

OPERA.—Stall, 1½ fr.

Population (1871) 44,510. Two long streets cross each other, and are called Hermes and Eolus street. The bazaar is on the site of the Turkish town, in the merchants' quarter. Neapolis is the new town, containing the University, the Legations, and the Palace. Orders to see the Palace may be got by sending a card in the morning.

ENGLISH MINISTER.—His Ex. Hon. W. Stuart, C.B.

AMERICAN MINISTER.—His Ex. General Reade.

ENGLISH CHURCH.—A Gothic edifice, near the Palace.—Chaplain, Rev. Dr. Scott.

CHURCHES.—A new Cathedral in the Byzantine style, but with eccentric details. The old cathedral, a small Byzantine building, erected with the remains of Pagan temples, contains the body of the Patriarch Gregorius Kapnicaria, in Hermes street; is of the 11th century, and has some curious paintings. St. Theodore is the best preserved church. The Russian church is in the Byzantine style.

The King's Palace between Mount Lycabettus, and the Acropolis, is a vast square plastered building, in a heavy style of architecture. Most of the government offices and houses are newly erected buildings. The University, built in 1837 by Mr. Hansen, a Danish architect, is a fine edifice; with a library of 80,000 vols., and 5000 medals. There are two hospitals; an observatory on the hill of the Nymphs; several schools; and a very plain theatre, in which latterly the ancient dramas of Sophocles, &c., have been represented in the original Greek. The Bazaar is a small street in front of the Market or Agora. Notice, also, the English and Russian Legations; the Royal Gardens; and the avenue of pepper trees from Palace Square to the Acropolis.

ANTIQUITIES.—All these are on or close round the Acropolis, a rocky platform 570 ft. high, steep on all sides, 965 ft. long, and 430 ft. wide. Here are Pelasgic walls, the walls of Themistocles, Corun, and Valerian. The staircase of the Propylæum, of 23 mètres; the staircase and grotto of Pan. The Propylea in Pentelican marble, consists of walls, a portico and a vestibule. The Pinacotheca is thought to have been a picture gallery. Temple of Victory Apteryx, (i.e., without wings). Above all, the Parthenon, built by Pericles B.C. 444–436, much destroyed by an explosion, 1687.

The celebrated bas-reliefs of its Cella are mostly in the British Museum. East front has almost disappeared; the west side remains. Six columns are still standing entire at the Posticum. The Cella has 8 columns on the front, and 17 on the sides.

The Erechtheum, finished under Alcibiades, 407 B.C., is a long rectangle of 20 mètres by 11, with an Ionic portico.

II. DISTRICT SOUTH OF THE ACROPOLIS.—The Theatre of Bacchus, East of and under the Acropolis; reconstructed by the Emperor Adrian. Orchestra and Proscenium well preserved. Adrian's triumphal Arch is of white Pentelican marble, and of the Corinthian order. This was in the part of Athens renewed by Adrian, and containing the temple of Olympian Jupiter, begun by Pisistratus: 16 of its 120 columns remain.

The Panathenaic Stadium is on the other side of the Ilissus. Length 235 mètres; width 41 to 83 mètres. Here the revived Olympic Games were held 1875.

III. DISTRICT N.W. OF THE ACROPOLIS—contains Tower of the Winds, anciently a kind of observatory; and has still a sundial. West of it, in the place called Πλατεια Πρυτανειου, are remains of what was probably the Prytaneum. W. of Tower of the Winds are the Temple of Minerva Archegetis, the Stoa or Porch of Adrian, and the Ὁδος Πτολεμαιου. Going E., you reach the Temple of Theseus, built 469, with 6 columns on each front, 13 on each flank, all of Pentelican marble. Length of temple, 32½ mètres; width, 13½ mètres.

Areopagus, or Mars' Hill, is a steep rock between the Hill of the Nymphs and the Acropolis. Pnyx is the hill following the Areopagus S.W. Here were held the popular meetings of the Athenians; and here St. Paul preached his famous sermon.

Among other remains at Athens are: the Museum Hill, with ruined walls, cisterns, &c.; and the well-preserved tomb of Philopapos.

WALKS AND EXCURSIONS NEAR ATHENS.—These are especially the following:—1. Pentelicus; 2. Hymettus; 3. Marathon; 4. Eleusis; besides many others, including Cape Sunium.

Pentelicus requires 6 or 7 hours. It can be reached on horseback; or by carriage within ½ hour of the top. It is 1100 mètres high, with a noble panorama over Attica, Salamis, Egina, Mount Parnes, Eubœa, and as far as Delphi and the Archipelago.

2. Hymettus.—Five to six hours up, and back; and less interesting than Pentelicus. Fine view of Attica and the Gulf of Egina. It is covered with aromatic plants, that give food to the bees noted for their honey.

3. Marathon.—7 hrs., or 35 kiloms. (22 miles). By sending on a change of horses to Cephisia you can go there and back from Athens in a day. The best road is by the village of Vrana, and past Cephissia or Kiphissia, 15 kils., or 3 hrs. The plain of Marathon is 6 m/s. by 3. About the middle of it, near the sea, is a tumulus (called Sono), said to be the grave of 192 Athenians.

4. Eleusis, through Daphni.—By carriage or on horseback, 4 hours; there and back easily in a day. Monastery of Daphni in a charming position, near ruins of a temple of Apollo. Remains of Pelasgic walls, propylæa, &c.

ITINERARIES FROM ATHENS.—These are to Corinth, Delphi, Olympus, Patras, Sparta, Thebes, Syra, and Corfu; though none can be undertaken at present, unless you come to terms with the banditti and their employers (but see top of page 665.) The only safe trip is from ATHENS TO CORFU, (by water).—A steamer leaves the Piræus every Sunday early, for Kalamaki, in the Gulf of Egina, on the E. side of the Isthmus of Corinth, at the mouth of the old canal. Here carriages meet the boat, and drive passengers across the Isthmus in 1 hour. The road is guarded all the way by soldiers.

At New Corinth, on the W. side of the Isthmus is a small Hotel. It takes 1½ hour to ascend the famous "tower-capped Acropolis," on which are ruins of a Temple of Venus, and of Frank, Venetian, and Turkish buildings. The panorama embraces both gulfs, Delphi, Helicon, Parnassus, &c.

"Stranger, wilt thou follow now,
And sit with me on Acro-Corinth's brow?"
Byron.

Here Bellerophon caught his winged horse, Pegasus, drinking at the Pedrene fountain. Pegasus is seen on all old coins of this decayed city. Proceed by Greek boat down the Gulf of Corinth, reaching Patras about midnight; and calling at Zante and Cephalonia. It reaches Corfu; Monday night or Tuesday morning; and makes the return trip from Corfu on Tuesday. See p. 664.

ATHENS TO CORINTH (by land,) past Megara and Kalamaki, in 8 to 10 hours, supposing the road safe. Megara, 4 hrs., has Pelasgic remains, and ruins of walls, columns, &c. From Corinth to Mycenæ, about half a day's journey of five hours; through Nemea, with ruins of a celebrated temple. Mycenæ has unique remains of the heroic ages. The Gate of the Lions, and the Treasury of Atrides, stand in the great plain of Argos.

Continue through Kharvati (6 hrs. from Corinth), with ruins of the temple of Argive Juno; 1½ hour from which is Tiryns, with its celebrated Cyclopean walls of enormous blocks, and other remains. Nauplia, in the Gulf of Nauplia, 3 hrs. 20 mins. from Kharvati, has a hotel, with table d'hôte. Carriages may be hired. The steamer which calls from the Piræus, goes all round the Morea. After Athens and Patras, Nauplia is the prettiest town of Greece. No monuments. Capo d'Istria was assassinated in the church of St. Spiridion. Splendid view of the Gulf of Argos or Nauplia.

Two hours from Nauplia is Argos, with 500 inhabitants. Bad khans or inns; travellers lodge in private houses. The Acropolis has a theatre cut in the rock (137 mètres in diameter). From Argos you can reach, in 9 hours, Mantinea, with ruins of a theatre, and interesting as the scene of the last victory, and the death, of Epaminondas. His real tomb was on Mount Scopé, which commands a fine view of the plain of Tripolitza. Tripolitza is 2 hrs. 25 mins. from Mantinea, and has several good khans or inns; stands 659 mètres above the sea, and is chiefly a mass of ruins, though new streets are being planned. Leaving Tripolitza, you pass Tegea, with many remains of columns, temples; and, crossing the River Saranda, you come in 3¼ hours to Krya Vrysis, with other ruins; and, at the distance of 8 hrs. 30 mins. from Tripolitza, you reach Kravata. About an hour further, on a hill, with a magnificent panorama of the valley of Eurotas and the plain of Sparta is the khan of Vourlia. From hence the road, passing through a picturesque gorge, crosses the Eurotas by a bridge of one arch, and reaches Sparta (3 hrs. from Kravata). The modern town has a good broad street, with fair houses. The ruins consist of the tomb of Leonidas, the theatre, 137 mètres in diameter, a circus, the bridge Balyx, the Roman circus.

You can reach Patras from Sparta, through Messene, Navarino, &c., 9 to 10 days. It can also be reached by the Austrian Lloyd's.

Patras (in Italian Patrasso, in Greek Πατραί) —Two hotels near the port. The Hotel Britannique has a table d'hôte. It is the handsomest town of the Morea, having good streets and houses, except heaps of rubbish near the port. Pop. (1871) 19,645. It is unhealthy from fever in summer.

H. B M.'s Consul.—T. Wood, Esq.

American Con. Agent—E. Handcock, Esq.

Opposite is Missolonghi, where Byron died; famous for its siege in the War of Independence. Trade in currants. The Church of St. Andrew is on ruins of the temple of Ceres.

Patras or Corinth to Olympia. Only a few remains exist of the famous temple of Jupiter, formerly so splendid; but the valleys of the Cladeus and Erymanthus are very picturesque. The road from Patras passes Ægina, with a fine khan; remains of temple and also a good modern port. Eight hours from Patras, is the picturesque convent of Magaspilion, nothing but a vast cavern. In its church is a picture of the Virgin, attributed to St. Luke. Megaspilion is 14 hrs. from Olympia. On the road you pass Kalavryta (2½ hrs. from Magaspilion), where you can sleep at the house of the paredros, who lives in a house in the European style.

Athens to Delphi, by Thebes.—Passing Eleusis, you proceed, 6 hours, by rocky mountains, to Mount Cytheron, with a view of Bœotia. In 3 hrs. you reach Thebes, now an insignificant town, with few remains. In 2 hours you reach Platæa, noted for the defeat of the Persians under Mardonius, and showing many vestiges of antiquity. Pass Leuctra, (a tumulus) where Epaminondas beat the Lacedemonians, B.C. 371 (1 hour): Thespiæ (1¼ hour); to Coronæa (4 hrs.), noted for the victory of Agesilaus over the Thebans, B.C. 394; and having ruins of a theatre and a temple of Juno. Two hrs. from Coronæa is Livadia, near a gorge of the Helicon, and sulphureous springs, with a grotto, supposed to be the sanctuary of the oracle of Trophonius. In 2 hours you reach Chæronea, with remains of the famous marble lion, placed on the tombs of the Thebans who fell here, fighting Philip of Macedon. Other remains, are a theatre cut in the rock, and an aqueduct.

Advancing to Parnassus by the valley of Cephisus, in 2 hrs. you reach Davlia, and, passing (4 hrs.) the spot where Œdipus is said to have killed Laius, you come, in 5 hrs., to Delphi (now Kastri), 9 hrs. from Chæronea, with fair accommodation. Remains of the temple of Apollo, bas-reliefs, &c. Visit the fountain of Castalia; ascend Parnassus (10 hours.) It is 8,070 feet high, and commands a view over almost the whole of Greece. On the way back to Athens, the traveller may make an excursion to Thermopylæ.

Piræus to Syra, by sea,—10 to 12 hours, past Cape Sunium, Eubœa, Andros, and Tinos.

Syra, the chief island of the Cyclades, and the centre where the different routes in the Archipelago converge, 90 hours from Trieste. See list of Steamers, for Austrian Lloyd, and French Messageries Boats.

Greek steamers run between the different islands.

Syra, on the isle of Syros, built in an amphitheatre, is the second town of Greece in importance. Pop. (1871) 21,000. One drachma is paid to land. Near the port, are the steam offices, lazaretto, and principal Café, ἡ Ἑλλας. Hotel d'Angleterre; moderate prices; a room, 2 drachmas. If the quarantine be long, the proprietor of the hotel must be asked to send food and a bed to the lazaretto. The modern town called Hermopolis, has two principal streets, of the Merchants and of Eolus; also a theatre, casinos, a market-place, the square of Otho, and a new Greek cathedral. Old Syra is a labyrinth of dirty lanes, with a fine view of the Cyclades.

H. B. M.'s Consul, A. Raby, Esq, American Consular Agent, W. Ramsey, Esq.

Syra to Caste.—There is a steamer of the Austrian Lloyd's every Sunday at 8 p.m. alternately, calling at Canea, Rettimo, and Candia, and going direct to Candia. (English Consul, in Crete, T. Sandwith, Esq.) The steamer returns to Syra on the Tuesday night or Wednesday morning. One can land and spend an hour or so at these ports, which are very picturesque and Eastern.

THE HOLY LAND.

DIRECT THROUGH BY STEAM FROM BRINDISI.

THERE is rail communication across the Continent, either through France or Germany, to Brindisi, see page 513; and steamers run direct from Brindisi to Alexandria in 75 hours. This is the shortest sea-passage to Egypt. The Continental routes join at Bologna; from which to Brindisi, the distance, is 759 kilometres Time, 20 h. 25 m.

At Imola is the junction for Ravenna. Other remarkable places en route are: Faenza, Rimini, Ancona, Loretto, and Bari.

STEAMERS.—The Boats of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, carrying the Indian Mails, start regularly every Monday, for Alexandria. The Company's boats from Venice and Ancona are timed to meet the Mail boats here.

Alexandria, Cairo, &c.—See following Section,—"Egypt and Overland Routes." Should the traveller for the Holy Land get on from here to Cairo, he need not return hither, but may take the rail to Suez; thence by the Suez canal to Ismailia, and Port Said: and so to Jaffa. &c, as described in the next Section, (Cairo to Palestine, page 681.) If he is at Alexandria, the usual means of communication between Egypt and Syria by Austrian, French, and Russian steamers, which go on to Constantinople. The land route by Gaza is seldom followed.

Information on the Holy Land.

HOW TO VIST PALESTINE.—Time of starting—December, January, and February, are the rainy months, and, as a rule, travelling at that season is attended by too many contingences to be agreeable. Consuls, Missionaries, and others, being resident in Palestine, prefer March and April to any other season. The early rains usually are over by the 10th of March. The "latter rains" are in April. Travellers, therefore, who are here between those wet periods, will usually find delightful weather. They will be free from mosquitoes, bugs, and other nuisances, which appear in swarms later in the season. Nor will they suffer from intense heat. The springs will be full of fresh water, the earth dry for camping, the nights calm and serene. Clean and agreeable weather may be relied upon almost to a certainty.

Most travellers to the East go up the Nile in December or January; and the trip instead of occupying as formerly from 60 to 90 days of dull listless life on a muddy river, with a crowd of dirty Arabs for society, has been reduced to twenty days by steamers, and will be still further reduced to ten or twelve days, on the completion of the railroad to Thebes.

From Egypt the traveller to the Holy Land usually embarks with the intention of landing at Jaffa, but if the wind blows from the west or south, he will be carried to Beyrout.

Jaffa has no port, but merely a roadstead, where, if the weather is calm, a landing may be effected; but some seasons not half the steamers are able to land their passengers. The writer met a man who had been carried past three times, and who assured him he was well acquainted with the sea between Alexandria and Beyrout.

Those who wish to go through the country, visiting Nazareth, Galilee, and Samaria, will find Beyrout a better place to start from than Jerusalem. Many of the Dragomans live there; an outfit is more easily obtained there, and at much cheaper rates. All requisites for tent life—all provisions come by sea to Palestine, and Beyrout is the principal port at the head of the Mediterranean; while all supplies purchased at Jerusalem are transported from Jaffa. The mules and horses are chiefly owned in Beyrout. A saving of from 20 to 30 per cent may be made by taking a dragoman at Beyrout instead of making the contract at Alexandria, Jaffa, or Jerusalem. More than this, the interest which travellers take in visiting Bible lands increase as you go south. Starting from Beyrout, you have Tyre and Sidon, the land of the Phœnicians,—older even than Egypt; Tyre was the coloniser of nations—the mother of Rome and Carthage. Nazareth was the childhood home of Jesus. The next point is the Sea of Galilee and surrounding country, where he accomplished most of his life's work. Then you come to a region full of historic interest, where you may trace the great military movements of generals whose campaigns are recorded in the Bible; where the hosts of Babylon, Nineveh, Egypt, Damascus and Israel have met in battle array. Every day's journey brings one to old historic scenes, the interest deepening all the way to Jerusalem, and culminating at Olivet and Gethsemane.

Those travellers who do not intend to journey through the country, will of course land at Jaffa. It must be borne in mind that there are no carriage roads in Palestine; travelling is still of a very primitive kind, and much as Abraham travelled 3,800 years ago with horses and donkeys. One gentleman at Jaffa owns a light two-wheeled carriage and a cart, and he can drive out some four or five miles over the plain of Sharon; but apart from these there is not another wheeled vehicle in the country, not even a wheelbarrow; nor is there a road on which a carriage can be used.

When the Sultan was at Paris during the Exposition of 1867, it is reported that Louis Napoleon said to him, "Why don't you have roads in your country?" adding—"The Empress wishes much to visit Jerusalem."

"There shall be a road in one year from this time, from Jaffa to Jerusalem," was the reply of the Sultan; which at least is the popular account of what was said; at any rate there came an order from the Sublime Porte to construct this road. The people of the country were summoned, and the work has gone on by forced labour. It is reported that the French Company owning the diligence road from Beyrout to Damascus, are negotiating to obtain the making of this one; and it is probable that those who desire to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem may do so in a few years, without fatigue, and at small expense. If they do not intend to go throughout the country, they may visit Jerusalem at any season of the year, and will find good accomodation.

Digitized by Google

Pleasant excursions can be made to Bethlehem, Mizpah, Bethel, and the cave of Adullam, returning at night. A visit to the Jordan and Dead Sea will involve only one night of tent life and can be made at any season.

Before making a contract to go through the country, travellers should think over what they can bear of fatigue, of long days in the saddle, and of two or three weeks of continuous hardships. Ladies especially who intend making this tour would do well to practice beforehand; riding up and down the steepest hills and rockiest declivities in their neighbourhood; though it is less the steepness of hills or the rocks on the road, than the continuous wear and tear of seven to nine hours a-day in the saddle. Robust constitutions and habituated riders can bear it; but a majority of people would have to summon all their power of endurance to go through it without breaking down.

DRAGOMAN.—A dragoman is a contractor who provides an outfit, tents, horses, food, protection, servants, &c., at a specified rate per day, and for a specified number of days. They swarm at Alexandria and Cairo. They lie in wait for travellers at Jaffa and Beyrout, but are most plentiful in Egypt. They are exceedingly anxious to make contracts in Egypt to commence the expedition at Jaffa. The traveller is informed that horses and mules cannot be obtained at Jerusalem or Beyrout, that dragomen in these places will charge twice or thrice as much, as they—assuming that travellers are ignorant of all things relating to such matters; as of the time required, of the cost. They will gravely inform him that the journey cannot possibly be made short of thirty-five to forty days, and at a rate not less than from thirty to forty shillings a-day for each person, if the party number six persons.

If a traveller cares at all for his comfort, his convenience and his purse, let him make no contract except at Jerusalem or Beyrout. It is best to make a contract for fifteen or twenty days, with a clause which will enable you to extend the time to any number of days that may be desired.

If any one wishes to visit Jerusalem, he may drive from Jaffa to that city in a diligence, find board in the hotel, obtain horses for about four shillings a day, and thus easily visit all the places of interest within a day of the city. To go to the Jordan, a tent for one night is needed. If Hebron be visited, a bed, and provisions for supper and breakfast, is all that is needful. There is a government building, just outside the town, where shelter can be found.

Dragomans reap their harvest during the travellers' season, and some of them obtain great prices for their services and outfits. One of the best dragomen in Syria conducted a party of eight through the country this year, at a guinea a-day each person; another dragoman obtained two guineas each person for a party of five.

It may seem a great price to pay, the sum of one guinea a-day; but you have hotel fare: dinners, with as much variety as is to be obtained there. Again, it requires a small army to take charge of some half-dozen people—at least ten men and twenty-two horses and mules. In making a contract with the dragoman, it will not be amiss to insert a specification, that the outfit of horses, saddles &c., shall be perfectly satisfactory, and then, before starting on a journey, to test the animals provided.

The Alexandria steamers call first at Jaffa, the ancient Joppa, situated on a conically shaped promontory, washed on three sides by the sea, and rising 150 feet above it.

ENGLISH CONSULAR AGENT, H. Amzalak, Esq.
AMERICAN CONSULAR AGENT, F. Hardegg, Esq.

The port is small, and, even if cleared, could only hold 20 vessels of 300 tons. In winter and early spring you cannot count on being able to land or embark here because of the swell. At present ships anchor for the most part in the roadstead, a league distant and insecure. Jaffa, seen at some remoteness, presents a picturesque appearance with its domes, its minarets, and its palms, rising like an amphitheatre from the sea. Nothing can be finer, especially than the luxuriant growth of its gardens, its orange trees, bearing immense golden fruit, and its hedges of nopals. The town, as usual in the East, is an assemblage of dismal houses, poor bazaars, and dirty tortuous lanes. It lives, in a great measure, on the passage of the pilgrims to Jerusalem. The Latin convent is a vast structure of bizarre architecture, answering the purpose of a vast hostelry, to accommodate the pilgrims and their steeds. The view of the town and bay from the convent terrace is very fine.

Jaffa has not much to attract, but its historical associations are of high interest. It is said to have been built by a son of Noah; the ark is reported to have been constructed here; Jonas embarked from this port on his memorable journey; the cedars of Lebanon, sent to Solomon for his temple, by Hiram, king of Tyre, were landed here; and St. Peter, who lodged here with one Simon the Tanner, raised to life the widow Tabitha, and taught the faith to Cornelius the centurion.

Jaffa also witnessed much fighting in the time of the Crusades. It was taken by Richard Cœur de Lion, and again by St. Louis; and, in its hospitals, Bonaparte is said to have poisoned the plague-stricken whom he could not take with him. (A story denied by Thiers.)

From Jaffa to Jerusalem, passing by Ramleh and Abou Gosh, is commonly travelled on horseback as there is no road. To Ramleh, 3 hours, over the plain of Sharon, once so renowned for fertility, and now a wilderness; for Isaiah said

Digitized by Google

"Sharon has become as a desert." At ¾ of a mile from Ramleh is the Tower of the Forty Martyrs, an edifice of doubtful origin, supposed to be a church erected by the Empress Helena.

Ramleh is, for the most part, a heap of ruins, having been taken and sacked several times by Crusaders and Musulmans; yet Edrisi calls it, with Jerusalem, one of the most important towns of Palestine.

Here again the words of Isaiah apply: "your land is desert, your cities are consumed by fire, strangers eat up your country before your face."

Tradition represents Ramleh as the ancient Arimathea. This has been denied, but not disproved, by Dr. Robinson.

In the midst of its heap of ruins, rises the vast palatial Latin Convent, which has not enjoyed so high a reputation for hospitality as many others in the Holy Land.

Leaving Ramleh you reach some mountain passes, and pass a ruined village, Latroun, said to be the birthplace of the good thief of Calvary; Still continuing among rock ravines, you arrive at Kuryet et Enab, a village called by the Christians, Jeremiah, said to be on the site of Anathoth, where the prophet Jeremiah was born. The only interesting object which it has to shew is a fine ruined Church of Minorites, of the date of the Crusades. The prophecies of Jeremiah have been verified in the case of this place, if it be Anathoth for it has been quite lately head quarters of Aban Gosh, the greatest robber-chief of Palestine, who levied black mail on all travellers to Jerusalem by this route. This worthy had at his command 6000 men, and dwelt in a house like a castle, forming a counterpart to the baronial residences of the Middle Ages.

In the midst of a wild and desolate tract is the little valley of Terebinthe, forming an oasis of orange and of fig trees in the surrounding desolation. Here you cross the little brook, said to mark the scene of David's duel with Goliath: soon after you see the Castle of the Maccabees, and then you come to a ridge, and the guide cries out "Jerusalem." Rising in the midst of a wild hilly country the grey walls, towers, and domes of the Holy City, stand out clear against the sky, with an aspect appropriate to the desolation around. Yet its edifices present an imposing appearance when viewed from a distance. The special characteristic is the pale tint cast over the whole scenery of the place. Ramparts, towers, mosques, and terraces, all are of a faded white, with no relief, not even in the ground which offers the same colouring; no stir, no noise, all is as still as the tomb. The only living things are an occasional Bedouin in his monumental costume, or a woman drawing water at the well or a pilgrim telling his beads; so that the words of Jeremiah come up forcibly to the mind: "How doth the city sit desolate, solitary, that was full of people! how is she become a widow!".

Jerusalem can be reached by Vienna and Constantinople in less than 14 days. From Marseilles by steamer to Alexandria and Jaffa, in less than 10.

As to accommodation for the pilgrim, one of the best and most hospitable places is the Casa Nuova a dependance of the Franciscan Convent. It has handsome airy rooms, with a terrace. The Greek Christians have several convents; and the Armenians the richest monastery in the East. There are two large hotels where board can be obtained at cheap rates; also the Russian convent and Prussian Hospice.

ENGLISH CONSUL—N. T. Moore, Esq.
AMERICAN VICE-CONSUL—E. Hardegg, Esq.

It would be futile to attempt even a compendious sketch of the history of Zion in these pages. Its early times are familiar to us in the nursery, from the days of Joshua and the Jebusites to the episode of its siege under Titus. The City of "Vision of Peace," as its name denotes, is said to have been founded before the time of Abraham. It is called the most ancient of cities in the Icelandic sagas, and the "earth's navel" by the Greek monks. The reign of David and Solomon; the sieges of Egyptian, Assyrian, and Babylonian hosts; the Greek Conquest; the heroism of the Maccabees; the events of the Roman dominion; our Saviour's appearance; the siege of Titus; the Crusades, and its capture by Godfrey of Bouillon; Richard Cœur de Lion, and Saladin; all subsequent pages are unrolled before us, till we come to prophecy and the day announced when the last great battle shall be fought in the vale of Jehosaphat.

The streets are only half paved, and the houses have the look of fortresses; towards the street they present nothing but a blank wall, and they are surmounted in many cases by a dome. The bazaars are poor and badly supplied. The only trade of the city is in crosses and beads for pilgrims.

Amount of Population uncertain. At the time of Titus it was said to be one million; now it does not much exceed 12 000, of whom 3400 Christians, 8000 Jews, and 5000 Musulmans, each in a separate quarter. The Jews occupy the lower part of the town, between the ancient Temple and part of Mount Zion, enclosed within the ramparts. Their dwellings present a miserable appearance. The Greek Christians are for the most part Arabs, under a patriarch. The Armenians have a splendid church, ornamented with mosaics, tapestry, and bronzes. They are also under a Patriarch. The Catholics live for the most part near the Latin Convent; which has about 40 or 50 monks, chiefly Spaniards or Italians. The Guardian Procureur and Vicar are the heads of the establishment, and govern the order in Palestine, Syria, and Egypt. The Protestants have a Bishop, but their flock is very small.

The most important points to visit are—1. The Via Dolorosa. 2 The Holy Sepulchre. 3. The Mosque of Omar on Mount Moriah, the site of the Temple of Solomon. 4. The source of Siloa. 5. The Valley of Jehosaphat. 6. The Mount of Olives. 7. The Grotto of Gethsemane. 8. The Mosque on Mount Zion, said to contain the tomb of David.

Digitized by Google

Passing down the Via Dolorosa, six legendary Stations are pointed out. (1.) Where Christ is said to have pronounced the words "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me." (2.) Where the Virgin is said to have fainted on meeting her son. (3.) At a turncutated column where Jesus, falling under the Cross, they called on Simon of Cyrene to help him. (4.) The house of Lazarus, then that of Dives. (5.) Then a poor building said to be on the site of that from which the pious woman, Saint Veronica, a name invented for that purpose, issued to wipe the sweat and blood from the face of the Saviour. (6.) The Gate of Judgement, formerly making the limits of the town and the Calvary itself, now enclosed within the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

Critics have wrangled and cavilled about the last site, but it is certain that the great events of the Passion have taken place nearly on the spot assigned to them. No wars or revolutions have been able to plane away Moriah, and Calvary, or their tenacious traditions.

2. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre does not present anything very remarkable in its exterior or interior. Fires and accidents have destroyed most traces of the splendid Church of Constantine and of the Crusades. The cupola is the only part about it that has an imposing appearance. Much scandal results from the bigotry of rival Christians in these precincts. The Greeks are accused of many encroachments of late years, and to them belongs the Chapel of the Calvary and the choir.

The Church contains the following chapels:—1. That of the Flagellation, with a pillar where our Saviour is said to have been scourged. 2. The Chapel of the Prison. 3 That supposed to be the spot where the soldiers cast lots for Christ's tunic. 4. The spot where the Empress Helena prayed while seeking the Cross. From thence 19 steps lead up to Golgotha. Calvary is 110 steps from the Holy Sepulchre. It presents a flattened summit, 47 feet long and wide, with 2 chapels, separated by an arcade. In one, a mosaic represents the place where tradition asserts that Christ was nailed to the cross; in the other is a marble slab or table pierced in such wise that you can see the holes where the 3 crosses were planted, and the split in the rock. This chapel belongs to the Greek rite. Descending from this chapel near a marble table surrounded with a balustrade, above which are many lamps, you are on the spot where our Saviour's body is said to have been embalmed after the descent from the Cross. Close at hand is the Holy Sepulchre. Under a gallery supported by 16 pillars and surmounted by a dome of which the form recalls that of the Pantheon at Rome is a white marble monument, 20 feet long, 6 wide, and 15 high, surrounded by an elegant cupola. This monument surrounds the Saviour's tomb. You ascend it by a few steps, and reach a chapel in which you behold a marble block 1½ ft. square, pointing out the spot where it is thought the Angel addressed the holy woman: "He is not here: He is risen."

Passing under a little curtain you enter the sanctuary, only large enough to contain 4 persons, having on the right the Altar of the Holy Sepulchre, with gold and silver lamps suspended above it and perpetually burning. The walls are covered with greyish marble, and the ceiling is all blackened by smoke.

This venerable spot is generally filled with at least 20 pilgrims, prostrate fallen to earth, kissing the ground. The monks lead the visitors to these shrines with lighted tapers and special devotions. The different Christian rites celebrate in turn masses at the Holy Sepulchre. They are guarded and watched by Turks, who have sometimes to interfere to prevent serious collisions, which have occasionally occurred at great festivals like Easter, with consequences of the most fatal kind. The Christians are strictly forbidden to enter the Mosque of Omar.

The Vale of Jehosaphat is a dismal, dark hollow near the Mount of Offence, and a Church of the Virgin. It is watered by the Kedron, and has in its arid flanks a multitude of tombs, including those of Absalom and Zacharias. The Grotto of the Agony is still pointed out, with the spot where Judas betrayed his Master.

Gethsemane is reached by a few steps, and consists of an embrasure about 15 feet in diameter. This grotto is held in great veneration, and on the spot is a Church said to have been erected by the mother of Constantine, containing the tombs of St. Joachim, St. Ann, and St. Joseph; though there is no sufficient evidence to authenticate this tradition.

Eight very ancient olives by the Grotto of the Agony have such venerable characteristics, that it is not improbable they are coeval with the time of Our Saviour. Ascending to the Mount of Olives, you pass several spots to which tradition has assigned memorable events, including the church said to mark the site of the Ascension. The view over the two mountains, Zion and Moriah, and the whole of Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives, is very striking.

Excursions.—The whole district around Jerusalem presents excursions to spots hallowed by the most venerable associations. We select in particular—1, Bethlehem. 2, The Jordan. 3, The Dead Sea.

The Jordan requires days, if you prolong your journey to the Dead Sea.

Bethlehem is a charming excursion, and offers a contrast to Jerusalem; as the country you pass on the road is undulating, and though only partly cultivated, is not a desert. Every spot on the road is full of legends of the Mother and the Child. About 3¾ miles from Jerusalem is the convent of Mar Elias, with a place connected with Jezebel. Further in is the Tower of Simeon. Passing the Tomb of Rachel and the ruins of Rama, you reach Bethlehem rising like an amphitheatre on the slope of a hill. The Latin convent is like a great fortress. The church of Santa Maria di Betlemme, formerly so splendid, is now bare and unadorned, except by 40 fine old columns of the Corinthian order. The most interesting spot is the underground grottoes, with a mausoleum to the Innocents massacred by Herod. The rock is of a porous character and honeycombed in all directions; hence those who have been most sceptical have acknowledged the exactness of the Biblical description. The Grotto of the Nativity has been enlarged, and its walls disfigured by marble slabs. A circle of jasper and agate marks the spot where the infant Jesus first saw the light. The circle has the inscription:—Hic de Virgine Maria Jesus Christus natus est. This chapel belongs to the Greeks; that of the altar of the Magi to the Latins. Many sepulchres of saints are seen around, including St. Jerome, one of the oldest Fathers of the church. Bethlehem has been from the earliest times an object of special veneration, and has received all kinds of gifts at the hands of kings and princes, including Baldwin I, who in 1110 established a bishopric there. The population is 3000, mostly Christians.

An expedition to the Jordan and Dead Sea requires more preparation, especially as the tribes of that district look upon visitors as fair game. The usual plan has been to apply to a consular agent, and to obtain an escort of a certain number of men (about 15 for 400 fr.). To obtain this a bargain must be struck.

The road to the Jordan takes you past Bethany, where a grotto is shown as the Tomb of Lazarus and what is called the house of Martha and Mary. The distance of the present village is exactly that of the ancient (15 stadia) from Jerusalem, and the Arabs, who have a retentive memory, call it El Azir.

The next point is a place called the Well of the Source of the Apostles. Advancing you reach a bare, arid, rocky country, channelled by winter torrents, covered with blocks of marble, and the horizon closed in by the mountains of Moab, with their purple and sharply defined outline.

Not long after you reach the vast plain of Jericho containing some water and verdure. Passing the mountain of the Forty Days' Fast of Our Saviour, you advance through a peaceful pastoral scene towards the Jordan.

To those who can stand a little roughing, this is a charming place for a bivouac or an encampment. You can thus obtain a complete taste of pastoral life; the same among Arabs as in the days of Abraham. The whole district of Jericho is of admirable fertility, full of balmy gardens and massive trees. Jericho is known in the Bible as the City of Palms. It was noted formerly for the balm-tree noticed by Pliny for its sweet perfume; also for hennah, for olive and carob trees. Those trees are now replaced by the zakkoum, resembling the plum-tree, and shrubs such as the dorn, or the morell, &c. A pious legend represents that the roses of Jericho sprang up in the desert wherever the Virgin planted her foot.

Riha, or Jericho, resembles an Egyptian village. It is one of the poorest of villages, marked by a single palm-tree. Two hours after the valley of the Sultana fountain, the Jordan is reached, flowing among willows, varying in depth and width. The depth varies according to the season, being three feet in July, but scarcely fordable in March. In some parts the width is 140 feet, in others 60, in others 40. Near at hand are the spots where Our Saviour was baptized by St. John, where Joshua led the twelve tribes into the Holy Land, and where Elijah was taken up to heaven in a chariot of fire. Opposite is Mount Nebo, where Moses, after viewing the Holy Land, was buried by God. From hence to the Dead Sea is a scene of perfect desolation. Not a blade of grass, not a breath over the leaden waters of the asphalte lake, sleeping in deadly calm, like a mass of molten lead, under a scorching, glaring sun.

The Dead Sea has a length of twenty leagues (sixty miles), and its width varies from four to five leagues (twelve to fifteen miles). The taste of the water of the lake, which has been analyzed by many scientific men, is more bitter than that of saltpetre. The black stones picked up on the beach burn like phosphorus, and smell like bitumen. It is nearly 600 feet lower than the level of the Mediterranean, and is cased in by mountains 2000 to 2500 ft. high. What has been said about the absence of all animal and vegetable life on its banks, and in its waters, is perfectly correct.

The road back to Jerusalem is over a wilderness of sand and rock. The whole district is like an ocean of aridity, cut by troughs and precipitous ravines, where your horse slips at every step. Many of the hills are honeycombed by grottoes, used as retreats and refuges by early Christian anchorites.

The quickest way to reach the northern parts of Palestine, is to return from Jerusalem to Jaffa, and thence to take steamer to Acre.

From Jerusalem to Nazareth, by Acre.

The Alexandria and Constantinople steamers call at Jaffa, and take you to Acre in a few hours. At Acre there is good accommodation at the convent.

Acre, the ancient Ptolemais, is interesting from its history, extending from Elias to the Crusades, to Bonaparte, to Sir Sydney Smith, and Sir Charles Napier. The town is very dilapidated, and has little to attract notice. There are a few remains of Christian churches, and of the great hospice of the chevaliers, in Crusade times. Mount Carmel is every thing at Acre. It is twenty-two leagues in circumference, and ft. high, commanding a splendid view of the sea and of the plain of Esdraelon. The slopes are covered with crops of corn, with maize, and with forests of oak and olive. The road to the convent is very steep, but the fathers offer a most liberal hospitality. The mountain is honeycombed with grottoes, and hallowed with countless traditions. One grotto is consecrated as that of Elias, another as that of St. Louis. It gives name to the Dacre or D'Acre family, whose first progenitor was at the Crusades.

Digitized by Google

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL.—M. Finzi, Esq.

To reach Nazareth from Acre you cross a broad plain then a range of hills, and afterwards another plain, that of Zabulon, an arid district, with a few scattered tamarisks and acacias, passing the site of Diocæsarea, the strongest town of Galilee. At length, amidst sandy hills, you descry the terraced roofs and domes of Nazareth. Hospitality is offered to the pilgrim at the Latin convent. At hand is the Church of the Annunciation, where they point out the site of the holy house, said afterwards to have been transported to Loretto. In a grotto under the choir are two columns, marking the spot which tradition assigns to the angelic salutation of Gabriel. A white marble altar, vases of flowers, and silver lamps, adorn this sanctuary. On the stone is the inscription, Verbum caro hic factum est.

Other sights at Nazareth are the Mensa Christi supposed to be the table of the last supper, the Mount of Precipitation, and Mount Thabor, the scene of the Transfiguration. The town has a picturesque position on an outlier of Anti-Lebanon. Population 3,000. Houses solidly constructed of stone. From the neighbouring hills the eye commands Hermon, Thabor, Endor, Naim, Emmaus, Capernaum, Cana, and the lake of Tiberias.

From Nazareth you easily reach Caiffa in 6 hours, passing a chain of hills, with narrow defiles, said to be infested with robbers, but, probably, not more so than Calabria and other parts of Italy.

Caiffa is a little town, with one of the best harbours on the coast, receiving vessels that cannot put in or anchor at Acre. Caiffa stands near the ruins of the ancient city of that name, at the north side of the Gulf of Acre and near the foot of Mount Carmel. Hence by Sea to Beyrout.

Beyrout.—Pop. 100,000.

ENGLISH CHURCH.—Rev. Dr. Parry.

BANK.—Ottoman Bank.

The chief port of Syria, and the port of Damascus, to which a coach runs on a good road, made by the French, through the Lebanon mountains. There is also a night post.

From Beyrout, Damascus may be reached by diligence in fourteen hours. The halfway-house is in the valley between Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon; and the keeper of the diligence station has horses and will accompany travellers to Baalbec, a six hours' ride, making an arrangement with him on the way to Damascus. On the return journey you reach the station at 11 a.m., and may reach Baalbec the same night, view the ruins the next day, and on the third return to Beyrout.

ENGLISH VICE-CONSUL—W. K. Green, Esq.

AMERICAN C. AGENT—N. Meshaka, Esq.

Starting from Beyrout along the sea-shore, the places of historic interest may be reached in the following order; the place last named each day, being the camping-ground for the night.

1. Sidon; 2. Sarepta, Tyre; 3. St. Jean d'Arc; 4. Haifa, Carmel; 5. Nazareth; 6. Cana, Tiberias; 7. Magdala, Capernaum, Bethsaida, by boat, tents remaining at Tiberias; 8. Mount Tabor; 9. Endor, Nain, Shunem, Jezreel. Gilboa, the battle fields of Barak, Gideon and Saul, camping at Zenni; 10. Dotham, Samaria; 11. Shiloh, Bethel; 12. Ramah, Gibeah, Gibeon, Mizpah, Jerusalem. The expedition to the Jordan, Dead Sea, and Hebron, has already been spoken of. These days will require from six to eight hours in the saddle, not fast riding, for that is next to an impossibility.

There is no land where visitors are so enthusiastic as in Palestine; none where there are such disappointments. Some shed tears of joy in beholding Jerusalem; while others turn away in disgust from its crumbling walls, its heaps of rubbish, its filthy streets.

At the hotel table in Beyrout, you may hear your right hand neighbour say—"I can't understand how any one can visit Jerusalem without giving up pretty much all his belief in the Bible. That is the place where Christianity was taught, and what do we see?—a set of lazy monks fighting like cats and dogs over a place they call the Holy Sepulchre. They point out the spot where Mary stood, where Jesus stood, and a dozen other places, all absurdities. I can't imagine any one going there and not coming to the conclusion that a good deal of what we have supposed to be truth in the Bible is not to be believed."

Another will reply—"On the contrary, having been through the country, my convictions of the truth of the Bible have been deepened. There are wonderful points of contact between prophecy and history, exact fulfilments of prophetic words. I have seen places just as the Bible describes them, and men doing just what the old prophets said they would do—cultivating grapes on the hill of Samaria, and spreading their nets on the foundations of Tyre."

Travellers in Palestine are multiplying every year. The English are numerous, but our American cousins are as four to one; occasionally a Prussian or a Frenchman is seen, sometimes an Italian; but the hotel-keepers at Jerusalem, Damascus, and Beyrout, look for the arrival of English-speaking travellers just as we look for the cuckoo and swallow in spring. As the facilities and means for travelling increase, the number of travellers will also increase; for the world has but one Palestine. There is but one Jerusalem, one sea of Galilee, one Nazareth; and, as long as the religion of Jesus endures, there will be pilgrims to a land consecrated by the unfailing memorials of His life and death. Thousands will come, and other thousands will dream of coming, and lay plans to come in the future.

EGYPT AND OVERLAND ROUTES.

OVERLAND GUIDE TO INDIA, &c.—See BRADSHAW'S RAILWAY AND THROUGH ROUTES and OVERLAND GUIDE to INDIA, TURKEY, EGYPT, CHINA, JAPAN, AUSTRALIA, and NEW ZEALAND, published annually, Price Five Shillings. It contains, among other matter, a Gazetteer of the Civil and Military Stations in India.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES OF INDIA.

BENGAL.—LENGTH.—Gus = 1 yard; Coss (of 4000 Gus) = 2 8-11ths English miles. Yojan (of 4 Coss) = 5 8-11ths miles. SURFACE.—Beegah (of 20 Cottahs, each of 20 Gundas). 1600 square yards, or about ⅓ of an English acre. WEIGHTS.—Tola = 180 Troy grains; Maund (of 40 Seers, each of 16 Chittaks, each of 5 Tolas) = 82 5-7th lbs avoirdupois English. Hence 280 Tolas = 2 lbs. avoird.; 35 Seers = 72 lbs. avoird.; 40 Maunds = 36 cwt.

MADRAS.—LENGTH.—The English foot and yard are almost always used. Kole and Gun = 36 inches English Mooium (of 24 Unguliums) varies from 16 to 21 English inches; Baum about 6½ English feet; Nálli-valli = about 1½ English miles; Kadam (of 7 Nálli-valli) = about 10 English miles. SURFACE—Cawnie (of 24 Grounds or 160 Coolies) = 1·33 acre English. WEIGHTS—Candy (of 20 Maunds, each of 8 Viss, each of 5 Cutcha Seers, each of 8 Pollums, each of 8 Tolas) = 498 7-10ths lbs., avoid.; Tola = 180 Troy grains; Pollum = 1·28 lb. avoid. In commerce Viss = 3½ lbs.; Maund = 25 lbs.; and Candy = 560 lbs. English.

BOMBAY.—LENGTH.—Gaz (of 24 Tussoos) 27 inches English; Hâth (of 16 Tussoos) = 18 inches. SURFACE—Beegah (of 20 pund, each of 20 Kattles) = 8-9ths of an English acre (3027 sq. yds.); Chahur (of 120 Beegah) = 97½ English acres. WEIGHTS—The Bengal weights are being introduced, but there are still the following local weights: Candy (of 20 Maunds) = 560 lbs. avoird.; Muund (of 40 Seers = 28 lbs. avoird.; Seer (of 79 Tanks or 80 Pice) 11 1-4th oz avoird.; Tank (of 4 Mashas) = 2¾ drs. avoird. The Candy varies in different districts from 560 lbs. to 2235 lbs. The Candy of cotton (28 Maunds) = 7 cwt. English.—From "The Merchant's Handbook," by W. A. Browne, LL.D. London: Edward Stanford, 6, Charing Cross

Indian Money.—In 1835 a uniform system for all the Presidencies was established; it is as follows: 12 pies = 1 anna = 1½d.; 16 annas = 1 rupee = 2s. Silver is the only legal tender, but a gold standard is advocated; at present the gold coins are merely tokens representing a certain sum in silver money. GOLD COINS.—Gold mohur (15 rupees) = £1 10s.; 10 rupee piece = £1; 5 rupee piece = 10s. SILVER COINS.—Rupee; half-rupee; quarter-rupee; double-anna; worth respectively 2s., 1s. 6d., 3d. Annas, each worth 1½d., were minted in 1835, but are now seldom met with; a double-rupee = 4s was authorised by the government, but never issued. A lac is 100,000 rupees, and is worth £10,000; a crore is 100 lacs, and is worth 1 million sterling.—See The Merchants' Handbook, by W. A. Browne, LL.D., London, Stanford, Charing Cross.

1. ROUTE via SOUTHAMPTON, and MALTA.

By means of the Steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, carring the Indian Mails weekly, see Bradshaw' "Overland Guide to India," for full particulars.

2. ROUTE via MARSEILLES.

The railways have so considerably facilitated the performance of the journey from London to Marseilles, as to render it easy of accomplishment in a few hours. Thence travellers can proceed to Malta, Alexandria, and Constantinople, or to any of the intermediate ports, either rapidly per direct packets, or more leisurely via Italy, thereby visiting en route the most remarkable towns of that country —such as Genoa, Florence, Rome, Naples, &c.; all of which will be found described in this GUIDE under the head of Italy, and in the Routes laid down in "Bradshaw's Overland Guide to India."

Coupés are attached to 1st class trains on the Mediterranée lines, and are charged from 2fr. 50c. to 15fr. per place (according to distance) in excess of the 1st class fare Coupé beds cost four times the ordinary coupé fares.

The steam-ships of the "Administration des Services Maritimes des Messageries Nationales," Rue Nôtre-Dame-des-Victoires, convey the French mails between Marseilles and the principal ports of the Mediterranean Sea. They average from 120 to 220 horse-power. For particulars in reference to Times and Fares. see alphabetical list of Steamers, also for notice of the other different lines, viz., the Italian, Levant, Greek, Egypt and Syrian, between Constantinople and Alexandria, and the various lines they correspond with.

Passengers wishing to visit Genoa, Leghorn, Florence, Rome, Naples, and Messina, en route for Malta, or any destination beyond it, can embark in the packets of the line of Italy, leaving Marseilles every Thursday. They are privileged to stay at any of the intermediate stations, proceeding to their destination by subsequent packets, within a delay of four months. On re-embarking, they are only entitled to such berths as are vacant when due notice of the departure is given at the company's office. The passage-money is always to be paid in advance, and is in no case returned.

Passengers must strictly adhere to the printed regulations on board. They cannot have the exclusive occupation of a state-room, unless engaging all the berths therein. The tariff of luggage is given in pages of the GUIDE already referred to; and the following is the charge for extra luggage on board the packets, viz.:—10 frs. per 70 kilos. between Marseilles and Malta, and 25 frs. per 70 kilos. to any destination beyond Malta. Goods and merchandise are not admitted as luggage. CARRIAGES are charged as follows:—

Large size.... at 1½ fares of 1st class passages.
Small size (2 wheels) ditto. ditto.

In addition to the instructions given in reference to Passports, under the column of "General Instructions," at p. xlvii and xlix., the following tariff of charges will be found useful to the traveller:—French police visé, gratis; British, 2 frs. 30 c.; Italian, 4 frs.; Roman, 3 frs. 50 c.; Greek, 1 fr. 50 c.; Russian, 6 frs.; Spanish, 5 frs. 50 c.; Dutch, 5 frs.; Belgian, 4 frs. 50 c.; Prussian, 4 frs.; Austrian, 3 frs. 90 c.; Swiss, 2 frs. 50 c.; Turkish, 2 frs. 50 c.; American, 10 frs. 50 c.; Danish, 5 frs.

NOTICE TO HOMEWARD TRAVELLERS RETURNING FROM INDIA.—The Steam communication between Kurrachee, Bushire, and Bussora. corresponding with the small steamers on the Tigris and the Euphrates, will convey the traveller to the different Overland Routes given in Bradshaw's "Overland Guide to India." The packets of the Marine Service of the "Messageries Nationales," on their return voyage from Alexandria, are accompanied by a Surgeon.

3. ROUTE via TRIESTE.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS, &c.—BAGGAGE.—A recent regulation enables passengers for India, viâ Trieste, who are encumbered with heavy baggage, to ship it at Southampton by one of the P. and O. steamers leaving that port for Alexandria, but this must be done a fortnight in advance. By adopting this plan much trouble and annoyance will be saved and the Traveller need only take with him such portion of his baggage as he may require until his landing in India; and the less he takes the better. Passengers returning from India should adopt a similar course, and leave the cumbersome portion of their baggage at Alexandria for shipment to Southampton. Much inconvenience, arising from delay, &c., will be avoided by parties forwarding keys of packages subject to duty, with the address of the owner, and the list and value of the contents, to 127, Leadenhall-street, London; or to Hickie, Borman, and Co., Oriental-place, Southampton. Personal baggage, when declared for transit at Ostend, can be forwarded to Trieste free of Custom-House examination. The same course is adopted in reference to baggage from Trieste, which need not be examined until arrival in London. It may be well to state that luggage declared for transit cannot be used until its arrival at its destination. Venice is a few hours from Trieste. The P. and O. Company, now run boats from Venice and Ancona to Brindisi, in connection with the Mails to Alexandria.

Passengers, on their arrival at Trieste from Alexandria, can have the extra quantity forwarded to England, &c., by giving the necessary instructions at Trieste. Two pounds per cwt. is the tariff to England, exclusive of Custom-House charges.

Passengers must not take sealed letters into Austria, such being contrary to the postal regulations of that country. Persons going to Trieste, viâ Ostend and Vienna, are recommended to obtain a Foreign Office passport visé'd first by the Austrian Ambassador, and afterwards by the Belgian Consul, if viâ Ostend. If there be different members of a family travelling together, their names can all be included in the one passport. (See pages xlvi l. to l.)

MONEY.—Sovereigns, are the best to take from England. No paper money or Foreign coin, should be taken beyond the Austrian frontiers, as it will be refused.

4. ROUTE from LONDON to BRINDISI, via FRANCE, and MONT CENIS, or via GERMANY and the BRENNER PASS.

For particulars, see "London to Alexandria," in the Alphabetical List of Steamers.

† Dine on board while waiting at Arona half an hour: no time to land: order beforehand.

[For those who wish to see more of Switzerland a pleasant alteration may be made by going from Paris to Lucerne at once, then by the early steamer from Lucerne as far as Hospenthal, near Andermatt, there leaving the diligence and walking across the Furka pass and the Rhone glacier, returning the next morning to Hospenthal in time to enter the diligence at half-past one, and go on to Bellinzona as before.]

6. OTHER ROUTES OUTWARD.

These are mostly to Trieste; from whence it is a few hours to Venice, and from that the steamers may be taken to Ancona and Brindisi.

1. London to Trieste, by Cologne, Dresden, and Vienna. This is a very lengthy journey, as it occupies five days sixteen hours. Fares: first class, £10 11s.; second class, £7 13s. 6d.; and third class, £5 13s. 10d. At Magdeburg the traveller can continue onward to Berlin, he can reach Vienna by rail, through Breslau, but the expense will be a little more than by the direct route.

2. By Ostend, Cologne, Frankfort, Ratisbon, the Danube, and Vienna, at the cost of £8 19s. 6d. for first class, £6 10s. 2d. 2nd class, and £5 8s. 9d. third class.

3. By Mayence, Frankfort, Ratisbon, Bruck, and Laibach.—London to Mayence, Railway and Steamboat, Mayence to Frankfort by rail, Frankfort to Ratisbon by rail, Ratisbon to Linz by steamer and diligence, Linz to Bruck by rail, Bruck to Laibach by rail, Laibach to Trieste by rail.; Cost: 1st class, £7 16s. 8d.; 2nd class, £6 7s. 8d.; 3rd class, £6 3s.

4. By Mannheim, Carlsruhe, Stuttgard, Augsburg, Munich, Salzburg, and Bruck.—Journey performed in 134½ hours. Cost: 1st class, £7 14s. 2d. 2nd class £6 3s. 6d.; 3rd class. £5 5s. 5d

5. By Ulm, Fussen, Innspruck, Botzen and Verona. The journey is made in about 140 hours, at the cost of £6 11s. 8d. 1st class, and £5 9s. 10d 2nd class.

6. By Bale, Lucerne, Milan, Verona, and Venice. Cost: 1st class, £6 19s. 4d.; 2nd class, £5 8s. 10d Time occupied, 127 hours.

7 By Amiens, Paris, Geneva, and Milan. Cost: 1st class, £11 2s. 2d.; 2nd class, £9 4s. 8d. Time, 121 hours.

8. By Paris, Strasburg, and Kehl, to Vienna, in 8 hours; thence as in Route 1.

9 Travellers anxious to enjoy the magnificent scenery between Vienna and Trieste, should proceed by the day train from Vienna to Gratz, where they should stop a short time and then proceed by day train to Adelsberg, to see the magnificent grotto close to the station.

ROUTES HOMEWARD.

1. Brindisi to Milan, Magenta, Novara, and Arona by rail; Arona to Brieg and Martigny by diligence over the Simplon; Martigny to Bouveret by rail Bouveret to Geneva by steamer or rail.

2. Milan to Como, by rail, in about two hours; thence by diligence to Lake of Lucerne, by the St. Gothard Pass, in 25 hours. Steamer in four hours down the Lake to Lucerne; thence to Bâle, by rail. From Bâle to Strasburg and Paris, by rail, in 12 hours.

3. Trieste, Vienna, Prague, Dresden, (to Berlin,) Halle, and Cassel, by rail. Cassel to Frankfort, Mannheim, Nancy, and Paris—or Cassel to Hamm, Dusseldorf, and Aix-la-Chapelle, by rail—thence to London by rail and steamer.

At Cologne, Vienna, Berlin, and Breslau, the stations of the North and South Railways are at opposite ends of the town. The conveyance thereto and from, as the case may be, will cost, including toll on the bridge, 8 silber groshen. The station porter will be found useful to travellers, and his services can be secured for 6d.; for this trifle he will attend to the luggage, see it weighed, marked, and bring the ticket, which must be produced before the baggage will be given up on arrival at the station to which it is booked.

From Brindisi, parties anxious to visit the Ionian Islands, Greece, Constantinople, Asia Minor, and Egypt, can do so at a comparatively small outlay from Ancona. Travellers from Greece and the Ionian Islands are admitted to free pratique. Those from the Levant and Greece are accompanied by health officers, and the quarantine is performed on the voyage, so that passengers can now proceed on shore immediately on arrival at Brindisi provided the vessel has a clean bill of health. Tickets are available on all the lines for two months; and travellers may land at any port on the line, provided they inform the captain of their intention, and afterwards can proceed on by the Company's next vessel

Travellers by Trieste or Brindisi should provide themselves with passports before starting; and if there is quarantine at Alexandria, should insist on being landed at the railway station, and going right through to Suez, and embarking at once.

For the Austrian Lloyd's Steamers to Alexandria and to other parts of the Levant, see the Alphabetical List of Steamers.

Passengers embarking on board, or landing from the Austrian Lloyd's steamers, who require a boat to themselves must pay 2s.; several passengers in one boat, pay each 8d.; families, 4s.; and luggage—viz., trunks, boxes, mattrasses, and portmanteaus, for each package, 2d.; hat-cases, carpet bags, &c., are free.

Port Said, at the Mediterranean end of the Suez Canal, to which the Southampton steamers of the P. & O. Co., the French Messageries, & others, proceed, is about 140 miles further east. See p. 680.

The traveller by Overland Rail no longer passes by Cairo, but follows a more direct route by Zagazig and Ismaila, (see pages, 294 and 681.) Previous to arrival, passengers on board the P. & O. Company's boats make up parties for the railway carriages across Egypt. The lists are handed to the purser, who communicates with the railway authorities; and, on reaching the station, passengers find carriages told off for them according to the lists made up They should take refreshments, especially where there are children, with them on the railways. The transit sometimes lasts 10 to 12 hours, with only one stoppage long enough for refreshments, often in the middle of night, or during a sandstorm, when it is impossible to leave the carriage.

Alexandria, the ancient capital of Lower Egypt, is situated on the Mediterranean, between the Lake Mæriotis and the Isle of Pharos. Few cities present more attractive features to the traveller than this. It is enclosed by walls of Saracenic structure, supposed to have been built by one of the successors of Saladin, in the 13th century. The original city was built by Alexander the Great soon after the fall of Tyre, about 333 B.C., and it realised the hopes of its founder, as, not long after its erection, it became the emporium, not only for merchandise, but also for all the arts and sciences of Greece. Strabo tells us that ancient Alexandria was 30 stadia in length from east to west, and 7 or 8 stadia even where narrowest. The circumference was 9 miles. Lake Mœriotis bathed its walls on the south, and the Mediterranean on the north. It was also intersected by straight parallel streets lengthways, and a free passage was left to the northern wind, which alone conveys coolness and salubrity into Egypt. At the gate near the sea, a street of 2,000 feet began and terminated at the gate of Canopos. This street was decorated with magnificent houses, temples, and buildings. Along its extensive range the eye was never tired of gazing on its marble, the porphyry and obelisks which at some future day were destined to embellish Rome and Constantinople. The great street, the handsomest in the world, was intersected by another of the same breadth, which formed a square of half a league in circumference at their junction. From the middle of this great place the two gates were to be seen at coup d'œil, as also vessels arriving under full sail from the north and south.

The Palace, which projected beyond the promontory of Lochras, occupied more than a quarter of the city. Each of the Ptolomies added to its magnificence. It contained within its enclosure the Museum, an Asylum for learned men, groves, and buildings worthy of royal majesty, and a Temple, in which was deposited the body of Alexander in a gold coffin. This beautiful monument was violated by the infamous Seleucus Cibyofactus, who carried off the gold coffin, putting a glass one in its place. Alexandria also extended along the northern bank of the lake, and in its eastern view embraced the Gymnasium, with its portico of more than 600 feet long, supported by several rows of marble pillars. Without the gate of the Canopos there was a spacious circuit for chariot races, whilst beyond that the suburb of Nicopolis stretched along the sea shore, and seemed a second Alexandria. A superb amphitheatre was built there, with a race-ground for the celebration of the Quinquenalia. Such is the description left us of Alexandria by the ancients, but, above all, by Strabo.

The architect employed by Alexander in the construction of this city was the celebrated Dinocratus, who acquired such great reputation by building the Temple of Diana at Ephesus. Ptolemy Soter, one of Alexander's captains, was the first to render this city populous. He was appointed Governor of Egypt soon after the death of the Macedonian monarch, assumed the title of King, and made Alexandria the royal residence, B.C 304 years. Ptolomy Philadelphus also added much to the embellishment and grandeur of Alexandria. In the first year of his reign, the celebrated watch-tower of Pharos was erected, which, when finished, was considered one of the wonders of the world. The tower was a large square structure of white marble, on the top of which fires were kept constantly burning, for the direction of sailors. The building cost, if Attic, 800 talents, or £165,000; if Alexandrian, twice that sum. A curious stratagem was resorted to by the architect of this tower to perpetuate his name in connection with it, and take all the glory to himself. Being ordered to engrave upon it the following inscription—"King Ptolemy, to the Gods the Saviours, for the benefit of Sailors"—instead of the king's name he substituted his own, and then filling up the hollow of the marble with mortar wrote upon it the above-mentioned inscription. In process of time, the mortar having fallen off, the following inscription appeared:—"Sostratus, the Cnidian, the son of Dexiphanus, to the Gods the Saviour of Sailors."

The Temple of Serapeum had within its vast the celebrated Alexandrian Library, containing 700,000 volumes. In collecting books for this library the following plan was adopted, viz., to seize all those which were brought into Egypt by Greeks or other foreigners. The books were transcribed by persons appointed for that purpose. The copies were then handed back to the proprietors, and the original laid up in the library. The works of Sophocles, Euripides, and Æschylus, were borrowed from the Athenians by Ptolemy Euergetus, who returned them the copies transcribed in as beautiful a manner as possible, presenting them at the same time with £30,000 for the exchange.

This city, like all others of note in the early ages, was often the scene of terrible massacres. About 141 years before Christ, it was all but destroyed by Ptolomy Physcon. At this epoch nearly all the learned men fled to Greece, Asia Minor, and to the Islands of the Archipelago, where they revived learning, and the arts. From this period the fortunes of Alexandria were dimmed by feuds and scenes of carnage, until taken by Amron, who, astonished at the richness and grandeur of the city, wrote to the Caliph:—"I have taken the City of the West. It is of immense extent; I cannot describe to you how many houses it contains. There are 4,000 palaces, 4,000 baths, 12,000 dealers in fresh oil, 40,000 Jews who pay tribute, and 400 theatres or places of amusement." From this period until the year 924 the city remained subject to the Caliphs, and then fell into the hands of the Magrebians. The chief thing which contributed to raise Alexandria to the pitch of extraordinary splendour which it enjoyed for so long a period, was its being the centre of commerce between the Eastern and Western world. And, though the revolutions which occurred in the government of Egypt, after it fell into the hands of the Mahometans, frequently affected this city to a very great extent, yet the excellence of its port, and the innumerable conveniences resulting from the East India trade to the different Governors of Egypt, preserved it from total destruction when in the hands of the most barbarous nations; and in the thirteenth century, when the European nations began to acquire a taste for the elegancies of life, the old mart of Alexandria again revived, and its port became celebrated once more as the centre of commerce. But its ancient greatness declined after 1498, when it became subject to the Turks, when a passage was discovered round the Cape of Good Hope by the Portuguese in that year. In the ruins of ancient lexandria we behold a total wreck of vast grandeur, and the desolation which spreads around hows the utter fallacy of human greatness. Among the events of its later history are the invasion of Egypt by Bonaparte, and Nelson's battle of he Nile, in 1798, the victory and death of Sir R. bercrombie. 1801, and the reign of Mehemet Ali; s modern reviver, who recognised its admirable osition, and saw what might be made of the place. or 20 years his iron will was directed to make a great commercial emporium. He cut a canal t a terrible loss of life, which brought all the ommerce of Egypt to the doors of Alexandria. he Mediterranean basins were cleared out, and he defences of the place greatly strengthened. he Arsenal, planned by Mr. Cerisy, in 1829, was ompleted 1833, and a fleet was soon after created, s if by magic. The neighbourhood of the town, vhich was simply the desert, has been refreshed rith water conduits, and covered with gardens.

Great improvements have taken place in the nterior of the town. The Turkish quarter has een drained and made healthy, and the Frank uarter, lately an unsightly heap of rubbish, is ow quite an ornament to the town. It has a long treet, offering large, handsome shops, a square of egular shape, flanked with handsome houses; nany of the most conspicuous being occupied by he great European consuls. This Frank quarter as quite a European character, including printng offices, reading-rooms, Paris tailors and fashons, Austrian ironmongery, and the luxurious abits of the rich merchants of the West.

ALEXANDRIA MODERN.—The present city stands n a peninsula, situated between the two ports; and lthough a few years ago it presented little more han half-ruined houses and piles of rubbish, with the emains of a few magnificent edifices; still, at the resent time it is gradually assuming the appearnce of a large populous city, many of its streets re wide, clean, and lined with rows of handsome ouses. The commerce of Alexandria is still most xtensive, as all the exports from and imports to gypt pass through. The English and other Foreign overnments have Consuls at Alexandria, and there re several eminent Greek as well as British merantile houses established there. There are also everal wealthy Jewish merchants. The growth f cotton has added considerable importance to lexandria; as also the naval expeditions equipped ere by the Pacha. It has two ports, viz.: the old and he new one; the former of which is the best. The ew one being clogged with sand; and in stormy eather vessels are subject to bilge: the bottom ing rocky, the cable soon breaks, so that one essel dashes against another, and many are lost. fatal instance of this occurred many years ago, hen forty-two vessels were dashed to pieces on he Mole, in a gale of wind from the north-west; nce which numbers have been wrecked there.

The country about Alexandria is completely estitute of water, excepting that which is brought om the Nile by a canal of twelve leagues, every ear, at the time of the inundation. Vaults and eservoirs are dug under the ancient city to reeive the supply which must last until the next year ome parts of the old wall are yet standing, and are flanked with large towers about 200 paces distant one from the other; below are magnificent casements, which serve as galleries to walk in. The lower part of the towers contains a large square hall, the roof of which rests on thick columns of Thebac stone; and above this are several rooms, over which are platforms more than twenty paces square. The reservoirs are vaulted with much art; and though 2000 years have rolled by since their construction, they are still perfect. Only a few porphyry pillars and the front portico of Cæsar's palace remain; but they appear very beautiful. The palace of Cleopatra was built upon the walls facing the port, having a gallery on the outside supported by several fine columns.

Not far from the palace is an obelisk, commonly called Cleopatra's Needle, 60 feet high, of Thebac stone, and covered with hieroglyphics, in three columns on each of its four faces, which are about 7 ft. each way. An obelisk presented by Mehemet Ali to England, but not considered worth the expense of removal, now lies buried 4 feet under ground, with a prospect of being built over. The Pillar of Luxor, which matched it, was given to France, and is now in the Place du Carrousel, at Paris. Near the gates of Rosetta are five columns of marble, on the place formerly occupied by the porticos of the Gymnasium. The barbarism of the Turks has since destroyed the remainder of the colonnade. But the chief object of attention is Pompey's Pillar, situated about a quarter of a league from the southern gate: it is built of red granite: the capital, which is Corinthian with palm leaves, and not indented, is nine feet high; the shaft and upper member of the base are of one piece, of nearly ninety feet long, and nine feet in diameter. The base is a square of about fifteen feet on each side. This block of marble, sixty feet in circumference, rests on two layers of stones bound together with lead, but which has not prevented the Arabs from forcing out several stones to seek for imaginary treasure. The entire column, 114 feet high, is beautifully polished, but shivered a little at one side. Nothing can equal the majesty of this monument. Seen at a distance, it overtops the town, and serves as a signal for ships.

The beauty of the capital, the height of the shaft, or the extraordinary symplicity of the pedestal excites unbounded admiration. The column was considered inaccessible until within the last half century, when, in a wild frolic, a party of English sailors, conceiving the project of emptying a bowl of punch on the top of it, scaled it by means of a rope. It has since been rendered more accessible. Dr. Madden mentions an English lady who breakfasted and wrote a letter on the top of it. Much research and fruitless study have been expended in attempting to discover in whose honour the pillar was erected. Denon on this subject expresses himself thus:—"After having observed that the column is very chaste both in style and execution; that the pedestal and capital are not formed of the same granite as the shaft; that their workmanship is heavy, and appears to be merely a rough draught, and that the foundations, made up of fragments, indicate a modern construction—it may be concluded this monument is not antique, as that it may have been erected either in the time of the Greek emperors or of the caliphs, since if the capital and pedestal are of sufficiently good workmanship to belong to the former of these periods, they are not so perfect but that art may have reached so far in the latter." The catacombs are also worth a visit. They begin at the extremity of the old city and extend some distance along the coast, forming the Necropolis, or City of the Dead. The excavation is from 30 to 40 feet wide, 200 feet long, and 25 feet deep, and is terminated by gentle declivities at each end. One of these openings can be easily entered. Within there are no mummies; but the places which they occupied, and the order in which they were ranged, is still to be seen. Niches 20 inches square, sunk six feet horizontally, narrowed at the bottom, and separated from each other by partitions in the rock seven or eight inches thick, divides into checkers the two walls of this subterranean vault.

SUEZ CANAL.

This great work was first projected by Baron Lesseps, who held a diplomatic post in the country, in 1854, when he first opened the scheme to the late Viceroy, Mehemet Said. A firman having been obtained from the Sultan, and a concession granted by the Pacha, 1856, the works were commenced in 1859, by "La Compagnie Universelle du Canal Maritime de Suez," constituted in France, where the principal part of the capital was subscribed in 500 franc shares.

It was opened in state, 17th November, 1869, by a procession of English and foreign steamers, in presence of the Khédive, the Empress Eugénie, Emperor of Austria, the Crown Prince of Prussia, and other personages. On the 20th, the "Brazilian" went through, a ship of 1,809 tons, 380 feet long, 40 feet broad, drawing 17½ to 20½ feet of water. From that time passages have been made almost daily, chiefly by British vessels, as recorded in the Isthme de Suez, French newspaper. The armour-plated turret ship "Magdala" passed through in January, 1871, on her way to Bombay. The distance this way from England to India is 6,500 miles, against 11,000 round the Cape.

The allowed rate for steamers is five to six knots an hour. It will not do for paddle wheel boats or long ships; and the sand storms and excessive evaporation to which it is liable, are among the weak points demanding constant attention. Sidings, called gares in French, are provided here and there for meeting ships. A telegraph wire runs through from Port Said to Suez, following the rail and Sweet Water Canal along the second half, between Ismailia and Suez. The Red Sea tide, which rises five to six feet at Suez, is felt up to the Bitter Lakes; and the Mediterranean tide to Kantara.

Ships of 3,000 to 4,000 tons, drawing nearly 22 feet of water, go through in 12 to 13 hours. In the first ten months of 1872, 587 ships went through, being more than in all the four half-years preceding. Toll is now levied on the net instead of the gross tonnage. The receipts in May, 1873 went up to £83,440, against £13,219 in May, 1872. They are now considerably lower.

The Isthmus, at its narrowest part, where traversed by the Canal, is 72 miles wide, by a straight line from Pelusium in the Mediterranean, to Suez in the Red Sea. The level of the two seas is nearly the same, the Red Sea being only six inches higher at a mean level than the Mediterranean.

The Canal, according to the Admiralty survey, made in 1870, is 86 geographical miles long (about 100 English miles) from Port Said Light to the lights at Suez, and consists of about one-fourth canal, artificially made, while the rest runs through natural lakes lying in the hollows, chiefly the Bitter Lakes and the Lake Timsah, which, though shallow, are sufficiently deep to be taken to account. The canal cutting is, or is intended to be, 327 feet wide at the surface of the water, 72 wide at the bottom, and 26 feet deep. Where the cuttings are hard and costly, the surface width is reduced to 196 feet. About one third of the whole is embanked, the rest being at or below sea level. It begins at Port Said—18 miles west of Pelusium, 140 miles from Alexandria, and 12 hours from Jaffa, in Palestine.

H. B. M.'s Consul.—C. Perceval, Esq.

A modern town, named after the late Viceroy, containing 10,000 inhabitants, laid out in regular streets, and standing on a platform made by stuff excavated from the canal. It has a quay, basin of 137 acres, and dry dock, 440 feet long, for shipping, outside which is the Port, or roadstead. This lies between two breakwaters, or moles, running out from the land, the western one 7,000 feet long, the eastern 6,000 ft. The western one slopes towards the eastern, so much so, that while their shore ends are 4,600 feet apart, the sea ends are only 2,300 feet. They are 17 feet wide at the top, and are composed of blocks of artificial concrete of sand, mud, clay, lime (in proportion of 1 to 4 of sand), and salt water. The port is to have a uniform depth of 30 feet, by means of steam dredges, consuming about 1,000 tons of coal per week. The lighthouse, with its electric light, is 180 feet high.

Ismailia is a sort of half-way capital between the two seas, 44 geographical miles from Port Said—54 miles from Suez; named after the present Viceroy, and forming the central depôt of the company's works with a mosque, church, banks, hotels and cafés, theatre, bazaar, hospital, avenues and square, offices and dockyard, and central railway station. Here the Sweet or Fresh Water Canal from Zagazig (a sort of New River) falls in, a necessary work, 40 feet deep, opened 1862, before the ship canal was made, to supply drinking water along the line. It turns off south to Suez, to supply that place with water, and sends branch pipes to Port Said on the north. It is also used by small sailing craft and for irrigation.

The Overland Railway between Alexandria, Zagazig, Ismailia, and Suez, is now open by the direct route, avoiding Cairo. The distance is 130 miles to Cairo, and 90 miles from Cairo to Suez. It is the sole property of the government for the time being. The time occupied between Alexandria and Suez is about twelve hours. For Fares and Departures, see page 294.

The engineers and drivers with the overland passengers are all English, under agreement between the Viceroy and the Peninsular and Oriental Co. Most of the others are Arabs. The road to Cairo was laid by Robert Stephenson, on iron sleepers, and is considered much smoother than any in Europe.

Passengers should take as few packages or articles with them on their route as possible, as they are solely responsible for such which should be kept under their own personal charge; but parties who intend stopping at Cairo are requested to give notice of their intention to the agents at Suez and Cairo, and deliver to both a list of their packages, that the necessary assistance may be given for the separation of their luggage. On landing from any steamer, or embarking therein, First Class Passengers pay 1s., and Children and servants 6d. Parties are to embark only from the transit wharf.

Omnibuses are provided at the expense of the transit administration to and from the landing places and the hotel, and the hotel and railway at Alexandria. These conveyances will leave the hotels half an hour before the appointed time of starting. The donkeys are fine and spirited animals.

The best place for a sojourner in Alexandria to stop at is Ramleh. This is a collection of suburban villages, from 3 to 5 miles from the city, reached by an English railway. The hotel is closed. Ramleh in summer time is cool at night, and tolerably free from mosquitos.

BARRISTER.—E. W. J. Tinney, Esq., Boulevard de Ramle.

MONEY.—The lowest value of £1 now is 195 piastres current, in silver — 97 20-40th Egyptian piastres tariff, and 1s. — 9 piastres current; Gold is higher in value in proportion to silver. 1 Napoleon — 154 piastres current. 1 franc — 7 piastres current.

Passengers from India proceeding to Europe by the Austrian Lloyd's steamers must separate their luggage from that of the booked-through passengers on its arrival at Alexandria, otherwise it will go on to Southampton.

The departure of the Austrian Lloyd's direct steamers from Alexandria for Trieste altogether depends on the arrivals of the mail packets at Suez. They generally leave for Trieste in a few hours after the arrival of the mails and passengers at Alexandria.

There are three lines of steamers to Syria and the Levant, Constantinople and the Black Sea. By the Russian steamers the fare from Egypt to Constantinople, touching at twelve places on the Syrian coast and in the Levant, is £16, the voyage occupying about 13 days. There are also Austrian and French boats, both of which have fixed times for sailing, while the Russian are uncertain.

English or Dutch subjects proceeding from India, China, or Java, viâ Trieste, to England or Holland, should obtain a passport from their respective Governments, and obtain the visés of the Austrian Consul either at Bombay, Madras, Calcutta, Ceylon, China, Singapore, Batavia, or as the case may be.

Cairo is the head-quarters for tourists in Egypt, as being the point of departure for the Nile as well as for the Desert journey. The traveller will provide himself with a boat and all the necessaries for his voyage better at Cairo than in Alexandria, besides saving the hire and expenses of his boat for at least half a month, the time employed between Alexandria and Cairo, with scarcely a single object of interest on that part of the voyage. Wines and provisions for the Nile or the Desert will be as well provided in Cairo as in London. There is an Italian warehouse and biscuit bakery kept by Mr. Ablitt, where the English traveller will find as great a variety of condiments as he can reasonably desire.

The Bazaars are more picturesque than those of Constantinople. Cairo being the emporium for the Mediterranean, the Red Sea, India, and the Desert; its bazaars are rich in the produce of Europe, Asia, and Africa. Steam and caravans supply them with the gold and silk tissues of Damascus, the treasures of Bombay and India, the ivory, ostrich plumes, and slaves of Abyssinia, Darfour, Nubia, &c.

The native Baths are worth a visit The Cairo baths are like the well-known Turkish baths and are thought very useful as a remedial agent At hand is the frank Bazaar presenting every imaginable convenience in clothing, &c., for overland travellers.

Cairo, the capital of Egypt, is situated in a plain at the foot of a mountain, in long. 32° E., lat. 30° N. It is entered by a pretty good road, and has a very imposing appearance. Jawhar, a Moggrebin general, founded it in the middle of the 10th century, and named it "Alkahira," or the victorious. It soon became the residence of the Caliphs, and, consequently, the capital of that country. It contains 240 principal streets, 46 public squares, 11 bazaars, 140 schools, 300 public cisterns, 1,166 coffee houses, 65 public baths, 400 mosques, and one hospital for the bad and infirm. English hotels and lodging houses are established at Cairo. English medical men are also practising here. It is divided into the old and new cities. The new city is about 2½ miles from the old one, on the same side of the river. The citadel, rising above the lofty buildings, appears to issue forth from a grove of the richest foliage, and presents a most imposing appearance. The city should be viewed from it. The streets are narrow and unpaved, and the houses are gloomy. Each street has a gate, which is closed at nightfall. The number of inhabitants is about 350,000, though some travellers estimate it at 400,000. A canal, called Khalis, flows along the city from one end to the other, with houses on both sides. In its progress it forms very many small lakes, called berks, the principal of which lies in the great square near the castle. On its banks are built the most beautiful houses in the city, but, being dependent for its supply of water on the inundation of the Nile, it is dry for several months in the year, and covered with beautiful verdure. In the water season the barges and barks of the aristocracy may be seen constantly gliding up and down on its surface, especially in the evenings, when curious fireworks and a variety of music enliven the scene. Stone walls and handsome battlements, with very fine towers at every hundred paces, surround the modern city of Cairo, which is badly defended. The citade , or fortified Palace, erected by Saladin in the 12th century, was the only place of defence in the city, and yet the Turks let it fall into ruin, until it was thoroughly repaired, not long since, by the Pacha. Within the precincts are a cannon foundry, a printing press, a fine mosque the mint, Joseph's Well (mentioned below), and the gate memorable for the slaughter of the Mamelukes. Its principal apartment was a magnificent hall, environed with twelve columns of granite, of prodigious height and thickness, brought from the ruins of Alexandria. These sustained an open dome, under which Saladin distributed justice to his subjects. A magnificent view of the city, and above 10 miles along the Nile, including the ruins of Old Cairo, the suburbs of Boulac, and Djiah, site of Memphis, great Pyramids, Obelisk of Heliopolis, ruins of Matarych, Pyramids of Sakara, and the "Eternal Nile," is obtained from this palace. The Khédivé does not now reside there, but at Choubra Palace, outside. A Military College, and other institutions, have been founded lately, with the view and for the purpose of introducing European arts and improvements. In the city here are about 300 Mosques, some of which have six minarets, and are adorned with beautiful granite columns, brought from Heliopolis and Memphis. About 20 deserve notice as works of art. The largest mosque is that of El Azhar, standing in the centre of the city. The next in size is that of Sultan Hassan, in the Roumeyleh square, the finest structure in modern Egypt, and extremely light and elegant. It is built in the form of a parallelogram, and has a deep frieze running round all the wall, adorned with Gothic and Arabesque sculpture. Some of the others which are most remarkable are the Moualed, Kalaoun, and Kaïbaï mosques. In the desert behind the citadel is an extensive Necropolis, in which there are many splendid tombs, including a magnificent one built by the Pacha for his family, adorned with five spacious domes. There are several Khans and Caravanseries. These are in general several stories high, and are always full of people and merchandise. Cairo being the centre of the trade with the interior of Africa, and having caravans departing at intervals from it for Fezzan, Darfur, and other quarters.

Joseph's Well will also interest: it is situated in the fortified palace, and is said to have been made by King Mohammed, or Saladin, 700 years ago, because the Egyptians attribute every thing to this remarkable character. The well is cut in a rock, and is 280 feet deep. The water is drawn to the top by means of oxen, placed on platforms at proper distances, which turn about the machine that raises it.

Old Cairo.—Here is the Mosque of Amrou, the oldest and most venerated in Cairo, having a square gallery, supported by 200 marble columns. There is very little else to interest or amuse, except the Granaries of Joseph, which, as subject of special notice in the pages of Holy Writ, must deeply interest the Christian traveller. In it we also find a pretty church, used by the Christians and Copts, the latter being the original inhabitants of Egypt. At Old Cairo there are two distinct and separate Cemeteries for Roman Catholics and Protestants, both are in a very quiet situation, and very nicely kept, in the latter are several monuments to Indian officers, who have found a last resting-place here on their way home.

The apartment, called the Nileometer, built over against Old Cairo and above the river is worth notice: it admits the water, and a column, with lines at a distance of every inch, marks every two feet as far as thirty in its periodical rising.

Sights in the Neighbourhood.—These are Choubra Palace, the Gardens of Rhoda Island, and the Nileometer, the Tombs of the Caliphs, the Cemetery of the Mamelukes, Burkhardt's Grave, the Petrified Forest, Toura Quarries, the sites of Memphis and Heliopolis, and the Pyramids.

Should the traveller prolong his stay at Cairo for some days, and visit the Pyramids, he is recommended to take with him a guide and a supply of provisions and candles. In returning, he can visit the Isle of Rhoda and the Nileometer; Sakhara and the site of Memphis will require another day. The other objects worth seeing are the Mosques. The Egyptian Museum, under the direction of Mariette Bey, is one of the finest Egyptian Museums in the world, and particularly rich in Jewellery. Choubra, or Shoubra Palace (one hour's distance), where the Khédivé resides, is a magnificent structure, with a marble kiosk, or pavilion, 200 feet by 200 feet, adorned with mirrors, divans, etc., in the Oriental style. The stud is near the Palace. The Cemetery of the Mamelukes is the finest burial place in Egypt: it is not far from the city, and on the way of the Desert: the tombs present various forms, some of them being magnificent, having domes supported by finely carved transparent marble columns. At the distance of a mile, in another direction, in a bare sandy valley, are the Tombs of the Caliphs; they are beautiful structures, being of the light and elegant style of the Saracenic architecture, and have some exquisitely worked domes and minarets. On the edge of the Desert, (which he was attempting to explore,) is Burkhardt's grave, under a small tombstone scarcely discernible.

Memphis, it will be remembered, was taken and sacked by Cambyses, the Persian king; it was afterwards visited by Alexander the Great, previous to the foundation of Alexandria. The final ruin of Memphis was accomplished by the Arabs, who used up its materials in building Old Cairo in 638.

Heliopolis (3 hours' ride), or the City of the Sun—the oldest, perhaps, in this land of antiquities—was a sort of sacerdotal and university town, where Herodotus sought the wisest men in Egypt. Here the illustrious Plato is said to have graduated. Strabo says that they pointed out the house where he resided then. It was here also that lived Potiphar, who bought Joseph the patriarch. It consisted for the most part of temples and colleges. Nothing, however, of these now remain but a few isolated mounds, and one solitary Obelisk said to have been erected by the Pharoah mentioned in the history of Joseph. They show, at the village of Matarych, a spot where the Virgin, St. Joseph and the infant Jesus stopped; including a source under a sycamore (half dried up and withered), in which the holy mother is said to have washed her Divine infant's linen. The very Musulmans view the spot with the greatest respect.

A league from the Tombs of the Caliphs, on the old Suez caravan road, is a hill covered with the relics of a Petrified Forest, palms, olives, sycamores, &c. This phenomenon deserves notice.

To reach the Pyramids you can take some of the young asses that abound at Cairo, fiery and swift like the wild ass of Arabia described by Job. Ladies may prefer to drive, which can easily be done, as a bridge of boats now connects the two banks of the Nile. The drive to the Pyramids and back is 20 fr., with a small backasheesh of 2 fr. to the sais or footman. The road passes the decayed town of Fostat, the granaries of Joseph, seven Towers supposed to be connected with the patriarch and the years of famine, near the Rhoda Island on the Nile, with the Metyas or Nilometer of Sultan Ommiad Suleyman; and after 4 hours you reach the foot of the Pyramids. A magic charm surrounds them when seen from Cairo. As you draw near they look smaller, which diminution results perhaps from optical effect. Arrived at their base they once more astound you by their proportions, and you remain full of admiration at those immense blocks poised in the air higher than the cross of Strasbourg cathedral. The pyramid of Cheops employed 100,000 men the space of two years only to erect it as a tomb. Even the study of its bibliography is curious. From the days of Herodotus to Napoleon it has occupied the pens of genius to describe it. Herodotus attempts to give a description of the manner in which its stones 2 to 3 feet thick and 6 to 7 long were raised and smoothed. Napoleon at St. Helena wrote:—"This pyramid contains a million one hundred and twenty-eight thousand cubic fathoms, and sufficient stones to make a wall 4 fathoms high and 563 leagues long, extending from the Red Sea at Suez to Raphia in Syria." Many active persons can scale the pyramids in 5 minutes, scaling 283 steps. The view from the summit includes the Nile, the minarets of Cairo, the plain where the French defeated the Mamelukes, the site of Memphis, the great African desert, and a multitude of tombs stretched all around, including Chepheenes' Pyramid explored by Belzoni, and a third Pyramid.

Cairo to Palestine. A new route little known has been quite recently pointed out leading from Cairo to Palestine. For the benefit of those who may desire to take this route, it will be proper to add that it is the most direct communication to Syria, and enables the traveller not only to see the works of the Suez Canal but saves the ride back to Alexandria, and a long voyage by sea. There is now a regular line of passenger boats, which go by night in about 12 hours to Ismailia. At Ismailia as at Suez there is a comfortable hotel where passengers can remain over night, and take steamer next day for Port Said. By the regular communications it only occupies two days' time from Suez to Port Said, and at this place a small hotel is established for the convenience of persons awaiting steamer for Jaffa. There is never much delay in finding steamers at this point, as it is a regular stopping place for the steamers of the principal lines. The time occupied in traversing the distance between Port Said and Jaffa is twenty-four hours. Referring to the passage from Suez to Ismailia, boats can be chartered for the trip at higher rates than the usual fare, and by such an arrangement the traveller is enabled to make the journey by day instead of by night, thus enabling him to see more of the country.

Suez.—Stat—Pop. (1871) 13,625.

English and French houses, offices, and warehouses have been erected in every direction, and the bazaars are assuming a respectable appearance. This is owing to the works for the Suez Canal, and to the Fresh Water Canal, as well as the enormously increasing traffic of the Peninsular and Oriental Company overland. See page 688 for the Suez Canal.

ENGLISH CONSUL—G. West, Esq. AMERICAN VICE-CONSUL—T. Smith, Esq.

HOTEL AT SUEZ.—There is an excellent hotel kept by Mr Schembrel, a Maltese, under the patronage of the Peninsular and Oriental Co. The wines, spirits, bottled ales, &c., are supplied by the Company from their Steamers, and sold at about English prices.

The HOTEL DE SUEZ, the largest and best situated, is generally overcrowded, and the proprietor perhaps too much occupied in superintending the sales in a bazaar attached to the hotel.

MINISTER—Rev. T. Forbes, M.A., Church of Scotland.

The Red Sea.—At the head of this sea lies Suez. It is 1200 miles in length, and not more than 200 miles broad, in some parts not more than 30, being comparatively a long narrow sea. The coral reefs with which the channel abounds are very beautiful in appearance, though extremely dangerous to sailing vessels, but not so to steamers which keep the middle of the sea.

On the east side of the head of the Red Sea there is one opening, and only one, through which Mount Sinai may be seen.

Payments for transit fares, overweight aggage, &c., must be made in English gold, Egyptian piastres, Spanish or Austrian dollars, Napoleons or five-franc pieces, at the government rate of exchange. (See Bradshaw's Overland Guide, page 96.) English bank notes will not be received.

Aden, a seaport of Arabia, called "The Gibraltar of the East." It was ceded to the East India Company after the unsuccessful treaty for Socrota, and has since been a scene of warfare. Here the steamer puts in for coal; during the shipping of which the voyagers have an opportunity of surveying the curious places about, and of refreshing themselves at the Hotel, where capital mutton and fruit are generally obtained. Leaving this station, they sail through a portion of the Gulf of Aden into the Indian Ocean.

Bombay—(from Bom Bya)—Pop. 686,000—Fortnum—Esplanade Hotel; Byculla Hotel; Adelphi Hotel, comfortable. An island city connected by a causeway with the Island of Salsette and the mainland. It came into the hands of the English by the marriage of Charles II. with Catharine of Portugal, and was made over to the East India Company in 1668, at which time it became the seat of government of all their possessions on the west side of Hindostan, which was previously at Surat. Bombay is now one of the three Presidencies by which our Oriental territories are governed. In conjunction with the adjacent islands of Colaba, Salsette, Butcher's Island, Elephanta, and Caranjah, it makes a commodious and well sheltered harbour. It contains a spacious fortress, dockyard, and marine arsenal. The best and finest merchant ships are built here of teak, which is brought from the neighbouring countries, being found more durable than the best English oak. The country in the vicinity is well wooded; good water now obtained from the Vehar Lake, is sufficiently plentiful; cocoa nuts abound; and the markets of which the Arthur Crawford market erected 1869, is the principal, are well supplied with meat fish, and fruit.

The town and suburbs of Bombay, continuously built over, are 6 miles in length from Colaba Light House to Malabar Point. The new public buildings, the Secretariat Post Office, etc, are of very low appearance; and others are in course of construction, notably a Palace of Justice, to accommodate the High Court, the Court of Small Causes, and the Police Magistrate. There are two gates towards the sea, which have commodious wharfs and cranes built out from each, with a landing-place for passengers. Bombay Castle—a regular quadrangle, of hard and durable stone, having the advantage, in one of the bastions, of a large reservoir of water—is situated between these gates. The old town was fortified by the Portuguese on Vauban's first system; but for the sake of ventilation, the walls were razed by Sir B. Frere's government, in 1865. The harbour is completely commanded by a range of batteries. Many large and beautifully-built houses are centered in the space called the Green. The Protestant Cathedral is an imposing building, and has lately been restored and enlarged. There are also Protestant Churches at Colaba and Byculla.

The Catholic Cathedral is a large building at Girgaum; there are besides several Catholic Churches and a Presbyterian Church; and on the left of the Green is the Government House, presenting a very showy appearance; and the Bazaar, which is crowded and populous, is on the right. The native merchants' houses of business are situated here. Its commerce is now enormous, exceeding that of Calcutta and Madras. It carries on a valuable trade with the countries situated in the Arabian and Persian gulfs, the western coast of India, its eastern parts, and the islands in the eastern ocean; and an immense opium and wool trade with China, from which Government derives a large revenue. It enjoys a considerable trade with Europe, and different parts of America. The inhabitants are composed of persons from almost every Asiatic nation.

Bombay was until lately the head quarters of the Indian navy; that force has been abolished, and the Imperial fleets are now charged with the protection of Indian trade. The Bombay army consists of about 20,000 Sepoys, and five thousand or more British soldiers, scattered over the Presidency, from Jacobabad to Belgaum. The Bombay High Court of Judicature consists of a Chief Justice, and five Puisne Justices selected from the District Bench and the English Bar. Original jurisdiction, civil and criminal, is exercised throughout the Presidency by District and Session Judges of whom there are twelve. Subordinate to them there are local Courts and District Magistrates. The climate of Bombay is healthy, and not very hot from June to March. The Government of Bombay is vested in a Governor (1871, Sir Philip Wodehouse, K.C.B.), and three Members of Council, the Commander-in-Chief and two Members of the Covenanted Civil Service. There is also a Council for local legislation, subject to the veto of the Viceroy in Council.

The travelling distance from Bombay to Calcutta is 1,300 miles; to Delhi, 965; to Hyderabad, 480; to Madras, 770; to Poonah, 90; to Seringapatam, 620; and to Surat, 177 miles.

Ceylon.—An island of the Indian ocean, lying off the S.W. coast of the promontory of Hindostan, from which it is separated by the Gulf of Manaar and Palk's Strait. Its early history is involved in obscurity; but it is supposed to be the Taprobane referred to by Strabo, Pomponius, Mela, and Pliny. Little was known of Ceylon beyond its existence as an island, until it was visited by the Portuguese after the discovery of the passage by the Cape of Good Hope. The Dutch expelled the Portuguese, and possessed themselves of the entire circuit of the coast for ten or twenty miles from the sea, and the whole of the north part of the island, confining the dominion of the King of Candy entirely to the interior. In 1815 the British marched in with an armed force, and, after deposing the king, incorporated the whole island as a part of the British dominions.

Galle.—A sea-port and coaling station of the P. & O. Company, where steamers to and from Australia, China, Calcutta, and Madras, touch en route.

There is a spacious, airy, and well conducted Hotel here belonging to the Oriental Hotel Company, and is under the Management of Mr. Barker and his wife, who are always found most attentive to visitors. Should the traveller find all the rooms taken—a by no means rare occurrence—there are several other hotels which afford very fair accommodation.

The approach to the island on the outward voyage—after leaving the cinder heap called Aden—is exquisitely pleasing. In no part of the world is a more luxuriant vegetation to be found. Eight or ten steamers belonging to the different companies, may often be seen here from the ramparts There is a charming drive of six miles to Wakwelle; from the bungalow of which a very good idea of the scenery and farming may be had. The valley is devoted to the cultivation of padda, while the hill-sides are covered with cinnamon, nutmeg, coffee, and Ceylon tree par excellence, or cocoa nut.

At Galle you may see the Cingalese with his comb, flowing hair, and combo y or white petticoat; the Tamil in turban and breech-cloth; and the Moorman, like the Cingalese, but clean shaved, with conical basket hat and long-pointed shoes. For the Veddahs, the real men of the woods, a long jungle trip must be undertaken. Quantities of sham precious stones are offered for sale by the Moormen; with ivory, ebony, porcupine quill, and other work. The pearl fisheries in the Gulf of Manaar have ceased to yield a revenue to government.

A fortnight may be well spent in Ceylon. To Colombo by coach in ten hours for 45s., halting for tiffin, when raw oysters are to be avoided: it is mostly through groves of cocoa nuts and the cinnamon gardens, first planted by the Portuguese. There is nothing to keep one at Colombo; the Dutch fortifications are levelled. From Colombo to Kandy, the capital of the old kings of Kandy, 2000 ft. above sea level, 72 miles; the last twelve up an incline of extreme beauty. Here is the Temple containing the sacred tooth of Buddha; with the botanical gardens, and the fine specimens of talipat palm It grows straight and tall, as large as the mast of a ship; a single leaf will cover fifteen men: when dried they fold up like a fan; every soldier carries one to serve for a tent. Kandy to Nuwera Eliya, 47 miles, through the best coffee districts in the island, and up the steep and grand Pass of Rangbodde, 16 miles long. Nuwera Eliya is the Island Sanitarium, 6000 feet abovet he sea. Pedrotallagalla, the highest point n the island, is seen to the N.E. 8200 feet above the sea.

Calcutta is the capital of Bengal, the seat of the Indian Government, and residence of the Governor-General of the British dominions in the East Indies. It is situated upon the river Hoogly, which forms the western channel of the Ganges, and is one of the principal of its numerous branches navigable for large vessels. The name is derived from Kalè, a goddess, and Cuttah, a temple, dedicated by the Hindoos to Caly, the goddess of time, situate between the villages of Chultanuttty and Goburdpore, where the agents of the English East India Co.'s Service, in 1680, obtained permission of the Emperor Aurungzebe to establish a trading factory, which, in consequence of the disturbed state of the Province of Bengal, they were allowed to fortify in 1690. The town is about 100 miles from the mouth of the river, the navigation of which is difficult, and very often dangerous, it being filled with numerous sand-banks, constantly shifting their position. From the mouth of the Hooghly to Diamond Harbour the scenery on both sides of the river is thickly wooded.

As we advance up the river the shipping and boats on the river increase, and the beautiful country-seats on its banks announce the approach to the capital. The town and suburbs extend about six miles up along the left bank of the river. An immense square is in the middle, which, together with the adjacent buildings, forms what is properly called the town of Calcutta. The intermediate space is the Esplanade. The Citadel of Fort William is the most regular fortress in India, but would require 10,000 men with 600 pieces of cannon to defend it. It was erected by Lord Clive, in 1757, immediately after the battle of Plassey. The Government House, the largest and most beautiful edifice in the town, was built by the Marquis of Wellesley, on the west of the Esplanade. In it the Governor-General resides, and here the Government business is transacted. The other public buildings are the Town House, Hall of Justice, Hospital, and Jail, (all of which are within the esplanade); two English, Portuguese, Greek, and Armenian churches, together with several small Hindoo pagodas, Mahommedan mosques, Sikh temple, &c. &c.

For a select list of works on India, the traveller referred to "Bradshaw's Overland Guide."

CHURCH SERVICE, in the new Church at Porte d'Isly. Chaplain, Rev. J. Gnisburg. Service at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. every Sunday.

ENGLISH PHYSICIANS—Drs. Playfair, Evans, and Tothill. Drs. Evans and Playfair have apartments in the town; Dr. Tothill has a villa at Mustapha Supérieur.

HOUSE AND GENERAL AGENT.—Mr. W. P. Vaughan, Rue des Trois Couleurs. THEATRE, rood. Several Music Halls. A Band every Thursday and Sunday, Place du Gouvernement.

POST AND TELEGRAPH OFFICE.—Place de la République. Letters received every Monday, Thursday, and Saturday. Letters despatched to France and England every Tuesday, at 6 p.m.; Wednesday, at noon; Thursday, at 6 p.m.; and Saturday, at noon.

Algiers was bombarded by Exmouth, 1816; and captured by the French, 1830. Gen. Chanzy is Governor General. It has become of late years a great resort of the English, on account of the lovely climate, which, from October to March, is as warm as an English summer, and equal, if not superior to that of Egypt. In fact winter is not known; and snow is not seen, except on the distant mountains.

It consist of two towns, tier above tier; that is, the old Moorish town, of dazzling white houses, on the hill overlooking the beautiful Bay; and the new French town below, comprising many fine houses and regular streets, boulevards, quais, and squares, built by the French. A statue of the Duke of Orleans, stands in Place du Gouvernement.

The Old Town has curious native streets, some not more than four feet wide, and fearfully steep. It is dirty but picturesque, abounding in specimens of Moorish architecture, shops and bazaars; and surmounted by the old Kasbah at the top.

The harbour is capacious and sheltered, and the bay is not far inferior to the bay of Naples. A range of hills, extending to Oran, adds to the effect.

Algiers is justly pronounced to be the best, or almost the best, place in the world for invalids, and especially consumptive or delicate ones, to winter in. The heat not too great; one degree of frost is the most ever known. December, January, April and May are delightful; February and March are usually variable and wet. Carobs, oriental plane, and eucalyptus, are the trees chiefly seen in the streets. The fish market is worth a visit early in the morning; all kinds of Mediterranean fish, some of them of most brilliant colours, are to be had. Grapes are good, about 1d. per lb.; but not to be bought in winter; pomegranates only early in the season; dates, bananas and oranges are good and plentiful all the winter season. The hills are covered with fruit trees of every kind. Vegetation is extremely luxuriant. The roads are excellent, and the promenades are delightful.

There are plenty of pretty walks, rides, and drives in the immediate neighbourhood. Carriages and horses may be hired at reasonable rates. The beautiful suburbs of St. Eugène and Mustapha Supérieur are dotted with villas, which may be rented, furnished or unfurnished, at 300 to 1000 francs per month, according to their size and distance from the high road. St. Eugène is a charming suburb on the west side of the city.

Every plateau has a Moorish house on it, white and simple, in the midst of scenery such as we read of in fairy tales. The very rocks are trellissed with creepers. There are several well-cultivated farms round Algiers; but native agriculture is in a state of infancy. Two pieces of wood nailed at right angles, with a third piece nailed across them, make a plough. The land is merely scraped, and the seed sown broad-cast.

OBJECTS OF NOTICE.—The Gov. General's Palace—permission to see which is readily granted. The Mosques, the oldest being Djama Kebir, of the 10th century. You are expected to take off your shoes at the doors.

The Cathedral, formerly a Mosque; with the Archbishop's Palace, in an old Moorish house. Several Orphanages, in charge of nuns. Museum and Library, in Rue Lothopage, containing many Roman stones and sarcophagi &c., from neighbouring sites, with illuminated Korans from the 14th century. Jardin d' Essai, or botanical garden, where specimens of the date and fan palms, bread fruit, and plantain may be seen, besides oranges and citrons. The Kasbah Barrack, an old Arab fort, at the top of the city, near the Palace of the last Dey; who here boxed the French Consul's ears, and so brought in the French. They landed at Cape Sidi Ferruch, near the Trappist convent. Arab Cemetery of Abd-er-Rhaman, with its mosque and tombs. Jewish burial places and tombs. Grotto, called the Negresses' Sacrifice, near the Seven Fountains Spring. Maison Carrée, or Prison, about 6 miles from the town; where there is good snipe and quail shooting.

Among the people, notice the Moors or Town Arabs, as distinguished from the wandering Arabs; the Jews; the aboriginal Berbers or Kabyles, who were not conquered by the Arabs; the Biskris or hamals (porters); the Yibanis, or water carriers.

CONVEYANCES.—Steamers from Algiers to Marseilles, Oran, and to Nemours, were Abd-el-Kader gave up to the French; from Algiers to Phillippeville and Bona. Railway to Blidah (in two hours), which is a pleasant day's excursion. Here are the principal head-quarters of the cavalry of the French army, the horses are particularly good; about 120 Arab and Syrian horses may be seen in their stalls; Hotels Géroude and d'Orient are good. Milianah, about four hours from Algiers, is worth seeing. To Oran, 18 hours, where there are extensive mines.

EXCURSIONS.—Among these are the Roman antiquities of Cherchel, formerly Cæsarea, and capital of the Mauritanian kingdom, destroyed by the Vandals; and the Kabylia mountains; each requiring four or five days. To Tlemcen, along a wild road, past a salt lake. At this fine old place are mosques worth notice, and the tomb of the patron saint, Sidi el Haloui. The Mers-el-Kebir, the Roman Portus Divinus, near a sulphur spring, good for skin and rheumatic diseases. In passing up to the interior, the traveller passes from the Sahel or sea shore, through the Tell, or plains, to the Atlas mountains, or Highlands beyond which is the Sahara or Desert.

INMAN LINE.

NOTICE.—The course laid down for these Steamers, and followed by them for several years, is found to pass 250 miles South of Cape Race. Although the voyage is thus lengthened about 100 miles, better weather is met with, and there is much greater freedom from fogs and floating ice, and the danger of navigation consequently thereon.

For Particulars and Tickets, apply to the London Offices of the Company. A. HODGSON, & Co., Agents of the Alta Italia Railway Company, 3, Adelaide Street, Strand, who issue these Tickets from London; SAUVAGE, DELPIERRE, and ROBERTS, 32, Watling Street, City; and to the London Offices and Stations of the South Eastern and London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Companies.

At Paris, apply to Messrs. DAGIOUT, BROS., Agents of the Alta Italia Railway Company, 1, Rue Auber' Maison de Grand Hotel.

NOTICE.—Passengers are informed that the ALTA ITALIA RAILWAY COMPANY, with a view to facilitate long journeys, and to supply Travellers with the greatest possible comfort, has made arrangements which enable it to place at their disposal in the Turin Station, by payment of an extra fare. Special Sleeping Compartments for the journeys to Florence, Venice, Bologna, Verona, and Milan.

In allotting these compartments, preference will be given to Passengers booking the greatest number of places, and intending to occupy the same for the longest distance.

The Sleeping Compartments are constructed after the latest designs, and fitted with every convenience.

Prices of the Bed-places, in addition to the Ordinary 1st Class fare:—

From Turin to Florence, or back ...15 Francs 45.	From Turin to Bologna, or back ...10 Francs 30.
From Turin to Venice, or back .....15 Francs 45.	From Turin to Verona, or back.....10 Francs 30.
From Modane to Turin, or back .....7 Francs 0.	From Turin to Milan, or back.....7 Francs 20.

To every Bed-place is annexed a Dressing-table to which water can easily be conveyed by pushing a knob.

No gratuity should be given to the train-servants for attendance, or for the supply of Toilet Articles, such as Towels, Soap, Brushes, &c.

PASSENGERS' LUGGAGE.

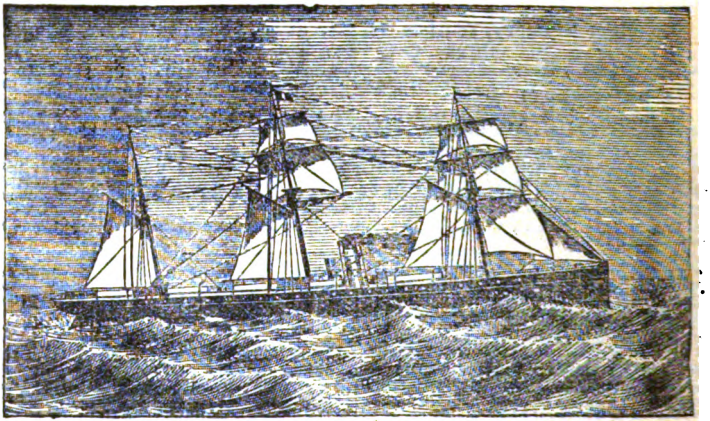
The duties of the Company's Servants are limited, at the departure, to receiving the Luggage on the luggage-platform, to weighing and registering it, and to transporting it to the Goods Waggons; in like manner, on arrival, to taking the Goods from the Waggons, placing them on the arrival platform, and giving them up to the travellers on receipt of the registration certificate.

The Company's Servants wear a blue cap, with the initials F.A.I. The service is quite gratuitous. At the Terminal Stations of Bologna, Florence, Genoa, (P. Principe,) Milan, (Gare Centrale,) Turin, (Porte Neuve,) and Venice, where there is a Special Service, Travellers are informed that Special Agents admitted to do business within the Station, transfer, at the request of Travellers, the luggage from the arrival platform to the carriages and omnibuses, and from the carriages and omnibuses to the departure platform; they likewise convey small parcels (not registered,) from the Trains to the carriages and omnibuses, and from the waiting-rooms to the Trains. The Special agents wear a blue cap, with a grey band and red edging bearing the words Bagagli e domicilio. There is no fee charged by these special agents for any service done to Travellers within the Station.

TRANSPORT OF LUGGAGE TO HOTEL OR HOME.

In the Stations mentioned above, Travellers who may wish to have their luggage sent forward to their homes should, before leaving the station, have their parcels inspected by the Octroi agent. Give to the agent who manages this department a list of their luggage, intimating at same time the name and address to which they desire the delivery to be made: they will receive in exchange a receipt similar to the luggage certificate. At the house the luggage will only be given up on production of the receipt given at the Station.

The special agents mentioned below are entrusted with the service.



The tariff for the conveyance of Luggage to home is fixed at 0.01 centime per kilogramme; but the charge will in no case be less than 40 centimes for each collection of luggage not exceeding 40 kilogrammes.

N.B.—In case of any difficulty apply to the Station-master.

AIGLE, SWITZERLAND.

GRAND HOTEL DES BAINS,

Hydropathic Establishment, Russian and Turkish Baths, Salt and Mineral Water Baths. Dr. REBEUCHET, Medical Adviser.

THE HOTEL is under the management of CHARLES HEINRICH, formerly Director of the HOTEL DES 3 COURONNES, at Vevey; it is situated on the heights, and offers superior accommodation. Large Park, and beautiful Walks in the Forest, next to the grounds of the establishment: 150 rooms and saloons. Splendid dining-room and large public saloon. English spoken. Divine Service. Pension at moderate terms for a prolonged stay. [57

AIX-LA-CHAPELLE.

HOTEL DU GRAND MONARQUE.—DREMEL'S HOTEL at AIX LA CHAPELLE This magnificent and large Hotel, for Families and single Travellers, continues to maintain its European reputation for being the favoured residence of travellers of all nations. The proprietor, Mr. KARTS DREMEL, obtained this unusual patronage by the cleanliness and comfort of his apartments, (all the beds being of new construction,) the richness and excellence of its viands and wines, added to the attention and civility of the attendants. Table d'Hôte at 1 and 5 o'clock.

The new Bath House attached to the Hotel also belongs to Mr. Dremel. It has extensive accommodation, and its proximity is a great advantage to visitors. Hot, Cold, Shower, and Tepid-sulphureous Baths at a few minutes' notice. The Baths are supplied direct from the Mineral Springs. [58

HOTEL NUELLENS, opposite the Fontaine Eliza, and situated in the most fashionable part of the city, has great attractions to tourists and travellers. This house possesses excellent accommodation for single persons or large families, and the Cuisine department will afford satisfaction to the most fastidious taste. Extract from the 18th Edition of Murray's Hand-Book:—"This Hotel, in the best situation, &c. &c., is recommended as capital. Table d'hote at 1½, and 5 o'clock.

Mr. Dremel, the well-known landlord of the "Grand Monarque" Hotel is also proprietor of the Hôtel Nuellens, and personally superintends the management of both. Mr. Dremel spares no expense or efforts to render the accommodation of these superior first-class Hotels preferable to all others for Families and Gentlemen visiting Aix-la-Chapelle. [59

HOYER'S UNION HOTEL, situated close to the Railway Stations, entirely and newly furnished, and recommended for its cleanliness, good accommodation, and reasonable prices.

N.B.—No Touters are employed for this Hotel. [63

HOTEL DU DRAGON D'OR, Proprietor, MR. B. MÜLLEM.—This large and well-known Establishment close to the Kursaal, and opposite the principal bath houses, has an excellent reputation for its general comfort, cleanliness, superior accommodation, and very moderate charges. The Proprietor lived several years in England. Table d'Hôte at 1 and 5 o'clock. Carriages at the Hotel. Arrangements for the Winter season, from the 1st October [60

KAISERBAD, BAINS DE L'EMPEREUR, M. F. DREMEL, Proprietor.—This new and splendid Bath Establishment has been recently fitted up in the most comfortable and elegant manner, to afford extensive accommodation at all seasons. It has 80 Rooms, 33 Baths, Douche and Vapour Baths, &c. [61

GRAND HOTEL DUBIGK CAMPHAUSBADSTRASSEN, one of the oldest and best Family Hotels in the town; recently enlarged and embellished, is situated opposite the three principal Bath Establishments. Table d'Hôte at 2 and 5 o'clock. Patronized principally by English Families. Mme. DUBIGK, Proprietress. [62

Boulogne-Sur-Mer, Nos. 10, Quai de la Flotte; 62, 88, 91, 93, 103, and 105, Grande Rue; 1, Rue du College, and 4, Rue Desille.

GEORGE HOWE, English Restaurateur, in consequence of the increasing support he continues to receive from Families visiting Boulogne, begs to state for the information of those who have not yet done so, that the arrangement, which after about 30 years experience, he has found most agreeable, is to furnish a sitting and as many bed rooms as may be required, Bed, Table Linen and washing thereof, knives, forks, spoons, glass and china—with attendance, kitchen fire and Board of his servants. The Family Dinner to consist of Soup or Fish, Joint and Poultry, or a made Dish with Vegetables Tart, or Pudding.

G. H. has in his employ first-rate Cooks. Dinner is always served in the sitting room at the hour desired there is no Table d'hôte, every thing is provided fresh each day, under the personal inspection of G. H., and of the best quality. The servants (chiefly English) are civil and well ordered, and as much at the control of the occupiers as if they were their own, and in each house, is one especially appointed for extra requirements. The Dinner is the only meal G H undertakes to provide. The usual agreement is by the week, and no notice is necessary before leaving, payment to the day of so leaving, only, is required to be included in the bill.

As the terms must always be matter of arrangement, by sending particulars of what number of persons the party consists including children, and if the latter, whether a separate dinner is required for them, how many beds and rooms, &c. Information would at once be forwarded as to price.

There are no Extras whatever except for wines or fires for sitting room, and which can be supplied by G H. or not. All postages pre-paid. [136

TWO HUNDRED BED-ROOMS, AND TWENTY SALOONS, in every Variety; Large and small Apartments for families, elegantly furnished; Saloons for Official receptions; Conversational and Reading Rooms; Coffee and Smoking Divan; Baths; Private Carriages; Omnibuses; Restaurant; Service in the Apartments, à la Carte, or at fixed prices.

ALL LANGUAGES SPOKEN.

The GRAND HOTEL DE LYON is too important and too well known to require injudicious praise it suffices to state that it cost nearly THREE MILLIONS OF FRANCS, and that the accommodation is of so comfortable and luxurious a character as to attract the notice of all visitors.

Although the GRAND HOTEL DE LYON affords the most elegant accommodation for the highest classes, it is frequented by visitors of the humblest pretensions. Rooms at 2frs., very comfortably furnished.

In consequence of the Proprietors having contracted with the Bordeaux and Burgundy wine growers for supplies of their best wines, qualities of the first vintages may be had at this hotel at moderate prices. Since the Hotel has been in the hands of new proprietors instead of a company, the reduction they have made in the prices precludes them from paying fees to the cab and coach drivers at the Railway Station. Travellers are therefore requested to bear in mind that the Grand Hotel de Lyons is situated in the centre of the Rue Imperial, near the Bank of France, and opposite the Palace of the Bourse. [346

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Nothing Better.

These invaluable Pills exert a greater and more beneficial influence over nervous disorders than any other Medicine. Their mode of action is thoroughly consonant with reason, they completely purify the blood, relieve both head and stomach of all faulty functions, and expel all oppressive accumulations from the bowels. With the blood purified, and all poisons purged from the system, regularity must prevail throughout the body, aches and pains must cease, healthful energy must supplant weariness, and the shaky nerves must rejoin their wholesome tone. Ill health intensifies that struggle in life, which more or less oppresses every one at the present day; under these Pills, taken occasionally, the ailing mend, the drooping revive. [605

Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

ADVICE TO INVALIDS.—If you wish to obtain quiet, refreshing sleep, free from headache, relief from pain and anguish, to calm and assuage the weary achings of protracted disease, invigorate the nervous media, and regulate the circulating systems of the body, you will provide yourself with that marvellous remedy discovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne (late Medical Staff), to which he gave the name of

CHLORODYNE,

And which is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

Chlorodyne is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

Chlorodyne effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases known as Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

Chlorodyne acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

Chlorodyne effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

Chlorodyne is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

The Right Hon. EARL RUSSELL has graciously favoured J. T. DAVENPORT with the following:—

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he received a despatch from Her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, December 1, 1864.

From Dr. B. J. Boulton & Co., Horncastle.

We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent direct Sedative and Anti-spasmodic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other Sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after-effects.

CAUTION.—The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne render it of vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which bears the words, "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne."

Vice-Chancellor Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE, ; that the whole story of the defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue.

Lord Chancellor Selborne and Lord Justice James stated that the defendant had made a deliberate misrepresentation of the decision of Vice-Chancellor Wood.

Chemists throughout the land confirm this decision that Dr. J. C. BROWNE was the Inventor of Chlorodyne.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists.
